DIRECTION. Has kept it moving with bright incident. Never allows it to sag. Sticks to his story and gets all there is out of it. Provides perfect atmosphere. Is excellent in handling his players. Brings out all the effervescent comedy.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature fact that picture is adapted from Belasco's famous stage success. Exploit title and feature life back stage in all your copy. Put on a fashion show and co-operate with women's shops.

DRAWING POWER. Will appeal to high class audiences everywhere.

SUMMARY. A successful picture made from successful play, the director bringing out all the flavor of the spoken version. Is finely staged and capably acted. Carries a sparkle in situation, incident and titles.

Ruggles of Red Gap
(Paramount—Six Reels)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

CHALK up another triumph for James Cruze whose production, Ruggles of Red Gap," may be catalogued as exceptionally bright—one executed with a deftness of touch which makes it unusually refreshing on a screen where the brightest comedy gems are found among two reelers. Harry Leon Wilson's story carries rich and sparkling film possibilities, all of which have been realized by Mr. Cruze whose gift for discovering humor is accurate and sure.

As a story it bounded along with mirthful incident, introducing character sketches which stood out with a cameo quality. As a picture it releases the same mirthful moments—from the time that Cousin Egbert makes his money and settles down to a life of easy affluence as mapped out by his socially ambitious wife to the day when his wife becomes reconciled to his uncouth manners.

The incident here is guaranteed to amuse even a dyspeptic—what with such capital players as Ernest Torrence, Edward Horton, Frank Elliot, Fritzi Ridgeway, Louise Dresser, Charles Ogle and Lois Wilson sketching the characters. Following their antics, one forgets that it is all quite preposterous. We see Red Gap being put on the map; we see Egbert's wife determined to make her husband over into a gentleman and taking him to Paris to teach him manners; we see his delight in embarrassing her by hobnobbing with lowly servants; we see him take an impoverished Englishman's valet away from him in a game of draw poker; we see these made-over ranch-folks take Ruggles back to Red Gap and Egbert passing him off as a retired British army officer.

We see and follow all of this bright incident—all this admirable sketching and declare it good—exceptionally good. Some of the scenes may be overstressed if you think of this smart atmosphere of a cow community. But the humor must be found—and the only way to find it is in adding a few sparks of unadulterated burlesque.

Ernest Torrence as Cousin Egbert makes a most amusing and picturesque portrayal—one of swagger—one who will go "just so fur, and no further." There appears to be no limitation to his versatility—for his sketch has nothing in common with his humorous scout in "The Covered Wagon." Edward Horton plays the valet to the life. He is the humdrum, obedient servant who is meek and inoffensive—a figure who arouses your quick sympathy. Frank Elliot plays a "silly ass" Englishman with splendid abandon. And Louise Dresser gives a capital study of Egbert's wife.

THEME. Satirical comedy having to do with the cultural growth of a ranchman whose wife employs an English valet to teach him deportment. Carries romantic by-play.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The humorous sparkle. The fine human note. The excellent studies by Edward Horton, Ernest Torrence, Frank Elliot, and Louise Dresser. The comedy values of Paris scenes and when Ruggles is palmed off to Red Gap natives as a gentleman.

DIRECTION. Has maintained an even tempo, building easily to a satisfactory finish. Keeps it sparkling with humorous by-play. Handles his players to perfection.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play it up as one of the best comedies of screen. Play up author, director and principal players. Give it a dignified presentation.

SUMMARY. A clean-cut comedy with keen satirical thrusts, maintaining interest through its rich incident and character sketches. Perfectly acted. Another triumph for Cruze.

THE CAST

Ruggles ..... Edward Horton
Cousin Egbert ..... Ernest Torrence
Mrs. Kenner ..... Lois Wilson
Emily Judson ..... Fritzi Ridgeway
Jeff Tuttle ..... Charles Ogle

Ma Pettingil ..... Lillian Leighton
Earl of Brinstead ..... Thomas Holding
Hon. George ..... Frank Eliot
Senator ..... Milt Brown

By Harry Leon Wilson. Scenario by Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway. Directed by James Cruze.

SYNOPSIS. Ranchman strikes it rich in Red Gap and settles down to become a gentleman. Is a failure until wife employs English valet to teach him culture. He rebels and makes a pal of the valet, who eventually becomes a figure of importance in community. Wife becomes reconciled to fact that husband will never absorb the virtues of a gentleman.

Red Lights

(Goldwyn—Cosmopolitan—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE leader of this picture boldly announces that it is a mystery melodrama in so many words. But we've never seen one outside a serial which was so difficult to make head or tail of than this Clarence Badger production. He must have been guided by the idea to complicate matters with so much intricate plotting and counter-plotting that the audience would of necessity be completely at sea in following the frenzied array of events.

Mysterious figures stalk through a maze of scenes and emphasis is given to exciting the pulse by enshrouding them with dark robes, to say nothing of flashes of red punctuating the hectic action throughout Badger has ably handled the mystery element, but the characters confuse one because it is difficult to identify them. You think you see the crooks and it may be the Crime deflector and his cohorts. There's a name for you! This fellow doesn't detect crime, he deflects it before it has a chance to come to a head.

Don't think by this that the picture is a study in bloodshed. There is a display of fowling pieces in action, but the action mostly concerns crooks stalking their prey—to be pursued by the disciples of virtue. We gleaned from the introductory scenes that a railroad magnate's daughter who had been kidnapped in infancy is in danger of being murdered. She has a ready protector in her fiance who enlists the services of the Crime Deflector to keep her out of danger. And to keep the pot boiling, the father is speeding toward Los Angeles, the location of the story while telegrams flash back and forth. Up in a hotel room is an eccentric inventor who has perfected a plan whereby arc lights are made to talk. Meanwhile there is much tip-toeing about—so that the spectator is forced to admit to himself—"Now you see them, now you don't."

The mysteries become highly involved toward the conclusion when the characters are seen crawling under and over trains and through the windows. It is all executed with much speed and considerable comedy by-play which is necessary to relieve the tension. It is improbable but entertaining after the manner of a serial. We might add that it is smartly played and staged with a good grasp upon picture technique.

THEME. Mystery melodrama revolving around the determination of crooks to harass wealthy heiress and assassinate her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The technique employed to emphasize the mystery element. The comedy moments which relieve the tension. The suspense. The lively incident. The good staging.

DIRECTION. Has certainly made it mysterious—so much so—that the atmosphere is considerably cloudy. Difficult to identify the crooks from the hero and his aides in train episode. Lightens the melodrama with flashes of comedy. Keeps it lively after serial fashion.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. What about this title which can be linked up with auto stores, etc.? Dress the lobby with red lanterns, lamps, incadescents, etc. Play up its mystery element. Put on prologue suggestive of dance episode.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw because of title in most any locality.

SUMMARY. A highly involved mystery melodrama, the atmosphere of which is tense most of the time. Director keeps it lively and also keeps audience guessing. Difficult to follow. Moderately entertaining.

THE CAST

Ruth Carson	Marie Prevost
Sheridan Scott	Raymond Griffith
Blake	Johnny Walker
Norah O'Neill	Alice Lake
Roxy	Dagmar Godowsky
Luke Carson	William Worthington
Kirk Allen	Frank Elliot
Alden Murray	Lionel Belmore
Ezra	Jean Hersholt

By Edward E. Rose. Scenario by Carey Wilson. Directed by Clarence Badger

SYNOPSIS. Wealthy railroad magnate is hurrying to Los Angeles to take his daughter back home—the girl having been separated from him for years due to her being kidnapped when a child. Her life is in jeopardy and her fiance protects her by enlisting services of Crime Deflector, a new type of detective who eliminates the criminal before he can begin his operations. The crooks are defeated.

Her Reputation

(Thomas H. Ince—First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is an Ince production the thrills of which will vibrate down the spine of the most jaded patron of the celluloid drama. Into this picture has been built not one but half a dozen big moments, any one of which would be sufficient to put over an ordinary film.

Right at the start we have a realistic break in a Mississippi river levee, the current carrying all before it, including houses, humans and animals. Then we have a shooting. Next comes some beautiful scenes in a 'Frisco cafe and an exciting raid by the police after Lloyd Hughes and George Larkin stage a fistic encounter. Then we have an auto chase, in which one of the machines is wrecked and burned, the fire from which starts a forest blazing. Through this blaze dashes a father in his auto to the rescue of his son. Trees fall on all sides and he dashes through the flaming timber. This will give you an idea of some of the advertising possibilities of the pictures.

Next we want to express our admiration of the acting of May McAvoy in this picture and to give John Griffith Wray credit for bringing out the real talent in a star who not since "Sentimental Tommy" has been given a chance to act. Lloyd Hughes gives a convincing portrayal. The rest of the cast is good. One of the big features of the production is the photography with some of the night shots and the natural color parts being masterpieces of the camera art. The settings are quite elaborate, especially those showing the cafe interior.

The story, in a way, takes a large sized wallop at the policy of our yellow journals which play up sensational news regardless of the consequences or whether there is a basis of fact in the tale. The newspaper characters however are decidedly picturey especially Brinsley Shaw as the sensational news hound. We've never seen one act like this in our dozen years' newspaper experience. But the layman will think he's great. So that's that. The plot holds the interest well and builds up to a fine climax.

THEME. Deals with the power of yellow journalism to ruin characters of innocent persons. A Frisco sheet reporter digs up a story of a murder, suicide and wrecked romance and involves a girl in the mess.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The breaking of the levee. The auto chase and wreck. The drive of the editor in his car through the blazing forest. The elaborate cabaret scenes. Miss McAvoy's acting.

DIRECTION. John Griffith Wray has brought out a new May McAvoy who acts as if inspired. He has packed a half dozen good punches into the picture, keeping the suspense alive throughout. Has allowed the newspaper characters to overdo their roles.. Has done exceedingly well with a big job.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Might get your local editor to tie-up with you on the evils of yellow journalism. If he runs a clean sheet he'll be glad to do this. Play up the break in the levee and the subsequent flood, the sensational forest fire, the auto chase and wreck and the other thrills.

DRAWING POWER. Any audience will find entertainment in this one which is O.Keh for any house, neighborhood and downtown.

SUMMARY. A good melodrama excellently presented on the screen by a cast of first water. Story holds attention throughout and will surely make the folks talk.

THE CAST

Jacqueline Lanier	May McAvoy
Sherwood Mansfield	Lloyd Hughes
Jack Calhoun	Casson Ferguson
Andres Miro	Eric Mayne
John Covert Mansfield	Winter Hall
"Dad" Lawrence	James Corrigan
Madame Cervanez	Eugenie Besserer
Consuelo	Louise Lester
Ramon Cervanez	George Larkin
Clinton Kent	Brinsley Shaw

Adapted from the novel by Talbot Munday and Bradley King. Scenario by Bradley King. Directed by John Griffith Wray.

SYNOPSIS. Jacqueline Lanier, ward of a wealthy Louisiana settler, is forced to flee from her home when her character is blemished by a yellow newspaper reporter. She is caught in the flood when the levee breaks, but is rescued by the son of the newspaper owner who is responsible for her flight. The son falls in love with Jacqueline, who, following a raid on the cafe in which she is dancing under an assumed name, goes to the editor and tells him that his son's reputation is also at stake.

The Eternal Struggle

(Metro—7800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN a picture revolving around the picturesque figure of the Northwest Mountie gets away from first principles by having the redcoat get his man in the first reel it may be said to furnish a note of novelty in a pattern which is rapidly losing its luster. That's about the only new note struck off in this ancient plot, the ingredients otherwise containing all the fierce conflict of soul as the officer is torn between love and duty. You think the story over with the capture of the lawbreakers? But wait, it carries on with further activities to be encountered by the Mountie. He must needs get the girl, too—who has flown North—to the white open spaces where she takes refuge aboard a whaler.

It is well planted that she has taken this sudden departure through the belief that she has killed a would-be seducer. The incident over which pertains to the capture of the bad man who has been lured out into the open after finding refuge in the home of a fair wildflower, the officer is attracted to the daughter of a saloonkeeper—a tempestuous, colorful girl portrayed in a spirited manner by Renee Adoree who falls madly in love with him, though he has a rival in a brother officer. Villainy stalks afoot in the personality of Wallace Beery who is the ambassador of the above-mentioned attempt at seduction When he is found dead, the girl escapes—so it is up to the Mountie to recapture her. Which of course gives the picture its title—the conflict of love versus duty.

It is established that the fair Canuck in whose cabin the lawbreaker had found refuge killed the trespasser, so the brother officer gives up the heroine to our Mountie. The picture develops rather tediously, but due to its crisp incident, its abundant action and fairly well sustained suspense, it keeps the interest.

There is revealed some picturesque exteriors and a genuine thrill when the sweethearts are seen shooting down the rapids in a canoe. Miss Adoree lends considerable charm and vitality to the role of the heroine and deserves such assignments in the future. Pat O'Malley, Earle Williams, Wallace Beery and Barbara La Marr give highly creditable performances.

THEME. Melodrama of Northwest revolving around capture of lawbreakers by Mounted Policeman. Plot emphasizes conflict of love versus duty.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The crisp action and suspense—which is maintained despite slow introductory scenes. The fine exteriors. The thrill attending the canoe incident. The clever performances contributed by Renee Adoree, Wallace Beery, Pat O'Malley and Earle Williams.

DIRECTION. Has carefully planted plot and characters and takes his time in building his story, but once it gets started the picture develops a real punch. Keeps it moving after the early scenes with plenty of crisp incident.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title will arouse curiosity. So play it up, emphasizing that it concerns the conflict of love versus duty. Play up five principals. Make mention of exteriors, but don't mention plot.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any program. Especially good for downtown trade and in small towns.

SUMMARY. An interesting melodrama which picks up speed after a slow start and finishes with plenty of punch. Old plot but crisp incident and clever acting makes it entertaining.

THE CAST

Andree Grange	Renee Adoree
Sergt. Neil Tempest	Earle Williams
Camille Lenoir	Barbara La Marr
Bucky O'Hara	Pat O'Malley
Barode Dukane	Wallace Beery
Pierre Grange	Josef Swickard
Oily Kirby	Pat Harmon
Capt. Jack Scott	Anders Randolf
Jean Cardeau	Ed. J. Brady
Olaf Olafson	Robert Anderson

Based on G. B. Lancaster's novel, "The Law Bringers," adapted by G. J. Hawkes and Monte M. Katterjohn. Directed by Reginald Barker.

SYNOPSIS. Mounted Policeman of Northwest is sent to get his man. Captures him after latter has sought refuge in girl's cabin. Hero is attracted to saloon keeper's daughter, who falls in love with him, though latter has rival in brother officer. She is attacked by villain and, thinking she killed him, flees to the North. The officer pursues and captures her. Her innocence is established and the romance continues.

Lights Out

(F. B. O.—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is something a bit different and therein lies its appeal. Here's a picture with a new idea for a story—using a motion picture to bring a bank robber to justice—the idea being that a picture is made in which every movement of the thief is placed in a serial. It happens that the crook sees the picture—even in far off Rio de Janeiro—and, of course, at once dashes back to God's country seeking vengeance. In working out this theme the producers have built as many laughs as thrills into the picture so that the whole is a satisfying production.

The action opens on the Golden State Limited westbound through Texas following the robbery of the First National Bank at Austin. The Pullman interior is well done and much fun is introduced in these scenes over a large black bag and its contents—everyone thinking it contains loot from the bank but after much mysterious meanderings it turns out that it contains nothing more dangerous than motion picture scenarios. The scene in which the principals show the scenario writer how the bank robbery was staged and the Pullman porter, portrayed, by the way, by Hank Mann, rushes for help when he thinks a murder is being committed—is rich in comedy.

The cabaret scene in South America where High Shine Joe sees himself in the movies as the prime mover in the bank robbery is a real novelty. Then the audience is taken to Hollywood, given a birds-eye view of the home of make-believe and many shots during the process of making the serial "The Red Trail," which has made Joe so angry. Here more fun as well as excitement is enjoyed as a double for Joe is introduced and the author as well as all concerned in making the picture try to dodge the man who has vowed to kill all who figured in its production. There is much fast action in the climax when many surprises are sprung as to the identity of the various characters.

THEME. A crook melodrama with a comedy flourish exploiting a picture within a picture—the crook being captured by means of the film.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The opening scenes aboard the Pullman as the various characters seek to get possession of the mysterious black bag. The screening of the picture in the Rio cabaret. Ben Deeley's work as Joe and the good cast. The amusing scenes in the studio.

DIRECTION. Might have speeded up the opening reels where there is too much footage wasted on the bag episode. Too many closeups of Ruth Stonehouse. Has brought out the motion picture within a picture idea convincingly. Has succeeded in holding the interest to the end after the third reel. Has allowed Hank Mann to inject himself too prominently into the story at times.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The well known stars. Tell them that this is something different under the movie sun. A real novelty. A motion picture within a motion picture. Play up the scenes in the Hollywood studios.

DRAWING POWER. Inasmuch as there is not too much seriousness in this one and because folks want as much fun as they can get at a picture show, you'll be able to please any audience with this one.

SUMMARY. A good program picture possessing a theme out of the beaten path. Played by a cast selected for their fitness for the roles portrayed.

THE CAST

Hair Pin Anne	Ruth Stonehouse
"Sea Bass"	Walter McGrail
Barbara	Marie Astaire
Eggs Winslow	Theodore von Eltz
Ben	Hank Mann
Decker	Fred Kelsey
Mrs. Gallant	Mabel Van Buren
Keith	Ben Howlett
Peyton	Harry Fenwick
High Shine Joe	Ben Deeley

From the play by Paul Dickey and Mann Page. Directed by Al Santell. Scenario by Rex Taylor.

SYNOPSIS. High Shine Joe and Hair Pin Anne rob a bank in Austin, Texas, but Joe runs away without giving Anne her share. On a Pullman car in which Anne is pursuing a fellow with a large black bag which she thinks might contain some of the loot, she meets Sea Bass and together they hit upon a scheme of capturing Joe by use of a motion picture showing how the bank was held up and using a double of Joe as the hero. The picture brings Joe to justice and Sea Bass wins Anne.

(First National—7700 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

FIRST NATIONAL has a reason to feel immensely proud over "Potash and Perlmutter," which translated for the screen carries on with the same entertaining highlights that it did upon the stage. Samuel Goldwyn has gone to considerable effort with his first independent production with an idea in mind to leave a distinct impression. In the first place he has given the title roles to the same actors who have been identified with them ever since they found their way into the spoken drama. Messrs. Carr and Bernard consequently have been able to embellish it with highly interesting portrayals—portrayals absolutely correct in shading and understanding.

With these important characters out of the way the task has been easy for Clarence Badger, the director. Call the picture director proof. nevertheless there was a chance for him to fail in not placing the satirical thrusts in just the right spot—and adding emphasis where it did not belong. On the contrary he has brought out the subtle comedy, balancing it with broad strokes and has provided the intimate details which made the story and play so human and plausible.

A tale of Jewish initiative in putting over a successful cloak and suit business with the partners always in conflict with one another, thus bringing into play all the flashes of comedy and pathos, it keeps the interest alert. So genuine does it appear that we feel like actual participants in the little drama. We feel sorry for the partners when their head designer gets involved with the law and the installment men come to take their furnishings away. We are amused when Potash admirably sketched by Barney Bernard, an excellent actor, finds his business going to ruin—and takes Perlmutter for a partner. The latter appearing as a foil for the other is neatly played by Alexander Carr. Again when the partners try to sell a Chicago buyer and close a contract when a famous designer whom they employ, bedecks herself in the costume which Potash's wife had nearly lost the sale for because of her inability to set it off to advantage, there is revealed a bright flash of comedy.

The array of details neatly introduced—the fine portrayals by the principals and supporting players—especially the bits contributed by De Sacia Mooers, Lee Kohlmar and Vera Gordon—the appropriateness of the interiors—the subtle comedy and the plot and characterization—these are enough to stamp the picture as sure-fire entertainment—one which should find wide appeal everywhere.

THEME. Comedy satire unfolding business methods of partners who antagonistic toward each other on the surface have unbounded affection for each other.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The unusually fine interpretations by Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr. The comedy scenes. The scene when head designer gets involved with law. The clever satire. The details.

DIRECTION. Has brought forth all the illuminating touches of story and play. Has handled the cast in a deft manner. Keeps it moving with scintillating incident emphasizing the satirical bits and the character studies.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up story, play and picture—keeping in mind that the story has been widely read. Play up the long run on Broadway as a play.

DRAWING POWER. Should appeal to most every type of audience.

SUMMARY. A highly interesting story of business partners which emphasizes in a satirical manner their business methods. Details and incident and interpretation cleverly sketched.

THE CAST

Morris Perlmutter.....Alexander Carr
Abe Potash.....Barney Bernard
Rosie Potash.....Vera Gordon
Head Model.....Martha Mansfield
Boris Andrieff.....Ben Lyon
Feldman.....Edw. Durand
Irma Potash.....Hope Sutherland
Ruth Goldman.....DeSacia Mooers
Office Boy.....Jerry Devine
Pasinsky.....Lee Kohlmar

By Montague Glass and Charles Klein. Adapted by Frances Marion. Directed by Clarence Badger

SYNOPSIS. Potash is a failure but his business judgment leads him to seek the more prosperous Perlmutter as a partner. They are on the high road to success until a scheming rival attempts to win Potash's daughter. Her fiance is involved with law and partners' business is doomed until the young man is saved from disgrace.

Six Days

(Brabin Production—Goldwyn—Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IF ever there was a box office picture made, this is it. A wonderful title, an excellent cast, a famous author, a story packed with love, adventure and thrills, some of the most elaborate sets ever made for a film play and photography of unusual beauty—these are just a few of the ingredients of what will undoubtedly be one of the most talked of pictures of the season.

One of the most noticeable things about "Six Days," is the absolute disregard for expense in production. You see it in almost every scene. And it literally screams out in the reproduction of the cathedral at Rheims, the Paris opera, the section of French battlefield trenches, the chalk mine, the opening scenes in the Kingston home and the moments aboard an ocean liner. You'll have plenty to talk about in advertising "Six Days."

We want to emphasize the fact that there is nothing suggestive in any part of this picture. The screen version has been pasteurized as far as this goes and no one will find anything objectionable. And while Mr. Brabin has given us a clean picture, he has also injected considerable pep into many of the love scenes. Corinne Griffith and Frank Mayo are the principals in most of them.

While the picture is in nine reels, the end comes all too soon. This is due to the suspense of the plot and the thrill of the scenes underground—the views of the dugouts where the two lovers and a priest are trapped by a cave-in and forced to remain below the earth for six days. The priest is killed in one of the several landslides which bury the three as they try to dig their way to the outside world.

Miss Griffith's gowns will delight your feminine patrons. They are all gorgeous. So are many worn by Miss Stedman and Miss George We would says that "Six Days," is just the type of picture for present day audiences. To use a colloquialism, it is there with the goods.

THEME. The romance of a girl about to be placed on the auction block because of the poverty in which her father's death leaves her. On a visit to France, she meets a friend of her brother who was killed in action. Together they visit his grave and go on to the dugouts. While inspecting one, the entrance caves in and with their priest guide, they are imprisoned for six days. Before the priest dies he marries them.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The society function in the Kingston home. The views of rural England. The thrilling scenes in France, the Rheims cathedral, the Paris opera house lobby and interior, the dramatic moments in the underground trench system.

DIRECTION. Another triumph for Charles Brabin, who gave "Driven" to the screen. He has turned out a picture of real appeal. He has made his characters live their parts and seems to have imbued real inspiration into Miss Griffith.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The stars. The author. Put over a fashion display for each of the six days, showing stills of Miss Griffith in her many costumes. Play up the name of the author. It is a real asset. Might tie up the local American Legion post

DRAWING POWER. Should be a cleanup in any house.

SUMMARY. A real entertaining picture, elaborately produced and especially designed to attract business. Everything is high class in it. Filled with "different" stuff

THE CAST

Laline Kingston.....Corinne Griffith
Dion Leslie.....Frank Mayo
Olive Kingston.....Myrtle Stedman
Lord Charles Chetwyn.....Claude King
Clara Leslie.....Maude George
Pere Jerome.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Richard Kingston.....Charles Clary
Emily Chetwyn.....Evelyn Walsh Hall
Dion Leslie (age 6).....Robert de Villbiss
The Chef.....Paul Cazenova
Guide.....Jack Herbert

By Elinor Glyn. Directed by Charles Brabin. Scenario by Ouida Bergere. Photographed by John Mescall.

SYNOPSIS. Laline's mother engineers a meeting between her daughter and Sir Charles Chetwyn, a wealthy Englishman. Laline, having accepted Chetwyn, goes to Paris and meets Dion Leslie. Both fall in love. While visiting the battlefields, the two and a priest are entombed by an explosion in a deserted dug-out. Facing death, the priest marries them. For six days they seek an escape from the place. The priest is killed in one of the landslides.

Modern Matrimony

(Victor Heerman—Select—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS picture is dedicated to the most optimistic person in the world—the fellow who thinks he can support two as easy as one. It is a picture made for laugh purposes only and as such fulfills its mission in highly satisfactory manner. It deals with the pitfalls of modern married life, of the dollar down and a dollar a week existence, of love under difficulties, etc.

Owen Moore is an ideal type for the swain who hurdles obstacles without end in order that he provide a love-nest for the girl of his choice. And it is this hurdling of these obstacles that provide no end of merriment.

The picture, unlike most present-day celluloid classics, starts off with a wedding, but as the couple are about to leave the home of the parson, a black cat followed by two kittens crosses in front of them. That is the signal for four and three-quarter reels of hard luck for Chester Waddington. Good luck comes in the last quarter of the fifth reel. And right here we want to say that the length of this picture is one thing in its favor. It is a good argument that it is possible to make a good picture in 5,000 feet. It will send most folks away feeling that they have enjoyed themselves for an hour at least.

The cast is a high class one in every respect. Owen Moore and Alice Lake have the principal roles. Miss Lake proves an excellent foil for Mr. Moore. Some of the funniest scenes are those picturing the newlyweds seeking a home or rather one of the most modern apartments where you have to get in with a shoe horn.

The feature pictures experiences through which most folks have themselves passed and herein lies its real value. Most humans like to see their own vicissitudes, bone plays, joys and so forth enacted on the screen.

"Modern Matrimony" is good, clean comedy drama—a picture for every member of the family.

THEME. A comedy-drama of the struggle of an ambitious youth to provide for his bride, a product of the "400." After much hardship experienced by both himself and mate, he gets the home.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The hunt for the city apartment and the purchasing of the "estate in the country." The party at which Chester beats up his high brow rival. Owen Moore's clever character work. The fine supporting cast. The episode in which Chester throws a shoe accidentally through his mother-in-law's portrait and the subsequent scene when she enters the house for the first time and sees it on the wall.

DIRECTION. Victor Heerman wrote this story so he knew what he wanted when he wanted it. In fact he has welded the cast into a wonderful acting ensemble. It's a very delightful piece of directorial work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try and put on a wedding on the stage on opening night—even if it is a fake one. Advertise it. The title should suggest no end of possibilities. Tieup with some realty development company. Get them to use the name of the picture in their ads.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for downtown houses, community theatres and especially the towns where they'll have the time of their lives over it.

SUMMARY. A very satisfactory program picture, containing much to laugh at which is just what most folks want today. A story that is interesting not because of its originality but because of the way in which it is developed.

THE CAST

Chester Waddington ..... Owen Moore
Patricia Waddington ..... Alice Lake
Mrs. Flynn ..... Mayme Kelso
Mr. Flynn ..... Frank Campeau
Mrs. Rutherford ..... Kate Lester
Junior Rutherford ..... Victor Potel
Mr. Baltman ..... Snitz Edwards
Rastus ..... Douglas Carter

By Victor Heerman. Directed by Victor Heerman.
Scenario by Sarah Y. Mason. Photographed by Jules Cronjager.

SYNOPSIS—Chester and Patricia are secretly married. But it all comes out at a party planned to announce the engagement of Patricia to another. The couple start out to find a home, look at a hundred or so apartments and eventually land in one of those suburban "mansions." They buy the mansion and its contents on the installment plan. Then Chester loses his job for taking an option on some land which his employer does not want. Just as the sheriff, collectors and real estate men all sweep down on Chester, that option suddenly becomes valuable.

The Lone Star Ranger

(Fox—5259 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE failed to find the story of any great distinction in this newest vehicle of Tom Mix's. The title is familiar and once the action has progressed a hundred feet or so the plot and characterization and all the accompanying incident is as clear as daylight. It is nothing else but the grand pursuit—a glorification of the long arm of the law as exemplified in the figure of the Texas Ranger who is sent to capture the band of cattle rustlers. The obvious formula is noticeable once he discovers that the girl he loves is the daughter of the chief bandit.

Nothing novel is presented here to offer any moment of surprise. It is as if Tom Mix had evidently made up his mind that he better be an out-and-out adventurer of the plains, the hero of wild and woolly tales, than bask in the spotlight of comedy and satire. Still "Soft Boiled" was so effervescent with humorous moments that we wonder why he doesn't continue along the same line. There is no dearth of actors capable of displaying a gifted horsemanship. The fact that Mix can ride better than the majority does not necessarily mean that he must ever continue in the saddle. He has shown quite a flair for comedy expression. Yet here we find him back in the type of picture which he has played countless times.

"The Lone Star Ranger" is a Zane Grey picture executed to the tune of sharp action with emphasis placed upon its incident. Still we are unable to get very much excited over it—for it is certain that the Ranger will capture the gang and effect a pardon for the girl's father—so that they can face the great open fireplaces once the frost is in the air.

The author has a happy faculty to make his characters interesting even though he is not carving out anything novel in plot material. And being Zane Grey establishes a clientele right off the first reel—to say nothing of Mix's following which is said to be of good sized proportions in the towns some distance from the key centers. We would like to see the star, however, in those bright semi-burlesques which featured him the past two seasons.

THEME. Melodrama revolving around pursuit of cattle rustlers by Texas Ranger—patterned after Northwest Mounted formula. Romance bids for favor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The dashing horsemanship displayed by Tom Mix. The pursuit of the rustlers. The conflict which enters when hero learns that sweetheart is daughter of chief bandit. The splendid exteriors.

DIRECTION. Does all that is to be expected from this type of story which is familiar in outline and treatment. Keeps it moving by giving Mix a chance to show his ability in the saddle. Peps it up with incident and suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title and feature the Texas Ranger—giving a spread of his courage, etc. Play up Mix and his ability in the saddle. Ballyhoo picture by featuring an employee on horseback

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for houses which cater to westerns.

SUMMARY. Obvious melodrama, long been used in the films. Suspense is fairly active and so is action—and familiarity of plot is forgotten. Mix is the highlight with his horsemanship.

SYNOPSIS—Texas Ranger is assigned the task of capturing a band of desperate cattle rustlers. He learns, however, that the leader of the gang is the father of his sweetheart—which complicates matters considerably. The Ranger captures the bandits and effects a pardon for the leader for the sake of the girl.

Regional News From Correspondents

Chicago

THE contest conducted by Mae Tinee, of the Chicago Tribune, to determine the public's preference as to the actor to play Romeo and the actress to play Juliet, has been of unusual interest for the reason that no special inducements were made to vote, and from the numerous letters received by the newspaper, indicating that the "highbrow" portion of the public are interested in seeing Shakespeare's great classic presented on the silver screen. The total of votes at the close of the contest showed Norma Talmadge and Rodolph Valentino to be the public's favorites for the two big roles. Several other actors and actresses, besides those mentioned in the following list of votes, received a few ballots, but were eliminated after the first few days of the contest:

Juliet

Norma Talmadge	6,649
Mary Pickford	1,904

Romeo

Rodolph Valentino	3,843
Eugene O'Brien	2,192
Conway Tearle	1,160
Joseph Schildkraut	993
Douglas Fairbanks	334

On September 10th, Charles Ryan, the veteran manager of the Garfield theatre, 2844 W. Madison street, ended his connection with that house and Charles J. Schaefer, the owner, assumed personal direction of the theatre. It is understood that Mr. Ryan is considering accepting a position with one of the several Chicago theatres, which have made him offers. He has piloted the Garfield for many years and has made an enviable reputation for himself as a showman. His anniversary celebrations have been notable affairs and he wound up his connection with the Garfield by directing the theatre's fourteenth anniversary week celebration.

The Logan Square theatre opened last week with "The Spoilers," and Manager J. R. Moss announces that for the season 1923-24 the policy will be "the biggest and best" in feature pictures.

Steve Montgomery again is connected with the film industry, having become a member of Educational's sales staff with the title of special representative.

Henri Ellman, one of the old timers on film row and recently connected with Pathe, is now selling Selznick pictures, working out of the Chicago exchange of that organization.

George Mence has left the ranks of the film salesmen to become manager of the Ardmore theatre and his many friends are wishing him the best of luck. He recently has been connected with Educational.

One of the most elaborate and important publicity campaigns of the season is that connected with putting over "Greater Movie Year," at McVicker's. Ed Olmstead, who was brought from St. Louis to handle the campaign, is being assisted by Charles Raymond, well known Paramount exploiteer and Richard Burns, poster artist, who was formerly connected with Skouras Bros.' organization in St. Louis. Two hundred and eighty 24-sheet boards are being utilized, the original sketch for the poster being produced by Mr. Olmstead, and large space is being taken in the Chicago daily papers. The Greater Movie Year was the inspiration for the full page promotion copy recently appearing in the American, and "The Cheat" contest in the Chicago Journal, which resulted in fifteen hundred and fifty-four lines of gratis publicity for McVicker's theatre.

The Illinois-Grand theatre at Centralia, Illinois, has been added to the group of Southern Illinois houses operated by Reid, Yemm and Hayes. This house was formerly owned by C. E. Hall. D. W. Griffith, who has been in charge of the Broadway Airdome, will manage the Illinois-Grand.

The opening of Universal's new Milwaukee exchange was made the occasion of an elaborate celebration, which was enjoyed by more than two hundred and fifty exhibitors from the city of Milwaukee and surrounding territory, who came as the guests of the company, which paid the round trip railroad fare of all out of town exhibitors and their families and saw to their comfort while in Milwaukee. The new headquarters is located at 717 Wells street and is one of the finest offices, not only in Milwaukee, but in the Central West. Manager L. Levine, assisted by J. F. Camp, special representative; H. Terry, city sales representative; W. C. Blumberg, county representative; Mat J. Lavin, Jr., special representative, and Ralph Eunson, country representative, made the visitors welcome and saw that they had a good time. The theatre party, given at the Garden theatre by Leo Landau, manager of the Garden and Alhambra theatres, where the visitors were given a pre-view of "Merry Go Round," was the highlight of the week's enjoyment.

Vice-president E. J. Bowes, of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation, was in Chicago, en route to the coast, on Monday and visited District Manager Hickey and Exchange Manager Hollander at the local exchange. Messrs. Hickey and Hollander recently had their private offices redecorated and furnished and both the executives are very proud of their new quarters.

W. W. Brumberg, country sales manager of First National, visited Rock Island this week and reports business in that city is good.

I. L. Leserman, of Universal, in charge of that company's country sales in this territory, is brimming over with optimism as to the outlook for fall and winter business and states that reports coming in from all the smaller towns show busines is good and constantly on the up-grade. Last week, according to Mr. Leserman, every theatre in his territory made money and the same can be looked for right along in the future.

James Peedve, publicity manager for Richard Walton Tully, was a Chicago visitor last week and made his headquarters at First National exchange.

The sales department and executives of Universal are planning a theatre party for the night of September 21. It will be a get-together event to further promote the close relationship between the executives and salesmen.

Manager H. C. Young, of the National Screen Service, Chicago division, is starting an active sales campaign in twelve of the states under his jurisdiction and has divided up the territory among three salesmen. George Gollos will cover Illinois, Indiana and Iowa; Richard Fox, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Joe Creveling, Missouri Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma. The National Screen Service has a very finely equipped office, laboratory and printing establishment at 845 S. Wabash avenue, all departments being located on the seventh floor, and including fire-proof vaults, drying and inspection rooms, as well as commodious offices for the manager and clerical force.

Louis St. Pierre, formerly manager of Fischer's Majestic theatre at Madison, Wisconsin, has been appointed manager of the Orpheum theatre Rockford, Illinois, one of the houses operated by the Midwest Theatres Corporation.

The new Washington theatre, located at Nineteenth and East streets, Granite City, Illinois, is practically completed and will be ready to open its doors on October 5th, the date on which Manager Louis Landau has planned to give the premiere performance. The Washington will be one of the largest and handsomest theatres in the state.

C. C. Ayres has been appointed manager of the Frolic theatre as successor to A. J. Meininger, who has been transferred to Minitoba, Wisconsin, where he will manage the Ascher house located in that city.

Lon Chaney passed through the city early this week, en route from New York to the coast, where he will immediately start work on his next picture. Another noted visitor was Tom Mix, who was en route from Hollywood to New York, with his family for a vacation.

Verne Langdon has completed the installation of a fine, new organ in his Alvin theatre on Chicago avenue.

"Little Old New York," the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan production, which has had an exceptional amount of publicity and advertising both in this country and England, is scheduled to open at Balaban & Katz's Roosevelt theatre on October 15th, for an extended run. Exploiter Nealand, of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan organization, has been detailed to handle the advertising and publicity for this run.

News and Notes of Detroit's Film Circles

W. S. BUTTERFIELD of Battle Creek has gone to Washington, D. C., for a week of combined business and pleasure.

The Martha Washington, a new motion picture house, located at the intersection of Joseph Campean and Caniff streets in Hamtramck was opened on Thursday evening, September 6. Jass Sellers is the manager.

W. D. Ward, the busy manager of the Fox Films and who is invariably traveling during the week around the different towns getting signatures to contracts, has very recently purchased a new Hudson car.

Ed. Hope, who was formerly connected with the contract department of the main offices in New York City, arrived in Detroit a few weeks ago to become assistant manager of the local Fox offices.

There is great rivalry between Frank E. Stewart, city salesman for Fox in the east side and Royal Baker, police censor. Each claims to be a better boxer than the other. It is expected that some time they will go to the mat to settle the dispute and prove which one is right.

Ray J. Branch has joined the Hodkinson exchange as special representative. He is one of the pioneer film men in this territory.

Fred Nugent, Metro manager, was in Cleveland last week attending a meeting of managers from Pittsburg, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

For the second time this year the safe of the Rialto theatre was wrecked and robbed. Early last Tuesday thieves blew up the safe, badly demonolishing the furniture and breaking windays and escaped with $1,200. Earlier in the year they escaped with $1,750.

Miss Rose Miller, assistant secretary-stenographer in the M. P. T. O. offices, Hotel Wolverine, has returned from her vacation—a motor trip East—and reports a wonderful time.

Buffalo

HERE he is. The live wire exhibitor of Niagara Falls, N. Y. Meet Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue theatre who ever and anon springs into the public prints because of his novel exploitation methods. Right now Herman is busy on an eight-page section exploiting "Main Street," which will be a special insert in the Niagara Falls Gazette. Mr. Lorence has persuaded all the merchants on the main stem in the vicinity of the Bellevue to come through with good size ads booming their section of the city, with special emphasis on Main Street. Herman has also completed plans for an anti-narcotic week in connection with which Mr. Lorence has persuaded the mayor to issue a special proclamation. Of course it's all being done to boost "Human Wreckage." The women's clubs will help and Herman is hoping to put over a prize stunt by having "Billy" Sunday come to the theatre and address the audience one evening on the evils of dope. Billy will be in town at the time of the showing of "Human Wreckage," holding meetings in a big tabernacle.

George Keating, manager of the Jubilee, Buffalo; Sidney C. Allen of the Allen theatre, Medina, N. Y., and M. Carr of the Lyndhurst, Rochester, have been appointed members of a special Reference Committee to hear all disputes on film contracts entered into by members of Western New York Theatres, Inc., the organization affiliated with the national Cohen organization, which is not working with the Buffalo Film Board of Trade. Says a statement issued by President Howard J. Smith: "This committee has no power to do more than recommend a settlement. It cannnt force either exhibitor or film man into doing anything. It will work only as a committee of the organization in trying to settle troubles." Mr. Smith is now busy fitting up new clubrooms for the members on the second floor of the Palace theatre building, where all meetings will be held.

The Buffalo Film Board of Trade held a very successful get-together meeting and dinner in the new Hotel Statler Saturday, September 8, which was attended by managers, salesmen and bookers of the local exchanges. It was held to show the harmony existing among the various exchanges on the uniform contract and to promote good will both in the exchange and in the field. Among those wro spoke were: T. W. Brady, Goldwyn; C. W. Anthony, Vitagraph; Clayton P. Sheehan, Fox district manager; Lester P. Wolfe, Select; E. J. Hayes, First National; E. McManus, Paramount; J. Miller, Renown; Bill Mack, Pathe; G. Willis, Merit; George A. Faulkner, Hodkinson; J. G. Fater, Preferred; Earl Kramer, Universal; Henry W. Kahn, Metro, and Sydney Samson, Bond. Mr. Samson, who is president of the local club, presided.

Clayton Pfeiffer, former assistant booker at the Paramount exchange, is back from a trip to Montreal. Everyone is asking him how it tasted. Tours to Montreal are all the vogue among the richer class these days.

Robert W. Brown has been appointed conductor of the orchestra at the new Strand theatre in Niagara Falls, N. Y., and Mrs. Emily Karnes is playing the Wurlitzer organ. Managing Director A. C. Hayman announces the closing of contracts for the showing of most of the big new Paramount and First National productions. Mr. Hayman and his assistant, George J. Mackenna, look forward to a busy season. Mr. Hayman was in the audience at the Dempsey-Firpo fight in New York Friday night. Never misses a big fistic battle.

Harry DeVere of New York city has arrived in Buffalo as special representative for two reel comedies at the Pathe office. Frank Minor, shipping clerk, is sporting one of those new Ford coupes. Murray W. Garson, producer, dropped in to see his old friend, W. A. V. Mack, Pathe pilot, one day last week.

New York financial interests are reported to be contemplating the erection of a new theatre in Binghamton, N. Y., on the site of the old Binghamton clubhouse, Chenango and Henry streets. Hiram Mintz owns ths property. The proposed theatre will cost $500,000 and seat 2,000. Construction is set for May 1, 1924.

Col. Howard F. Brink, manager of the Educational exchange, is mourning the loss of his mother, who died suddenly in Buffalo last week. The body was taken to Bethlehem, Pa., for burial.

Southwest

THE Liberty theatre reopened at Oklahoma City Sept. 8th, and with super-photo-plays and orchestra music as the policy, and the price of admission reduced to 10 and 15 cents.

The Liberty theatre has heretofore been a musical comedy and stock house. It has been completely overhauled, renovated and made practically new, both inside and out.

Metro has opened a branch in Oklahoma City, Okla., at 125 South Hudson Street, and the following is the personnel of the new office: Jack Elwell, manager; Max Holstein, booker; J. L. Williams, cashier; H. G. Allen, billing clerk; H. C. Bishop, salesman; Francis Winkler, stenographer; H. A. York, shipping clerk; E. S. Oldsmith, salesman; H. H. Allen, statistical clerk; Mrs. Miller, chief inspector; Evelyn Fletcher, inspector; C. E. Kessnich, Southern Division Manager, was at the opening, and will have the exchange under his supervision.

Tal Richards has accepted a position as booker for Enterprise Distributing Corporation at Oklahoma City. The Idlehour theatre was destroyed by fire at Drumright, Okla., last week.

Progress Pictures, Inc., has opened a new exchange on third floor of the Film Exchange Building at Dallas, with R. J. Ingram as resident manager. Pregress Pictures will release Arrow pictures in Oklahoma, Texas, and Arkansas from the Dallas branch.

The Enterprise Distributing Corporation at Dallas has added Alexander R. Ninninger and E. S. Lowry as additional salesmen to help take care of the increased business expected Sept. 15th to Nov. 15th, which dates include the 8th anniversary and special drive for new business.

William K. Jenkins, president, and M. S. White, Dallas branch manager, will co-operate with the other working force in helping the exhibitors to secure immediately the best big picture productions obtainable.

Resident Manager Huey of Vitagraph, Inc., has returned to Dallas after a visit with the home office in New York City.

Miss Myrtle Fimble, of the Enterprise Distributing Corporation at Dallas, was married last week, but the name of the groom could not be learned.

Resident Manager M. J. Sparks of the Southern States Film House at Dallas, Texas, made a business trip to El Paso the first of the week.

Manager Josh Billings, of the Billings theatre at Norman, Okla., motored to Dallas the first of the week. His car was overturned en route, but no injuries sustained. W. & B. O. Wolts have sold their Palace theatre at Blackwell, Okla., to A. B. Woodring and Sons.

Floyd Stewart has been appointed a traveler for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Film Corporation at Dallas.

Kansas City

ONE of the largest deals of several months in Kansas City, involving the new Center theatre building, was completed last week when the structure was sold to George A. Metcalf for $265,000 by Clem B. Altman and the F. G. Altman estate. The New Centre theatre building, which includes office space, was erected by the Altman interests in 1916, replacing an old brick residence which had stood on the corner of Fifteenth street and Troost for thirty years. The New Centre, while not considered a suburban house, is in the center of a busy transfer district.

The Isis theatre, Kansas City's largest suburban house, which has been closed four weeks, opened this week to near capacity crowds. The house, which has undergone $12,000 worth of improvements, looks like a new theatre on the interior. The walls of the lobby have been artistically finished in delft blue. White and old rose tints prevail in the wall decorations in the auditorium, while the stage has been enlarged and new scenery and velvet drapes added. The carpet is soft gray in tone. New statuary, baskets of flowers and plants give an effective touch to the lobby. Five men have been added to the orchestra, under the direction of Carl Stalling, director.

Not in recent years has the death of a theatre manager been mourned so widely as Cyrus Jacobs, manager of the Globe theatre, a combination motion picture and vaudeville house of Kansas City. Mr. Jacobs, who was 47 years old, was taken to a hospital Friday after an attack of heart disease. He was improving steadily until Monday, when a second attack induced his death.

Three men were arrested this week in connection with the holdup, July 11, of the Main-street theatre, Kansas City, in which $2,000 in cash was stolen. Joe Caruso, an 18-year-old youth, one of the three arrested, has been identified by Taylor F. Myers, house superintendent at the theatre, as the man who obtained the money in one of the most daring holdups of the year.

The Pantages theatre, Kansas City motion picture and vaudeville house, which has been closed for summer remodeling, opened this week. About 500 members of the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association, theatre and film exchange managers and members of the press attended a private showing of the feature pictures to be shown for the next two weeks. The audience, as guest of the manager, James Rice, acclaimed the house as one of the most up-to-date theatres in the city and the pictures were approved by the P. T. A. Alterations and the installation of a refrigerating plant, at a cost of $100,000, have been made. The cooling system keeps the house at the same uniform temperature everywhere and is said to be the largest cooling system for a theatre in the world, with the exception of that in the Metropolitan, Los Angeles. The alterations include new rugs, scenery and fixtures.

An auspicious opening marked the initial program of the Liberty theatre, one of Kansas City's largest first run down town houses, this week. The theatre has been closed for three weeks, undergoing remodeling and other improvements. Mayor Frank Cromwell of Kansas City receives the keys to the theatre from Samuel Harding, owner, and opens the doors to the public at 2 o'clock Sunday. More than 1,000 attended the initial program, after standing in line for nearly an hour. The theatre has been redecorated and refinished. New scenery and stage work have been installed. The interior has been painted gray with blue finish as relief work, with a border of gold striping. L. D. Balsley, former Universal branch manager at Kansas City, is the Universal manager of the house, the theatre having been leased for twenty weeks by Universal.

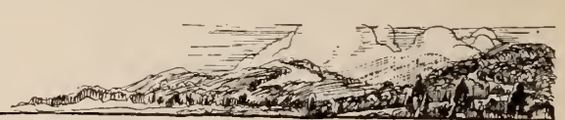
A roaring success was the dance given for the Kansas City colony last week by "Bill" Flynn, manager of "Hollywood," the new film row eating house. From the shipping clerk to the manager they were there.

The following changes in management and erection of new houses in Kansas City territory have been announced:

Bell theatre, Kansas City, purchased by "Rube" Melcher, former Selznick salesman; Rex theatre, Higginsville, Mo., purchased by R. R. Gladdish from C. W. Hunt; New theatre, not yet named, to be built in Chillicothe, Mo., work to start this month.

Two new salesmen were added to the Kansas City Preferred Pictures branch last week, L. D. Redman, formerly with United Artists and First National in Chicago, and Charles Russell, former Universal representative.

Bernard C. Cook, manager of the Economy Film Company, Kansas City, was operated upon last week, a cyst being removed from his left arm, but he is back on the job again this week.



The Educational Kansas City branch moved into its new building at Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets this week. The new quarters afford much more room and convenience.

George Schneider, formerly with the Goldwyn Kansas City office and now Paramount manager in Minneapolis, spent a few days with the "home folks" in Kansas City last week.

Manager H. Wasgiem of the McGraw theatre, Brookfield, Mo., took responsibility upon his own shoulders and started Sunday openings this month, announcing to his patrons, through the Brookfield Argus, that he takes the stand that if the Chautauqua, an enterprise of outsiders, is allowed to give entertainment Sunday, where admission is charged, he should have the same right, especially if he shows pictures of a religious and moral nature.

Cincinnati

ONE of the greatest difficulties confronting the different exchanges in Cincinnati, is the lack of a sufficient number of capable film inspectors. This has reached such a crisis that the different managers were confronted with a situation that for a time appeared rather serious. The difficulty, however, is soon to be solved. The matter was brought to the attention of the meeting of the Film Board of Trade and after lengthy discussion it was decided to start a school of film inspection. W. A. Kaiser, chairman of the Board, immediately set about to organize such a school and the result is most gratifying. In this way one of the most important branches of the film exchanges will be solved, in the only reasonable manner, for the inpesction of film is one of the most important parts of the film game, and one which should have received better attention in the past.

Never in the history of local filmdom has any picture received the support that "The Covered Wagon" has. An absolute sell out from the time it opened to date and every indication that it will continue is the best and only way to size up the situation. Manager Milford Unger of the Grand who worked hard to put it over is more than elated with the results. At the present writing the picture is destined to play the Grand for three weeks with a good chance for a holdover. There is only one way that the picture could have played to more money so far and that is to have sold standing room only, something which is not allowed in any Cincinnati theatre.

Jos. Klein local manager for Metro returned from a successful trip the other day. While away he closed contracts for several of Metro's features. Klein reports business way above the average.

The Oak Hill theatre of Oak Hill, West Va., has been sold to Konoles Bros. Mr. A. Barton, the new manager of the theatre, spent Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Cincinnati, visiting the different exchanges and signing contracts for numerous pictures both large and small which he will run at his theatre during the coming season. Barton has great expectations for the future of the Oak Hill theatre.

Thornton Corwin, connected with the local Metro office, will shortly leave for Havana, Cuba, where he will take up a position of importance with the United Fruit Co.

Geo. Fenburg, the ever alert "theatre magnet" of Newark, Ohio, purchased the canopy from the Pastime theatre, Columbus, O., when that place went out of business several weeks ago.

Hal Roach, famous comedy producer, gave a dinner at the Sinton Hotel which many of the local exhibitors attended. It was a regular get together meeting at which many things beneficial to the trade were discussed and where a consensus of opinion regarding the proper kind of comedies was sought. Jack Woody, recently appointed General Manager for Associated Exhibitors, was one of the guests and while he was in the city made numerous calls among his old friends of which he has quite a few.

Many local exchange men went to Charleston, W. Va., to attend the opening of the Rialto theatre on September 10th.

L. B. Wilson, of the Liberty theatre, Covington, Ky., has been spending the week in Boston, where he went to attend the opening of the new musical comedy, "Take a Chance," in which his brother Hans is starred.

Clay Brehm, manager of the Warner Bros. office, has completed his staff of office help by installing several stenographers as well as other necessary help. Brehm expects to do big things during the present season.

Morris Safier, district manager for United Artists, dropped in to the city to look over the new office which he recently opened and also to find out how "The White Rose," which opens at Gift theatre on September 15th, is being put over.

The Casino theatre, one of Cincinnati's most successful suburban houses, owes most of its success to its hard working manager, Charles Harlow. Harlow always on the job and studying the likes and dislikes of his customers, has been able at all times to present a program pleasing to all as well as run the theatre in a faultless manner.

Dave Helbig, city salesman for Metro, although capable of balancing the scales with the largest, is nevertheless one of the best hustlers around the Film Building. The consequence is that there are more Metro pictures shown at local playhouses than ever before.

One of the best tieups ever achieved by a local publicity man, was accomplished last week, when N. Schechter exploiteer for the Frankel interests, succeeded in tieing up the Dow Drug Company for the exploitation of "The White Rose." The Dow interests control twenty-four stores in Cincinnati, which are situated on the best corners of the city. Over half of the cities' population pass the Dow stores daily.

Albany

ARTHUR JONES, traveling auditor for Vitagraph, is at the local exchange this week.

Walter Hayes, connected with the Mark Strand chain of houses, stopped over in Albany last week, while on his way from New York to Buffalo.

William Smalley, head of a chain of a dozen or more houses, was in Albany last week for the purpose of seeing "Hollywood" at the Mark Strand, and "The Merry-Go-Round" at the Leland.

Bert Gibbons, recently elevated from the position of manager in the local Vitagraph exchange, is back from his first swing over the district, which he is acting as manager of, and which includes Montreal, Toronto and Buffalo.

Robert Wyckoff, a traveling poster and shipping department expert for Fox, blew into town last week from Philadelphia, and is showing the local exchanges how to put matters over.

"Al" Elliott, owner of the Playhouse in Hudson, N. Y., is suffering from an attack of blood poisoning in one hand. Mr. Elliott hit his finger instead of the nail.

Maurice Silverman, owner of the Happyhour and Pearl theatres in Schenectady, N. Y., is hopping mad. Perhaps he has a right to be, for a certain well known film man, in Albany, who is somewhat of a musical composer, has written a song known as "Cry Baby Blues" and what is more to the point, dedicated the same to Mr. Silverman.

There is a touch of the feminine always apparent in the Merit exchange, in Albany, N. Y., ably handled by Miss Marie Wheeler, as manager. Miss Wheeler always relieves the commercial aspect of the office by a boquet of flowers on her desk.

John J. Fleming, recently appointed as manager of the Vitagraph exchange in Albany, was in New York last week, conferring with Arthur Whyte, booking agent for Proctor's circuit.

The Mark Strand, in Albany, N. Y., is being touched up in spots by a painter.

William Smalley has a good idea in connection with his theatre in Cooperstown, N. Y., using large letters spelling the words "Let's Go." The letters adorn the front of the house, and have caused a lot of comment.

From now on, the Albany theatre, in Schenectady, N. Y., recently absorbed by the Farash company, will play vaudeville, six acts, changing twice a week. The house has been operated as a moving picture theatre for several years by Paul Alberts, who will move to New York, and associate himself with an importing firm.

The Grand, in Scotia, N. Y., owned by A. E. Center, of Schenectady, has reopened.

Unless the coming winter is an open one, the Odd Fellows Hall, in Berlin, N. Y., run as a motion picture theatre by Mr. Tefft, will close in November. Last winter's heavy snows almost caused the house to go into bankruptcy.

Some of the smaller theatres in this section, operating one night a week, will shortly be opened at least an additional night a week. This s true of the theatre operated by L. L. Connors, in Cambridge, and the Star, in Salem, owned by Jack Gillies.

William Shirley, now managing-director of the State and Strand theatres, in Schenectady, was in New York City last week.

Miss Alice Kelly, recently named as relief organist at the Leland theatre in Albany, has proved so satisfactory that she will remain permanently, relieving Stephen Boisclair.

Accompanied by one of the priests of this section, Charles A. McCarthy of Hoosick Falls, N. Y., one of the veteran showmen in this part of the state, was along Film Row last week.

Miami, Florida, will claim George Leo, recently owner of the theatre in Staatsburg, N. Y., after November 15. Mr. Leo has sold his theatre and will go south for the winter.

Exhibitors found relief this week from film salesmen. Tuesday and Wednesday were Jewish holidays, and while the exchanges in Albany remained opened, the territory was barren of salesmen.

Joe Braff has taken over the lease of the Hudson, in Watervliet, and will reopen within a week. Mr. Braff contends that under present day conditions, an exhibitor must have more than one house in order to successfully operate.

Don't talk to Jack Krause, manager of the Bond Photo Play exchange in Albany, N. Y., about automobile laws. During the last six weeks, Mr. Krause has paid more than $25 because of minor infractions of the law. Friday night brought another five-spot. Along with it all, Mr. Krause has been having mechanical trouble with his machine.

Fred Elliott, until recently owner of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, and well known throughout the state, has been in Massachusetts the past week, and may become agent for an automobile accessory.

At the request of both exhibitors and exchange men in this part of the state, Elmer Crowninshield, owner of the Bijou in Troy, has opened up a shop for the repair of motion picture projection machines.

"Al" Elliott, of the Playhouse, in Hudson, N. Y., owns some of the best police dogs in the state. When he played "Strongheart" recently, he went to the county clerk's office, and from the dog license bureau, secured the name of every owner of a canine in the county. To these persons Mr. Elliott mailed a card giving them the date of "Strongheart" at the Playhouse. The idea worked out well.

Abe Devore will open his new house in Schenectady on about October 15. Stores on the first floor will help to meet the overhead.

The old color is once more back in the cheeks of Maurice Sullivan, owner of the Sans Souci, in Watervliet, N. Y. For some time past, Mr. Sullivan has been ailing. Acting on the suggestion of one of the exchange managers, Mr. Sullivan started in at the local Y. M. C. A. gym, where he now works out almost daily and is rapidly regaining his health.

Robert Landry, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., last week took over title to the Star theatre in that city, and added another house to his chain.

Seattle

LOUIS B. METZGER, Northwestern exchange manager for the Film Booking Offices Corporation, spent a few days here recently, his first trip to the local office since he moved his headquarters to Portland several weeks ago. During his stay here he conferred with A. H. Huot, branch manager, and was also in conference with several theatre men around the city. Following Mr. Metzger's return to the Oregon territory, Mr. Huot set out on a road trip to Spokane and other points in that district, to be gone for a number of days. H. M. Glanfield, F. B. O. salesman in the Eastern Washington territory, has just returned to the city after a trip of several weeks on the road.

Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox Film exchange, was scheduled to leave Seattle early in September to attend the meeting of the West Boards of Trade presidents in Los Angeles the second week in September. Mr. Navarre, as the president of the Northwestern Film Board of Trade of this city, was to meet in the California city with the executives of Boards of Trade from Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Butte and Dallas, to confer over matters of mutual interest to the exchange and exhibitor organizations in these big territories.

O. K. Whipple has recently been engaged as booker at the Select exchange, according to an announcement made by Paul R. Aust, branch manager. The placing of Mr. Whipple as booker will allow E. A. Lamb, former booker and assistant to Mr. Aust, to alternate with the latter on road trips, and will thus give the Select exchange one more salesman in the field. Before coming to this city Mr. Whipple was manager of the Pathe exchange in Butte, Montana.

Charles E. Feldman, manager of the First National exchange, has just returned from a short business trip to Spokane, during which he lined up engagements for some of the new First National releases.

C. M. Van Horn, manager of the Pathe Exchange in Spokane, was a recent visitor at Paul Lynch's Pathe branch office here. Mr. Van Horn was making a short tour around the State and dropped in to give his regards to the local staff. After a visit of short duration he started off again on his return voyage to his own headquarters.

Previews of the first six or eight chapters of "The Steel Trail" have been held at the Universal exchange recently by Manager L. J. Schlaifer. Exhibitors of this territory, especially from the smaller cities and towns, have been especially invited to attend the private showings.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors seen on Film Row recently were A. H. McDonald, of the Rex and Castle theatres, in Eugene, Oregon; B. B. Vivian, of the Empire and Rialto theatres, in Anacortes, and Mack Davis and son of the Mack theatre in Port Angeles.

A new weekly theatrical paper, The Seattle Theatre News, began publication in September under the editorship of Ed. C. Russell. It is a four-page edition in tabloid form, and at present is distributed through the Blue Mouse and Heilig theatres, although it contains news pertaining to all downtown motion picture, vaudeville and variety houses. According to present indications, it is planned to distribute the paper through as many theatres as possible.

Ruth Roland, former screen star, was the headline attraction at the Moore theatre recently, following in the footsteps of Louise Lovely, who opened the Orpheum vaudeville season there the week before. Other screen favorites scheduled to appear at the Moore during the coming season, already announced, are Richard Barthelmess and Bessie Barriscale. Pictures of local audiences taken by Louise Lovely during her stay here were shown the following week.

William Preston has just been engaged as doorman at the Columbia by Manager Hal Daigler. Mr. Preston recently left that position at the Liberty theatre, after having been in the employ of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit in this city for more than five years.

Construction of an elaborate $50,000 neighborhood motion picture theatre at 10th Avenue Northeast and 66th Street in this city will be begun in a short time by J. L. Beardslee, according to announcements. Mr. Beardslee at present operates a string of theatres in Sultan and Monroe, Wash.

Washington

IT was through the enterprise of Joseph P. Morgan, general manager of the Crandall theatres in Washington and vicinity, that Harry M. Crandall was enabled last week to "scoop" the town, and place on view in the Metropolitan theatre a complete Burton Holmes reel of natural color views of Yokohama and Tokyo, Japan, while the quake news was still hot. Joe Morgan, having visited Japan, was interested to the point of getting the film from Paramount.

William C. Ewing, staff artist attached to the Crandall publicity department, has been confined to his home by severe pulmonary illness the past two weeks, following his recent vacation with relatives in New York and New England. Must have had a great and strenuous time.

Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director of the Public Service and Educational activities of the Crandall theatres, returned to Washington last week from a two weeks' outing in the Adirondacks. On her return she held important conferences with officials of the Will Hays organization in New York, and of the Stanley Company in Philadelphia, with regard to some aspects of her work. Mrs. Locher was accompanied on the trip by her mother, Mrs. Hawley.

Miss Mary Jones is now secretary to Mr. Sulley of the Paramount offices here, while Miss Mary Smith is functioning in a similar capacity for Frank Boucher.

Miss Bessie Schoor, formerly of Buffalo, has been a great help to the work of Exploiter Whelan in putting over Paramount week in the region. From all reports the work has been successfully launched.

Miss Bauer of Universal was recently married to Louis De Change.

Plans are now being made for the resumption of construction on the new Cosmopolitan theatre at Washington, declares A. J. Brylawski.

The Washington Herald has been quoting local people on their Ten Best Plays. Sunday it quoted Lawrence Beattus, manager of Loew's Washington theatres as rating "Blanche Bates in 'The Girl of the Golden West'; David Warfield in 'The Music Master'; Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott in 'When We Were Twenty-one'; Richard Mansfield in 'Cyrano de Bergerac'; Maude Adams in 'Peter Pan'; Laurette Taylor in 'Peg O' My Heart'; Donald Brian and Ethel Jackson in 'The Merry Widow'; Margaret Anglin and Henry Miller in 'The Great Divide'; Leslie Carter in 'Zaza'; David Warfield in the Belasco-ized version of 'The Merchant of Venice.' And Larry wanted to add Lionel Atwill in 'The Comedian.'"

Milton Simon has been replaced as manager of the Washington exchange of Independent-Warner Bros., by Norman J. Ayers.

J. Victor Norton, former Petersburg, Va., exhibitor, and former Vitagraph representative in the Virginia sector, under Managers "Gene" Wilson and "Cholly" Spoehr, is now covering Virginia for the B. Oletzky Federated Film exchange of Washington and Baltimore.

Max Cluster of the Cluster and Waverly theatres, Baltimore, was a recent caller at the Washington branch of Independent-Warner Bros.

Miss Myrtle Friess, formerly in the Pathe film inspection service here, is now with the Progress Pictures' shipping and inspection bureau.

Al E. Garner of the Universal sales force has severed his long time connection with the Laemmle organization and talks of plans to become a Philippine sugar planter.

George Bachus was a Film Row caller on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, booking his fall films for the reopening of the Rivoli (his theatre opened last spring at Hampton, Va.) which took place for the 1923-24 season, Sept. 10.

Tom O'Donnell has had considerable success this summer at his New theatre in the Southeast, putting on a "Kiddies' Surprise Matinee" every Saturday afternoon. Presents of toys or other novelties are made to the juvenile populace, and maybe it does not help to build community good will among the youngsters and their parents!

Manager "Bob" Smeltzer of Associated First National, Washington, announces the appointment of R. W. Treleaven as a film salesman for the local exchange.

The First National Club entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Goldberg, in compliment to Steve Tyson, recently married. It is reported that the bride is the daughter of a West Virginia congressman. Rumors of impending weddings on Film Row are now as thick as they were in June.

Fred Meyers, Jr., of the Paramount organization at Washington, recently celebrated his fifteenth year as a Benedict, and was fittingly feted by the Paramount Club. A Dodge coupe and a signed presentation card in the name of "J B. King" was tendered him by the club. He accepted but is still querying the identity of said King.

Henry Mann is now publicity representative with the Washington office of F. B. O., advancing "Human Wreckage." He was formerly in similar work under the Universal banner in the Middle West. An experienced newspaper man and publicist with several years devoted to the modern methods of film exploitation, he fills a long vacant place at the local exchange. Premieres in Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va., for "Human Wreckage" have already been arranged for.

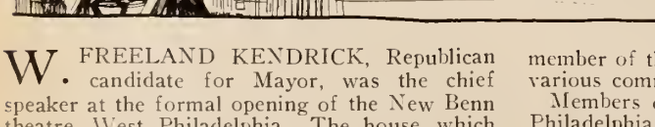
Walter Decker of the City Opera House and Empire theatres was a Federated exchange visitor Sept 1-2, returning to Frederick for Labor Day.

Harry Rosen, Baltimore exhibitor, visited local exchanges Saturday.

Eugene Wilson, former Vitagraph manager and more recently with Fox exchange, Washington, has resigned, and his place has been filled by William Boggs.

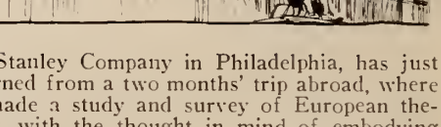
G. H. McCulley of Philadelphia, formerly with the Fox exchange in Quakerville, has been appointed cashier of the Fox Washington exchange, vice Maxwell Blick, resigned. Blick has gone into business for himself at Battle Creek, Mich.

Bill Holz, veteran official of the operators' local, and shipper at Educational exchange,, Washington, has been appointed booker, vice Miss Calhoun, recently resigned.



Edward Whaley has succeeded Harry Levey as salesman, covering the Virginia territory for Educational. E. J. Martin, formerly with Metro in this territory, is now covering Virginia for Vitagraph, vice J. Vic Norton, resigned.

Harry Levey, connected with First National and Educational exchanges in this territory, has severed his connections with Educational and has taken up his duties as representative of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Washington branch in the Virginia key towns.



The cameramen have been very busy lately filming the Coolidge boys giving 1600 Pennsylvania avenue the once over, and then Saturday afternoon "shot" the President and Mrs. Coolidge when they gave themselves a diversion by taking their first trip down the Potomac river on the Mayflower. The return of the transport "St. Mihiel" from the navy bombing tests added to their activity.

Jack Connolly, representing the Hays organization, paid a week-end visit to Boston for the convention of the Department of Massachusetts of the American Legion.

It is announced that movies, made at the Coast, of the Latin-American diplomats in the party sponsored by Connolly for the Monroe Centennial at Los Angeles, are to be shown in the ballroom at 2400 16th Street, at an entertainment given by Senor C. de Quesada, consul of Cuba, attached to the Cuban legation.

Philadelphia

W. FREELAND KENDRICK, Republican candidate for Mayor, was the chief speaker at the formal opening of the New Benn theatre, West Philadelphia. The house, which has a seating capacity of 1,000, is a consolidation of interests of the Stanley Company of America and Maruc Benn, who is one of the pioneer exhibitors of Philadelphia. It is built of steel and yellow brick, and the interior of the house is fashioned largely after the Stanley theatre. Prior to the opening, the West Philadelphia Business Men's Association gave a dinner for Mr. Benn and the officials of the Stanley Company. The house, with others under the Stanley control in that section, will follow a policy of two changes per week.

A monster picnic, in which all the film exchanges in Philadelphia will have a part, will be given Sept. 30 at the Mohican Club, Delair-on-the-Delaware, N. J. It will be given under the auspices of the Film Board of Trade for the motion picture community at large, and it is expected will be one of the largest of its kind ever given in the territory. Every exchange, a member of the board, will be represented on the various committees. Tickets will be $3.

Members of the motion picture fraternity in Philadelphia are now arranging for a huge benefit for Leon Behal, short subject sales manager of the DeLuxe exchange, who was recently struck by an automobile in front of the exchange and injured so badly that it is expected that he will be in the hospital for six months and will be a cripple for life. The benefit will be given in the Globe theatre, and the proceeds will be presented to Mr. Behal as an expression of sympathy from the entire motion picture fraternity, among whom he enjoyed rare popularity and high esteem.

Al Fisher, who has been handling special subjects for the Philadelphia office of Metro, has been placed in charge of the Metro Independent Film Department, a subsidiary of Metro exchange, and will supervise the sale and distribution of the Elaine Hammerstein specials and other similar attractions.

Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, head of the Nixon-Nirdlinger chain of theatres and a director of the Stanley Company in Philadelphia, has just returned from a two months' trip abroad, where he made a study and survey of European theatres, with the thought in mind of embodying some new ideas in a local playhouse which he intends to erect.

The orchestra of the Stanley theatre has been increased to fifty members, and is now under the direction of Josef Pasternick, who was for a time director of the Boston Symphony orchestra. Special musical features will be part of the Stanley's program for the coming season, with prologues arranged by Paul Oscard, who formerly had charge of that work at the Rialto and Rivoli theatres in New York. The Aldine, another Stanley house, has changed its policy to extended runs of big features, and has installed a 20-piece orchestra, with Albert F. Wayne as conductor. Soloists will also appear. The price of admission for the evening has been raised from 50 to 75 cents.

The Stanley Company of America will move into its new quarters Oct. 1 at 1912 Race Street.

Salt Lake City

IN connection with the picture "Mary of the Movies," the feature at the State theatre, the star, Miss Marion Mack, appears each afternoon and evening. There is more than ordinary interest attached to Miss Mack's visit to Salt Lake City, as she is a native girl of this city who left several years ago for the Pacific Coast. While here she is stopping at her old home, and visiting her mother.

Wally Carter, who has been connected with Manager Dave Schayer at the State theatre since it was taken over last spring for the showing of motion pictures, severed his connection with this house September 1 to accept the position of manager of the Alhambra theatre in Ogden, Utah. This showhouse is one of the finest in that city and the many friends of "Wally" join in wishing him much success in his new capacity.

E. M. Loy and F. S. Gulbranson, who cover the Idaho territory for the Famous Players-Lasky, were in this city last week conferring with H. W. Braly, resident manager. They report good business in the northern territory, with the outlook for the coming season as very promising, as the abundant crops in Idaho prognosticate a "comeback" for the Gem state farmers, making money more plentiful. The sales figures turned in by these two boys uphold the above assertion.

Louis Marcus, Famous Players-Lasky district manager for Salt Lake City and Denver, is at present in the latter city on business at that end of the territory. He is expected to return Saturday.

W. G. Sieb, manager of the local Pathe exchange, returned from a trip throughout Idaho this week. While there he visited the key cities with V. Stewart, Idaho representative for Pathe, and did some good business. A few days were taken for a short trip through Yellowstone park.

Harry Ginsberg, general sales manager of the Preferred Pictures Corporation showing on the Associated First National program, was a Salt Lake visitor for two days this week. While here he was the guest of L. L. Hall, resident manager of the Associated First National exchange. He left yesterday for New York City, his headquarters, after a visit to the coast.

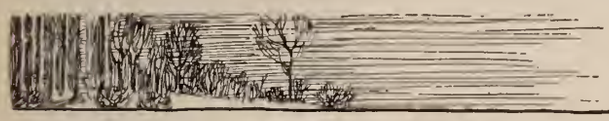
William E. Gehring, manager of the local Fox film exchange, has added another salesman to his force in the person of Tom Wickham. Mr. Wickham will work the small cities of Idaho. He comes here from Oklahoma City, where he was connected with the Associated First National.

John A. Rugar, manager of the local Vitagraph exchange is in Ogden, lining up the features on the Vitagraph program for the new season. He will return tomorrow.

Manager B. A. Gurnette, of the Universal exchange, left last week for Idaho, where he is covering the key centers with his salesmen in that territory.

All Western presidents of the Film Board of Trade have been called to Los Angeles to attend a convention, September tenth and eleventh. W. F. Adamson, manager of the Hodkinson local territory, is president of the Intermountain Film Board of Trade, and will leave tomorrow for the coast. He expects to return immediately after the convention closes.

S. J. Vogel, Western division manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, stopped off in Salt Lake City Tuesday, on his way to New York City. While here he transacted special business with the attaches of the local Hodkinson exchange.



James Beale, formerly manager of the Hodkinson exchange in this city, and now Assistant Division Manager, is here for a few days visiting his many old friends and renewing acquaintances. Mr. Beale is the guest of W. F. Adamson, resident manager for Hodkinson.

G. L. Cloward, Metro exchange manager for this city, returned Tuesday from a trip to Butte, Montana, where he lined up some good business on the Metro program for the 1923-24 season release.

Out of town exhibitors who have "made" the Rialto this week are: Don R. Carruthers, who operates the Orpheum and Strand theatres at Pocatello, Idaho; William McFarland, proprietor of the Manti theatre, Manti, and the Star at Ephraim; W. E. Ruff, owner of the Storrs theatre at Storrs, Utah, and Otto Schmidt, operating the Colonial theatre at Idaho Falls, Idaho.

George E. Carpenter, manager of the Paramount-Empress theatre, announces that commencing Sunday, September 9, he will return to the old policy of starting the week's show on Sunday, instead of Saturday, as he now does.

A large house witnessed the pre-view of Harold Lloyd's latest Pathe picture, "Why Worry," which was screened at the Pantages theatre last night following the regular show. W. G. Sieb, Pathe exchange manager, conducted the screening.

Canada

UNQUALIFIED success attended the opening of the Family theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, as the Franklin theatre under the proprietorship of J. M. Franklin, formerly of Halifax and St. John, on Monday, September 3, when three performances were conducted before crowded houses. Mr. Franklin received telegrams from over 40 friends in the film exchange and theatrical world and was also the recipient of floral gifts from almost 20 sources. For his opening week, Mr. Franklin presented Pathe and Fox releases along with six acts of Keith vaudeville. His policy is to have three shows daily, with 50 cents as the top orchestra price for evening performances. The house has a seating capacity of 1,100 and the total attendance for the opening day was in excess of 3,000. The Franklin has been changed throughout as well as in name.

The Franklin has an orchestra of six, composed of the following musicians: Lionel Mortimer, director and violin; Harry M. Gough, piano; Charles Mathe, 'cello; Thomas Dunne, clarinet; C. Payette, cornet, and Jack Linderman, drums.

Among those who were guests at the opening were Sid Taube, representing the Canadian Educational exchange, Toronto; Mr. Crawford of the Fox Film Corporation, Toronto; Oral Cloakey, representing the Famous Players Canadian Corp; Jack Soanes, theatrical manager and various local exhibitors.

An unusual tie-up between screen and pulpit was in evidence at Ottawa, Ontario, on September 9, when Rev. E. B. Wyllie, pastor of Erskine Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, preached a sermon on "Wandering Daughters" which was the current production at the Center theatre, owned by Ben Stapleton. A few weeks before, Rev. Dr. Wyllie preached a sermon at his church on "If Winter Comes," which was the attraction at the Ottawa Regent theatre.

For the Central Canada Exhibition, which is the annual exposition of Ottawa, the Canadian capital, during the week of September 10, local exhibitors conducted a special campaign on a co-operative basis which was called "Go to the Theatre Week," the slogan of which was "Go to the theatre at least once and bring your Exhibition visitors." This stunt was carried out in order to take advantage of the presence in the city of thousands of visitors to the annual fair which is regarded as the second largest annual exhibition in the Dominion. Special combination advertising in the newspapers was a feature of the boost.

F. G. Spencer of St. John, N. B., has made an interesting price arrangement for his Capitol theatre at Kentville, N. S., which was opened a few days ago. According to Mr. Spencer's announcement, the price schedule is variable largely according to the days of the week. On Monday and Tuesday, when the "biggest" pictures will be shown, the admission is 35 cents for adults and 25 cents for children; on Wednesday and Thursday, the prices run 25 and 15 cents, while on Friday and Saturday the prices are 30 and 20 cents, the latter being changed to 25 and 15 cents at various times to suit the occasion. These prices are exclusive of amusement tax.

For opening week at the new Capitol, the program was as follows: Monday and Tuesday, when high prices prevailed, "The Isle of Lost Ships"; Wednesday and Thursday, "Oliver Twist"; Friday and Saturday, "The Hottentot."

Pat Dowling, publicist of Educational Films, has made a tour of Canadian Educational exchanges, having visited the branches at Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg and Toronto.

W. H. Mitchell, for years in the exchange business in Winnipeg and the Canadian West, has been appointed chief assistant to Louis Bache, Canadian district manger for Associated First National, with offices at Toronto.

Armand Rondeau, manager of the Metro-Warner department of Regal Films, Limited, Montreal, recently suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he has made slight recovery. Mr. Rondeau was also directing affairs at the Crystal Palace and System theatres in Montreal for some months past.

Dominion Films, Limited, at Montreal, has added two young ladies to the branch staff, these being Miss A. Webber, who has been appointed booker, and Miss Marie Antoinette Dupre, shipper and reviser.

The Grand of London, Ontario, managed by J. Minhinnick, has adopted the policy of playing Columbia burlesque during the first three days of each week, with pictures during the last half.

Activities of the Week for Denver Territory

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Corporation has just finished a Western Sales conference. Managers attended from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake, Butte and Denver.

Jimmie Hommell, manager of Selznick and incidentally president of the Denver Film Managers' Association, is off to Los Angeles to attend a Western Meeting of Film Boards.

Ward Scott, manager of the Fox office, just returned from a trip to New Mexico, reports the crops in that section of the country as exceptionally good on account of the late rains. Joe Ashby of the First National Exchange took a couple of weeks off and had the pleasure of combing the depths for the nimble trout.

Fox Theatres, Inc., have released their hold on the Rivoli theatre, situated on Curtis street in Denver, and hereafter will only control the Isis, Strand and Plaza. The Isis and Strand have been redecorated and several new innovations have been made for the 1924 season. The Isis will have a week stand policy and the Strand will go into two changes. Both will be first run houses.

Production-Distribution Activities

Kenneth Harlan, who has been elevated to stardom by Preferred Pictures.

Clever Youngsters Will Support "Chic" Sale

"Chic" Sale will have the support of a number of clever boys in his first starring vehicle for Associated Exhibitors release. Little Russell Griffin, who plays the role of the crippled boy in Constance Binneys' forthcoming feature, "Three O'clock in the Morning," is the leader of the gang.

"Mickey" Bennett and Freddy Strange, two promising young actors, are cast for leading roles with the star. Other boys included in the cast are Kent Redmond, Henry O'Connor, Edward Weisman, Edward and Billy Quinn, Jack Jacobs, Fred, Bert and Warren Gorman, Paul Jacchia, and Buddy Rayner.

Gregory La Cava, who directed the picture, has started the cutting and editing at the Burr studio at Glendale, Long Island, and it is expected that a release date will be set for this Associated feature soon.

Rin-tin-tin Appearing in Person

The famous police dog hero, Rin-tin-tin, star of the Warner feature, "Where the North Begins," is now making personal appearances throughout the country in conjunction with showings of the picture. Rin-tin-tin's first appearance was at the Alhambra theatre, in Milwaukee, and he scored a decided hit.

Campaign for Whittier's Birthday

C. B. C. Plans Celebration of Poet's Birthday with "Barefoot Boy" Showing

IN connection with their release of "The Barefoot Boy," the big all star special feature which C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is distributing for Mission Films, C. B. C. has already set in motion preparations for a gigantic celebration throughout the country of John Greenleaf Whittier's birthday on December 17th.

The plan, as it has been outlined and is being carried out, is a widespread one. Letters have already gone out from the C. B. C. offices to various school boards, civic societies, and literary societies throughout the country, inviting them to participate in putting over a national celebration of the poet's birthday and offering the cooperation that can be given along various lines by the film, "The Barefoot Boy."

Special showings of the picture, which features John Bowers, Sylvia Breamer, Frankie Lee, Tully Marshall, Marjorie Daw, Otis Harlan, Raymond Hatton, Lottie Williams, Brinsley Shaw, Virginia True Boardman, and Gertie Messinger, have been arranged already. Franchise holders are devoting special efforts and campaigns to cooperate with local exhibitors and societies, and special first-run bookings are being lined up on that day for the picture.

Expressions of approval of the plan to observe Whittier's birthday more widely than has been done before, through the medium of special exercises connected with the film production suggested by the poet's most famous work, have already been received from various cities, it is announced.

The President of the Poetry and Arts Society, in Cleveland, has written to Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn the following:

"Thank you for your letter regarding the celebration of John Greenleaf Whittiers' birthday on the seventeenth of December. Your plan is an excellent one, and from what we hear of your picture we believe it will lend great dignity to special exercises commemorating the poet's birth. You can count on us for fullest cooperation and we are at once getting in touch with schools and motion picture exhibitors here to further the plan."

The Literary Gathering, an organization in Atlanta, Ga., has written a similar letter, as have several other organizations of like nature.

"Red Lights" Mystifies New York

Critics Call Goldwyn Feature an Ideal and Thrilling Detective Play

"RED LIGHTS," the mystery melodrama which Clarence Badger made for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation from Edward E. Rose's stage play, received its metropolitan premiere at the Capitol theatre, New York, last week.

The film reviewers on the New York daily newspapers hailed it as a thrilling mystery play with many humorous incidents.

The critic of the New York Tribune wrote of it: "It is not only a thrilling mystery picture, it is a gay and jolly farce as well, and we had a perfectly grand time. Besides all this, the cast is excellent and the comedy is really funny."

The Sun and Globe: "An ideal detective play, thrilling and humorous. Everyone who likes movies should see it."

The Times: "There is an excellent thrill when the mysterious one cuts the coupling of the private car, which tears along in imminent danger of being smashed to atoms by the second section of the express."

The Telegraph: "Keeps you guessing from start to finish. A riotous delirium of blood, thunder and sudden death, which should prove to be one of the year's 'best sellers.'"

Journal of Commerce: "A thrilling diversion."

Journal: "Riots in action. Thrilling dangers crowd one another. 'Red Lights' is the ultimate of action."

Evening World: "It is chockful of experiments. It is well worth seeing."

Telegram: "Even more effective in picture form than it was on the speaking stage."

New Indiana Town Named For Composer

Paul Dresser, composer of the song, "On the Banks of the Wabash," which served as the inspiration for J. Stuart Blackton's forthcoming special to be released by Vitagraph, has been immortalized in his native State. Indiana has named after him a new town built on the west bank of the Wabash River six and one-half miles southwest of Terre Haute.

The town was built by the Central Indiana Power Company and is the home of the employes at a seven million-dollar power plant built by this company. The town was formally named on June 17th, when a body of Indianapolis citizens attended the ceremony.

Bookings Numerous For "Going Up"

Douglas MacLean's first independent starring production, "Going Up," which Associated Exhibitors is releasing Sept. 30, already has inspired a spirited scramble on the part of exhibitors for first-run bookings, it is claimed.

Billie Dove, leading woman for Bryant Washburn's first Grand-Asher production, "Try and Get It."

Exploitation Featured in C. B. C. Press Book

Because of the importance that C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is attaching to special exploitation for its features this season, a new plan is being used by that organization in the laying out and contents of the campaign books for their various features. This has been inaugurated in the book which has just been completed for "Forgive and Forget."

The new plan is to devote the body of the book exclusively to exploitation, with everything else reduced to a minimum. Instead of long dissertations on the worth of the picture, enormous photographs of the stars and other material, the C. B. Press book department is boiling all absolutely unnecessary material down to a few lines and giving the spreads to ideas which will be of real help to the persons concerned.

Norma Talmadge Voted Best for Juliet

Norma Talmadge, First National star, lead all competitors by a large majority in a voting contest conducted by the New York Daily News to determine the most popular actress to play the role of Juliet in a screen production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Conway Tearle, who plays opposite Miss Talmadge in her current release, "Ashes of Vengeance," finished third in the race for the role of Romeo. Valentino was selected by the fans as their first choice for the role.

It is reported that Joseph M. Schenck has been considering making the great Shakesperean romance with Miss Talmadge in the stellar role, but these plans have not assumed definite shape. The star is now producing "Dust of Desire" for First National release and following this is scheduled to appear in "Secrets."

Jean Hersholt Exhibits Paintings in S. F.

THE artistic ability of Jean Hersholt, who plays the role of Marcus Schouler in the Goldwyn picture "Greed," which Erich von Stroheim is transposing from Frank Norris' "McTeague," is not confined to acting. He is a painter of note as well, having had exhibitions in Copenhagen, Denmark, his native city, and in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. The latest showing of his brush and pen work was held in art galleries in San Francisco.

The exhibition included oil paintings and pen and ink drawings. The former consisted of portraits, still life and landscapes; the latter were black and white studies, in the manner of etchings, of ZaSu Pitts, as the Trina of "Greed," Erich von Stroheim, the director and himself as Marcus Schouler.

Novel Exploitation For "The Drivin' Fool"

The Hodkinson exploitation department is taking advantage of the widespread interest manifested by the public regarding careless and reckless driving of automobiles and have evolved a number of clever publicity stunts along these lines for their sensational automobile picture, "The Drivin' Fool," soon to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corp.

A very attractive poster, which can be used in warning automobilists of a dangerous crossing, has been made These posters or crossing signs have a large red triangle in the middle. Across the top are the words, "Crossing—Slow Up." At the bottom there is a line carrying the title of the picture.

A Pictorial News Service has also been made and will be supplied to the exhibitor for his use in exploiting "The Drivin' Fool."

Anderson Policy Would Cut Costs

Dependable Attractions With Economic Production Is Plan of Organization

A STATEMENT from the offices of Anderson Pictures Corporation emphasizes the selection of attractions by that organization on the basis of their dependability and economic production cost.

According to the latest announcement, "tremendously high star salaries will find no favor with the Anderson Company, and this goes for all.

"Box office features, possessing the public appeal which makes them exceptional offerings, and backed up with spirited and energetic exploitation, are what the exhibitors want. We are going to give them just such pictures. Several productions have been completed for our release but we are withholding all announcements regarding product until a complete line-up is arranged. We will make no statements to the exhibitors which cannot be supported by actual facts.

"We will handle only productions which possess striking exploitation possibilities and lend themselves to widespread publicity. This is a fundamental rock in the foundation of the Anderson service. They will be made from only one angle, the exhibitor. They will be produced as economically as possible commensurate with quality and merit, and will be offered on a basis which will eliminate the usual overhead costs of distribution and consequently bring larger returns to the producers as well as lower rentals to the exhibitors.

"Centralized distribution, co-operative booking, economic handling and exceptional exploitation are all parts of the Carl Anderson policy. Mr. Anderson is now in California. During his absence the home office is carrying to a speedy conclusion all preliminary work. Active distribution will begin in October, through our working arrangement with F. B. O."

Await First Lubitsch for Warners

Keen Interest Being Shown in Coming Production, "The Marriage Circle"

AFTER the great enthusiasm with which the New York press and public acclaimed "Rosita," the first Ernst Lubitsch costume picture produced in America, exhibitors are anxiously awaiting the completion of the foreign director's first American photoplay produced in an entirely modern setting, "The Marriage Circle."

Since the recent announcement that the Warner Brothers had signed Ernst Lubitsch to produce two feature photoplays a year, exhibitors have been keenly interested as to the nature of these productions.

In making preparations for his initial production for the Warner Brothers, Mr. Lubitsch first selected his story from a highly successful Viennese play which scored in leading cities on the continent. The story deals with sex attraction, problems of married life and love intrigues in European society. It depicts the tangled web in which innocent people can be enmeshed in moments of indiscretion.

The production itself has a Viennese setting, giving a splendid opportunity for colorful and lavish sets, it is said. At the present time, all the available space at the huge Warner Studio is being utilized for the production, the largest set being a picturesque street in Vienna.

A small but choice cast of players have been selected by the director for the Warner feature, with each individual representing a certain type of European society. Florence Vidor and Marie Prevost vie for honors in the feminine line, and Creighton Hale, Harry Myers, Warner Baxter and Adolphe Menjou represent the masculine forces.

Letter Carriers See "Mail Man" Scenes

An interesting feature of the letter carriers' convention at Providence was the presentation of the special "convention" trailer of Emory Johnson's production "The Mail Man," which dramatizes the lives of postal workers. This production will soon be released by Film Booking Offices of America and will serve also to stir interest in the nation-wide campaign now being waged by postal workers for better salaries and improved pension regulations.

The "trailer," which showed about 1500 feet of the big production, disclosed many of the most interesting scenes of "The Mail Man," including his activities while covering his route and the big battle scene in which a rum runner's yacht is sunk by a torpedo boat destroyer.

The "trailer" was preceded by a foreword from Mr. Johnson in which he expressed the hope that his production, which he regards as his masterpiece, will help the postal workers to win from the public the recognition they "so justly deserve."

Cyclone Scenes Feature Production

TEN wind machines were used recently on the Pat Powers Hollywood lot to make the cyclone scenes that form the big bunch sequence of "Born of the Cyclone," which Emile Chautard is producing for early release by Film Booking Offices.

In the cast are Derelys Perdue, Lloyd Hughes, Ralph Lewis, Emilie Fitzroy, Joe Dowling, Josef Swickard, Mickey McBan and others. Joe DuBray is handling the camera and Pierre Collings is serving as his assistant.

Equity Closes Deals for "Daring Years"

During the past ten days, Equity Pictures Corporation has closed two more deals for the distribution of "The Daring Years," the latest Daniel Carson Goodman special current release.

The first deal was consummated with Pathe Freres of London, England, and includes all rights for the picture in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Isle of Man. The second sale was closed with Sam Zerler, president of Commonwealth Film Corporation of New York City and calls for exclusive rights for the entire state of New York and the northern part of the state of New Jersey.

Daniel Carson Goodman, author and producer of the recent Equity Special releases, the last of which is "The Daring Years," has already completed the story and scenario for his next production for that corporation and is now hard at work on the selection of the cast.

"Covered Wagon" A Hit in London

Shaner Reports Paramount Special Is Sensational Success In British Capital

"THE COVERED WAGON" is a sensational hit in London, according to E. E. Shauer, director of the Famous Players-Lasky Foreign Department, who returned from abroad September 7

"Perhaps the outstanding event of the new season to date has been the sensational success scored by 'The Covered Wagon' on its opening September 5, at the London Pavilion before one of the most distinguished audiences of theatregoers which has ever greeted a motion picture," said Mr. Shauer. "The James Cruze Paramount special is the talk of entire Europe. On all boats, trains and in every public gathering place. Everywhere I went, including London, Paris Berlin, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Amsterdam, Switzerland, Prague Budapest and Vienna, I heard about 'The Covered Wagon' and its great success in New York, Los Angeles and other American cities. Everyone is eager to see what they call the great American picture.

"The exploitation campaign which launched the picture upon London has been tremendously successful. The Indians who were taken to London for the opening have been the sensation of London, with an army of photographers and newspaper reporters following them wherever they go. The principal newspapers in London have given scores of columns of space to the presence of the American Indians and the opening of 'The Covered Wagon,' and the excitement has spread to Paris and other continental cities. The management has been flooded with requests for visits from the Indians. An interesting feature of the exploitation campaign was the insertion of want ads in several daily papers offering a reward of one pound for the suggestion of the best campaign spot for the Indians. From the replies received at the Pavilion I would infer that about all London turned out to help solve this problem.

"Cables which I have received since my return report that every seat has been sold out in advance and that the newspaper reviews have been the most favorable and laudatory ever given a motion picture in London.

"The London Pavilion has been leased for a long term and it is expected by Britishers that 'The Covered Wagon' will duplicate in London its enormously successful run in the United States. Arrangements will be made shortly for the opening of the picture in Paris, and other European capital cities.

Ray Feature Is Praised By Educators

Charles Ray's ten-reel production of "The Courtship of Miles Standish," now completed and ready for release in the fall, has aroused an interest among educators of the country that has astonished the young producer-star.

When a "featurette" containing about 1,000 feet of the more important shots from the picture was shown recently to gatherings composed of delegates from the convention of the National Education Association, Dr. Ernest L. Crandall, director of visual instruction in the New York City schools, characterized the production as magnificent technically and as having been done with fine authenticity with regard to the adventure of the Pilgrim Fathers. Among the other enthusiastic spectators were G. W. Clemens, PH.B., of the John Marshall High School, Chicago; Mrs. Susan M. Dorsey, superintendent of the Los Angeles city schools, and Miss Loretto Clark, director of visual education in Los Angeles were also enthusiastic spectators.

Metro Issues New Line of Posters

IN connection with its nationwide exploitation and advertising campaign on 1923-4 productions, Metro is planning to give the exhibitor posters of the highest grade, designed by the best artists of the country.

Photographs of the new style of Metro "paper" sent out to the trade publications this week show that it is high class in every way, and of decided pulling power.

Waukegan Theatre Lists All Metro Attractions

In the Waukegan, Ill., Daily Sun of August 20 the Elite theatre devoted the best part of a full page advertisement to a list of Metro attractions which will be shown at that theatre during the coming season.

All of the 35 productions on the Metro 1923-24 schedule were included, with Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche" heading the list. The advertisement was an effective assurance to the theatre's patrons that the new season was to be the most auspicious in the history of motion pictures.

"April Showers" Issued As Song Tieup

The T. B. Harmes company have just issued a song, "April Showers," tying up with the Preferred Picture of this title. The song was among Al Jolson's biggest hits. The words are by B. G. De Sylva and the music by Louis Silvers.

The photoplay edition has an attractive cover, showing Kenneth Harlan and Colleen Moore, stars of the Preferred Picture, sitting under an umbrella, while showers pour down upon them.

New York in 1830 Shown in "Hospitality"

ONE of the sets for "Hospitality," Buster Keaton's forthcoming full length feature comedy for Metro, shows Broadway and Forty-second Street, New York, as it was in the year 1830. Fred Gabouri, Buster's technical director, made the set a faithful reproduction of illustrations current to the period depicted.

"In Spider's Web" to Have Wide Exploitation

Having arranged to release a series of "special thrillers" in all territorial zones where independent features are in big demand, The Independent Pictures Corporation has decided upon a thorough and exhaustive campaign of exploitation and publicity for the first of the big films, "In the Spider's Web."

This subject of a tense melodramatic nature has been made ready for immediate distribution among the state rights exhibitors and many inquiries are being received by the Independent offices as to its release.

Raymaker to Direct Banks For Grand-Ascher

Herman Raymaker, the veteran comedy director who produced "Paging Love" with Monty Banks for Grand-Ascher Distributing Corporation, will direct all of the two-reel comedies in which that comedian will be starred, according to announcement made this week. Raymaker was formerly with Keystone, Mack Sennett, Hank Mann and others.

"French Doll" Commended in N. Y.

Mae Murray Metro Feature Wins Approval of Reviewers on Newspapers

CRITICS of the metropolitan dailies credited Mae Murray with another hit when reviewing her performance in "The French Doll," the featured film attraction at the Capital theatre last week. All of the papers had many complimentary things to say about this Tiffany production, which was produced by Robert Z. Leonard and adopted from the stage play of the same name in which Irene Bordoni starred.

The New York American critic wrote as follows: "Miss Murray ignores no chance to show her terpsichorean prowess, her dainty figure and her remarkable collection of dazzling clothes."

The Evening Journal had this to say: "Miss Murray's qualifications are quite pat for the role—Miss Murray is as beautiful as ever—if not more so—and her gowns are as remarkable as usual."

The Evening Mail printed the following: "'The French Doll' has been directed in a manner aimed to extract from the original several excellent farcial incidents. In its new form it should have more financial success than on the stage."

"A vehicle well adapted to Miss Murray—Miss Murray is a good drawing card, and here her characteristic poutings, smiles and gestures are more in evidence than in any of her recent pictures," is the opinion of the critic of The Morning Telegraph.

The Telegram said: "'The French Doll' contains the elements of romance, adventure, gorgeous costumes and sumptuous settings and is undoubtedly suited to the particular bright talents of Miss Murray."

The Tribune critic was responsible for the following: "Miss Murray looks like a French doll herself and she appears on the screen in some of the most fascinating garments it has ever been our good fortune to behold."

The World critic wrote as follows: "Miss Murray displays a countless collection of French gowns. The feminine population will be deeply interested in this collection. It is various, and, to the untutored eye wonderfully made.

Chicago Praises "Little Johnny Jones"

The latest acclamation awarded the Warner feature, "Little Johnny Jones," starring Johnny Hines, comes from Mae Tinne, motion picture editor of the Chicago Tribune, who selected it as one of the twelve best pictures shown in August.

In Chicago, the New York success was repeated at McVicker's theatre, where "Little Johnny Jones" played to capacity houses.

N. Y., Philly and Jersey in Keaton Comedy

Sections of New York City, Philadelphia and Jersey City stand side by side within the Los Angeles city limits, on the Buster Keaton comedy lot. They were built for "Hospitality," the second of Buster's full length feature comedies, presented by Joseph M. Schenck through Metro.

"Hospitality," which follows "Three Ages" on the Keaton-Metro program, is a story of America in 1830. As Jean Havez, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman have plotted it out, and as director Jack Blystone is fashioning it, Buster takes a trip through the three cities on the "Packet," the first railroad train ever built.

"Down to Sea in Ships" Voted Among Best

"DOWN TO THE SEA IN SHIPS," the sensational romance of old whaling days produced by the Whaling Film Corporation for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was classed by Frederick James Smith in the October issue of "Screenland" magazine as one of the twelve best pictures of the year.

This production, which shows the actual capture of a 90-ton bull whale, made a sensational three-month run at the Cameo theatre, New York, N. Y., and a four-week run at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, Ill.

Cigar Stores Exhibit "Tea With Kick"

In Victor Hugo Halperin's novelty production "Tea-With A Kick!" there is a scene in which Creighton Hale thwarts a crook by making a pack of cigarettes look like a pistol, so the American Tobacco Company saw a chance to make a tie-up with the picture and took full advantage of it. It got in touch with Edward Halperin, the producer's brother, who handled some of the publicity from Associated Exhibitors' home office, with the result that a very attractive Pictorial window strip was produced.

This shows Creighton Hale demonstrating the pose that he uses in the picture to produce the effect of the gun, and also carries two scenes of the picture. The strips were displayed in 460 United Cigar Stores in New York City.

Radio Band Contest As "Mail Man" Ad

A most unique publicity campaign was affected this week by the Film Booking Offices in connection with their new Emory Johnson picture "The Mail Man" through a nation wide radio band concert contest to be held on October 15th with every U. S. postal band in America participating.

The tie-up was arranged at a recent convention of the Letter Carriers Association held at Providence and provides a cash prize of $500 and a cup offered by the F. B. O. and Emory Johnson. There will be twenty-nine bands scattered over the country entered into the contest and all will play on the same evening. The winner is to be decided by a poular vote of people owning radio sets who "listen in."

One and a half million ballots are now being printed to be distributed over the country by the letter carriers. On the back of the ballot will be printed an ad about the picture and also a photo of Ralph Lewis who is one of the principal members of its cast. In addition to the ballots printed by the F. B. O. a small ballot will be run in the radio sections of some sixty daily newspapers.

Attractive Posters For "Pioneer Trails"

Vitagraph has prepared attractive posters for its new picture of the early West, "Pioneer Trails," prints of which are now being shipped to its exchanges.

One of the two 24-sheet posters, showing the old stage plunging over an almost unbroken trail, its three teams rushing madly in fear of pursuing Indians, is an unusual bit of action and is startling in its splendid coloring. In addition to the two 24-sheets Vitagraph has provided a six-sheet, two three-sheets and three one-sheets, all reproduced from oil paintings and brilliant in their colorings.

"The Unknown Purple," from which the scenes above have been taken, was directed by Roland West from his own stage play and will be distributed through Truart.

First National Will Set Releases

Principal Pictures Production To Be Fitted Into Fall and Winter Program

NO release date has been set by First National as yet on "The Meanest Man in the World," and "When a Man's a Man," the pair of Principal Pictures productions which were announced last week as First National releases, but it is understood that they will be fitted into the First National fall and winter program to further strengthen its array of "big time" attractions.

The First National-Principal deal was arranged after a series of conferences between Sol Lesser and Mike Rosenberg, representing Principal Pictures Corporation and First National executives.

"The Meanest Man in the World" was a George M. Cohan stage success and "When a Man's a Man" is one of Harold Bell Wright's best sellers. Both productions have been completed and "The Meanest Man in the World" has been previewed in New York, and has already played a test run at the Warfield theatre, San Francisco. Its cast is headed by Bert Lytell, Blanche Sweet and Bryant Washburn. "When a Man's a Man" is enacted by John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, Robert Frazers and other well known screen figures.

Commenting upon the deal E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution of First National stated: "These two productions give us added assurance of the consistent high quality of the First National program for the coming season. No release schedule is stronger than its weakest picture, and with these two powerful links in our chain, we have at present a line-up of commercial and artistic first run pictures. Each production can stand individually and therefore, collectively, I believe that First National has the finest array of features for the coming year that it has ever offered in its history—and the past has written many big things of First National.

Fox Engagements Draw Broadway Crowds

CROWDED houses and "standing room only" signs have marked the New York showings of "If Winter Comes" and "The Silent Command" ever since the opening, Sept. 2, of the naval production and Sept. 3, of the A. S. M. Hutchinson story which Harry Millarde directed for the Fox Film Corporation.

Much of the success of the first two Fox pictures to reach the New York rialto can be attributed to the excellent send-off accorded them by the metropolitan newspaper critics and reviewers of the national trade publications. Members of the press were unanimous in their liberal expression of favorable opinion.

The tie-up effected by Fox publicity men with the United States naval forces now in the Atlantic waters which resulted in the acquisition to the Naval Band for exploitation purposes for "The Silent Command" has created much discussion on Broadway.

Mothers-In-Law Day Plan Growing Rapidly

"With the nation-wide publicity that has been started on the subject of 'Mothers-in-Law Day,' I believe that our picture, 'Mothers-in-Law,' has greater exploitation possibilities than any other pictures on the market. I don't say it's the best picture of the season. There are several as good. There aren't many better, but there isn't one that lends itself so thoroughly to big and inexpensive exploitation," says Al Lichtman.

A NEW PHOTOPLAY

The plot for a new gigantic photoplay, "The Day of Judgment," has been recently copyrighted by the author. The play is a fantastic vision, based upon popular Christian traditions and the belief that the prophet Elijah, who is thought never to have died but merely carried up to Heaven temporarily, shall again return upon the earth. The vision of the Supreme Final Judgment follows rather closely the description given by John in his Apocalypse. The plot of the play rests mainly upon the struggle furnished by the conflicting passions of the main characters. Antichrist, the arch-enemy of religion, is loved in silence by an innocent maiden, while he loves with the unbridled passion of his indomitable soul Magdale, who, in turn, is madly in love with the prophet Enoch. To win the love of the latter she gives herself up to Antichrist, whom she detests, but who has absolute control over the prophet's destiny. When Magdale, however, realizes that the holy man is insensible to her charms and her burning passion she, emulating Potiphar's wife, plots Enoch's destruction and accuses him of attempting to ravish her.

The play, whose marvelous scenes are almost an uninterrupted sequence of gorgeous visions, is unusually adapted to a completely new and original production. The broad human appeal of the underlying theme, the deep Shakespearean flavor of its psychological situations, the stupendous vision of the Judgment Day in which the whole human race appears in one solemn majestic view, followed by the splendor of a glimpse of Paradise and a masterly representation of Hell, cannot fail to impress the spectator, who will be absorbed in the fantastic but nonetheless superb solution of the unfathomable mystery of the Great Beyond.

The refreshing vision of the luxuriant Garden of Eden and sweet scene of pure, innocent love—which alone survives death—close the superb production and form a happy and satisfying climax to the scenes of horror that go to make up a considerable part of the stupendous work.

The originality of the theme and the immensity of its scope offer to the producer a great opportunity for one of the grandest moving picture sensations ever attempted. It has the makings of a tremendous success for the producer who is fortunate enough to secure exclusive rights to it.

N. Y. Reviews Praise "Monna Vanna"

Critics Compare Fox Special To Most Reputed Of Screen's Productions

NATIONAL trade papers expended many superlatives in their reviews of "Monna Vanna," the Fox Film Corporation translation of Maurice Maeterlinck's drama of that name, which is scheduled for distribution September 16th.

Following are a few excerpts from the reviews published in some of the leading publications:

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Another 'Intolerance' has reached the screen. Here is a production which for massiveness of settings, masterful handling of tremendous crowds of people, exquisite photography and convincing character portrayals that will stand with the best in American film craftsmanship.

"We have never seen a picture with so many people appearing in crowd scenes . . . The interiors of the palaces of old Italy are positively mammoth. So are the city walls, the street scenes, the canals, the banquet halls and so on through a series of backgrounds that will make audiences sit up and take notice."

Moving Picture World: "We are reminded of the stupendous scenes of Griffith and the massive gigantic sets of 'Intolerance' or the immense backgrounds of 'Robin Hood' and the other big historical spectacles of the screen, when viewing 'Monna Vanna.' While the raging battles will bring back to you the scenes of 'Intolerance,' yet the scenes of the armies and the fights are even greater."

Exhibitor's Herald: "Thousands of persons took part in this production and the settings are some of the most elaborate ever used in a picture. . . There is much excellent acting by the principals."

Coast Opening Completes Fox Chain

With the formal opening of a new theatre in Oakland, Cal., on August 25, William Fox completed his chain of houses extending across the country and established himself on the Pacific coast in a single stroke.

The opening marked one of the most auspicious cinema events of the western coast. Motion picture stars from Los Angeles, officials of Oakland and San Francisco, together with notables from the east, were in attendance. Mr. Fox opened his new theatre, known as the Oakland, with "The Silent Command," a J. Gordon Edwards production, which had its New York premiere at the Central theatre on September 2.

Flaherty Ready to Shoot South Sea "Nanook"

The Paramount home office has just received a letter from David T. Flaherty, brother of Robert J. Flaherty, producer of "Nanook of the North," reporting fine progress on the part of the latter in his preparations for the filming of his South Sea "Nanook" in one of the remote islands of the Samoan group.

The letter was written at Apia, Samoa, whither Mr. Flaherty had gone for mail and supplies. Apia is several day's journey by small steamer from the island where the film is being made. It will be almost another year before the work of the expedition is completed.

Praise for "Down to Sea in Ships"

Grand Rapids Reviewer Enthuses Over Thrills in Hodkinson Whaling Film

IN a recent review printed in the Grand Rapids Herald, Grand Rapids, Mich., written by Carl M. Saunders, film and stage critic, an exceptional tribute has been paid to the Whaling Film Corporation's sensational story of a whale chase, "Down to the Sea in Ships," directed by Elmer Clifton for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The review in part reads as follows: "Without a plot, 'Down to the Sea in Ships' would be an instructive classic comparable with 'Nanook of the North' and 'The Four Seasons.' With a fight for love carried through a labyrinth of complications added to the background of romantic data, Clifton has evolved an incomparable film drama. The hand picked audience sits with this writer on home previews is hard-boiled. Tragedy must be realistic to get a tear; comedy must be hilarious to get a laugh, and thrills that hold the watchers of these pre-views tense, are few and far between.

"'Down to the Sea in Ships' pulled this hard-boiled group to the edges of their chairs and held them thus poised in thrilled ecstacy. All of this happened when a whale-boat from the whaler's ship put out and tied itself in tow of a mad whale. Smoke rose as the boat's line spun out in the wake of the whale. Spray flew. Old Mr. Whale was going with the speed of a twin-six on a straight-away concrete. Whoa! He slowed up and turned. A giant flipper rose under the keel of the whale-boat. Ker-splash, harpoonist and crew were evading sharks, plainly visible on the screen.

"Thrills Say, if that action doesn't get under your hide and make your pulse race, then there's white water in your veins instead of red blood."

Grand-Asher Construct Elaborate Set

One of the handsomest sets ever constructed on the Grand or any other studio stage, is that which has been built for the home of Johnson Trent, in Elliott Dexter's first production for Grand-Asher, for which R. William Neill is handling the megaphone.

The rooms, a library and living room, and staircase with entry hall are almost palatial in their character and richly furnished.

Press Book for "Tea With a Kick"

Associated Exhibitors Plan Extensive Campaign For Victor Halperin Feature

WITH an unusually striking poster cover in colors, a most attractive campaign book for Victor Hugo Halperin's "Tea—With a Kick!" has just been turned out by the advertising and publicity department of Associated Exhibitors. Both the cover and back are embellished with the silhouetted figure of a chorus girl in abbreviated costume, who, with toe of right foot pointed high in the air, immediately conveys the impression that there is significance to the title of "Tea—With a Kick!"

This artistic cover was drawn by Michelsyn, who has made some of the beautiful covers for magazines and whose drawings and paintings have decorated pages of numerous high-class publications.

The campaign book comprises eighteen pages and the covers, with a full line of exploitation and accessories embodied within.

The book presents 60 stunts whereby the exhibitor is enabled to boom his box office business.

Special attention has been given to the advertising layouts, and the cast of stars and prominent players comes in for a lion's share of the general exploitation.

A lobby sign is suggested with the words "There's more kick in 'Tea—With a Kick!' than the combined kick of 47 army mules." Another for the marquee electrics provides for a display of lights carrying the title and having an electrically-lighted mule kicking his hind legs.

"April Showers" Boasts Unusual Posters

The line of posters on "April Showers," the Preferred picture starring Colleen Moore and Kenneth Harlan, with Ruth Clifford as a featured player, shows something new in motion picture accessories, and marks a considerable departure from the conventional line of pictorial lithographs.

They were designed by Karoly Grosz, head of the Preferred Art Department, and in the originals they are as striking and unusual in coloring as they are in conception and design.

The full line includes a 24, two ones, two threes, a six and a teaser one-sheet.

Carewe Is Vindicated by Mexican Government

The difficulties which arose between Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and the Mexican Government over certain scenes in Edwin Carewe's "The Girl of the Golden West" were amicably settled last week and Mr. Carewe was vindicated by the Mexican Government of the charge of incorporating any scene in this picture derogatory to the interest of Mexico.

The Department of Foreign Relations in Mexico City reviewed "The Girl of the Golden West" on Monday, August 27, and the following day Mr. Rodriguez, manager of the First National branch in Mexico City, was called to the Foreign Department and advised that the officials had found the picture a production of extremely high quality and free entirely from anything objectionable to the government. Governors of all the Mexican states were advised by wire that the production had been endorsed by the central government.

Emory Johnson Planning Trip to New York

Emory Johnson is hastening the work of editing and cutting his next F. B. O. attraction, "The Mail Man," in the hope of whipping the production into shape by the middle of September so that he will be able to take a trip to New York City, where he plans to film the first scenes of his next production.

The nature of Mr. Johnson's next big production for F. B. O. is being kept secret. It promises, according to a report from the West Coast, to be a bigger exploitation proposition, however, than any of Mr. Johnson's recent successes.

Type of Theatre For Particular Location

Description of Style of House Used Most Successfully Under Various Conditions

By Reilly & Hall
Theatre Architects

IN the first article published in the August issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, we treated at some length the subject of selecting a location and site upon which to erect a theatre. We now wish to say something about the different types of theatre that have developed in this country in recent years. These various types of theatre have been developed with a view to the improvement of sight lines, accoustics, and mainly for economy of management and construction.

In order to give the reader a clear conception of the various types we must first review the history of the theatre.

Early History of the Theatre

In the early days of Rome and Greece open air amphitheatres were built to provide a rendezvous and likewise comfortable accommodations for the pleasure loving public who congregated there to view the games and enjoy the entertainment of the day. These amphitheatres were built of stone, circular or elliptical in shape, in the center of which was a large arena or stage flanked about with a stadium or rows of stone steps upon which the spectators sat. On each axis and at points of vantage were built special decorative platforms or boxes for the nobility and important persons. Entrance to the various levels was gained by stairs or ramps which led to a wide step or crossover through a passage or vomitory cut through the steps.

From the design of the amphitheatre the smaller Roman theatres were built to provide for a different form of entertainment. The stadium was built in the form of a half circle and faced by a large elevated platform or stage, the side and rear walls of which were elaborately decorated with marble ornaments and statuary. The stage being covered with a roof of wood richly carved and painted. Flanking either side of the platform or stage were retiring rooms, or dressing rooms, in which the performers prepared for their appearance before the audience.

Centuries later this method of creating a center for amusement was adopted by the northern countries, but due to the colder climate they were confronted with the necessity of roofing and enclosing the building. In order to do so they were forced to make a smaller building that could be readily roofed in. In order to do this the area available for seats was so diminished that balconies had to be introduced. First, balconies surrounding the auditorium and gradually projecting in a horseshoe effect. On account of the extreme projection it was necessary to provide supports or pillars to carry the front portion of the balcony. These pillars were objectionable on account of obstructing the view, but upon the advent of steel this objection was overcome by long trusses, and thus the modern theatre has developed.

At Your Service

The Technical Department of the Motion Picture News places itself at the service of all subscribers in giving recommendations on proposed construction and all other problems of the theatre.

Many of our subscribers are taking advantage of this policy and submit questions, as for example: Interior decoration, effective heating and ventilating, proper seating arrangement, selection of floor coverings, house lighting, projection troubles and the like.

All architectural problems are given careful analysis and answered through the courtesy of experienced theatre architects.

The advertising carried in this Equipment Department offers a reliable buyers' guide for theatre equipment. Additional lists on all supplies are gladly furnished.

An invitation is extended to every subscriber to take advantage of our service offer. Every inquiry receives expert attention by specialized engineers.

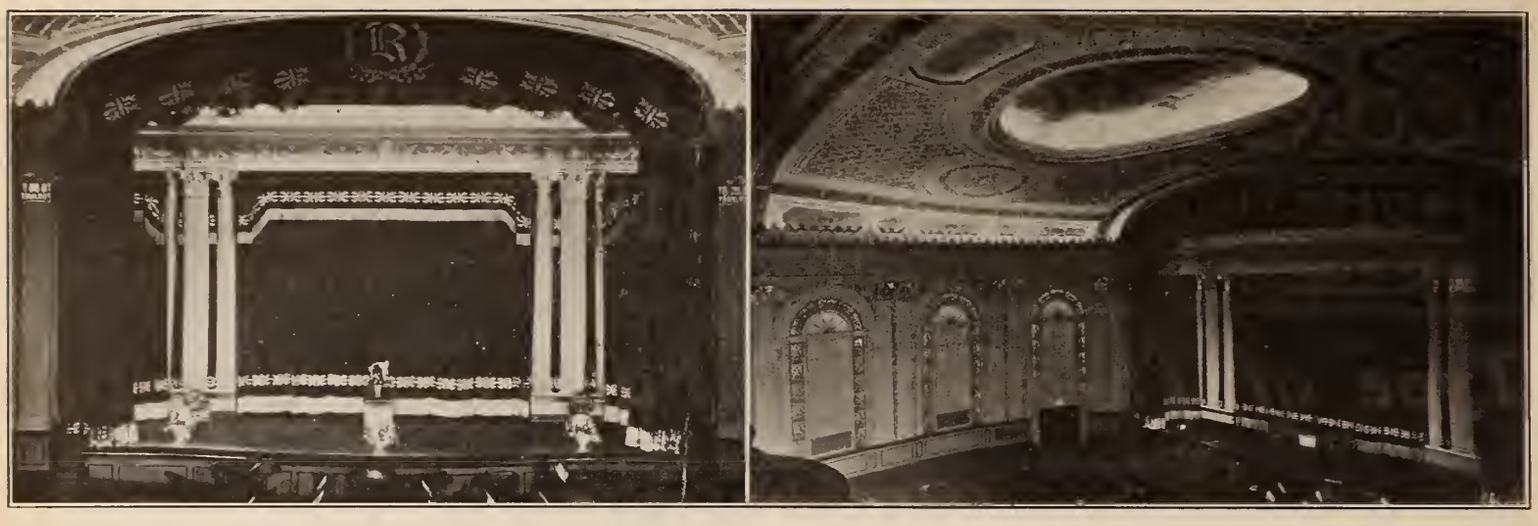
Types of Modern Houses

The modern theatres are all developed from the ancient theatre, varying slightly in arrangement and detail, but following in general the same purpose. We will number the various types in their order of development.

Type No. 1 consists of an orchestra and two and sometimes three balconies. The boxes were arranged in tiers, adjacent to the Proscenium Arch, known as "Proscenium Boxes." This type of theatre, which is familiar to the reader, has gradually gone into discard because of expensive construction, lack of comfort and as a rule the sight lines were very sharp and the acoustics poor. It was also awkward to handle architecturally and seldom lent itself to artistic treatment.

Recently we have altered several houses of this type and found that it was possible, in most cases, to remove the existing balconies and replace them with one new balcony without causing the loss of a seat. Moreover, in some cases, seats have been gained. We can, therefore, consider this type of house as obsolete.

Type No. 2 was a development brought about largely through requirements for spectacular plays and the exhibition of pictures. The theatre consisted of an orchestra, mezzanine and one balcony. The mezzanine has become one of the most important features of the modern theatre. It not only forms an attractive public space and entrance for the many minor rooms required for the comfort of the patrons, but is absolutely necessary for the proper ventilation of the orchestra covered by the balcony. This is accomplished by an open well opening between the orchestra and the mezzanine and this feature should not be omitted under any consideration.



Stadium Design Good for Theatres

The proscenium boxes have little by little given way in importance to the new type boxes known as Loge bo es. These boxes are usually the first three or four rows of seats in the balcony divided by rails and entered into directly from the main crossover which in turn is reached by vomitories connected to the mezzanine. This type house usually has about 1,500 to 4,500 seats. When ground is expensive this is the type most generally in use. A 2,500-seat house can easily be built on a site 100 x 150 feet, including the stage and dressing rooms.

Type No. 3 is known as a Stadium theatre and consists of an orchestra and stadium or flat balcony. Like the Roman stadium it is slightly elevated two or three feet above the rear of the orchestra and is separated from same by a crossover. In order to acquire the proper sight line it is pitched and at such an angle as to require steps. The first three or four rows are used as Loge boxes and the remainder give excellent seats. Entrance to the main crossover in the orchestra is reached by vomitories cut through the stadium and entrance to the stadium is reached by steps from the crossover. The advantage of the stadium is the saving of space on the ground floor, as the entrance lobby, foyer, rest rooms and toilets can be placed under the stadium steppings.

This type of theatre is very desirable for Motion Pictures. It is economical to build because of the lighter steel construction of the stadium; in fact the main supports of the stadium can, as a rule, be brick piers—the main wall need only be 34 feet high—and all staircases are eliminated. This type is also economical to operate, as it requires much less

New Robins, Warren, Ohio, Last Word in Theatre Construction

THE Robins theatre of Warren is the last word in theatre construction. It was designed by C. Howard Crane, acknowledged to be one of the leading architects of theatres in the country. Associated with him was I. J. Goldston of Akron. Under the personal supervision of the architects, the building was erected by the Charles Shutrump & Sons Company, general contractors of Youngstown, Ohio.

The design chosen for the theatre proper is Italian renaissance with distinct Venetian treatment. Blue and gold, the favorite colors of the renaissance period, are the predominating colors used in the decorations, with grays and various tones of red artistically blended. Marble, bronze and terra cotta were brought from all sections of the country, to be used in the construction of the Robins theatre.

Listed under the head of service, comes mention of the big open expanse of the auditorium which permits unbroken vision to the screen from any one of the 1,500 seats in the house, it being one of the hobbies of the owners that patrons occupying the cheapest seats have as much right to see a picture undisturbed, as have the patrons paying the highest admission prices. To this end, the auditorium is entirely free from pillars and posts. With the same idea of equality for all the management of the Robins theatres laid especial stress on the acoustic properties of the house to such an extent that the twelve-piece orchestra is heard alike from all parts of the house.

The main section of the auditorium is on the street level. On this floor is provided special rest rooms for men and women, equipped with reading and writing materials; smoking rooms; and a club room for men on a sub floor, entrance to which is gained from the main foyer.

The mezzanine floor is designed particularly to accommodate theatre parties. For this purpose the front section has been allotted into loggias, which are more popular than boxes, and are more private. A spacious oval foyer is one of the artistic features of the mezzanine floor, amply provided with reading chairs, lamps, davenports and tables.

The lighting of the theatre has been particularly well worked out, so that there is always plenty of light for patrons to find their seats without the usual stumbling over unseen objects. This not only is a distinct comfort to the patron, but eliminates all hazard on the part of the theatre management, and removes from the theatre any stigma of parental moral objection against motion picture theatres on the ground of insufficient light. It is stated that more than 2,000 lamp bulbs are used in the theatre, exclusive of the marquise. An interesting feature of the lighting arrangement is that every light is controlled by the picture operator through a very compact switchboard.

Heating and ventilation is controlled by a combined direct radiation and fan heating system, which distributes air that has been washed and humified.

Special attention has been called by the management of the Robins theatre to the splendidly arranged exits, which permit the house to be entirely emptied in three minutes. Charles W. Schweitzer is house manager.

The policy of the Robins theatre is to confine the program strictly to pictures, but only pictures of the highest type. A twelve-piece orchestra, under the direction of Arthur Odin, present a classical overture each week, featuring special solo attractions from time to time.—Loeb.

The New Robbins theatre, Warren, Ohio, has a seating capacity of 1500 and has been especially constructed with a view to perfect accoustics throughout the house. The house was designed by C. Howard Crane, Architect.—Loeb

A Few Plain Facts

Exhibitors in hundreds of theatres throughout the United States, are now securing a much lower cost of operation with their apparatus; improved quality of projection; and absolute dependability of service.

Projectionists in these theatres find their working conditions greatly improved.

Theatres using Incandescent Lamp Projection are the ones enjoying all these advantages.

Incandescent Lamp Projection is now recognized as the advanced method of projection because:

First—It is the most efficient type of practical light source discovered by science.

Second—The filament of a MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp permits an absolutely steady and flickerless light to be projected onto the screen.

Third—The quality of the light emitted by the MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp is soft and pleasing to the eye.

Fourth—Due to the absence of carbon dust and small dissipation of heat from the glass enclosed light source, ideal working conditions prevail in the projection room.

Any inquiries concerning the technical problems of the theatre or recommendations for installation and operation of Incandescent Lamp Projection will be gladly answered by our Lighting Service Department.

Insist on Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps and General Electric Equipment.

There is a proper Edison MAZDA Lamp for every requirement of the theatre, i.e., projection, marquee and sign, lobby and auditorium, stage, et cetera.

Alternating Current Machinery

Lesson VII—Part II

Connection of Alternator Windings

ALTERNATORS may have either one, two or three windings depending upon the use for which they are intended. These windings as we have seen, are referred to as phases so that a machine having three such separate windings on its armature would be called a three phase machine.

Single phase generators are not in such common use as are those of the two and three phase types, the three phase alternator being the most common of all. Machines having more than one armature winding are also referred to as polyphase machines.

The use of polyphase machines brings out some interesting characteristics of the circuits employed in their connection since the voltage and amperage differ materially when the various windings are differently connected. In the case of a simple single phase generator, if a voltmeter is held across the terminals of the machine, its true average voltage will be recorded. So also, if an ammeter be connected in series with some other current consuming device connected to the terminals, the meter will register the current necessary to give the same heating effect as would be registered if a direct current supply were used. Where two or more windings are used, however, this is not so since the manner in which the armature coils were connected would govern the terminal voltage.

Two Phase Connection

In the case of a two phase generator, two separate and distinct armature windings are provided and the four ends of these two coils are brought out to terminals as shown in Fig. 108-A. The voltage between the ends of either coil would be identically the same and is represented by the letter E in each case. In case any two phase, such as a motor, was to be connected to this generator, four wires would have to be used, one connected to each of the terminals shown. The same would hold true with the motor. Either phase, of course, could be used independently for single phase devices such as lamps, but when so used the load on each phase should be balanced.

If these two windings were connected in series, as by connecting B and C by running a jumper from one terminal to the other, then the voltage between the two outside terminals A and D would not be 2E as would be supposed but much smaller. This is due to the fact that the voltage in one phase lags that in the second by 90 electrical degrees and hence the voltages do not add up in a regular arithmetical manner.

In order to determine the true voltage the voltage of one phase must be added to that of the other geometrically. This is shown in Fig. 108-B where E_1 is the voltage of one phase, drawn to scale and E_2 is the voltage of the second phase, also drawn to scale and lagging the first by 90 degrees. Now, if voltage E_1 is carried over horizontally to the end of E_2 so that its arrow head will be at point P the the distance OP will represent the terminal voltage drawn to scale. Suppose we call this voltage E_r. Since E_1, E_2 and OP (E_r) form a right triangle the sum of the squares of the legs (E_1 and E_2) will be equal to the square of the hypothenuse (E_r).

but $E_1 = E_2 = E$ so that

$E_r^2 = 2E^2$

extracting the square root we have

$E_r = \sqrt{2}E = 1.414E$

If the windings of a two phase machine are connected in series, then, the terminal voltage will be 1.41 times the voltage of one phase alone.

It is also possible to connect the centers of both phases to a common point as shown in Fig. 109. A wire is then brought out from this central point and connected to ground. This central terminal is called the neutral point.

The voltages resulting from such a connection are as follows:

$$E_{AE} = E_{BE} = E_{CE} = E_{DE} = \frac{E}{2}$$

that is, the voltage between any terminal and

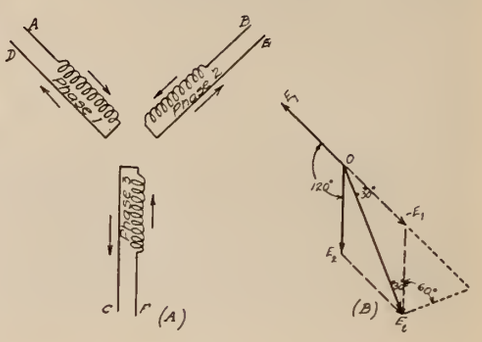

Figure 110

the neutral point is equal to half the voltage of the entire single phase. Also which means that the voltage between any two of the four end terminals is equal to the voltage of any single phase divided by the square root of 2 or 1.414.

Three Phase Connections

The use of three phase windings make the situation somewhat complicated since the terminal voltage and line current cannot be determined by the use of simple arithmetic. The complete derivation will, nevertheless, be given in order to complete the description of the action.

A diagrammatic representation of a three-phase generator is given in Fig. 110-A. This shows the three individual windings labelled phase 1, 2 and c. If the ends, AD, BE and CF were each connected to separate collector rings the result would be an alternator having three separate and individual phases, each of which could be used singly for single phase apparatus or all three could be used collectively for three phase apparatus. Two phases, however, could not be used for two phase devices due to the difference in phase angle.

Star Connections

If the ends D, E and C of the three coils shown in Fig. 110-A were all brought to a common point and connected together a star or Y connection would be formed. The point where these three wires are joined together is called the neutral point and is often grounded. This will be discussed more fully when describing transformers. Now it is common knowledge that the voltages of the three individual phases are separated by 120 electrical degrees.

Their factory address remains 81 Prospect Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Plans for Vernon Avenue Theatre

A group of investors, represented by Le Grand K. Pettit with offices at 189 Montague street, Brooklyn, N. Y., have purchased the corner plot located at the northwest corner of Vernon and Nostrand avenues, on which they contemplate the erection of one of the finest motion picture theatres in Greater New York. The plot measures 100 feet on Nostrand avenue and 150 feet on Vernon avenue.

Wurlitzer Installs World's Largest Organ

The world's largest residential pipe organ arrived in Los Angeles recently from North Tonawanda, New York, in the form of two big carloads of pipes and equipment. The big Wurlitzer organ, which is said to break all records for private installation, is to be placed at once in the living room of Cecil B. DeMille's mountain ranch home, "Paradise," thirty miles from Hollywood in the Little Tejunga Canyon.

H. F. Charles, manager of the organ department of the Los Angeles Wurlitzer agency, arrived simultaneously with the big instrument. He had it set up and played for him in the factory and reports that its tone disproved the old contention that an instrument of church and theatre proportions could not operate well in the confines of a private home. The DeMille organ is larger than the organs of half the churches and theatres in Los Angeles and in every respect except size is a duplicate of the world's largest instrument, which is the one installed in Grauman's Metropolitan theatre in this city.

Over four hundred pipes are to be installed in the new organ. These are of various sizes, from that of a lead pencil to one that is big enough for a grown man to crawl through.

Carolina Theatre Receives Additions

Manager Murphy of the Carolina theatre reports that his southeast neighborhood house was recently enlarged and remodeled, etc., at a cost in excess of $10,000. The new organ, a Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones orchestral unit type, cost $9,000, while other improvements in the building totaled ten thousand. At the entrance an attractive grille work was placed on the former bare walls. The entrance was moved from Carolina avenue around the corner to 11th street, southeast, a fine new lobby, surmounted by a marquise was erected, new electric fixtures on the stage, organ console, etc., in theatre and lobby were put in, and the general tone of the place improved. Murphy says that his patrons are very appreciative of the new work on their favorite film theatre. —Knappen.

Blank Enterprises Open Capitol Theatre in Des Moines

A. H. BLANK, head of the A. H. Blank Theatrical enterprises, opened the new Capitol theatre, Des Moines, Iowa, August 25.

The Capitol, for a long time known as the Alhambra theatre, is located on Grand avenue, between Fifth and Sixth avenues, next door east of the Des Moines theatre.

The theatre, itself, is said to be strikingly different from any other playhouse in the Middle West, carrying out the Spanish renaissance style of architecture, with the decorations tending toward the Oriental Moorish colors and outline.

The entrance and lobby are finished in multi-tinted tile arranged in a simple outline.

The walls and ceiling of the auditorium are thickly encrusted with ornamental designs in dull red, old blue, shades of brown, black and old gold, while panels of rich tapestry in dull reds and blacks with heavy gold threads hang on the side walls.

One of the features of the Capitol—something new to Des Moines theatregoers—is the elaborately furnished lounge on the mezzanine floor, overlooking the inner lobby.

This luxurious section is heavily carpeted, with dozens of soft handsome couches, deep chairs and superb stone tables. The windows with handsome cathedral glass overlook Grand avenue, and flowers and ferns add a note of luxury.

Handsome rugs are thrown over the rail that overlooks the lobby, and exquisitely appointed retiring rooms open off the mezzanine floor.

From the huge stage the Capitol theatre will offer Pantages vaudeville road shows.

Mr. Clark, the manager, is one of the most successful showmen Des Moines has ever claimed and for a long time was manager of the Empress vaudeville house.

The Capitol runs continuously from 1 to 11. Popular prices prevail.—Grahl.

Johnson Camouflages Bell & Howell Camera

Martin Johnson, famous explorer and cinematographer, will be better equipped on his next jungle expedition than ever before. Mr. Johnson has recently spent considerable time at the Bell & Howell Company plant at Chicago, where a remarkable camouflage for his Bell & Howell camera and equipment has been devised. His camera, when completely embellished, it is said, will positively be invisible in the wild animal haunts which he explores.

Some of the men at the Bell & Howell plant made the comment that the only danger to the camera lies in the fact that some elephant or rhinoceros may mistake the instrument for his breakfast and eat it up when Mr. Johnson isn't looking.

The arrows in the figure show the direction in which the voltage of each coil is acting. It will then be seen that when ends D, E and C are connected together the voltages all act, or flow so to speak, in toward the neutral point. In other words they, all three, oppose, or buck each other and so their effects are subtractive instead of additive. Suppose we consider the effect of such a subtraction of voltages on phases 1 and 2. These two voltages would, as we know, be displaced by 120 degrees as shown in Fig. 110-B, where E is the voltage of phase 1, E_2 the voltage of phase 2 and E_t the resultant terminal voltage obtained by subtracting the two phase voltages. In order to subtract E_1 from E_2 it is reversed and drawn in the position indicated by $-E_1$ then lines are drawn parallel to E_2 and $-E_1$ meeting at E_t and the distance from 0 to E_t measured to scale, is the terminal voltage. If E_t is measured it will be found to be 1.73 times as long as either E_1 or E_2 (which are equal).

The same result can be obtained by the use of simple trigonometry as follows:

$$2E \cos 30^\circ = E_t$$

$$\cos 30^\circ = \frac{2}{\sqrt{3}}$$

$$2E \frac{\sqrt{3}}{2} = E_t$$

$$E_t = \sqrt{3}E = 1.73E$$

where $E = E_1 = E_2 = E_3$

A figure showing the complete voltage and current relations of a star connected alternator is given in Fig. 111. This figure is self explanatory and should require no further discussion.

Delta Connections

Referring back to Fig. 110, if end D was connected to end B, A to C, and E to F the result would be a triangular shaped figure with the following results on the voltage and current. In this case, the voltage is not affected and the terminal voltage is the same in value as that of each coil. This, however, is not true of the currents since from the way they are connected it will be seen at the three junction points A, B and C, Fig. 112, the current from one coil flows to the junction point while that from the other coil flows away from it. In other words, the two currents are subtractive, in effect, and what was said regarding subtractive voltages in the case of the star connected machine now applies to the currents of the delta connected machine. If the voltages of Fig. 110-B are replaced with currents and the same line of reasoning is followed the result will be that I_e, the current in line, will be equal to 1.73 times I, the current per phase or

The voltages and current characteristics of a delta connected alternator are shown in Fig. 112.

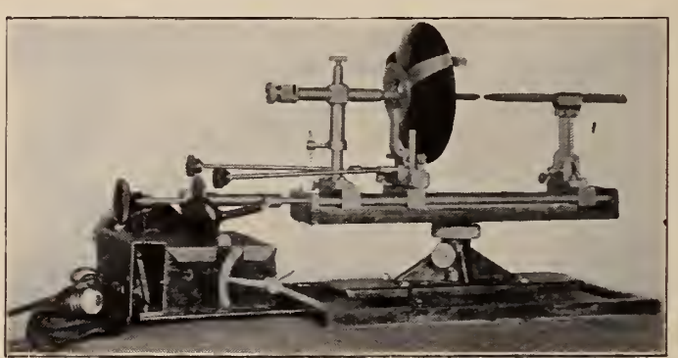
Another Suburban House for Kansas City

Construction plans for a new Kansas City suburban theatre were announced this week with the beginning of excavation work on the new house, which will be at Seventy-fifth and Washington streets. The theatre, to be known as the Westmoreland theatre, has been designed by S. B. Tarbet, Kansas City architect, and will seat 750 persons, the entire building, including shops, to cost $50,000.



The lot, 90 x 110 feet, was purchased hy W. C. Gumm for $12,000. The theatre will be in the rear of a two-story structure. A 15-foot passageway midway in the building will connect Seventy-fifth street with the theatre. The theatre and office buildings will be separate structures connected by the theatre entrance.—True.

Walker & Phillips Building in Ocala

It is reported that Ocala, Fla., is to have a new theatre. R. G. Walker and J. W. Phillips have purchased the Carmichael building on the west side of the court house square, which is the center of the business district, and will build a theatre there. They take possession on June 10 and will begin the erection of the theatre immediately, expecting to have it completed in about two months.

The plans call for a modern house in every way. The interior will follow the Colonial style in design and decorations. There will be no stage, the screen being at the back with a proscenium arch of colonial design. The best of equipment and furnishings are promised.

The house has not been named, as it is the intention of the owners to have a contest, offering a substantial prize for the one who suggests the most appropriate name for the new house. R. G. Walker will be the manager.—Leslie.

Theatre Company Incorporates

Incorporation papers for the Peoples Theatre Company were filed recently in the office of the McCracken County court clerk, Paducah, Ky., with a capitalization of fifty thousand dollars. The corporation is organized for the purpose of operating motion picture and vaudeville theatres and traveling shows and vaudeville. It is understood that the new corporation will operate the Orpheum theatre.

Stanley Chain Increases

The new Benn theatre in Philadelphia, at 63rd street and Woodland avenue, one of the finest additions to the Stanley Company of America's chain of big, modern photoplay houses, was publicly opened recently.

The structure is a combination of the theatre itself and modern stores on the principal street frontage. The auditorium has a seating capacity of 2,000, and the house has the most modern equipment and conveniences with an imposing organ as one of the principal features of interest.

The house is finished in gold and ivory. The interior lighting is of the direct type, with mural paintings installed above the light coves. —Martin.

Elaborate System for Licensed Projectionists

An elaborate system of identification of licensed motion picture projectionists, in the State of Pennsylvania, has been prepared by the State Department of Labor & Industry, at the capitol in Harrisburg, it is just announced. Under this plan every applicant for any of the three classes of licenses—those permitting operation of approved motion picture projectors (in buildings other than theatres); those permitting operation of projectors in theatres, and apprentice operators—is required to present two photographs of himself. These photographs must be 1¼" square, taken without a hat and with name written on the back. These photographs are attached to the license cards when issued upon the operator qualifying after examination. Operators of approved projection machines receive red cards; other projectionists yellow cards, and apprentices receive blue cards.

The first two classes of projectionists must be 18 years old or more and operators of machines other than approved machines must have had at least six months' experience in the projection room. Applicants for apprentices' licenses must be 16 years old or more and must present a letter of recommendation from the owner or proprietor of the theatre where he will be employed.

It is estimated that 75 applicants for projectionists' licenses of the various classes took the examinations scheduled to be held in eight cities of the state simultaneously on September 6. Secretary Royal Meeker of the Department of Labor & Industry has announced that prior to these examinations 2,100 projectionists' licenses had been issued in Pennsylvania during the year 1923, not including 92 additional licenses to apprentices. This was outside the cities of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

supervision, every seat being in plain view of the manager from any one point.

This type usually has from 800 to 2,200 seats. A 2,000-seat house can be built on a site 100 x 155 feet, including a small stage.

Type No. 4 is known as a one-floor house and is like the stadium with the exception that it consists of an orchestra floor only. This type is the most economical of all but is desirable only where one class of patrons is catered to and where elaborate foyers and minor rooms can be reduced to a minimum. Quite a number of houses of this type are being built at present and in their proper locations are proving satisfactory and are successful in every way. This type has from 300 to 2,000 seats.

We have recently completed the Fugazy theatre at MacDougal and West Houston streets, New York City. This house is a combination of Types Nos. 2 and 3, consisting of an orchestra and stadium with a balcony above the stadium, and this house, as completed, is successful in every way. The stadium idea not only allowed us to build over the entrance lobby, but provided space for five stores on the street front, which were very acceptable to the owner. Another interesting feature in this house is the position of the projection room, which is placed at the back of the stadium and under the balcony, making the projection room easily accessible, provides outside ventilation, and gives a horizontal projection to the screen. The theatre is on a corner lot 89 x 123 feet, exclusive of a court 11 feet wide, and contains 1,760 seats with a stage 28 feet deep and five stores on the street fronts. The approximate cost of this house was $200,000, exclusive of equipment.

There is still another type of house which we would like to mention, namely, the Entresole and Balcony house which consists of an added floor of boxes under the balcony divided into compartments which are entered directly off the mezzanine. This, however, can only be used in very high class houses and is expensive to build.

In conclusion we would say that for Motion Pictures and where additional ground can be obtained the stadium or one floor house is the ideal arrangement. On the other hand, for vaudeville and legitimate productions the balcony house with the smaller area on the main floor is the only arrangement that can be safely adopted.

Good Demand for Organs Reported

Demand for pipe organs for motion picture theatres has been excellent during the summer months, according to Sales Manager K. G. Kurtz, of the Barola Musical Instrument Company, who reports that he personally closed contracts for Barton pipe organs during the month of July which are in part as follow: Saxe Brothers, Janesville, Wisconsin; Saxe Brothers, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; R. B. Thomas, Fremont, Nebraska; Dromey, North Chicago; Spencer & Miller, Highland Park, Illinois; Indiana theatre, Bloomington, Indiana; Majestic theatre, Rochelle, Illinois; Pinkleman & Corey, Quincy, Illinois; Harding theatre, Indiana Harbor, Indiana; Garden theatre, Harvey, Illinois.

Dan Barton is now putting in most of his time at the enlarged plant of the company at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, speeding up production.

Liberty, Covington, Ky., Opens

The Liberty theatre extends from Pike street on the south to Sixth street on the north, and is entered through a lobby 80 feet long from Madison avenue. The building is of brick construction and was erected at a cost of $250,000.

The interior decorations are elaborate and the equipment, including a large cooling and ventilating system, is the last word in modern theatre construction. The same system is to be used for heating the building in winter, and is said to be capable of delivering 320,000 feet of pure fresh air at any desired temperature every 15 minutes.

The building is of fireproof construction and has eight exits through wide stairways, with fireproof walls, and a capacity audience of 1,500 may leave the building in one minute. The means of egress from the balcony and mezzanine boxes are separate from those of the lower floor.

As a special musical attraction one of the largest and most expensive organs in the Middle West has been installed. Miss Vera Huelsman, Cincinnati, who recently was organist in a Columbus, Ohio, theatre, has been employed. —Beutel.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Bill"

(French Production—Four Reels)

THIS is strictly a character study from Anatole France's famous novel, "Cranquebille." Seen in Paris by Director Hugo Risenfeld of the Rialto theatre, it was admired by him for its artistic photography and the manner of portrayal. It has no love theme, nor does it claim to have story value, but for purely artistic handling and as a novelty offering, it would be hard to surpass.

The character of "Bill" is that of a push-cart peddler and is portrayed by Maurice de Feraude of the Comedie Francaise. It is so realistically convincing and so perfectly constructed that sub-titles are really unnecessary, and it grips the interest from start to finish.

The fragile story is merely an episode from the life of the peddler. He is arrested on the trumped-up charge of having insulted an officer. He is tried, convicted and sentenced to jail. From drugs given him there he emerges a drunkard and loses his old customers. He is saved from suicide by a newsboy who gives him shelter.

Some real artistic photography is divulged, when in an hallucination from drugs, the peddler reviews some of the scenes enacted in the courtroom. Witnesses against him and the judges sitting before him pass before his distorted vision as monsters bent only upon crushing him. It is a novelty that will set almost any audience into deep meditation and it will leave a somewhat lasting impression.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Finger Prints"

(Pathe—One Reel)

HAL ROACH'S one-reel comedy, "Finger Prints," stars Paul Parrott, introducing the latter as a "hick" amateur sleuth of the correspondence school type. This one starts out like sure-fire, but along comes the "sure thing crook" and the rest is obvious, bringing into play some stunts that are not entirely new. It is a slapstock type with Paul nailing the confidenee man following a daring escape from death on an open trestle bridge with the "flyer" coming on at full speed. But that "flyer" furnishes the solution, for the plunge into the waters below uncovers the crook and his confederate, who are taken in custody. This one starts eleverly, but slows down toward the end.—ROGER FERRI.

"Almost Married"

(Arrow—Two Reels)

EDDIE Lyons, in addition to being a hard-working and successful screen comic, stands out as a particularly careful producer in "Almost Married," his latest contribution to Arrow Film Corporation's comedy lineup. This comedy is jammed with laughs of the farcical sort, the action taking place almost in its entirety in a fashionable hotel, whither wander a love-sick couple with matrimony for their purpose, and an angry daddy and jealous porter making life for them anything but a bed of roses. And to add to the trouble of the prospective man and wife an undertaker, mistaken for a minister, timidly contributes further complications. But all these effect a fast-moving comedy that never lets up, with the final shot furnishing the farewell "wow."—ROGER FERRI.

(Arrow—1900 Feet)

EXHIBITORS will welcome this entertainingly historic scenic magazine, for in addition to possessing an extremely high educational value it presents the late President Harding in intimate poses, exploring the wonders of the famous Yellowstone National Park with his official party. The picture is interestingly photographed with all the natural possessions of the park picturesquely focused, the presidential party furnishing a background that constitutes a historic document that will be referred to generations and generations to come. It is the first picture of its kind and the only complete photographic record of any of the late President's numerous expeditions.

The trip about the park is started shortly after sunrise from a quaint inn, where the party puts up for the night. Accompanied by the park authorities, the late President and his party are shown through the canyons, with very close and daring closeups of geysers, giant falls, and what not, in full action. The entertainment value of the picture is further safeguarded by the introduction of well-worded and explanatory titles.

Here's a subject that will cause much comment and invites any sort of dignified civic tie-up.—ROGER FERRI.

"Secrets of Life"

(Sol Lesser—Three Reels)

"SECRETS OF LIFE" is an entertaining and instructive exposition of certain forms of insect life. By means of a "cold light" and camera processes invented by Louis H. Tolhurst, an American scientist, the microscopic structurès and functionings of the bee, the spider and the ant are made plainly visible to the human eye. Only such highlights in the careers of these insects are chosen as offer possibilities of entertainment. Again, the sub-titles while predominantly informative in purpose are saved from becoming dull and uninteresting by frequently giving a humorous twist to the facts involved. This happy combination of selective material and amusing sub-titles makes the subject adaptable to the theatrical program despite the thoroughly educational character of the reels. A brief description of the remarkable photographic processes involved presented in the theatre's program would, we believe, greatly enhance the intrinsic appeal of the subject. Here is a picture which, in our opinion, will go very well before a high-class audience which appreciates something of the instructive in the course of its entertainment—especially when the instruction possesses an element of the unusual and is engagingly presented as here.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Derby Day"

(Pathe—Aesop's Fable)

"DERBY DAY," an Aesop's Fable animated cartoon, is a humdinger that makes the race track the rendezvous of Paul Terry's menagerie with the dinosaur functioning as a step ladder for "dead-heads." The vain attempt at victory by the "dark horse," who resorts to aerial means, furnishes a plot that ends with a roar. —ROGER FERRI.

"Round Figures"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a Century Comedy with Jack Cooper in the featured role, supported by the Century Follies Girls. The comedy is of the farcical brand with some novel gags that lend a touch of freshness to the entire subject. There is a thread of romance running through the story, too, although its presence is never permitted to subordinate the comedy elements. Mary, the heroine, is put to the necessity of donning the disguise of a dog in order to get something to eat from the frankfurter stands along the boardwalk. The disguise is effectively employed to get over some good laughs. In the meanwhile, Cooper has become a fugitive from the police. He is caught several times but always manages to escape. There are some new angles injected into these chase episodes that will amuse. Then, Jack and Mary meet, and they plan to work together, Mary to assume the part of a trick dog and Cooper to be her master. This alliance leads to further humorous developments which culminate in the discovery by a cabaret owner that the "trick dog" is in reality a pretty girl. Mary is promptly hired as the cigarette girl in the cabaret while Cooper gets a job as a waiter, and so the comedy continues on its merry way. With the introduction of the cabaret sequences the Century Follies Girls are given the opportunity of showing off their figures and dance steps and appropriate settings. The comedy is temporarily retarded but eventually comes back for a smashing finish.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"No Noise"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

HAL ROACH has been Babe-Ruthing with his "Our Gang" comedies, but "No Noise" is a laugh hit that will find a comfortable spot on any bill, for it is replete with rip-roaring action that is original. There is no waste of footage in this two-reeler, every foot being put into material play and the whole constituting entertainment that should have no trouble getting over. These "Our Gang" comedies have struck a popular note and "No Noise" is no exeeption. It deals with the determination of the gang to recruit the football services of Mickey Daniels, convalescing from tonsilitis. This expedition to the hospital prompts a scries of humorous adventures that should keep your audiences in a continual roar of laughter. The chase through operating rooms, medical cabinets and wards uncover incidents that everybody should enjoy. Every member of the gang is in his glory in this issue with little Farina possibly grabbing a few more laurels than the others, but for real laughs "No Noise" will suit the comedy spot nicely. —ROGER FERRI.

Pathe Review No. 38

THIS issue of an interesting series very picturesquely presents "The Wonder Tale of Iron Ore," "Table Manners at the Zoo" and "The Port of Vecchio." The first subject shows the mighty furnaces in action, giant cranes and other ore and red hot metal handling machinery in a fashion that increases interest as the film is unfolded. "Table Manners at the Zoo" describes in vivid fashion the movements of animals, a study that is intimate and entertaining. The Corsican scenes at Vecchio is a beautiful Pathecolor subject.—ROGER FERRI.

Hal Roach presents

world famous story

"The Call of the Wild"

A feature

Behold Buck, the great-hearted, powerful and conquering hero of the greatest dog story ever written or filmed!

He was the playmate of children.—their tender guardian. He knew only praise and caresses. Stolen and taken to the far North, beaten and abused, he became a raging demon, the champion of dog and wolf, the most famous sledge dog of his time!

Thrills, tears and laughter intermingle in this picture.

"Admirable"

"Hal Roach's sally into serious drama with 'Buck' admirable."—Los Angeles Express.

"London's Story Thrillingly Re-told"

"Buck is splendid. You can't help loving him. And what an actor! Consummately clever handling. Brought applause from audience. One of the strongest shows at the California this season."—Los Angeles Examiner.

"Will Appeal to Everyone"

"Hal Roach's initial venture into serious drama will appeal to everyone. He has cut loose with a punch that registers."—Trade Review.

"Dog Does Wonderful Work"

"I consider it a sure-fire audience picture. Believe you will be rather surprised at results secured."—Film Daily.

A REVOLUTIONARY RIOT

Hardened Newspaper Critics Laughed Until They Cried

"Harold Lloyd has done it again. After the smashing hit of 'Safety Last!' it was only natural to expect something of a slump in his next picture; but instead he has made a picture just as enjoyable... 'Why Worry?' entirely different from 'Safety Last!'... It differs from all its predecessors... Lloyd has accomplished the unbelievable... It's a riot... There is scarcely a let-up of mirth-provoking antics... I had two cynics to accompany my laughter. We laughed and smoked and choked—Where Harold, the giant and the girl whipped an entire army the scene is too funny to describe on paper. Tears of laughter are the only means of showing a proper appreciation and I shed my share in that lonely projection room."—Preview in Los Angeles Times.

Hal Roach Comedies

The man who persists in looking at one reel comedies as "fillers" has never played Hal Roach Comedies.

Reel for reel, foot for foot, a Hal Roach Comedy represents just as much care, skill and brains as the best feature; and it probably costs as much for its length as all but the finest features.

When you buy Hal Roach Comedies you get "Snub" Pollard, fresh from his two reel successes; you also get the "Dippy Doo Dads," the outstanding comedy novelty of the year.

If you bought your comedies on the basis of so much per laugh you'd be paying feature prices for the Hal Roach Comedies.

Everybody's a Meighan Fan

IT'S a fact. You know it. Meighan gets them all in—men and women, banker and bottle-washer, highbrow and lowbrow. There's no star in the business with his universal following. Advertise Meighan in any picture and they'll all come a-flocking.

Imagine the crowds when you play Meighan in "Woman-Proof" —Meighan in a big love-comedy by the author of "Back Home and Broke," produced by the same director (Al Green), with the same leading woman (Lila Lee).

With the same racy American humor and wholesome romance that made "Back Home and Broke" a knockout everywhere. Book "Woman-Proof" and then hire your ticket-seller an assistant!

—NEW YORK WORLD

And Other Critics Agree:

Sun and Globe: " At times Gloria Swanson in ' Zaza ' suggests Sarah Bernhardt. Bound to be a great success. In fact, with the finished production which Dwan has given the piece, the evidence is that it will cause the box-office to crack under the strain. The best acting Miss Swanson has ever done. Settings are very good, a statement which includes the gowns Miss Swanson wears every time the scene shifts."

Telegram: " ' Zaza ' comes to life more vividly than ever. A record for sustained emotionalism. Superb production."

American: " If you want to see temperament, for goodness sake go and see the Zazafied Gloria Swanson at the Rivoli. Every atom of Miss Swanson's lissome form acts every minute."

Tribune: " It is a vivid characterization Miss Swanson gives. She has all the vitality of a Lenore Ulric. The role is a rapid reverse of the languid and blase parts to which she is often assigned. ' Zaza ' is well directed, well edited."

World: " ' Zaza ' is staged with great elaborateness in interior decoration and costumery."

THREE in a row for James Cruze. Quite a record to achieve in one season. No sooner did the director startle the screen world with "The Covered Wagon," than he surprised them with "Hollywood." And now comes "Ruggles of Red Gap," which firmly establishes Mr. Cruze as a genius in making stories sparkle with humor. "Ruggles of Red Gap" is nearly director proof, but that isn't to say that it could not have been spoiled with inadequate direction. On the contrary Cruze has made the vital figures of Ruggles, Cousin Egbert, Effie and the Honorable George stand out like cameos. His incident is rich and the plot breezes through with humorous flashes. The picture carries keen satire, a sprinkling of burlesque and effervescent comedy all the way. And yet there is pathos added to give it proper balance.

Edward Horton makes Ruggles a very human valet—one who ... acts in keeping with a gentleman's gentleman. His meekness—his curious, shy, inquisitive expression—so perfectly etched that Harry Leon Wilson might have drawn him from life, indicate a sure gift for pantomime. He deserves to go far on the screen. There is nothing of the strutting poseur in his studies. One may be certain that any role assigned him will be interpreted as well as human understanding can make it.

Some players would have clowned the figure—made him a stupid "silly ass" type of English servant. Horton makes him stupid enough, but his stupidity earns him a quick sympathy. You actually feel sorry for the poor chap whose ancestors for generations have taken orders—who continues to take orders in spite of the newfound independence that Cousin Egbert gives him. He almost hesitates to assert his freedom.

It is sheer enjoyment when Egbert goads him to strike ... snobbish relative from Boston.

"Ask him if it is Tuesday," says Egbert. "If he says yes knock him down."

"But sir, it is Tuesday," pipes the gentle Ruggles.

This bit of delightful by-play bobs to the surface in several instances, giving color to the figures and clever incident to the plot.

Ernest Torrence's Cousin Egbert is picturesquely sketched —playing the awkward manner typical of a ranchman who is unable to adapt himself to cultural expression. He is the braggart, but only while his wife is not at his elbow. Torrence portrays him like a big, vital boy with an eye for cutting capers and embarrassing his relatives. He ticks his hands inside his suspenders and uses a toothpick with careless abandon before his guests. A finely wrought character study, played for all it is worth by a skillful pantomimist.

These two figures with the Honorable George, also admirably limned by Frank Elliot, generate the humor. "Ruggles of Red Gap?" A delightful comedy gem, excellently directed and acted by artists who understand real entertainment values.

You are now tied up with the livest wire crowd of salesmen and film men in the Industry, and we tied up with you because of the fact that you boys work with the same high pressure to serve exhibitors as do our boys in The States.

Not alone that you boys will find that F.B.O. pictures have swept the entire country with a wave of popularity among millions of fans, but that every exhibitor who has played F.B.O. pictures is a living, breathing, walking, shouting booster for the F.B.O. boys throughout the entire United States.

Canadian fans and exhibitors are already acquainted with the quality of the F.B.O. product.

Every exhibitor in Canada, whether he has played our pictures or not, knows about the powerful exploitation of F.B.O.—by far the best in the business.

They know how we put our pictures across. They know we work like hell to help every exhibitor make money with our goods. Thus has F.B.O. in 18 short months built up a reputation and a mountain of good will that spans the Continent.

You boys will find it a pleasure to work with F.B.O.—to sell the F.B.O. product and to be backed up with that intensive high pressure exploitation that is the talk of the entire country, and of Canada as well.

We gave Exhibitors some of the biggest money makers in years. We gave them "IN THE NAME OF THE LAW"—"THE THIRD ALARM"—"WESTBOUND LIMITED"—and now soon to be released is Emory Johnson's latest and by miles greatest photodramatic smash—"THE MAIL MAN," the official giant epic of the screen that tells the big story of Postal Employees. Exhibitors have made money, and are making money, with such winners as Jane Novak in "Divorce"—Ethel Clayton in "Can A Woman Love Twice?" and "If I Were Queen"—Johnny Walker in "Cap't Fly-By-Night"—and "The 4th Musketeer"—Helen Jerome Eddy in "When Love Comes"—Mrs. Wallace Reid in "HUMAN WRECKAGE"—and now we are coming along with the big novelty "Itching Palms"—the box office mop ups "DAYTIME WIVES," "Blow Your Own Horn"—the big winner "ALIMONY"—the big stage success "Lights Out"—the magnificent gypsy story "Born Of The Cyclone." Also our De Haven and Plum Center Comedies are going big—Best comedy bets on the market.

Our great H. C. Witwer-Collier's Weekly "FIGHTING BLOOD" series are the outstanding money getting sensation for thousands of exhibitors who are now cleaning up with them. Then we have the big super special "THE LULLABY" coming with Jane Novak promising you one of the biggest pictures in ten years. Also coming, the big epic "THE DANCER OF THE NILE" with big American cast. Also Houdini the Great in "Haldane Of The Secret Service"—and many, many other big winners. We're going to back you up to the limit with exploitation, advertising and help of every sort.

We extend the right hand of cordiality and welcome to you. It's going to be a big thing for you, for Associated Exhibitors of Canada, and for F.B.O. Shout the news from the housetops and don't forget we are going to let every exhibitor know that physical distribution will continue as usual through the Branches of the Canadian Educational Films (Ltd.) and that—

"Classics of the Screen"

"It will make money—plenty of it!"

Says Beauvais Fox, dramatic editor of the New York Tribune

You said a mintful, Beauvais! Good grief, how the money rolls in! And ticket sales are building higher night after night, reaching for new profit records. We rush to press with a handful of the early newspaper reviews—read them, boys!—and a promise to exhibitors that here's a great big box-office attraction you can mop up with. If you're a judge of profit pictures, you'll never forgive yourself if you overlook this one!

Going into a second week at the Capitol (New York)

"Six Days" will make money—plenty of it. It is worth recommending to one's friends. Worth taking the children to also, if that means anything. Here is a production that is spectacular but not a spectacle; exciting and human but not a tear gusher.
—NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

"Six Days" filled with typical Glyn action. Vivid author unleashed her pen completely for this melodramatic war and love romance. A throbbing, colorful picture that easily should keep spectators guessing from the introduction to the final fade-out.
—NEW YORK AMERICAN.

"Six Days" unfolded one of the important contributions to the current season of photoplay.
—JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

So well did most of the patrons of the Capitol yesterday like "Six Days" that it seemed to be the consensus that Elinor Glyn should have continued and spread it to "Ninety Days."
—EVENING WORLD.

Undoubtedly a success. We had to stand up in order to see the picture.—Quinn Martin.
—THE WORLD.

Brabin has made a work of photographic art. It is perfect in every technical detail. Through his interpretation the picture is lifted from the commonplace to something worth while.
—EVENING MAIL.

As presented at the Capitol Theatre yesterday, "Six Days" unfolded one of the important contributions to the current season of photoplay. "Six Days" is without question a ten strike. It has everything.
—EVENING TELEGRAM.

"Six Days" is easily the best material with which Elinor Glyn has furnished the screen. The picture is very high art and it has been directed with unsurpassed discretion by Brabin.
—SUN & GLOBE.

A STAGE SUCCESS OF THREE SOLID SEASONS has been made into a brilliant screen triumph. It is undoubtedly one of the most perfect pictures ever produced. With feverish action and a touch of humanity. A compelling combination of power and charm. In the cast are Eleanor Boardman, Claude Gillingwater, Alec Francis, William H. Crane, Raymond Hatton, Zasu Pitts, Brinsley Shaw, John Sainpolis, Lucien Littlefield, William Haines and others.

John Golden's Broadway Stage Triumph Now The World's Big Picture Success!

As heart-warming as a Spring zephyr. The laughable, lovable story of three old bachelors and their adopted daughter. A picture that goes out to the public to take its place among the few truly great films of all time.

Like a breath of Spring she came into their lives.

"Don't Miss This Picture!"

Says the N. Y. SUN & GLOBE

"It came practically unheralded into our midst," continues the Sun and Globe. "It did not claim to be one of the thousand and one 'super-specials' that 'should take New York by storm.' But it is a good production, nevertheless. For once let it also be observed there is a leading man that is not ever on guard lest his glossy locks be ruffled. And for once we have witnessed a picture of the Far West as it is. The piece has a great deal of suspense for we were continually wondering and worrying. Hoot can ride. Step up and don't miss this picture."

N. Y. SUN & GLOBE

"An unusual type of Western picture is on view at B. S. Moss Broadway theatre this week. Hoot Gibson gives a good study of a type of cowboy."

N. Y. EVENING JOURNAL

"Hoot Gibson does some gorgeous riding. If you like tales of the wild and woolly West, you ought to like 'The Ramblin' Kid' for it is wilder and woollier than the West has been in many a day."

FOOL!

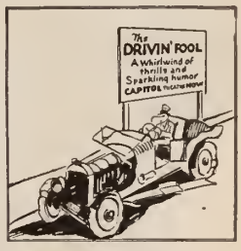
CONCRETE PRACTICAL INEXPENSIVE Use this made-to-order Business Boosting EXPLOITATION

Here are Just a Few Business Getters

DRIVIN' FOOL CLUBS.—A novel nation-wide propaganda idea that will get unlimited and invaluable newspaper space and the support of your editors, your business men's clubs, automobile clubs, the Mayor, the Chief of Police, Judges, Magistrates and all the city officials. (Get the exploitation sheet for full particulars.)

NEWS PICTORIAL SERVICE.—A mighty exploitation flash composed of eight spectacular photographs of actual automobile wrecks. These are real news pictures for merchants to paste on their show windows. A great stunt that's a cinch to put over.

A TAXI TIE-UP.—A clever cooperative stunt that will have every taxicab in town working day and night for your show. This is a Big idea that will benefit the taxi owners and give you a whole fleet of street ballyhoos. (Get the exploitation sheet for full particulars.)



HOME MADE MOVING PICTURES.—One of the greatest novelties ever gotten out to exploit a picture. It's a cut-out cartoon comedy of "The Drivin' Fool" that the grown-ups as well as the children will take home and make up into an actual moving picture. It's a knock-out.

OLD AUTO STREET BALLYHOO.—This stunt is a scream and particularly appropriate to exploit the riot of fun in "The Drivin' Fool." It will line the crowds up on the curb line like a circus parade. (Get the exploitation sheet for full particulars.)

STREET AND R. R. CROSSING SIGNS.—Startling special signs, in flaming red, yellow and black colors that will stop the crowds at street corners, traffic points, and railroad crossings. A sure-fire stunt that will get them coming and going.

WALLOPING WINDSHIELD STICKERS.—Every man and woman that drives an automobile will grab one of these novel stickers for their wind shields. They are just what motorists want and they'll advertise your show on every street, avenue and country road.

POLICE STYLE HAND BILLS.—Teaser dodgers that will have the whole town curious to know who "The Drivin' Fool" is and what it's all about. A teaser campaign that really teases curiosity and starts a flood of speculation that can be cashed in at your box office.

APRIL SHOWERS

A TOM FORMAN PRODUCTION

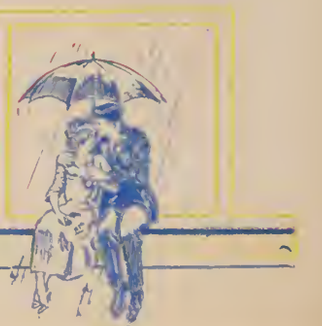
THIS PICTURE will take people back to the springtime of their own lives,—make them cry a little, laugh a good deal, and go away telling their friends how good it is.

It's a love story of the tenements, and in contrast there are such scenes as the astonishing cabaret, "Davy Jones' Locker," with fifty dreamy mermaids. And there's the big prize-fight scene that's worth the price of any ringside seat.

COLLEEN MOORE is wonderfully charming as the brave heroine; KENNETH HARLAN is great as the lad who wants to be a policeman, and Ruth Clifford is excellent as the bored debutante.

"April Showers" is out of the ordinary. It's real, it's human, awfully funny, and just sad enough.

It's six reels of happiness for everybody who sees it.



The story was written by Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton and its praises will be sung by millions.

"Indians!"

The cry of horror passed from wagon to wagon down the long train of prairie schooners. Lullaby songs hushed on mothers' tongues. The terror of the long traverse was upon them.

The scout, riding shoulder hard against the lead horses of the landships, swung them about in a circle which narrowed as bull whackers and mule skinners obeyed orders until wagon touched wagon, a defense wall against the redskins.

Night and terror; dawn and the battle; screeching Indians; wailing children; flaming arrow and fire!

Sunset. Triumphant warriors disappeared in the mountain passes. Out of the smoking debris walked a boy of four—alone!

BIGGEST
CASH RECEIPTS IN HISTORY

for hundreds of theatres throughout the nation on "Human Wreckage"

"HUMAN WRECKAGE" held over for 2nd week at Rowland & Clark Theatres, Pittsburgh, owing to tremendous attendance first week. Old-timers say they never saw such business in spite of all competition. Ask Rowland & Clark.

At Fox's giant Audubon Theatre at 165th St. and Broadway, New York, the business was absolutely phenomenal . . . attendance records smashed . . . "HUMAN WRECKAGE" wrecks all cash receipt records. Ask Fox.

With terrific odds of broiling summer weather when you can't drive them in with clubs—"HUMAN WRECKAGE" smashed every known Sunday opening record of the Ben Ali theatre at Lexington, Ky. Ask the Mgr. of the Ben Ali theatre.

Overcoming big odds of competitive pictures, "HUMAN WRECKAGE" ran away with all records at Atlanta at the Rialto Theatre. Never such a brilliant exploitation campaign. Never such receipts. Ask the Mgr. of the Rialto.

In Newark, N. J., at the Terminal Theatre, "HUMAN WRECKAGE" was a riot. Thousands jammed their way all during the run, setting new high water mark for big cash receipts for other big pictures to shoot at.

"HUMAN WRECKAGE" took $500.00 in cash MORE than any picture that ever played the Orpheum Theatre in Marion, Ind. Swallow that, you men who doubted the ability of "HUMAN WRECKAGE" to clean up. Write and ask the Mgr. of the Orpheum.

Write and ask Frank Newman, one of America's shrewdest showmen, what "HUMAN WRECKAGE" did for him at his Royal Theatre for three solid weeks.

Ask Jones Linick & Schaefer what "HUMAN WRECKAGE" did at their State Street Theatre, the Orpheum. Ask them what kind of a cash receipt taker this picture is.

Motion Picture News reaches nearly twice as many paid exhibitor subscribers as any other trade journal in the field

Getting them excited before play-date time!

The secret of good showmanship lies in what YOU do to stir the interest of the people, in your city, before the date of running of the picture you want them to see. Yes, we know this is elemental stuff, but, because we know it is elemental—IT IS NOT ALWAYS GIVEN THE SERIOUS CONSIDERATION IT DESERVES!

Street stunts have their place; the lobby display another; newspaper advertising must be planned and posters used. There's the rub. How many of you use enough POSTERS?

In many cities, far to many, exhibitor's opinion of the value of posters is expressed in the remark that is heard so often in the exchange: "Posters? I suppose so, send me along a few."

Posters, such as are available on that splendid production, "The Huntress," with their powerful appeal to the imagination and "let's go" interest of the passer-by, can be a great ticket dispenser for you—if you give them the proper distribution.

When you book "The Huntress" order plenty of paper and hit the town hard,—the results will more than justify the additional expenditure.

Weeks at the Roosevelt

Which all goes to show that there is only one NORMA TALMADGE.

It was originally scheduled to play four weeks at the Roosevelt Theatre, one of the Balaban and Katz houses in Chicago, but the public demand has been so great it was found necessary to extend the run for two weeks more.

To those who have had the pleasure of seeing Norma's latest, it comes as no surprise to learn that this production is drawing tremendous crowds to the big theatres where it is being shown.

In New York, after a four weeks' run at the Apollo Theatre, where it played to crowded houses, it has been booked for the Rivoli Theatre beginning September 23.

The magnificence of the production, Norma's most unusual performance —she has never done anything to compare with it—is a box-office combination that will pack them in at any theatre in the country.

Success Was Certain!

No story that has appeared in recent years excited as much comment as did "PONJOLA." Everywhere, friends were being asked, "Have you read Ponjola?" It was wonderful material for the screen. And what a picture they made of it!

With its characters portrayed by such great artists as James Kirkwood, Anna Q. Nilsson and Tully Marshall—and its direction in the hands of Donald Crisp, there was not the slightest doubt as to what the result would be: A GREAT PRODUCTION!

The Critics

GUESSING at picture-making is like guessing at the stock market.

Each one of us is fully entitled to his own guess and gamble.

But the deciding factor—always—is the majority say-so of the broad public.

The Will H. Hays office has prepared, for confidential use, a compilation of opinions on picture values from well known authors and newspaper critics.

It is exceedingly interesting—and inconclusive. Divergence of opinion is the outstanding point.

The newspaper critics, because they are closer to the picture-going public, give the most practical and rational information.

The authors are pretty much at sea; and each sails an individual skiff. With a fine array of words they indicate definitely enough that they know very little about picture-making. Authors apparently do not go to see pictures. They prefer to write about them; and, of course, the further removed you are from your subject the more smartly you can write. When authors learn to think in pictures we may expect better picture stories; in the meantime we shall receive essays on "movies."

All in all, we need more creators of pictures and less critics, more work and less talk.

As it is, pictures are improving. This year's output indicates a spirited advance in merit. The vanguard of special pictures on Broadway has pleased the newspaper critics to a marked degree. That is hopeful. But the public is responding as never before in picture history and that is important. Furthermore, this holds true with the important cities all over the country. Pictures are decidedly better this year and the box-office outlook is bright.

We want to remind the picture critics of one substantial fact. It is not merely necessary that they should know more about picture-making; they should also know something about the picture industry.

The motion picture is a product of an industrial machine, and a huge and powerful one. Necessarily so. Otherwise pictures could not be shown, in this country alone, in 4000 cities and towns to daily audiences of six million people.

Critics seem to believe that producers are free to make pictures just as they please. But we have also distributors and exhibitors. They are equally important parts of the industrial machine. And they have a lot to say about the making of pictures.

This industrial machine isn't all that it should be. It has many economic faults, which are just as natural as measles with a child. It has a lot of inefficiency, because its ranks are filled with inefficients. But the young industry will grow and determine itself, and pictures will grow better as their marketing machine improves.

It is only this year, for instance, that a general effort is being made to sell pictures individually. Volume has always been the goal in production because it has been the distribution goal. Now that distribution orders otherwise we can make pictures for their individual merit. The fundamental hope of better pictures is fewer pictures; and at last and at least we have that hope.

We have no great objection to critics. The sincere and intelligent ones do a lot of good. But it wouldn't be a bad idea to put them to work; say, make half of them producers and half distributors and watch the fur fly.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THE entries in the Motion Picture Golf Tournament crossed mashies Tuesday at the Belleclaire Golf Club, Bayside, L. I., and out of the play of iron and driver, some very good scores were collected. The F. B. O. officials tried to make it a family affair. Nat Rothstein walked off with low net for the Reuben Samuels, Inc., Trophy and won the leg on the Film Daily Trophy. Joe Schnitzer was low net runner-up for the Pathe Exchange, Inc., Trophy, while P. A. Powers won the Class C (Jack T. Cosman Trophy).

When Chris Diebel teed off the other golfers were affected by a mental hazard, for Chris's form approaches that of Hagen, Sarazen, Jones, et al. He was entitled to the Motion Picture News Trophy as low gross runner-up, but he selected the Jules Mastbaum Trophy for lowest score by exhibitor players. F. A. Saunders was given the News Trophy as low gross runner-up. Louis Goldman won the low gross with a score of 113 for 27 holes and walked off with the Warner Brothers Trophy. Not a bad score that—indeed, a very good one.

The Class A Photoplay Magazine Trophy was collected by Tom Moore; the Class B Watterson R. Rothacker Trophy was carried off by W. Wallace Ham; Pat Powers, as mentioned above, took care of Class C; Jerome Beatty won the Class D Trophy; the Class E Trophy was won by Jack Alicoate; the Class F Trophy was given to A. L. Abrams and Sam Sax won the Class G Trophy. Watt L. Parker beamed happiness in winning the Class H Trophy; the Class I Trophy went to M. B. Schlesinger, and the Class J Trophy to Henry Siegel.

W. W. Hodkinson was presented with a golf bag, the donation of the New York American for the most meritorious act of the day. What was it? He appeared at his first golf tournament. Abe Warner was presented with an overnight bag, the gift of the J. P. Muller Agency for the second most meritorious act since he was forced to be absent due to illness.

There were duffer prizes in all 10 classes. Charles Abrams was awarded a hen and chicks in a coop for being the worst duffer. His score was 315 for 27 holes.

All in all it was some tournament. There were over 200 who attended. A birdie or three was made here and there and par was collected on some of the holes. There wasn't any partiality shown for the fairway. Several of the boys seemed to enjoy digging divots out of the rough and a score needed diving suits for the 18th water hole. After the clubs had been replaced in the bags and the caddies sent on their way the golfers repaired to the club house where they put away some real birdies—which had been nicely roasted to a brown by the chef. And lest it be forgotten the poker championship started sharply at eleven o'clock. It was "Home James!" in the wee sma' hours. Was a good time had by all? Ask Nat, Jim, Fred, Bill, Jerry, Bruce, Pat, Tom, Joe, Paul, Jack, George, John, Ken, Chris, Charlie, Harry, J. E. D. and Danny. They know! ! !

INCIDENTALLY the royal and ancient pastime has effected a fine camaraderie among the men who put the films over It has enabled them to forget the work-a-day world in the enjoyment of driving off the tee and hearing the click when club meets ball as it sails out over the fairway—or in the rough. It has inspired the boys to get together in a real communion of good-fellowship. When you can get two hundred busy men to leave their desks and participate in the tournament it is sure indication that golf is popular.

Some of them have been practising for weeks to better their scores. Nat Rothstein has carried his clubs around several courses from Maine to Indiana. And perfected his strokes so well that he walked off with the honors at Bayside. Joe Dannenberg, a southpaw, has become a rabid golf fiend. Anyone following him around the Bayside course the past few weeks would surely have noticed that genial Joe was doing his best to ride along with Colonel Par and Major Bogey. He may not be ready to take on Walter Hagen or Bobby Jones yet, but there is no question that his determination to be a master golfer will some day carry him into the National Open.

CHRIS DEIBEL, the Columbus and Youngstown golf expert, who can pack his galleries whether they come to see his pictures or follow him around the fairway, is in New York. He participated in the Golf Tournament Tuesday where he played a mean game, and is enjoying a well-earned vacation, playing a few courses in the Metropolitan district and attending a few of the "opry" houses.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S first independent production, "Potash and Perlmutter," certainly lives up to all the superlatives said about it. A richly humorous story of a cross-section of life, showing as it does a zestful spirit of Jewish initiative in conducting a cloak and suit business, it carries on with all the sparkle of the original yarn by Montague Glass and the play which he wrote in co-operation with Charles Klein.

There is a fine spirit of friendly antagonism which generates a full quota of laughs—and at the same time, it is excellently balanced with tender strokes of pathos. The unfortunate partner, Potash, has sufficient business acumen to appreciate the "go-getting" qualities of the younger Perlmutter. And once they are associated together, one follows their "ups and downs" with unabated interest. The little intimate details are sharply defined—and give color to the story. There is much keen satire—and occasionally a bold flash of burlesque. Then the picture develops a melodramatic flourish as the head designer goes to jail. Potash and Perlmutter are on the brink of ruin. And you catch this pathos in all its meaning.

Barney Bernard, who created the character of Potash, humanizes it in a manner which stamps him as a real actor—one who can play upon the emotions because of his feeling for the role—and Alexander Carr is a splendid foil.

The picture contains all the details of the story which have been fully appreciated by a sympathetic director. The limitations of the stage prevented much of this realistic incident from being realized. On the screen the story takes on a new value.

It is scheduled for the Mark Strand Sunday. And we predict that Standing Room Only will be the order of that day and throughout every evening of the week. It's a great audience picture for it carries so much rich humor, incident, satire, and color. Moreover it is acted so competently that it will be understood by any child. It looks as if First National had struck pay dirt here.

GOTHAM woke up last Tuesday morning to find itself newsless and paperless. Overnight the printers had gone on strike and the public that had been paying two and three cents daily for its news found time to read the advertising signs on the street cars and subways on the way to and from work.

From a theatrical standpoint, however, the strikers deprived the Broadway houses of all opportunity to advertise their openings.

Faced by this critical situation and without any intimation of how long the strike might last, Harry Reichenbach, press representative for Sam Goldwyn, met the emergency. Twenty bell ringers, in the cap and gowns of the ancient Town Criers, armed with scrolls and bells clanged their presence at the principal street corners from Times Square to Columbus Circle.

They vociferously announced, for twelve hours of the afternoon and evening, that Sam Goldwyn's "Potash and Perlmutter" would open at the Strand the following Sunday. The stunt attracted a lot of attention on Broadway—and crowds as well everywhere the Town Criers appeared.

THE screen was well represented at the Dempsey-Firpo carnage at the Polo Grounds. Among those who passed through the turnstiles were James R. Mayer, Dorothy Dalton, E. V. Richards, Joseph Engles, Harry Schwalbe, Aaron Jones, Adolph Zukor, Charles Hayman, Paul Mooney, Irving Lesser, H. Robert Rubin and Samuel Goldwyn. Among out of town exhibitors of prominence who sat at the ringside and who visited Motion Picture News to say that this is "the only trade paper we take seriously" were Edward J. Reid of the Strand, William J. Mahoney of the Rialto and Majestic, J. Fred Lovett of the Royal and Martin Touhey of the Emery of Providence, R. I.; Tom Soriero of the Century, Baltimore, Md., and Frank Smith of the Shubert, Newark, N. J.

FOR the first time in the history of the industry practical use has just been made of a total eclipse of the sun. This was done Monday in connection with the filming of certain episodes in "Woman-Proof," the Thomas Meighan picture.

Nature timed the phenomenon perfectly for the purposes of the director. The script called for both daylight and night scenes aboard ship, and these were obtained a few minutes apart, far out at sea, between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

With help rendered by darkness that enveloped the vessel as it passed through the moon's shadow the cameramen completed, under conditions never before possible of utilization, the filming of romantic episodes in the forthcoming feature.

ANNE SUTHERLAND, who played Grandma in "Grandma's Boy," died last week in California. The deceased, who was 79, did not let age interfere with her screen career. Up to the time of her death she appeared in pictures, in the character of some sweet, old lady. Her performance in the Harold Lloyd classic endeared her with audiences everywhere. Her passing is a distinct shock in motion picture circles—where she was extremely popular.

RUMORS from the Coast have it that Douglas Fairbanks is putting more time, more money, more energy, greater energy and greater energy into "The Thief of Bagdad," than any two of his former film creations. The final results he intends to be a wonderland of whimsy and fantasy. That the picture will set a new standard leading away from the crowded detail and mixed motifs of modern screen production into a wider realm of originality and imagination is ardently hoped and freely predicted.

Rothacker Sees Theatre Boom Abroad

Believes Building Revival in England Presages Greater Activities Throughout Europe

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER, who was a newspaperman before he entered the film field, says that the biggest news story he ran across in Europe is about the picture theatre building boom that has hit England.

"I believe it forecasts greater theatre construction activities over Europe generally. This will be good news for the foreign producers. It will mean much to American producers. It should be encouraging news even to the American exhibitor, for in more ways than one he is vitally interested in the prosperity of the picture industry beyond his own shores," said Mr. Rothacker.

The head of the Rothacker Enterprises returned on the Majestic August 28 after a two-month observation of motion picture conditions in the United Kingdom and the Continent. After four days at the New York Rothacker offices and a similar period at the Chicago laboratory, he left for a month in California.

"The big outstanding feature I saw in England," he reports, "was the tendency to build new picture palaces. The new Tivoli now under the auspices of Marcus Loew, one of the finest and most advantageously located in the Kingdom, has opened as the house which will give premier showings to the Metro output.

"With Robert Lieber, president of First National and Ralph Pugh, managing director of First National in the United Kingdom, I had the pleasure of attending the opening of the new Davis house at Sheppard's Rush. It is a magnificent theatre—another proof of the fact that England is awake to the necessity of bigger and better theatres.

"Through the courtesy of Colonel Bromhead and Reginald Bromhead, I visited the new Gaumont laboratories in London where are installed the latest models of the Lawley automatic developer. I was much impressed with the cleanliness and mechanical arrangements of this plant. I also renewed various laboratory and exchange acquaintances. Everywhere I was received with true British courtesy.

"It was my privilege to attend the First National convention of two days which terminated with a splendid banquet at the Savoy. The enthusiasm of the United Kingdom First National sales force was really inspiring. It was a great tribute to Bruce Johnson. Ralph Pugh and Mr. Phillipson who are building the organization.

"From my own viewpoint the trip was eminently successful. I have reason to believe that the announcement which we hope to make before many months will be of interest to the English as well as the American film trade.

"The producers of England are awake, alive and going strong. They are making worthy plans for the production of pictures of the highest calibre. It is my opinion that 1924 will see on the American market English-made pictures which will compare very favorably with the best American productions."

U. S. Census Bureau Plans Survey of Producers

THE Bureau of the Census expects to send out questionnaires in the early part of January covering the film producing industry for 1923. Only producers whose product during the calendar year aggregated in excess of $5,000 are to be included in the scope of the survey, says E. F. Hartley, chief statistician of the Census bureau, Department of Commerce. The form used will be similar to the 1921 blank.

New Enterprises Granted Delaware Charters

Recent Delaware charters include:—Calumet Pictures Corporation, to take and exhibit motion pictures, capital $600,000; Artcraft Productions Company, Inc., conducting places of amusement, capital $1,100,000; Non-Theatrical Pictures Service Company of Delaware, dealing in real estate, $350,000; Automatic Window Display, Incorporated, furnishing window displays, etc., $100,000.

The Maryland State Tax Commission has just issued a certificate of incorporatioin to The Western Maryland Theatre Company, capitalized at $100,000; to conduct motion picture theatres, theatrical enterprises, and other amusements. Incorporators are:—Arch M. Evans, H. Clay Evans, and Floyd Lininger, of Lonaconing, Frostburg, Westernport Hagerstown, Cumberland and Morgantown. The recent purchase of two Cumberland theatres has made necessary the new incorporation.

Revenue Agents Checking Returns on Tax

The St. Louis Internal Revenue offices are actively pushing its investigation into the admission tax returns made by motion picture exhibitors and proprietors of other amusement places in St. Louis and Eastern Missouri.

One Eastern Missouri exhibitor is said to have been compelled to pay Uncle Sam $400 in excess fees and penalties for failure to make proper returns. Other movie men are said to have paid lesser sums. For Government reasons the names of the exhibitors in question are not revealed.

Hays Committee Discusses Copyright Laws

Plans to revise present copyright laws as they effect motion pictures were discussed by the Law Committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association at a meeting held during the week. Plans were also completed for the establishment of a service station in Montreal under the direction of the Canadian M. P. T. O. A convention of the organization will be held at Toronto late in October.

Paramount Managers Hold N. Y. Convention

Paramount's District managers have been in convention this week at the home office of the company in New York. Monday's session, presided over by S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, was confined to discussion of plans for the promulgation of the new Paramount sales policy recently announced through the trade publications.

After a short business session Tuesday morning the district managers and other executives attending the convention went to the Criterion theatre to see advance showings of the Herbert Brenon production, "The Spanish Dancer," starring Pola Negri, and the Sam Wood production, "His Children's Children." When all were assembled in the foyer of the theatre, S. R. Kent on behalf of the Distribution department and the chief executives of the company, presented a silver loving cup to Herman Wobber, Pacific Coast district manager, in recognition of his work in charge of the Paramount Week sales drive.

Tuesday evening the members of the convention and home office executives were guests of President Adolph Zukor at a dinner at the Ritz-Carlton.

In addition to the home office executives connected with the Distribution department, those attending the convention were George J. Schaefer, of Boston; H. H. Buxbaum, of New York; W. E. Smith, of Philadelphia; H. A. Ross, of Detroit; R. C. Li Beau, of Kansas City; F. F. Creswell, of Atlanta; Louis Marcus, of Salt Lake City; Herman Wobber, of San Francisco; Philip Reisman, of Minneapolis, and Leslie F. Whelan, Eli M. Orowitz and Russell B. Moon, exploitation representatives respectively at Washington, Philadelphia and New Haven.

Ohio Censors Rush Review On "Six Days"

The Ohio Board of Censors co-operated with the local Goldwyn exchange and with the Loew's Ohio theatres by giving "Six Days" preference in the censor list. They reviewed it the day it came into the office, so that it could be shown this week at the Allen theatre, Cleveland. And they passed it without an elimination. The Censor Board also looked at "The Green Goddess" and passed that without an elimination.

Trade Commission Hearing Resumed

Loew-F.P.-L. Relations Are Probed

THE Federal Trade Commission hearing in the case of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and others was resumed in Cleveland, Tuesday, Sept. 18, at 10 A.M., in the Federal Building before Examiner E. C. Alvord. Gaylord Hawkins, attorney for the Commission, conducted the investigation. Bruce Bromley, Ralph Kohn and C. F. Revis were the legal representatives for Famous Players-Lasky.

Only five witnesses were called; none of them exhibitors. Three of them were managers of Cleveland film exchanges, and two of them were officials of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc.

The investigation in Cleveland confined itself to determining what relations, if any, exist between Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., which controls the leading first run picture theatres in the city, and Famous Players-Lasky.

Interrogations conducted by Mr. Hawkins brought out that Famous Players-Lasky first became interested in Cleveland theatres in 1917 when it took 30 per cent. of the Stillman theatre stock; that Marcus Loew, at the same time, also took 30 per cent. of the Stillman theatre stock; that E. Mandelbaum of Cleveland, who promoted the theatre in 1916, and was president of the company, retained 25 per cent. of the stock; that the remaining shares were divided between Aaron Jones of Chicago and interests in Indianapolis; that the Stillman theatre was built entirely with Cleveland money. According to the testimony, it didn't make any money during its first year and stockholders became restless.

Formation of Ohio Theatres

Evidence brought out by examination of Edgar A. Hahn, of the law firm of Hahn, Mooney Loeser and Keogh, and one of the secretaries of Loew's Ohio Theatres, was to the effect that Famous Players-Lasky became financially interested in the Stillman theatre in order to save it from being converted into a vaudeville house. In 1919, E. P. Strong, and Fred Desberg, operating the Mall theatre, consolidated with the Stillman theatre company, it was testified. The new company was incorporated under the laws of Delaware as Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc. In the process of consolidation, the interest of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was reduced from 30 per cent. to 13 per cent. and the Loew interests were reduced from 30 per cent. to 18 per cent., so the evidence ran.

Mr. Hahn stated that the control of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., rests with Cleveland people, that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has no voice in the purchase of any pictures for any one of the eight Cleveland houses operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc.; that Famous Players-Lasky is not represented on the Board of Directors of Loew's Ohio Theatres, and consequently has nothing to do with their operation in any manner.

At the same time, Mr. Hahn presented a list of theatres operated by the company of which he is an official, as well as a list of the subsidiary companies in which Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., is interested. The Cleveland houses thus controlled are the Stillman, Allen, State, Park, Mall, Alhambra, Liberty and Doan. Each theatre is operated by a separate company, and each company has the same officers as has Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., namely, Marcus Loew, president; Nicholas M. Schenck, secretary; David Bernstein, treasurer; Leopard Friedman, assistant secretary; Jesse Mills, assistant secretary; David Loew and Arthur Loew, each assistant treasurers; Edgar A. Hahn of Cleveland, assistant secretary; Joseph Laronge of Cleveland, assistant treasurer. The board of directors consists of these officers, together with E. P. Strong, Edward Daoust and Fred Desberg, all of Cleveland.

Twentieth Meets Fifteenth Century. Z R 1 sailing over Cosmopolitan studio where "Yolanda" is being made.

One of the leading subsidiary companies of Loew's Ohio Theatres is, according to Mr. Hahn, the Euclid East 17th street company. Famous Players-Lasky, he said, is financially interested in the Euclid East 17th street company to the extent of having subscribed to $100,000 worth of second mortgage bondns of a $600,000 issue.

F. P.-L. "Doesn't Control"

Bruce Bromley, representing Famous Players-Lasky, in cross-questioning Mr. Hahn, brought out that these second mortgage bonds in the Euclid East 17th street company, one of the subsidiaries of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., was taken by Famous Players-Lasky operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., and that no money was paid for the bonds. The Euclid East 17th street company owns the leaseholds on properties on which the theatres operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., stand. It also owns property on Detroit avenue at West 117th street where another theatre will be erected.

Edgar Hahn's testimony closed with a reiteration of the statement that Famous Players-Lasky has nothing to do with the operation of the theatres controlled by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., and that the influence of New York in the executive end of its operations is practically nil.

Fred Desberg was the second witness. Desberg is general representative and manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres. He personally books all pictures that appear at any of the eight houses listed under its control. Desberg was asked to submit a list of the pictures played at all the theatres of which he is manager, together with name of the producer, and the amount paid each producer for the pictures during the season of 1922-23. The list submitted by Mr. Desberg follows:

United Artists, $44,915, six pictures.

Famous Players-Lasky, $100,491, sixty-nine pictures.

Goldwyn, $24,165, thirteen pictures.

First National, $88,623, fifty pictures.

Metro, $39,683, twenty-seven pictures.

Universal, $3,520, four pictures.

Preferred, $4,790, four pictures.

Pathe, $5,180, two pictures.

Skirboll (Gold Seal), $5,960, four pictures.

American Releasing Co., $4,000, one picture.

Asked why he booked more Famous Players-Lasky pictures than any others, Mr. Desberg stated that he did so because Famous Players-Lasky made the largest number of consistently good pictures on the market, and that he needs good pictures to maintain the high standard of his houses. Mr. Desberg testified that he has no financial interest in Famous Players. Also that Famous Players-Lasky has nothing to do with operating the eight Cleveland picture theatres managed by Loew's Ohio Theatres.

Exchange Managers Heard

Maurice Safier, district manager of United Artists, the next witness, stated he never had any difficulty selling his product to Fred Desberg of Loew's Ohio Theatres.

C. L. Peavey, Cleveland manager for W. W. Hodkinson, explained why he was unable to sell "Down to the Sea in Ships" to Desberg. He stated that he tried to sell the picture to Desberg in April and that the latter was all bought up for the season. Mr. Desberg did not refuse to buy the picture, but couldn't state a definite date available for its exhibition, said Mr. Peavey, who added that he sold the picture then to Reade's Hippodrome.

J. E. Beck, manager of the Cleveland Vitagraph exchange corroborated the statements of Messrs. Safier and Peavey relative to the courtesy received at the hands of Mr. Desberg at all times.

The Commission adjourned at 2 P.M. to meet again at 10 A. M., Thursday, September 20, in Philadelphia, where the investigation was scheduled to be continued.

Increase in Admissions Is Likely in Detroit

It is rumored that, as a result of the large increases in pay granted to the musicians and operators in Detroit, the picture houses in the city, will advance admission charges. Houses which formerly charged 17c may increase to 20c and 20c admission to 25c. The first run houses are contemplating an increase of 5c on all seats.

National M. P. Day Winning Support

Several State Exhibitor Units Backing Movement and Canada Also Enlists

NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE DAY —November 19—sponsored by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has won the approval of several state exhibitor divisions, according to a statement from national headquarters this week.

Joseph Walsh, President of the Connecticut M. P. T. O., in a communication to the national offices, declared: "You may depend upon the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut one hundred per cent. My committees have already been appointed and I enclose the list."

R. F. Woodhull, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, has likewise appointed his committees and declares his state is "solidly behind the movement." Canadian theatre owners are co-operating, according to a telegram received and made public by national headquarters from George B. Sparrow, President of the M. P. T. O. of Canada. It follows: "Mr. Gould and I will be in New York Tuesday to discuss National Motion Picture Day. It is our intention to make this an outstanding event in Canada."

Arkansas will be in line. E. W. Collins, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas, in a letter to William Bender, Treasurer of the M. P. T. O. A. and Chairman of the National Motion Picture Day Committee, says: "I have been advised by Mr. Cohen of my appointment on the committee to act upon a plan for the inauguration of a National Motion Picture Day, and that you have designated me as Chairman of the Committee. I desire to express my approval of the plan and to place my energy and efforts at your disposal for the promotion of this important idea. I feel that I can safely pledge you the full support of the M. P. T. O. of Arkansas, although the organization does not convene until the first Monday in October. At that time I shall place the matter before the membership and feel certain that you may count upon favorable action."

Nebraska is already at work. Exhibitors throughout the state have been named as chairmen for the various districts and the Nebraska state headquarters are already anticipating great success for the day.

Stage Hands in St. Louis Demand Increases

STAGE hands in all St. Louis theatres have demanded wage increases from 18 to 50 per cent. The St. Louis Theatrical Managers' Association have asked for a conference on the question. The stage hands at the Gayety theatre were recently granted an increase of 35 per cent. A committee from the St. Louis Theatrical Brotherhood called upon Manager Oscar Dane September 6 and demanded the raise. It applies to stage carpenters, electricians, property hands, stage hands and flymen.

An agreement between the motion picture operators' union and the St. Louis motion picture theatre owners was recently entered into whereby the operators were granted a slight increase in wages. The increase became effective on September 1.

Orient Shows Improving, Says Vignola

"The exhibition of motion pictures is beginning to be taken seriously in the Orient, thanks to American trade papers," says Robert G. Vignola, who recently completed a six months' tour of the world.

"Until quite recently," said Mr. Vignola, "the cinemas, as they call them out there, rendered programs that consisted wholly of motion pictures and a tin-panny piano much the same as we had here fifteen years ago. Then the foreign exhibitors, who are always the first to bring out innovations, decided that there must be something more in exhibition than merely showing an assortment of pictures, and so they began to make improvements.

"It seems that the American trade papers are doing the propaganda work. Unwilling to be left behind, the exhibitors in the Orient vie with one another in an effort to better their theatres, taking their ideas from the American trade papers. Because they are still new at the exhibition game as it is played in America, they indulge in a lot of copying but they also have ideas of their own and from what I've seen I should say they need not take a back seat for any one."

Coast Conference to Draft Income Tax Rules

In order to establish an equitable basis upon which income tax laws may be standardized in the industry, a committee has been appointed by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair to discuss the problem with producers in a Los Angeles session.

Harold Bottomly of the income tax body is chairman of the commission, the other members of which are, Robert J. Service, head of the sub-committee on appeals and review: C. P. Smith, former assistant to the Internal Revenue collector and Roy Russell of the Internal Revenue staff.

Rules will be devised whereby costs of production will be properly charged off against income so that a thorough check of profits and losses may more readily be ascertained.

Broadway Houses Increase Matinee Prices

Broadway picture houses have quietly increased matinee admission prices five cents to help meet the increased cost of operation. The matinee scale at the big first run houses is now 55 cents for the orchestra and 35 cents for the balcony.

At the Capitol theatre the divans are now $1.10 in the afternoon and $1.65 in the evening.

The Loew circuit has increased prices on an average of 5 cents in all its theatres. The new scale went into effect Labor Day. It is said that the Loew circuit has also put through an average increase of about 5 cents. No changes were made by the Moss office except for certain box seats at the Flatbush in Brooklyn.

Albany Grants Charters to New Companies

Companies entering the motion picture business in New York State during the past week, showed the following capitalization and directors, according to these papers of incorporation: Efrem Zimbalist, Inc., $500, Joseph L. Greenberg, Joseph M. Berk, Martha Tischler, New York City; Danube Film Corporation, Buffalo, $10,000, Michael Kosztin, George Takaos, Buffalo: Julius Zakany, Lackawanna; Columbus Cinema Production Co., Inc., $5,000, M. Scalya Minolfi, Mario A. Sola, Alfred Gandolfi, New York; Sims Amusement Corporation, $5,000, Jonas and Mary Sims, New York; L. D. Adolph, Brooklyn; Kelly and Company, Inc., $5,000, Harry A. Kelly, Edward G. Gonzales, F. A. Lavin, New York; Foto Topics, Inc., $10,000, Harold and Charles A. Stein, William T. Hennessy, New York.

Protest Admission Raises in Wilmington

The Wilmington Central Labor Union at Wilmington, Delaware, is reported to object to the announced policy of Wilmington film theatres to raise the scale of admissions for all performances, starting this fall. They point to the replacing of orchestras by organs, and the case of the Queen and other James N. Ginns theatres, where three or four piece orchestras have been substituted for the regulation Symphony orchestra, cutting of house staffs, and similar economies.

House Managers Operators When Regulars Strike

Stage hands and operators of the three picture houses at Alton, Ill., went on strike September 15 when the managements refused to sign a new wage scale providing increases of from 80 cents to $1 an hour. The owners agreed to advance wages 5 cents an hour, but the workers declined to accept this, and walked out.

The theatre managers and their assistants will operate their machines and keep the shows running until the operators agree to work on the terms offered them.

Compromise Averts Strike in Jersey Houses

Northern New Jersey exhibitors have averted a strike of musicians, operators, stage hands and bill posters by the granting of wage increases of from ten to fifteen per cent. The negotiations were concluded between the thirty-four theatre owners of Hudson County and four hundred workers.

Indiana Calls Exhibitor Conference

Mich., Ill. and Wis. are Invited

INVITATIONS for a conference of four Western exhibitor organizations have been issued by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, to be held sometime in October, probably at French Lick Springs.

Officers and members of the Board of Directors of the M.P.T.O. of Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota have been asked to attend as guests of the Indiana organization. This action was determined upon at a joint meeting of the Indiana Board and the State Congressional Committee held at the Hotel Severin, Indianapolis, September 13.

President Frank G. Heller, of Kokomo, and G. G. Schmidt, of Indianapolis, Chairman of the Hoosier State Board, were authorized to extend invitations, and to appoint a committee of two to arrange for the conference. William Conners, of Marion, Secretary of the Indiana unit, and Nathaniel Bernstein, of Michigan City, Ind., member of the Indiana Board, were named.

The official notice of the decision to call the conference, sent to MOTION PICTURE NEWS by Mr. Bernstein, does not contain any statement as to the purpose of the meeting.

A telegram from the Indianapolis correspondent of THE NEWS, under date of September 18, says: "The Board of Directors of the M.P.T.O. of Indiana, meeting in Indianapolis late last week, fully indorsed the proposed exhibitors' distributing corporation and approved the calling by President Heller of representatives of the boards of Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan and Minnesota at either French Lick or Indianapolis late in October.

To Discuss T.O.D.C.

"The Interstate Conference will discuss the distributing corporation and other means of bringing down film prices.

"The meeting was called upon the suggestion of the Illinois organization.

"The Indiana directors emphatically stated that, while an Interstate body may grow out of the coming conference, this is not to be taken as an indication that there are any differences with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. An official stated that any action taken would be in line with the policies of the national body. A meeting of all members of the M.P.T.O. of Indiana may be called in November to discuss the results of the Interstate Conference."

As is well known, the Michigan and Minnesota organizations have officially withdrawn from the M.P.T.O.A. and surrendered their charters. Whether they would accept the Indiana invitation was not known at press time.

In view of the fact that two of the states invited are not members of the national organization, interest in the proposed conference was heightened when it became known that the M.P.T.O. of New York, also an "insurgent" unit, had not been invited.

"I have nothing to say, further than that I have not resigned," was the comment of W. D. Burford, secretary of the Midwest Theatres, Inc., of Chicago, in regard to reports that he planned to resign, both as secretary of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation and as a director of the M. P. T. O. A.

Burford Not Out

Mr. Burford, when seen, had just returned from La Cheneaux Islands, where he has been vacationing in an effort to cure a bad cold, and said that he had been out of touch with business and organization matters during that time and had not been back sufficiently long to comment at length on the report.

The recently published denial of J. J. Rubens, acting secretary, and B. A. Lucas, treasurer, of the Midwest Theatres, Inc., that this company was in any way affiliated with the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation, was absolutely correct according to Mr. Burford, who said, however, that he personally and others connected with the Midwest Theatres, Inc., had substantial interests in the Theatre Owners' Corporation.

Mr. Burford has been one of the most active of Illinois theatre men in state and national exhibitor organization affairs and has been known as a staunch supporter of Sydney S. Cohen ever since the inception of the M.P.T.O.A.

Quad-Cities Exhibitors Form Organization

MOTION picture theatre owners of the cities of Davenport, Iowa; Rock Island, Moline and East Moline, Illinois, held a meeting in Rock Island last Monday afternoon and organized the Quad-Cities Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association. It was decided to hold all regular meetings on the first Monday afternoon of each month, all other meetings to be called by the president or executive committee.

The election of officers resulted as follows: Joseph Hopp, Rock Island, president; John Koletis, Rock Island, vice-president; H. S. Earl, Davenport, recording and corresponding secretary; Charles Carpentier, East Moline, financial secretary; Julius Geertz, Davenport, treasurer. The following members were elected to serve on the executive committee: Barney Brotman, Moline, chairman; Ralph Blank, Davenport; Ernest Lynch, Moline; Milton Overman, Davenport; C. N. Petrie, East Moline, and Harry Pabst, Davenport.

Five Houses in Syracuse Increase Prices

In order to meet increasing costs from film rentals, and wage demands from employees, five motion picture theatres in Syracuse, N. Y., will immediately increase the price of admission. It is expected that other houses in the city will fall in line within a few days.

The five theatres to announce increased prices are the Strand, the Eckel, Empire, Temple and Keith's. At the Strand and the Eckel, an admission of 40 cents to the main floor and 25 to the balcony, will prevail at the evening, Sunday and holiday shows, while the matinees from Monday to Friday, will be 25 cents for the lower floor and 15 cents for the balcony, with Saturday matinees at 30 cents for the main floor and 20 cents on the balcony. The theatres have recently granted demands for increased wages to the musicians, operators and stage hands.

Kansas Exhibitors Enthuse Over Convention

Through co-operation between the M.P.T.O. Kansas and the exchanges of Kansas City, every shipment of film into Kansas bears a card, 2x6 inches, worded: "Arrange to attend the Fifth Semi-annual Convention of the M.P.T.O. Kansas at the Hotel Broadview, Wichita, Kas., September 24 and 25."

Never before has more interest preceded a convention in Kansas than the one approaching. The admission tax, the Kansas labor law, dealing with Sunday openings, and the music tax are the hub around which enthusiasm and onfidence on the part of exhibitors centers. There will be no election of officers this month—only business vitally important to the interest of Kansas exhibitors.

Shapiro Elected President of A.M.P.A.

VICTOR SHAPIRO was elected president of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at the meeting held September 13. Other officers were elected as follows:

A. M. Botsford, vice-president.
C. W. Barrell, secretary.
Arthur M. Brilant, treasurer.

Board of Directors: P. A. Parsons, Herbert Crooker, Thomas G. Wiley, Walter Eberhardt, Jerome Beatty, John C. Flinn, Howard Dietz, Harry L. Reichenbach, and C. L. Yearsley. Chancellor, U. S. Chamber of Commerce: A. L. Selig.

In the absence of the outgoing president, Mr. Flinn, who is in Europe, the year's activities were reviewed by Mr. Shapiro. His report showed the organization in splendid condition, with a larger surplus in the treasury than ever before.

Telling the Story of the Fifth Film

Photography by L. C. Moen, M. P. N. Staff

Irving Greene, all dressed up like a British polo player, caught walking away from a shot. P. S.—Note the hose.

The two frames at the top show Irving Lesser as one of the interested spectators. Below him is Felix Feist, of whom we shall have more to say.

Felix Feist didn't know the camera was watching as he executed this jubilant fandango after a long drive, but here it is.

And here we have Wallace W. Ham and Albert Gray, snapped at the water-hole. Not being an actor, Mr. Ham is no camera "hog."

Babe Ruth may be the Sultan of Swat, but the eye of the camera shows Elmer Pearson to be the Duke of Drive.

The club wasn't really defective, but it gave the cameraman a chance to catch Wallace W. Ham and C. Graham Baker in a semi-closeup.

E. A. Eschmann stepping out to whack the rubber pellet toward the 19th hole as speedily as possible.

In the top frame you will observe the little pill—but immediately below, the mighty "Pat" Powers has propelled far on its way.

Golf Tournament with Pictures

Taken With a Sept Camera

M. E. Kraus, trick hat and all, forgets the advertising manager that are on his heels for their 11 x 14's, while absorbed in the intricacies of golf.

R. V. Anderson, in charge of selling International News, lends his pictorial presence to M. P. News' own news weekly.

Carroll Dunning insisted on being pictured in Prizma color, but we finally persuaded him that black and white was the best we could afford.

Ben Verschlieser, who left the Grand Asher studios on the coast to other management while he participated in Filmdom's big tournament.

P. S. Alden was busy chasing around the course most of the day, but the cameraman caught him in a moment of repose.

Here is our boss and Arthur S. Kane. This is not an editorial pose.

And here, amidst the lovely sylvan dells and glades, is Arthur S. Kane, just about to address the ball.

The intense strain of play over, Arthur S. has just told a good one he heard at the Astor. W. A. J. is laughing outright.

A Great Day In Film Circles

The Lake just this side of the clubhouse was raised 5 inches by the golf balls which were popped into it on Tuesday.

W. E. Atkinson took the day off from working on plans for "Scaramouche" and came out with the Metro contingent.

Boy, Howdy! Talk about ACTION! Look at this shot of Albert L. Grey! Note the lock of hair and the determined attitude of the cigar.

And right next to him is Charlie Moyer, looking like a regular professional, ready to whack the gizzard, or whatever it is golf balls have, cut of the pellet.

It was a dirty trick to snap E. K. Gillette in this unconventional pose, but we had to get variety in some way.

Tom Moore left the amusement-loving public of Washington to its own devices for the day, and came up to get in the swim.

No, Gwynevere, this is not a man doubled up with a "tummy ache"—it's Bernhard Benson caught in one of the strange poses the camera reveals.

C. W. Deibel was another of the exhibitors who made the pilgrimage to show the producers they didn't have everything their own way.

"Wild Oranges" Delayed by Second Mishap

KING VIDOR and his company, making "Wild Oranges" from Joseph Hergesheimer's novel for Goldwyn Pictures, have been delayed by another accident. Charles A. Post, who acts the part of the giant villain in the picture, sustained a broken wrist in the fight scene with Frank Mayo.

James Kirkwood, who acted the role that Frank Mayo is now playing when the exteriors were taken in Georgia, and who was compelled to leave the cast soon after the company's return to the studio as a result of a fractured skull sustained by a fall from a horse, is progressing favorably.

"U" Manager in Panama Ends N. Y. Visit

Henry W. Zeilmaker, Universal's manager for Central America, the West Indies and parts of South America, who has been in New York for a brief stay, bas just sailed for Porto Rico to resume work. After swinging around the West Indies, he will proceed to his headquarters in Colon, Panama.

His territory is a varied one, each country having a special preference as to its film entertainment.

Universal has several theatres in this territory in which it tries out pictures, notably the Metropolitan theatre in Caracas, Venezuela, and the Olympia in Bogota, Colombia. In these theatres, the audiences themselves form the critical body, and loudly voice their approval or disapproval of the show.

First National October Releases

"Ashes of Vengeance" Tops List of Heaviest Month's Program of Year

STARTING with "Ashes of Vengeance," Norma Talmadge's ten-reel production, First National has scheduled six releases for tbe month of October. This marks the heaviest First National program of any month during the present year.

Following "Ashes of Vengeance" Sam Rork's production of "Ponjola," directed by Donald Crisp, will be released. Then comes "The Bad Man," Edwin Carewe's screen version of the stage play, starring Holbrook Blinn. "The Meanest Man in the World," the Principal Pictures production; "Thundergate," a Chinese-American drama directed by Joseph de Grasse; and "The Wanters," a John M. Stahl production presented by Louis B. Mayer, follow in order.

"Ashes of Vengeance" is adapted to the screen from an English novel which will shortly be published in this country. It presents Norma Talmadge in the stellar role as a proud French maiden of the sixteenth century and offers Conway Tearle in an important part opposite her. Frank Lloyd directed it. It has had two pre-release runs at legitimate houses. At the Apollo theatre, New York, it started a four weeks' engagement on August 6, and at the Roosevelt theatre in Chicago it opened on August 26. Its cast includes, in addition to the star and Mr. Tearle, Wallace Beery, Josephine Crowell, Betty Francisco, Claire McDowell, Courtney Foote, Howard Truesdell, Jeanne Carpenter and Andre de Beranger.

Cynthia Stockley has created a best seller in "Ponjola," which in screen form is enacted by a cast headed by Anna Q. Nilsson, James Kirkwood and Tully Marshall. It is a story of South African life, with Miss Nilsson in the difficult role of a girl who masquerades as a boy to save her lover's life. Others in the cast are Joseph Kilgour, Claire McDowell, Claire DeBrey and Bernard Randall.

In "The Bad Man" Holbrook Blinn reenacts the role that he made famous for an entire year on Broadway and for two seasons on tour. It is Edwin Carewe's third First National picture. In the cast are Holbrook Blinn, Jack Mulhull, Enid Bennett, Walter McGrail, Harry Myers, through the courtesy of Warner Brothers, Stanton Heck, Teddy Sampson and others.

"The Meanest Man in the World" is an adaptation of tbe George M. Cohan play, the screen rights of which were purchased by Sol Lesser, president of Principal Pictures. Its cast is headed by Bert Lytell, Blanche Sweet and Bryant Washburn. Eddie Cline directed.

Sylvia Breamer, Owen Moore, Virginia Brown Faire, Tully Marshall, Robert McKim and Malcolm McGregor head the cast of "Thundergate." The story is by Sidney Herschel Small and was originally published under the title "The Lord of Thundergate."

"The Wanters" is the work of John M. Stahl. It was adapted by J. G. Hawks and Paul Bern from Leola Burton Wells' story of the same name. Heading the cast are Marie Prevost, Robert Ellis, Norma Shearer, Gertrude Astor, Huntley Gordon, Richard Headrick, Lincoln Stedman, Lillian Langdon, Louise Fazenda, Hank Mann, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Vernon Steele, Harold Goodwin and William Buckley. It is a society drama of present-day American life.

Eckman Joins Home Office Staff of Goldwyn

S. Eckman, Jr., for several years Resident Manager of Goldwyn's New York exchange, and more recently District Manager for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan in the New York, Buffalo and Albany territory, has joined the Goldwyn home office executive forces. He has been placed in charge of the Eastern Sales Division, formerly presided over by J. E. Flynn. He will assume his duties on September 17th.

F.B.O. Opens Six Offices in Canada

Establishes Twelve Territorial Sub-Offices With Special Representatives

WHAT purposes to be one of the biggest deals closed by the Film Booking Offices since their inception less than eighteen months ago was closed this week with the opening of six additional F. B. O. exchanges in Canada to handle its product.

In addition to the six offices the F. B. O. also established twelve territorial sub-offices under special representatives. The deal for the Canadian distribution was closed with the Associated Exhibitors of Canada and calls for the merging of this entire working organization to handle the F. B. O. output. From the standpoint of the Film Booking Offices this working merger with the Associated Exhibitors means the distribution of over one hundred additional prints on all their subjects and also the direct supervision of its territorial advertising and exploitation in Canada.

Exploitation men will be planted in the principal key cities and work under the supervision of Nat. G. Rothstein while the direction of sales for our northern neighbors will be directed by the F. B. O. home office sales department under the supervision of H. M. Berman.

As a result of the merger, over three hundred additional employes have been added to the roster of the F. B. O.

The following is a list of the territorial representatives and managers in Canada who will handle the physical distribution of the F. B. O., R-C and Powers product (Associated Exhibitors of Canada) W. E. Allen, St. John, N. B.; Phil Hazza, Montreal, Quebec; J. Macklin, Montreal, Quebec; F. R. Lennon, Toronto, Ontario; James Davidson, Toronto, Ontario; A. W. Perry, Toronto, Ontario; J. Ruck, Toronto, Ontario; C. A. Garner, Toronto, Ontario; J. L. Hunter, Toronto, Ontario; Geo. A. Graham, Winnipeg, Canada; (Canadian Educational Film Limited) T. H. Davey, East Calgary, Alberta; C. R. Dippie, Vancouver, B. C.

Pathe Names New Southern Branch Manager

H. J. Bayley, well known in Southern and Middle Western trade circles, has been appointed as branch manager of Pathe's New Orleans exchange. Mr. Bayley comes to Pathe from Associated First National Pictures, with whom he has been associated for the past year as the branch manager of the First National Dallas office.

Mr. Bayley has been in the film business for over fifteen years and has had an extensive experience in both the theatre and exchange branches of the industry.

Wallace Beery Signed For "Drums of Jeopardy"

Wallace Beery is to have the heavy role in "The Drums of Jeopardy," the second Elaine Hammerstein production which Edward Dillon is directing for Truart. He will play the role of the secret emissary of the Russian Government and leader of a band of fanatics in America.

"Alimony" is among the latest of the F. B. O. Attractions. These scenes are from the production.

"Potash, Perlmutter" in N. Y. Strand for Run

SAMUEL GOLDWYN'S screen version of "Potash and Perlmutter" will occupy the screen of the Strand theatre in New York for an indefinite run beginning September 23rd.

The showing at the Strand will be the official New York premiere, although Mr. Goldwyn has pre-viewed the picture in three different suburban houses, each with a different type of audience.

The only other previous showing of the picture was at Guy Wonders' Rivoli theatre, Baltimore, where the picture opened on September 10th.

Simultaneous with the New York premiere "Potash and Perlmutter" will start its run at the Chicago, theatre, Chicago.

Goldwyn Publicity Man Writes Book

A new book by Lebbeus H. Mitchell, author of "The Circus Comes to Town" and "Bobby in Search of a Birthday," and who is in charge of the motion picture trade journal publicity for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has just been published by the Century Company. The book is a dog story called, "Here, Tricks, Here!"

Barry Cayliss, aged nine, finds a stray Boston bulldog in the park one day and names him Tricks because of the various tricks it can perform. The dog is later stolen by a band of dog-stealers and, when recovered, through the pluck and daring of his master, is claimed by his owner, a vaudeville actor. How the dog is finally returned to the boy forms the appealing climax of the story.

Universal Prepares For "Pony Express"

Preparations are under way at Universal City for the beginning of work on what is to be a historical Western picture of the Pony Express era. Hoot Gibson is to be starred in it. The picture will be called "The Pony Express."

The story is being prepared under the direction of Bernard McConville.

A cast to support Gibson and a director to handle the picture have not yet been selected. It is probable that Edward Sedgwick will direct.

Export, Import Announce Foreign Sales

Export & Import Film Company has just announced the sale of their entire program of releases for the Cubau territory. Negotiations which were pending for their pictures in Continental Europe were consummated in the closing of a contract this week.

Mr. Auerbach of Export & Import states that with the exception of Japan, the foreign market is in unusually good shape for this season of the year.

Dustin Farnum Completes "The Grail"

F. B. O. Announces Three October Releases

THE FILM BOOKING OFFICES announce that three special releases will be made during the month of October. The first will be Hunt Stromberg's feature length comedy featuring Bull Montana, entitled "Breaking Into Society," which will have its general release on the 14th.

"Lights Out," a comedy drama written by Mann Page and Paul Dickey, in which Ruth Stonehouse stages a comeback to the screen, will be released on the 21st.

The principal F. B. O. release for the month is William P. S. Earle's "The Dancer of the Nile," scheduled for release on October 14th, but changed until the 26th to allow for a greater advance publicity campaign.

New Tarkington Story Is in Production

Production has been started by J. K. McDonald at the United studios on an original story written for the screen by Booth Tarkington. McDonald is the producer of "Penrod and Sam," a current First National picture.

The new Tarkington story has been tentatively titled "Misunderstood." It is being produced for First National.

Ben Alexander, the ten-year old youngster, has been assigned to an important part in the new production.

Mr. McDonald has secured the services of William Beaudine to direct. The cast, incomplete to date, includes Rockliffe Fellows, Henry B. Walthall, and Irene Rich.

Dinky Dean Feature for Early Release

The first picture starring the child actor Dinky Dean, will be released within the next few weeks by Selznick, according to David R. Blyth, sales and distribution director. The definite title decided upon is "A Prince of a King."

The picture was made on the Coast by Z. A. Stegmuller and was directed by Albert Austin.

Warner Sales Contest Is Under Way

Prizes to Be Awarded Exchange Salesmen Closing Most Bona Fide Contracts

WARNER BROTHERS sales contest is rapidly hitting its stride, with results already showing in the contract department, according to word from the Warner offices. Over $2,500 is to be distributed among the most successful salesmen.

The contest began September 14th, and runs sixty days, closing November 15th. It was created to stimulate the sales of the Warners' eighteen features and to encourage the men to add impetus to their efforts for the new Fall season.

Each block of territory has been rated by the distributor controlling the territory, with the amount of business that territory is normally expected to do during this contest. The total revenue expected in each man's territory represents 1,000 points in the contest for the salesman working that territory. If the salesman exceeds the amount expected he is given credit in points in the same ratio. Thus, if a salesman's quota is $100,000 and he writes $50,000 he earns 500 points—if he writes $100,000 he earns 1,000 points—and if he writes $150,000 he earns 1,500 points and so on in the same ratio.

The fifteen men having the highest number of points at the end of the contest will be awarded the prizes in the order of their standing.

A gentleman's diamond studded, platinum watch, worth $1,000, heads the list of prizes in the contest, and other prizes, following in succession, are a diamond ring, a diamond tie pin, diamond cuff links, a Westinghouse R. C. Radio Set, complete with tubes, phone, and batteries, a Grayflex Camera, a Hartman or Belber trunk, two travelling bags, completely equipped, an Underwood or Corona portable typewriter, and five leather brief cases.

The words "bona fide" have been stressed in the instructions to the sales force, particular emphasis being made that this type of contract is one of the conditions of the contest. That is, contracts passed and accepted at the Warner Home Office carry the understanding that local film boards will back up the stand in expecting exhibitors to live up to the obligations of their contracts as to play dates, and so on. An adjustment will not be considered on these bona fide contracts applying the use of next year's product.

In order to place salesmen from all sections of the country on an equitable and fair basis, quotas have been arranged for each territorial block, and where business has been written prior to start a contest, it will be deducted from the quota set for the block in which it was written. In this way, all the contestants will start from scratch.

"America" Title Chosen for Griffith Picture

"America" is the title selected for D. W. Griffith's Revolutionary film, which he is preparing to make at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Paul Rainey Dies Suddenly at Sea

PAUL J. RAINEY, big game hunter, explorer and famous as the producer of the "African Hunt Pictures," died suddenly on the steamship Saxon en route from Southampton, England, to South Africa, and was buried at sea, September 18. He was forty-six years old.

Mr. Rainey was one of the best known of the hunters for big game, and filmed several of his expeditions. These pictures were very popular a few years ago and drew large patronage throughout the country.

Boston Premiere of "Hunchback"

Openings in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Shortly

"THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME" held its second premiere on September 17 at the Tremont Temple theatre, Boston, before a brilliant audience, which included many of the society folk of the Hub.

The Tremont Temple is the largest theatre in Boston, and, according to Universal, this is the first time it has been packed from the second gallery to the last box seat.

To give some idea of the brilliant audience, it might be mentioned that Lieut. Gov. Fuller and party occupied one of the boxes; others were Emil Mollenhauer, leader of the Handel-Hayden Society and the Apollo Club, the two biggest musical organizations in the city, and his party; E. H. Southworth, secretary to the governor, and his party, Col. Foote, John E. McGarr, D. E. Gillen, W. C. Adams, all prominent city or state officers, and scores of other city and state notables.

Many compliments were paid the symphony orchestra of thirty pieces. The Boston opening was made with the same elaborate presentation that marked the world premiere at the Astor. H. Elliot Stuckel handled it for J. V. Bryson, managing "The Hunchback" presentations.

The next "Hunchback" opening will be in Pittsburgh, where a premiere will be held Monday afternoon, September 24, in the Pitt theatre. The same unusual presentation and special music which marked the New York and Boston openings will be featured in Pittsburgh, and during the following week in Philadelphia, where "The Hunchback" will be presented in the Chestnut Street Opera House October 1. In each of these cities, as in New York and Boston, the picture is scheduled for a long run. Openings are planned in Baltimore later in October, and in Washington early in November.

Wolf Appointed Goldwyn Boston Manager

M. A. Wolf has succeeded C. W. Perry, as Resident Manager of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's branch exchange in Boston. Mr. Wolf was for several years Resident Manager of the Goldwyn exchange in Los Angeles where his long continued and consistently good work, made many friends for Goldwyn pictures and won his promotion to the Boston office.

The Boston exchange is now located in a building all its own at 39 Church street. It removed to its new headquarters from 43 Piedmont street early in September.

Goldwyn Studio Luncheon for von Stroheim

A luncheon was given at the Goldwyn studio on Wednesday of last week in honor of Director Erich von Stroheim, making "Greed" from Frank Norris' "McTeague," at which all of the newspaper and magazine writers in Los Angeles were present.

Another Auto Story Due for Wally Van

If present plans mature the Regents Pictures Corporation, producer of the "Drivin' Fool" will make arrangements to star Wally Van in another story of speed, pep, and automobiles.

Norma Talmadge to Appear in "Romeo and Juliet"

"ROMEO AND JULIET" will be produced on the screen with Norma Talmadge in the role of the maid of the house of Capulet. It will be a First National release.

The selection of a Romeo will be made with infinite care. Joseph Schildkraut, now playing opposite Miss Talmadge in "Dust of Desire," is a possible selection.

This great love story has already been picturized seven times and produced on the stage throughout the world perennially since the seventeenth century.

It will be recalled that in 1916 two film productions of "Romeo and Juliet" appeared on the screens of America—one produced with Francis X. Bushman and Beverley Bayne, and the other with Theda Bara in the leading role.

The popularity of the play as screen material dates back to 1913, when the first film production of the Shakesperian romance was turned out in two reels by Pathe.

Only recently Miss Talmadge led all rivals by a large majority in a voting contest conducted by the New York Daily News to select the most popular actress for a screen production of the play.

Each Picture a Separate Unit, Anderson Plan

Each picture distributed by Anderson Pictures Corporation will be handled as a separate unit, according to a statement issued this week from the offices of Carl Anderson, president of the organization.

It says: "This policy is fundamental to our conception of exhibitor service. It applies to every element of our plan and holds particularly for our ideas of exploitation. Every picture we handle will be based on a definite idea of exploitation and publicity. The basic theme of our productions will of necessity contain this publicity possibility in order to receive consideration. Throughout every detail of production the publicity, advertising and exploitation angles will be given special consideration in order to build into the finished pictures every possible bit of selling value for the exhibitors."

F. B. O. Des Moines Branch To Serve State

Transferring of Iowa accounts of the Minneapolis Film Booking Offices exchange to the company's Des Moines branch is under way and will be completed by October 1. The move is being made to facilitate service throughout Iowa. As a result, the Des Moines branch will have its allotment of prints increased. When the transfer is completed, the Des Moines branch will serve the entire state.

"The Way Men Love" Is New Dexter Title

"The Way Men Love" is the title of Elliott Dexter's first production for Grand-Asher, which R. William Neill is producing at the Grand studio. The working title was "The Man Who Forgave."

Ray June is at the camera and Jo Sternberg is assistant director. Mildred Harris is the leading woman. Anders Randolf, C. Jennings, Sydney Bracey, Grace Carlisle, and Jeanne Carpenter complete the cast.

Ed Supple Joins Pathe's Publicity Staff

Ed Supple, formerly of the Motion Picture News, has moved his typewriter over to the Pathe publicity offices.

Having been Assistant Managing Editor of the Motion Picture News, and having conducted the Short Subject Department of that publication, Mr. Supple, by training and experience, is admirably fit to handle the trade paper and newspaper work of the Pathe organization, under the direction of Victor M. Shapiro, Exploitation Manager.

Mr. Supple succeeds Curtis Dunham, who resigned to accept the position of Publicity Director of the Chronicles of America Pictures Corporation, which organization is producing a series of thirty-three photoplays of American history to be released by Pathe, one every four weeks.

Hodkinson Makes Changes in Personnel

Hodkinson announces that G. A. Falkner, sales manager of the Buffalo office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has been transferred to the Washington, D. C., branch as sales manager. W. H. Wagnner, salesman in the Buffalo territory, will succeed Mr. Falkner as branch sales manager of that office.

The title of H. P. Rhodes has been changed from office manager to assistant manager.

Ingram, Alice Terry Plan European Tour

Rex Ingram and Alice Terry plan a three months' tour of Europe after the New York premiere of "Scaramouche" September 24. Research work for his production of Wasserman's "The World's Illusion" will occupy the director's attention.

"Scaramouche" World Premiere Held

Newest Rex Ingram Picture Viewed by Official Washington at Opening Performance

AMID brilliant surroundings, Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche," a Metro Picture, adapted from Rafael Sabatini's novel, opened at the Shubert-Belasco theatre in Washington for an extended run on the evening of September 15.

The premiere of "Scaramouche" proved an event of international importance, for members of the various Embassies and Legations occupied the boxes and Washington and New York society people filled the orchestra and mezzanine floors.

Through the courtesy of Marcus Loew, the initial performance was given under the auspices of the Washington Chapter of the American Red Cross, the proceeds going to the Red Cross Fund for the Japanese disaster victims. As an added attraction, Mischa Elman, world-famed violinist, played after the showing of the picture. Rex Ingram went to Washington from New York especially to be present. Introduced by District of Columbia Commissioner Rudolph as "a director and producer who is raising the standard of motion pictures," Mr. Ingram made a short speech of appreciation. This was the first time the producer had ever made a personal appearance, and the crowds showed their appreciation by enthuiastic applause. Mr. Ingram occupied the French Ambassador's box during the performance and Mr. Elman occupied the Japanese Ambassador's box.

"Scaramouche" held the crowded theatre from beginning to end. There was a tense silence as its dramatic story of "love for a woman and vengeance for a friend" was unfolded and when the intermission came, a great burst of applause swept the house.

After Ingram's speech, Charles Henry Butler, a prominent lawyer of Washington, stood up and said:

"We have paid popular prices to see this magnificent performance and to hear Mischa Elman. I do not believe we have done our share. We should pay more. I for one am going to leave fifty dollars at the box office." After the showing, Ambassador Hanihara said: "Marvelous! Truly a magnificent motion picture. I sat almost spellbound." Similar sentiments were expressed by other diplomatic representatives.

The theatre was appropriately decorated for the occasion, American, Japanese and French flags predominating. The boxes contained parties from the following embassies and legations: Belgium, Great Britain, Italy, Japan, Peru, Argentina, Norway, Cuba, Roumania, Persia, Panama, Poland, Siam, Czecho-Slovakia,, and Switzerland.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and guests also were in a box, as were Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, manager of the Washington Red Cross; Commissioner Rudolph and others. Occupying seats in the orchestra were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and a party.

M. J. Kavanaugh, who is handling the "Scaramouche" companies for Metro, and Paul Burger went from New York to witness the Washington premiere. Leon Victor was the Metro special representative in charge of all arrangements for the showing, and assisting him were Col. J. P. Brady and J. M. Loughborough.

A symphony orchestra furnished a musical synchrony especially arranged by Ernest Luz, musical director for Metro. The orchestra was conducted by Chester Smith.

"Scaramouche" will receive an extended run in Baltimore, starting next week. Col. Brady spent several days in consultation with the Whitehurst and other Loew connections in Baltimore, to arrange details of the showing. It was announced at the Metro offices in Washington that the showing in Baltimore would be in the Academy of Music, and the scale of admission $1.50 top.

The New York premiere will be held early in October.

Dwan Starts "Big Brother" For Paramount

Tom Moore, as Mike Donovan, heads the cast. Joe King will be "Big Ben" Murray, Raymond Hatton will have the role of "Cokey" Miller and little Mickey Bennett will play Midge Murray. Other members of the cast have not yet been chosen.

Paul Sloane translated the story for the screen and Hal Rosson is the chief cameraman. Dick Rosson is Mr. Dwan's assistant.

Metro Inaugurates New Department

Exchange Maintainance Staff Will Care for Physical Work of All Exchanges

A NEW department, known as the "Department of Exchange Maintenance," has been inaugurated by Metro Pictures Corporation to facilitate the physical work of Metro exchanges throughout the country. The new department has been placed under the charge of J. S. MacLeod, assistant general manager of Metro. Mr. MacLeod is now preparing a pamphlet entitled, "Standard Regulations Covering Care and Handling of Film," which will be distributed to Metro exchanges following which he will make a tour of inspection of Metro exchanges and institute a uniformity of film handling and other efficient exchange methods.

W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro has sent notice of the inauguration of this new department to all exchanges. The necessity for standardizing film handling was stressed by Mr. Atkinson who also gave a brief outline of the duties of the new department which will later be amplified to include many of the phases incidental to the business of the exchanges. Equipment, working conditions, housekeeping, handling and inspection of films, accessories, shipments, film thefts, fire prevention, are some of the duties of the new department which it will immediately exercise according to Mr. Atkinson.

Mr. MacLeod for some time has been collecting information, opinions, and advice from authoritative sources, including film distributors, raw film stock manufacturers, fire protective associations, transportation companies and others who play a part in the industry. This information plus experiments which Mr. MacLeod will make shortly, it is hoped, will bring about a uniform state of conditions which will greatly facilitate exchange methods with benefit to all concerned. The Department of Exchange Maintenance will also serve exhibitors as it deals directly with the physical side of film distribution.

Gladys Feldman in "West of Water Tower" Cast

Gladys Feldman, who plays Beulah Baxter in "Merton of the Movies," has been added to the cast of "West of the Water Tower," Glenn Hunter's first Paramount picture which is now in production at the company's Eastern studio. Miss Feldman will play the part of "Tootsie," a member of the "Gay Hottentot" troupe. Alice Mann will have the part of "Pal," another of the burlesque girls.

"Nellie, Beautiful Cloak Model" Cast Named

The screen version of Owen Davis' old stage melodrama, "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," will be Emmett Flynn's second Goldwyn production.

Claire Windsor, is cast in the role of Nellie. This is Miss Windsor's first picture since acting the lead in Marshall Neilan's "The Eternal Three." Mae Busch will also have an important part.

Edmund Lowe will play opposite Miss Windsor. Lew Cody will play the heavy.

Hobart Bosworth is also cast for an important role. Raymond Griffith is the fifth actor assigned to Mr. Flynn's company.

The director, Claire Windsor, Edmund Lowe, and Lew Cody arrived in New York City on Thursday of last week to complete preparation on the ground for the filming of the production.

T.O.D.C. Endorsed by So. California M.P.T.O.

THE Theatre Owners Distributing Corporation was endorsed by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California at a luncheon given at the Elite, Los Angeles, Sept. 12, in compliment to Carl Anderson, who will handle the distribution of the exhibitor organization.

Glenn Harper, secretary of the M. P. T. O. unit called the meeting. The plan was endorsed by various speakers, including W. W. Whitson, Harry Leonhardt, Wedgewood Nowell, the actor, and Phil Rosen, John Ince and George Sargent of the Motion Picture Directors' Association. A telegram of endorsement from the M. P. T. O. of Canada was received and read. The meeting was enthusiastic and all present expressed their confidence in the plan.

Schulberg Studios Busy with New Series

With "The Virginian" in the cutting room and "Maytime" nearing completion, the Schulberg studios are humming with activity for the start of the next series of Preferred Pictures to be produced. Tom Forman, who is supervising the editing of the Wister story, is expected to begin work within a fortnight on Kenneth Harlan's first starring vehicle, "White Man," by George Agnew Chamberlain.

Waldemar Young has completed the scenario for Robert W. Service's "Poisoned Paradise" to be filmed by Gasnier as soon as the last scenes of "Maytime" are shot. By the end of September Victor L. Schertzinger will be added to the directors now at work there and will make as his first production David Belasco's play, "The Boomerang," by Victor Mapes and Winchell Smith. Eve Unsell has completed its adaptation and the cast is now being selected.

Robert McKim has been added to the cast of "Maytime" now in production at the Schulberg studios. He will play Monte Mitchell, the heavy in the modern episode of this picturesque play by Rida Johnson Young. Cleo, the chorus girl, will be enacted by Bess True and not by Edna Tichenor as originally announced.

Fox Announces Cast for "Gentle Julia"

Fox Film Corporation announces the cast which has been selected for the production of the screen version of the "Gentle Julia" novel by Booth Tarkington.

The picture will be released under the special program and represents the first translation by Frederick and Fanny Hatton of a story for the Fox special schedule.

The title role will be played by Bessie Love. Harold Goodwin has been cast in the male lead. Frank Elliott will be the heavy. Among others in the cast are Charles K. French, Clyde Benson, Frank Nareross, Harvey Clark, Emma Tansey, Harry Dunkinson, and Jack Rollins. Rowland V. Lee will direct the special.

Carter Melodrama Will Be Fox Production

Lincoln J. Carter's "The Arizona Express," another of the author's stage successes, soon will be produced on the screen by the Fox organization.

WHAT SHOWMEN THINK OF CURRENT RELEASES

Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Hollywood—
One of the season's best. (East.)

Did fairly well on third and last week. Previously reported. (East.)

Lawful Larceny—
One of the best of its kind this season. Drew well during week run. (Middle West.)

Played to good attendance for a week. (Middle West.)

Pleasing feature with fine cast. Business fair.

The Silent Partner—
Good motion picture material. Did fine business, aided by elaborate and ambitious musical program. (East.)

Business was just ordinary. Did not have good drawing power. Star not strong enough to make the picture go. (Middle West.)

Such lucid pictorial narrative is a rarity, though it is of commonplace material, redeemed, however, by the studied work of the principals. Well liked indeed. Very good business. (East.)

To the Last Man—
Women and children didn't like all the slaughter. A fine picture, but too unpleasant to appeal to mixed audiences. (Middle West.)

A stirring picture that took well. (East.)

The Cheat—
Combination of story, star and Jack Holt made a big appeal. Went over very well. Whole production of much popularity. (East.)

Homeward Bound—

Ruggles of Red Gap—
A clean, high-class laugh-getter. Strong box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Bluebeard's Eighth Wife—
A very good picture. Did very well. (East.)

Salomy Jane—
Only did fair business on its second run here. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Circus Days—
A very fine picture. It appealed to the grown-ups and children as well. Parents brought the kiddies to see Circus Days, just as they take them to see the circus. Business good. (Middle West.)

The Isle of Conquest—
This picture re-issued did not do very well. It has already shown twice here, however. (Middle West.)

Dulcy—
The kind that Connie fans like. It is typical of her best work. Did well with it. (Middle West.)

Children of the Dust—
Good heart appeal, acting excellent. Business good. (Middle West.)

Trilby—
Famous novel makes fine picture. Interesting and held big audience. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Enemies of Women—
An average attendance with this one for a week. (Middle West.)

Went bigger than ever during second week. (Middle West.)

Six Days—
Here is one with thrills and sensation enough for all. They liked it mighty well here. Very good business. (East.)

Excellent picture—opened big and grew bigger every day. Everybody liked it. (Middle West.)

Three Wise Fools—
An exceptionally fine picture. Good business on first week. Did not go so well on second week, but a fine picture. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

Merry-Go-Round—
A money maker. Played to big crowds for two weeks. (Middle West.)

Legally Dead—
One of the best pictures. It goes big everywhere, uptown and downtown. (Middle West.)

Shadows of the North—

Drifting—
Elaborate production with many thrills. Priscilla Dean admirers asked it. Business above average. (Middle West.)

METRO

The French Doll—
Very much in the line of all Miss Murray's others. Haste is writ large over every reel. Such extravagance is, for her particular followers, no whit short of ecstasy. Went well, however. Business excellent. (East.)

This picture flopped badly. The expression of the fans was that it might be the story or it might be the star "who was just as crazy as any of them." (Middle West.)

An Old Sweetheart of Mine—
Just a fair picture. Did fairly well. (East.)

Three Ages—
Buster Best. Capacity all week. Everyone liked. (Middle West.)

Rouged Lips—
Old story well told and well acted. Average business for a light picture of this kind. (Middle West.)

Her Fatal Millions—
Just another program picture, but it did business because rest of bill strong. (East.)

Desire—
This is a picture that packs a real punch, and moreover, puts it through. Was well thought of by all houses. Business excellent. (East.)

FOX

The Eleventh Hour—
Caused a lot of comment and did a big business. East.)

A well-presented thriller that went over with our audience very well. (Middle West.)

St. Elmo—
A very fine picturization of this stirring story. Well liked. Excellent business. (East.)

Brass Commandments—
Follows the usual formula for westerns. Popularity of star put it over for satisfactory receipts. (East.)

The Capitol theatre, Detroit, used this art ad on "Circus Days" (First National)

Soft Boiled—

The Gun Fighter—
It looks to us like one of the best Farnums for some time, and it certainly held the attention of all audiences. There are some remarkable scenes and photography. Excellent business. (East.)

Stepping Fast—
Has distinction of being worst picture Tom Mix ever made. Business fair. (East.)

PATHE

Why Worry?—
Capacity of house taxed all week by this example of what a comedy should be. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The White Rose—
As good as expected. Did so well that we held it over a second week.

SELZNICK

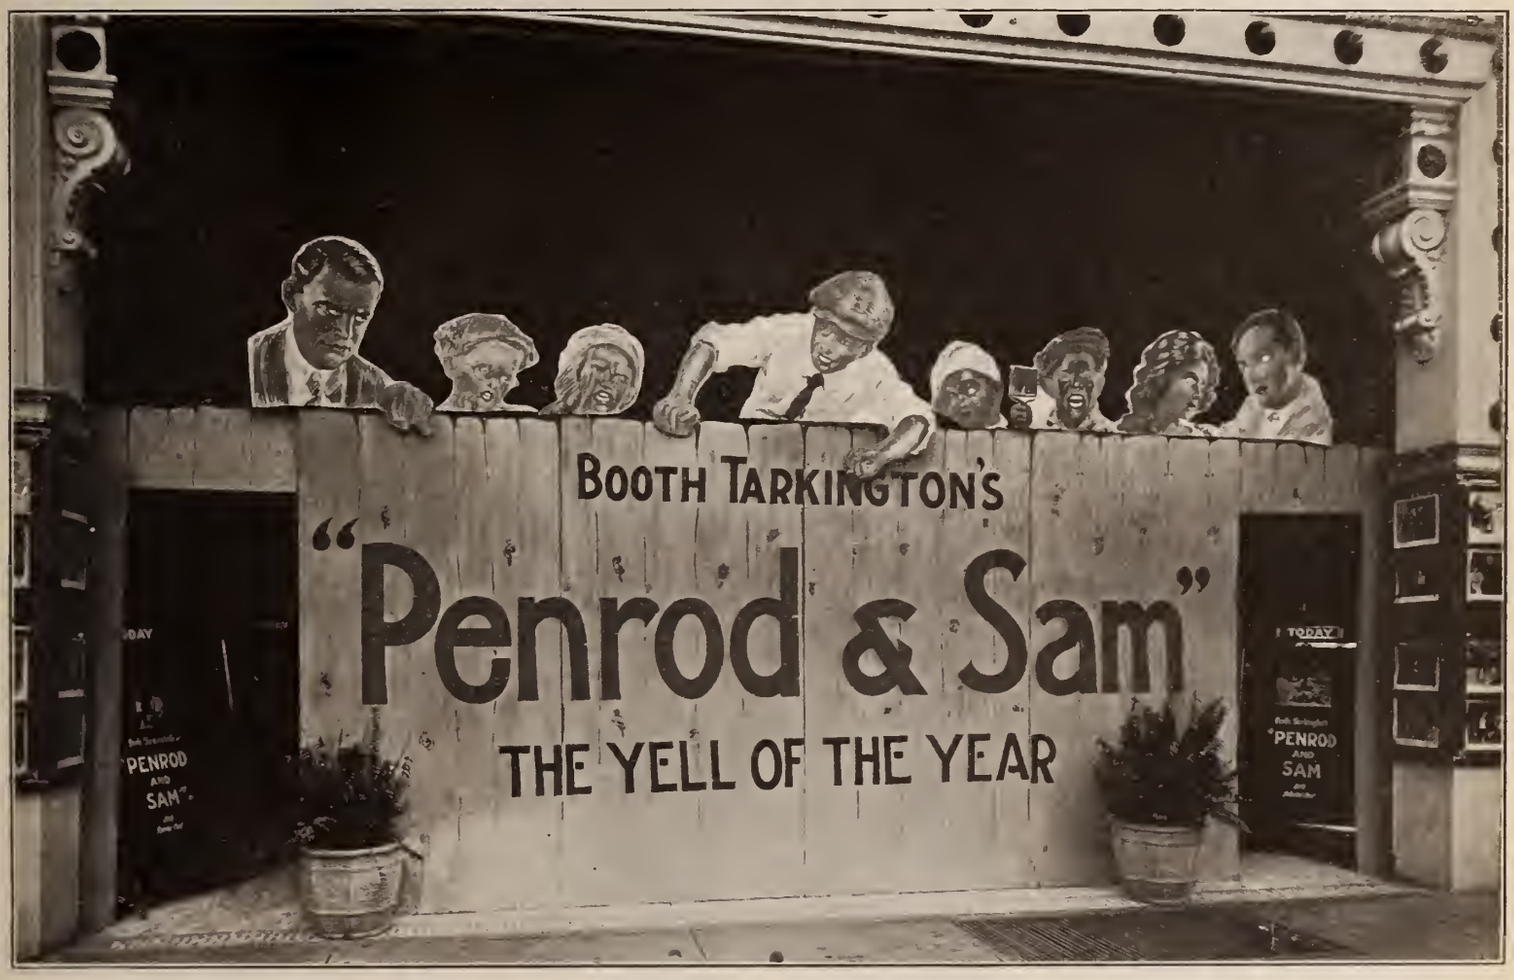
Rupert of Hentzau—
A 100 per cent audience picture. Has everything, and proved a popular attraction. Lends itself to dignified exploitation. (Middle West.)

A Veiled Adventure—
This is one of Connie Talmadge's old ones, I guess. I didn't do very well. (Middle West.)

Quicksands—
A program feature which returned a nice little dividend. (Middle West.)

Grub-Stake—
Did very nicely at theatre which does fair average on anything. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROS.



Main Street—
Though the manager didn't care for this one the picture seemed to have the ability to bring them in. It did not build up business, however. (Middle West.)

Well liked and well patronized. (East.)

Little Johnny Jones—
Did a good business for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Where the North Begins—
A story wound around one who is not only a dog but an actor as well. He takes the honors and deserves them. Very good business. (East.)

Arctic Lobbies on "The Spoilers"

Alaskan Atmosphere Is Featured in Displays to Exploit This Picture

THE Alaskan scenes in which "The Spoilers" is laid have furnished the keynote of many exploitation campaigns on this picture, lobby and marquee displays being based on this atmosphere.

Manager J. Linn, proprietor of the Virginia theatre, Fairmont, W. Va., was one of the exhibitors using this angle. Evergreen trees are plentiful in West Virginia, so Goldwynner Bill Robson, who helped him lay out his campaign for "The Spoilers," suggested that they dress the lobby with these trees.

Two pieces of ordinary 2x4 pine were nailed together, making a 4x4 timber. Every two feet a hole was drilled big enough to insert the trunk of a baby pine tree one inch in diameter and about three feet high. This kept the little trees the same distance apart, and no matter how much wind might come along would keep them erect. The proper length was arranged for each side of the marquee. Screw rings were put into the 4x4, and these were lashed to the marquee chains with ordiuary rope to keep them secure. By this means they held tight without the use of nails or screws in the building. The trees were trimmed with cotton batting and artificial snow.

Large trees were set around the lobby and on each side of the box office, which was covered with pine boughs touched up with cotton and artificial snow. The lobby lamps were dipped in green dye and snow shoes and skis were borrowed from local sportsmen to carry out the suggestion of the far North, where the action of the story takes place.

Imitation Snow Drifts

When "The Spoilers" played at Rowland & Clark's Perry theatre at Erie, Pa., Manager N. C. Wagner waged a vigorous campaign of publicity.

The marquee was hung with imitation snowdrifts. These were made by tearing in a jagged edge strips of canvas 30 inches wide, painting them to resemble driven snow, and scattering imitation snow on them which scintillated in the light.

A tie-up was effected with the book stores which featured Rex Beach book titles, and in one of them the center of the display was a giant book four feet high painted in exact replica of "The Spoilers."

Totem Poles Displayed

In putting over "The Spoilers" at Cleveland, Goldwynner Eddie Carrier made use of a collection of totem poles which he secured from an antique dealer. These gave the lobby a real Alaskan atmosphere, which was bound to attract unusual attention from passersby.

Mr. Carrier exhibited a large frame mentioning the fact that these totem poles were from the collection made by Rex Beach, author of "The Spoilers," when he himself was a gold-miner in the Northland in the hectic days of the Yukon Gold Rush, which has made such a dramatic motion picture.

A large map of Alaska was also mounted with different places of interest pointed out.

Boat-shaped Window Cards for "Down to the Sea"

When "Down to the Sea in Ships" played at the Strand theatre, Montgomery, Ala., Manager W. A. Doster obtained prominent store window locations for seven cards, each shaped like a sailboat, with the title of the picture and play dates shown on the boat. The display also included an attractive still from the picture.

The boat-shape of these cards gave them unusual attention value, and Manager Doster's campaign otherwise was thorough and appropriate.

JEWELRY STORE TIE-UP WITH "WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER"
Cards with appropriate lettering and mounted stills provided the basis for a cooperative window display on "When Knighthood Was in Flower" (Paramount) at the Neal theatre, Montpelier, Ind.

ARTISTIC "LOST AND FOUND" FRAME
This special lobby display piece was made up by Manager C. B. Stiff of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., on "Lost and Found" (Goldwyn)

Special Sale is Tied Up to "Only 38" Showing

The principal extra exploitation used by Manager Roy Smart of the Noble theatre, Anniston, Ala., on "Only 38" was his tie-up with the leading department store on a 38c. sale.

For fifty tickets, which the merchants gave away, the theatre had the advantage of the best window for display and teaser ads run by the merchant several days in advance. In the window were displayed a number of the articles offered in the 38c. sale, along with cards, photos and catch lines. This remained from Saturday through Wednesday, the first day of showing.

Mr. Smart figures that the window alone was worth the fifty tickets. In addition he received the benefit of free newspaper advertising and the word of mouth advertising each time a clerk said. . . . "And here is your ticket to see 'Only 38' at the Noble." Each customer received only one ticket, and it is probable that each one of these meant the sale of one other.

In the lobby an advance cretonne display was used.

Stove Tie-up Is Made With "The Spoilers" Showing

Goldwynner H. T. Snowden obtained a stove tie-up with the Victor Furniture Company for the showing of "The Spoilers" at the Strand theatre, Dayton. A window was filled with late models of heating stoves and a card 22x42 reading: "Stoves like these would have been a luxury during the Klondike Gold Rush, as pictured in Rex Beach's 'The Spoilers' at the Strand all this week." Stills placed in the window gave it an attractive appearance.

Book tie-ups were effected with three big stores, each of which gave a window display and also an inside display.

Mr. Snowden used with good results the stunt worked in other cities in screening "The Spoilers" for the sports editors of the various papers as well as for the dramatic photoplay editors.

City-Wide Campaign Put on for "Homeward Bound"

Herschel Stuart, managing director of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, put on an extensive campaign for "Homeward Bound," a brief outline of which is as follows:

St. Louis Star real estate page tying up with "Homeward Bound" title.

St. Louis Times merchants' page tying up with "Homeward Bound" title.

St. Louis Times sponsored reduced rate 15c. matinee for children of school age on opening day (1,500 lines of space donated as a good will builder for newspaper).

Two thousand special 2 sheets drawn by house artist and printed locally.

Special printed card discs for 55 spare tire wheels on back of fleet of Brown taxicabs. (Gratis.)

Twelve special 1-sheet cards tying up "Homeward Bound" with bakeries and candy stores with slogan "When Homeward Bound take a loaf of bread, or a box of candy," etc.

Stenciled sidewalks in prominent places with name of star, name of picture and theatre.

Twenty-five locations on boulevard stop posts using special printed heavy cards wired on back to back.

Lobby display using ship effect with papier mache life preservers printed "Thomas Meighan in Homeward Bound." Special ship lanterns. Special cut-outs carrying out idea of deck of ship. Real steering wheel and other small props borrowed from local steamship company. Most of the lobby display is revamped from a former ship effect used inside of theatre as a summer decoration.

Ushers dressed as sailors with captains of ushers and chief usher as ship officers.

Ship Cut-out in Lobby for "Masters of Men" Run

Manager Thomas G. Coleman of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, Ala., prepared a special lobby on "Masters of Men" which included a 24-sheet cut-out of the four-master, mounted on beaverboard, six and one-half by ten and one-half feet. On the bottom the panel effect was worked in red, white and blue. The names of the four leading players were displayed, the title of the picture and the slogan, "Remember the Maine." On each side of this large life savers were lettered with the name of the production.

STRIKING "MERRY-GO-ROUND" LOBBY

Manager Hal Daigler of the Columbia theatre, Seattle, was responsible for this strong flash on "Merry-Go-Round" (Universal)

At each side stood a machine gun and stack of Springfield rifles. At all times a U. S. sailor in uniform stood on duty. A "Recruiting Service" band was worn on his arm. In view of the fact that there was absolutely no naval equipment in that city, the display was highly creditable.

Covering the entire marquee border was a 24-foot banner, designed in red, white and blue. On the left hand side the title was cut in white on a blue background, in the center in blue letters on white background the slogan—"Remember the Maine"—three red stripes top and bottom of this and on the extreme right made a very effective flash—though not infringing on the U. S. flag.

The Recruiting Officer covered every board that he had in Birmingham and suburbs with the theatre's block one sheets and pictorials. These blocks were paid for by the theatre, and called attention to recruiting in the Navy and the picture at the theatre. The color scheme was red, white and blue.

The Naval Recruiting Officer donated an interview to the paper, based on the faithfulness of the picture to real life in the Navy.

Local Fair Filmed to Aid "Souls for Sale" Run

When John C. Graham, Jr., manager of the Lyric theatre, Butler, Pa., played "Souls for Sale" he had a ready-made exploitation campaign in the plans which were then being made in Butler for the annual county fair.

To start with, the county fair brought all the farmers for twenty miles around into town. The merchants started off the big doings by having a "Dollar Day," and they made their offers so attractive that it was to every farmer's interest, as well as the other members of his family, to be on hand, so bright and early that morning the streets filled with visitors.

Mr. Graham had a moving picture camera man on hand with a well-bannered truck telling about "Souls for Sale," and from the truck moving pictures of the crowds were taken.

Permission was obtained to drive the truck around the track between races, and pictures of the crowds along the track and in the grandstand were taken. These movies were shown in the theatres all week and were an extra added attraction, as well as being a stimulator of interest while they were being taken.

Another feature of the exploitation was the tagging of 5,000 automobiles with the "Souls for Sale" tag.

Novel Catch Line Used in "Dangerous Age" Ad

The dangerous age was brought home to residents of Stratford, Ont., by their retail merchants, who took a page of newspaper advertising to tell them about it when "The Dangerous Age" played at the Allen theatre.

According to the two-page streamer head, "The Dangerous Age of Every Community is When Citizens do Not Patronize Local Merchants."

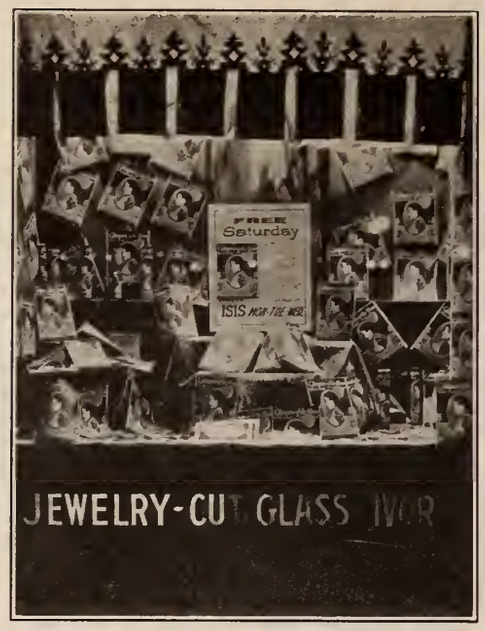
The ingenious idea for the tie-up was suggested by Clare Appel, First National's Canadian exploitation representative and was fostered and executed by Manager John V. Ward of the Allen theatre and Will Appleton of the Stratford Beacon-Herald.

The catch line drew in a large number of automobile dealers who believed it was good policy for Stratford people to trade in their home town.

Silk Hosiery Tie-up Made on "The French Doll"

Manager H. C. Farley of the Empire theatre, Montgomery, Ala., exploited "The French Doll" heavily. In addition to a large amount of stock paper, specially made, hand-drawn cards were placed in prominent store windows, at refreshment stands and at municipal swimming pool. Nearly all these cards had stills inserted and were artistically painted. The artist who makes these cards is careful to have no two of them alike, attracting attention through contrast.

The Real Silk Hosiery concern, which has only recently established an office in Montgomery, was eager to co-operate with Mr. Farley, for the reason that they wished to be brought before the attention of the public. These people carried advertising in the Saturday Evening Post to the effect that Mae Murray wears Real Silk Hosiery and this fact was capitalized on in the Montgomery campaign. 3,000 dodgers were printed and distributed, at the expense of this concern. They also placed a banner on their Ford cars.



The cars, when not moving about the city, were parked downtown, in advantageous positions, where the crowds were obliged to see them. The only thing that this tie-up cost was the running of a slide on the screen of the Empire, advertising the Real Silk Hosiery Company.

This picture was booked in at a week's notice, and to make an impression on the audiences which had assembled the week before, a copy of the telegram authorizing the booking was flashed on the screen. Thus was conveyed the impression that it was an important booking, and additional interest was created in advance in this manner.

"Homeward Bound" Plan Based on Star's Name

Manager H. B. Clarke of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., used a simple campaign with good effect on "Homeward Bound," simply depending on the popularity of Thomas Meighan to put it over, and without going to any great lengths, saw to it that the people of Greenville knew that Thomas Meighan was playing in "Homeward Bound" at the Garing.

In addition to featuring the name of the star in the newspaper advertisements, the mirrors of soda fountains were chalked and cards were displayed on all street cars.

MUSIC STORE CO-OPERATIVE WINDOW

A music store in Longmont, Colo., gave this window to a display of the music published as a tie-up on "Glimpses of the Moon" (Paramount) when the picture played the Isis

Gets Visiting Critic's Aid on "Isle of Lost Ships"

The fact that Billy Leyser, motion picture critic of the Cleveland News is regarded as an authority on film matters for quite an area around the Ohio metropolis, furnished an opportunity for George Schade, owner and manager of the Sandusky theatre bearing his name. The Schade theatre was opening "The Isle of Lost Ships" and George discovered that Billy Leyser was vacationing in the city.

He got the Sandusky Register to interview the Cleveland critic on "The Isle of Lost Ships" and when the latter declared it "one of the best pictures ever made" used a news story to that effect and then sold Schade on using advertising space quoting Mr. Leyser.

It didn't take very much selling because Mr. Schade had this idea in mind when he instigated the interview. He wouldn't have started it except for the fact that he had read Mr. Leyser's review when the picture played in Cleveland and knew the interview would be favorable.

Mailing Lists Used Heavily on "Human Wreckage"

About five days prior to the opening of "Human Wreckage" at the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, Ga., Manager W. T. Murray sent out 500 invitations to a list which included doctors, ministers and women welfare workers, requesting their presence at the special screening of the picture, which was held three days before opening.

In addition, a lengthy mailing list was covered, sending out 2,000 letters to ministers, doctors, legislators, Woman's Club, Mayor of city and social workers, calling their attention to the numbers of people affected by this narcotic evil and asking that they lend their support in getting as many people as possible to see the picture. Numbers of replies were received in response.

The president of the Atlanta Woman's Club gave her assistance in writing a personal letter to the ministry of the city. The letter was multigraphed by the theatre, each name filled in, and was personally signed by Mrs. Richardson. In this letter Mrs. Richardson laid stress on the educational value of the film and requested that they announce it to their members.

A banner was stretched across each marquee and in the lobby were two cut-outs from the 24-sheet showing Mrs. Wallace Reid with arms outstretched, as though making an appeal.

Atmospheric Lobby Used on "Daughters of the Rich"

Thomas G. Coleman, manager of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, Ala., created an air of richness in his lobby for "Daughters of the Rich," which was accomplished as follows:

A centerpiece was worked up from the three-sheet into heavy green draperies. This same effect was continued in the wings of the lobby, accomplished with painted beaverboard.

Immediately above all this was a beaverboard panel 3 x 10 feet, with the title outlined in white against the same green effect. Two circles thirty-six inches in diameter carried the names of the featured players on either side of this top panel.

The following caption was carried in the front of theatre, in the newspapers and on slides— "Did he marry for money or love?" —also the rhyme, "Money bought a duke, greed broke a heart, love made a marriage— 'til death do us part."

UNUSUAL SIGNS USED IN SAN FRANCISCO TO HERALD "WHITE ROSE" SHOWING AT STRAND

Left, display sign obtained for "The White Rose" (United Artists) at the Strand theatre, San Francisco, through tie-up made by Edward B. Baron, United Artists' Exchange manager; right, painted sign, 125 x 15 feet, in front of the Strand before the showing

Local Drug Store Ties Up to Contest on "Tess"

When the new "Tess of the Storm Country" was booked for showing recently at the Sterling theatre, Greeley, Colo., the theatre management put over a tie-up with one of the local drug stores which brought the coming attraction to the attention of nearly everybody in Greeley.

The drug store featured in its daily advertising in local newspapers the announcement that it would award $26.40 cents worth of Sterling theatre admission passes to the person sending in the best answers to fourteen questions, repeated in each day's ad, and tending to advertise the drug store. The children of Greeley were eligible in the contest.

The first prize consisted of a pass to the Sterling good for any and every attraction shown at the theatre for a period of two months, and was valued at $15. Second prize was a Sterling theatre pass for one month, valued at $7.80. Third to fourteenth prizes consisted of one thirty-cent ticket each to "Tess of the Storm Country" during the engagement. Three well known men of Greeley were named as judges for the contest.

Fifteen Shops Co-operate on "Three Wise Fools"

Fifteen of the leading shops in Toronto were induced by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exploiteer Will J. Stewart to give window displays in connection with the showing at the Hippodrome of "Three Wise Fools."

These tie-ups were arranged with the two Clubb & Sons' tobacco stores, the two Neilsons', Ltd. chocolate shops, in Chapman Bros.' jewelry store, De Luxe millinery shop, Rigoletti's cigar store, on the music counter of T. Eaton Co. and R. Simpson, in the phonograph shops of R. S. Williams and Whaley Royce, and in the piano store of Heintzman Company.

The downtown district was well covered with one-sheets in addition to the above window displays. The newspaper advertising was slightly increased and the bill-posting was a little fuller than usual.

Ascher's Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, used this display over the doors on "The Spider and the Rose" (Principal)

Extensive Campaign is Put Behind "Daddy" Showing

Manager Harold Horne of Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, Tenn., used a diversified campaign on "Daddy," his advance advertising consisting principally of teaser slugs, getting over the idea that it was a picture for grownups which the kiddies would also enjoy. He figured that he would get the children anyway, so made his appeal to adults in this manner.

Word-of-month advertising was obtained through showing "Daddy" at the regular children's matinee just prior to opening. Sponsored by the 19th Century Club, an unusual crowd of youngsters attended, with consequent publicity.

Through the co-operation of the News-Scimitar a special matinee was given for orphans. More than 1,000 lines of free front page space were secured by this means. 100 cars were loaned for the occasion by society women and the orphans all attended in a body, the parade making a wonderful ballyhoo.

A Jackie Coogan Radio Night was featured, sending over from the theatre everybody who could do anything to broadcast a special Jackie Coogan Radio Concert from the giant broadcasting station of the Commercial Appeal. Received wire from Jackie Coogan at coast saying he was listening in. Lots of publicity resulted, not only through the printed message, but through the air.

The receipts from a special morning matinee were donated to the Cynthia Milk Fund, which is sponsored by the Memphis Press.

Numerous Tie-ups Obtained on "Enemies of Women"

When "Enemies of Women" was shown at A. H. Blank's Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Iowa, Mr. Blank and the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exploitation department effected a tie-up with the local navy recruiting station on a poster campaign. The recruiting officials used on all of their "A" boards a poster done in red on white which read: "Idle Men Are 'Enemies of Women.' Enlist in the Navy, etc."

The street car company carried dash signs for the full week with this copy: "Careless Drivers Are 'Enemies of Women.' Obey the Law." These cards were done in two colors with no other advertising of any nature on them, which made them stand out vividly.

Starting ten days in advance of the showing, 300 snipes, reading "Enemies of Women," were placed all over town. Four or five days later these were covered up with other snipes, red on white, reading: "See 'Enemies of Women' at the Des Moines theatre."

A tie-up was arranged with the Campbell Baking Company, in which they used the "Hot Ovens are 'Enemies of Women'" circular, which was used in the Kansas City and St. Louis campaigns.

Doctor Delivers Address to Boost "Human Wreckage"

Manager Ray Deusern of the Terminal theatre, Newark, N. J., put over a big publicity campaign for "Human Wreckage" when he had Dr. Chas. A. Rosewater, of the Newark City Hospital, deliver an address at the theatre which appeared in story form on the first page of the Newark Ledger. The article was carried over for more than a column.

The lobby of the Terminal was filled with displays of "dope" layout which were loaned by the headquarters people and which had a special officer to guard them.

Mr. Deusern used photographs and interviews of the leading men and women of Newark who have been fighting the drug evil in his advertisement and took quarter pages in all papers to tell his story.

Short Subjects and Serials

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

National Board Okeys Nine Pathe Films

THE Pathe product is strongly represented in the current Photoplay Guide of the National Board of Review, nine of this company's releases being included in the August number of the Guide, which is a nationally distributed catalogue of motion-pictures "for Selected programs," endorsed by the National Committee for Better Films. They include Hal Roach's screen adaptation of the famous Jack London story, "The Call of the Wild"; Will Rogers' "Jus' Passin' Through"; Stan Laurel in "Roughest Africa"; Mack Sennett comedy, "One Cylinder Love"; Harold Lloyd's "Why Worry" and Pathe Reviews Nos. 33, 34, 35 and 36.

Poli Circuit Will Show Pathe's Yale Series

The honor of staging the premiere of "Columbus," the first of the absorbing "Chronicles of America" series, which were produced by Yale University and will be distributed by Pathe, goes to the Poli Circuit, with houses situated in important centers of Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. "Columbus" will open at these theatres on Columbus Day.

Pathe Claims Scoop on Corfu Siege

Pictures of Italian Occupation of Greek Port Shown on Broadway in Record Time

PATHE NEWS this week claimed an exclusive beat in pictures of the Italian occupation of Corfu, Greece. On September 1, acting at Mussolini's ultimatum the Italian troops shelled the town, landed from Italian warships, and occupied Corfu, Greece. Through a fortunate chain of circumstances, a Pathe News cameraman got aboard an Italian warship with the troops and landed at Brindisi, near Corfu.

The Pathe pictures are said to show exclusive scenes of the landing of the troops and the seizure of the town by the Italian marines. Additional shots are shown of the wrecked buildings and the devastation of the Italian bombardment.

After taking, these pictures were rushed back to Italy from Corfu, from Italy to Paris, and there placed upon the first outgoing steamer, arriving in New York the afternoon of Friday, September 14. They were shown in the New York theatres for matinees of September 15. Just two weeks elapsed from the day of the occupation to the day of the showing on Broadway.

Prints of this exclusive story were also rushed to the nearby key cities by airplane and other fast conveyances, and the big first-run houses all over the country were served in this manner in less than two days. This service of world-wide news is said to be the result of Mr. Cohen's recent trip to Europe, where he effected a more definite co-operation between Pathe News correspondents on the continent.

Concurrent with the release of the film newspapers all over the country were supplied with film clippings from the Pathe exploitation department, together with a news story of the facts and the part played by Pathe, so that a national publicity campaign was put into active operation.

More Big Houses Showing Kinogram Weekly

Kinograms, Educational's News Reel, has lately been added to the programs of a number of representative houses throughout the United States, the latest being the Rivoli theatre, New York. Among the latest additions to the already large list of theatres showing Kinograms are the Roth and Partington houses in San Francisco, California, Imperial and Granada, and Loew's Warfield in the same city; Kahn and Greenfield, controlling houses in Hawaii; Phil Gleichman's Strand, Detroit, and Lyric, Cincinnati.

This is how the Palace theatre of Calgary, Canada, billed Baby Peggy in one of her late Century Comedies that Universal is releasing. A Baby Peggy contest was staged in conjunction with the comedy and the manager went posted photos of all entries in front of his house. Record attendance was reported.

Edward Luddy to Direct Messenger Comedies

Edward Luddy, who was recently elevated to directorship by the officials of Century Comedies, will direct Buddy Messinger's next comedy for this company. The decision to turn the Messinger unit over to Luddy came several days ago, when Al Herman, Buddy's former director, started work on what is known as an all-star two reel comedy.

Luddy, who was, until his promotion, scenario aide and gagman to Mr. Herman, has been writing and co-directing comedies for many years. Until he joined Century the early part of 1922, Luddy has been free-lancing for many of the independent companies on the coast.

Many Advance Bookings on Roland Serial

Pathe announces that the opening episode of Ruth Roland's new serial, "Ruth of the Range," will be released October 14. The subsequent installments of this chapter-production, which comprises fifteen episodes, will be released at the rate of one a week.

According to word from the Pathe home office, many bookings from all sections of the country have already been closed.

"Thomas" Visits Chicago in Urban Issue

The current Urban Popular Classic released by Vitagraph is another of the "Roving Thomas" series. In this short feature "Thomas" visits Chicago, and in his rambles compares the Lake Michigan metropolis with other cities in America.

New Ireland Film on Fox Program

First Views of Emerald Isle Since War In Sept. 30 Releases of Short Subjects

FOX this week made known its releases for the next two weeks. Among the forthcoming short subjects is "Ireland Today," a Fox Educational, entertainment, in two reels, said to be the first comprehensive motion picture taken of the Emerald Isle, its customs, people and famous scenic spots, since before the World War. It will be released on September 30.

Other releases include: "Full Speed Ahead," starring Al St. John, and Clyde Cook in "The Pin-Head." Both are two-reelers and will be released September 30. The Sunshine comedy, "The Unreal News Reel," will be issued September 23.

Fox assigned special cameramen with David Pincus as director to make the trip to Ireland to take shots embodied in "Ireland Today." Not only does it show the Ireland of today with its schools, cities and other modern features, but all the lakes, castles and other historic spots made famous in song and stories for centuries have been filmed.

One of the shots of the picture shows the Killarney lakes, which have been the inspiration of poets and song writers for ages. Of historic interest are the views of the Giants' Causeway, that bridge of stone cut into the sea which Irish tradition claims was built by an ancient race of supermen; the mouldering ruins of age-old castles built away back in the feudal days, and some of the finest views ever shown of Blarney Castle and its kissing stone, which has been famous in Irish history and folklore for hundreds of years.

"Ireland Today," is is pointed out, for the first time gives a comprehensive view of the Emerald Isle, affording contrasting glimpses of life in the old days and at the present. The announcement declares that it will reveal to all who see it an entirely new idea of conditions in the country which has been wrecked by many revolutions and upheavals, but which is now sailing along with comparative smoothness under the Government of the Irish Freen State.

H. B. Day New Kinogram Sales Manager

Harvey B. Day, who for a year has been sales manager of the International News Reel Corporation, has resigned from this organization and is now sales manager for the Kinogram Publishing Company, producers of Educational's News Reel, Kinograms.

Mr. Day is well known by exhibitors throughout the country through many years of sales work. He was head of the Day Film Company of Pittsburgh and Cleveland for three years before beginning to specialize in the news reel work. Previous to this, Mr. Day spent four years with the Fox Film Corporation as manager of the Pittsburgh exchange, which he opened, and later as Eastern district manager.

Broadway Houses Plan All-Short Program

All short-subject programs promise to play an important part in the season that has just opened. While no official announcement has been made, it is known that both Joe Plunkett of the Strand and Sam Rothafel of the Capitol in New York City are working on such a program. The alert showman takes the stand that the time is not far distant when the short subject will be to the picture business what vaudeville is to the legitimate show branch.

Educational Offers Cameo Comedies

E. W. Hamons Announces New Series in Which Virginia Vance and Cliff Bowes May Star

EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, INC., will distribute a second series of 24 single reel Cameo Comedies, according to an announcement issued this week by Educational. A year ago E. H. Hammons, president of Educational, in response to a growing demand for single-reel, rough and tumble comedies, added the first series of Cameo Comedies to the releasing schedule of that company. The Cameo Comedies, produced by Fred Hibbard, are said to have met with an enthusiastic reception at the hands of the exhibitors, who felt the need of the single-reel, fast-action comedy to complete the program of their houses, which in many cases had become complicated, due to the extreme length of the features flooding the market.

The second series will also be produced under the supervision of Fred Hibbard at Los Angeles. In the series just completed, Jimmie Adams, Virginia Vance and Cliff Bowes have been seen in the leading parts. Adams is now starring in Christie Comedies, and it is expected that Bowes and Miss Vance will continue as the leads in the shorter comedies.

The first picture of the new series will follow immediately after the expiration of the old contract. The September releases, "His New Papa," "Moving" and "The Limit," completed the old contract, and "Simple Sadie" and "Heads Up" will be released in October.

In producing this second series of 24 single reel Cameo Comedies, Educational Film Exchanges of America will seek to carry out the same idea as that which originally was responsible for the production of the first series of the Cameo product; namely, that of providing a fast-moving, rough and tumble slapstick comedy, of a somewhat different nature than the two-reel comedies, and particularly suitable for use where the feature was of such length that the showing of a regular two-reel comedy was inadvisable, or where the heavy nature of the feature made it advisable to run a light, fast-action comedy to balance it.

The experience gained in producing and handling the first series will be brought to bear on this new Cameo series.

Pathe Special Two-Reel Sales Force Named

Pathe this week announced the personnel of the special force which will handle the two-reel comedy product appearing on the Pathe release schedule as follows:

Norris Wilcox, New York; H. M. White, Boston and New Haven; Thomas Cooper, Pittsburgh; Harry Devere, Buffalo; Leon Medem, Minneapolis; G. L. Stiles, Cleveland; Albert Lachnit, Indianapolis; H. D. Hondorf, Detroit; Oscar Kuschner, Milwaukee; J. O. Rhode, Dallas; D. E. Boswell, St. Louis; Frank Cassill, Kansas City; Jack Auslet, Charlotte and Atlanta; E. H. Wachter, San Francisco, and C. Beale, Portland, Seattle and Spokane.

Cartoon Comedies in Color for Lee-Bradford

The cartoon comedy in colors is about to be introduced on the screen. Three New York cartoonists, Frank Nankivell, Walter E. Stark and A. S. Hutchinson, have been at work for some time past on a series of cartoon comedies, which, it is stated, will embody a new style of animation, backgrounds of fullest detail, and perfect continuity as well as the color process that they are said to have perfected. The first subject, which has been completed, bears the title "Robinson Crusoe's Return on Friday." A print of this is being shown aboard the Leviathan on her present voyage. The Lee-Bradford Corporation controls the world rights to this series.

All Short Subject Bill Proves Winner

The pronounced antipathy of exhibitors everywhere to the over-lengthy feature, as reflected in the editorial and news columns of the trade press, has had, according to advices from various sections of the country, an equally strong reaction in favor of the all-short-subject program. The same reports indicate an ever-growing application of the principle of diversified entertainment on the part of progressive showmen.

The recent experience of J. A. McGill, owner of the Liberty theatre, Port Orchard, Wis., as described in a communication from that exhibitor, is a striking instance. According to Mr. McGill, the Liberty decided upon an experiment for its Labor Day performance, an all-short-subject program consisting of "Fruits of Faith," a Harold Lloyd re-issue; Pathe Review, an "Aesop's Film Fable" and a "Topics of the Day" number being presented to the Liberty's patrons. The results are best described by McGill's own report:

"The total cost of this line-up was about the same as I usually pay for a feature program. The returns were more than double. For two weeks ahead I advertised that 'A Special Laugh Show' was coming Labor Day.

"Now box-office receipts, of course, are very important. But just as important in my estimation is that grand and glorious feeling that comes to the exhibitor when his patrons crowd around him after the show and tell him that was the best show they had ever seen. And when they pull him up on the street the next day and tell him to do it again, then I believe if the exhibitor does not let it percolate through his brain that his patrons are tired of the long-drawn-out features, then he should get back on the farm or dig clams for a living."

Short Subject Briefs

CHARLOTTE MORRISON has returned to the Christie studio on the Coast to play opposite Neal Burns in a comedy of newlyweds.

"Kick Out," the two-reel Educational-Mermaid comedy featuring Lige Conley, shared comedy honors with "Ruggles of Red Gap" at the Rivoli, New York, last week.

Samuel Bischoff, auditing director of Grand-Ascher Distributing Corporation, is in Hollywood for an extended visit.

Max Alexander, known in European film circles, has been engaged by Century Film Corporation as executive over all Century's property and wardrobe requisites.

The Firpo-Dempsey championship fight pictures aroused much comment in New York dailies that contended the knocking of the champion out of the ring had been tampered with. The producers contended that an over-enthused newspaper man, who suddenly jumped up from his seat in front of the camera, forced a curtailment of that period when Dempsey struggled his way back into the ring.

The Western Canadian ranch of the Prince of Wales was besieged by news weekly photographers this week, and it is expected that views of the future British ruler will be embodied in the weeklies next week.

Weiss Brothers will release a series of one-reel subjects dwelling on various episodes from the Old Testament.

Flora Finch, the comedienne who is appearing in two-reel comedies being made in New York, is being co-starred in a Broadway farce-comedy.

Larry McGrath and Bob Perry have been added to the cast of the "Fighting Blood" pictures, in support of George O'Hara and Louise Lorraine.

Louise Lorraine, leading feminine player in the new "Fighting Blood" series, opposite George O'Hara, is now at work on "A Comedy of Terrors," the seventh picture of the group, under the direction of Henry Lehrman.

Jack White has signed Eddie Moran for the stellar role in "Uncle Sam."

Elmer Floyd, a producer of revues well known on the West Coast, has been added to Jack White's Mermaid Comedies lineup. He will devote his time to evolving picturesque backgrounds for Mermaid subjects.

Sid Smith and Joe Rock, after having enjoyed several weeks' rest, are back on the lot working on their next series of two-reel comedies that Grand-Ascher will release.

Now there is some talk about Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean making a series of one-reelers. This report was not confirmed nor denied. Both, it is known, are anxious to turn their idle moments into money, and the screen is something in which both are interested. The team leaves this week with the Follies for an indefinite run in Boston.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Grail

(Fox—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture is about the best in which Dustin Farnum ever appeared under the Fox banner. At least it gives him a chance to play a convincing character in his wholesome, refreshing manner, and he makes the most of his opportunity. "The Grail" in some respects is based upon familiar material, but so realistic are the characters, so even the action which builds to a very satisfying climax without any recourse to wild incident, that it comes as a distinct relief when one has become surfeited with harum-scarum westerns.

The plot unfolds well and reveals a Texas Ranger assigned to the job of capturing a youth who has killed a cattleman. The officer knows that the boy is friendly with the minister's daughter in the town and disguises himself as a Bible salesman in order to arrest him. The preacher, a disciple of the "fire and brimstone" theory, delivers his sermon—after which the Ranger tells the congregation that God is merciful and kind. The youth, moved by the address, comes forth from his hiding place and develops renewed courage.

The plot becomes complicated at this point, for it introduces the villain carrying on the usual intrigue with the young assassin's sister. As is customary with such a development the Ranger is made to appear guilty. He carries out his duty of arresting the boy who has lost complete faith, but the officer guides him along the right way by encouraging the spiritual note. The villain is apprehended and the romance is continued between the Ranger and the minister's daughter. There is a tragic touch when the boy's sister kills herself.

It is a picture which builds to a tense climax—one holding the interest all the way. It is flavored with vital dramatic moments and the spiritual vein softens its crude incident. Farnum makes the Ranger a vivid character, indeed—one who commands instant admiration. Alma Bennett as the sister, Peggy Shaw as the minister's daughter, and Jack Rollins as the youth give interesting performances.

THEME. Western drama which offers Texas Ranger as its protagonist—his purpose being to capture a young assassin. The Ranger gets into several difficulties, but the romantic element pilots him to safety and love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The realistic atmosphere. The note of realism in story which is excellently acted by star and supporting cast. The spiritual element. The creditable action and suspense.

DIRECTION. Sticks to his story and keeps it even and filled with strong dramatic moments. Succeeds in adding realism without a sacrifice of pathos. Scenes are well pointed and build to interesting climaxes. Gets good results from star and players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put it over by exploiting star and mentioning that it is an interesting story of the big outdoors. Mention that it serves in teaching a fine moral. Ballyhoo it with an employee garbed as a Ranger.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all program houses particularly those in downtown sections.

SUMMARY. A first class western which carries strong plot and interesting action. Maintains suspense and builds to a dramatic climax. Figures seem real which gives value to story. Is well acted.

THE CAST

Dora Bledsoe	Peggy Shaw
Rev. Bledsoe	Carl Stockdale
Mrs. Bledsoe	Frances Raymond
James Trammel	James Gordon
John Trammel	Jack Rollins
Mrs. Trammel	Frances Hatton
Sysie Trammel	Alma Bennett

Story by George Scarborough. Scenario by Charles Kenton. Directed by Colin Campbell.

SYNOPSIS—Texas Ranger is ordered to capture a young assassin. He knows that the youth is friendly to a minister's daughter. The minister preaches "fire and brimstone" and the Ranger corrects this viewpoint in an address of his own. He captures the boy, whoes sister has been dishonored by villain, but the youth is guided along the right path and the Ranger finds romance with the minister's daughter.

The Social Code

(Metro—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS Rita Weiman story is peculiarly adaptable to the winning mannerisms of Viola Dana. Replete with sympathetic appeal and abounding in dramatic situations, it holds the closest attention from start to finish. It gives Miss Dana a wide scope for the display of her talents, and she is equally good as the reckless, care-free girl of the opening reel and the desperate, distracted heroine who so splendidly rises to the exciting climax.

There is nothing new nor novel in the story. Its situations have been unfolded many times before, but it is that type that will probably always be appealing to an audience. This particular one is well-knit and faultlessly told. There is not a moment that it drags throughout the five reels.

Malcolm McGregor fits as snugly into the role of Dean Cordigan, the hero, who, through chivalry, all but sacrifices his life in the electric chair, as does Miss Dana in the role of Babe Van Buren, who saves him from his desperate plight. In fact, the cast is faultless, very character is well portrayed, and this, combined with the fast-moving story, makes a particularly interesting picture. Its direction was in the capable hands of Oscar Apfel, and this work in undoubtedly among his best efforts.

Not the least attractive part of the picture is the manner in which it is set. Scenes in and about an exclusive country club add much to the splendor of the production and will serve to make the tired business man and the young debutante long for the next fling with old General Par.

The courtroom scene in which the climax of the picture is set is wonderfully realistic and Huntley Gordon in the role of the judge lends to it all the necessary dignity. In fact Gordon's portrayal of the role throughout could hardly be improved upon and it is a role that in incapable hands would detract considerably from the interest in the story.

New York's "City Club" figures prominently in the action with both exterior and interior scenes being shown, and as well are shown interiors and exteriors of some of the most exclusive mansions.

The photography is flawless, in keeping with the production.

THEME. Drama dealing with a mysterious murder in which a young girl saves her lover from the electric chair and at the same time relieves a trying situation in which an older sister becomes involved.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast-moving plot. The ever increasing suspense and mystery. The court room episode. The splendid work of the well balanced cast.

DIRECTION. There is never a moment when the story loses its plot. The humorous and dramatic situations are equally well carried out. Every player is admirably suited to his role.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The splendid and well-balanced cast. The popularity of Miss Dana. The court-room scene and the problems involved therein open channels for discussion. The dramatic climax and many appealing situations.

DRAWING POWER. Will be enjoyed by all classes of audiences.

SUMMARY. An excellent drama and smooth running story full of exciting situations and enough mystery to hold the attention throughout. A good cast competently directed.

THE CAST

Babs Van Buren	Viola Dana
Dean Cardigan	Malcolm McGregor
Connie Grant	Edna Flugrath
Judge Evanss Grant	Huntley Gordon
Colby Dickinson	Cyril Chadwick
District Attorney	William Humphrey
Attorney for the defense	John Sainpolis

Story by Rita Weiman. Directed by Oscar Apfel.

SYNOPSIS—An irresponsible society butterfly proves her worth when her lover is about to be sentenced to the elctric chair. The latter refuses to prove an alibi in order to protect the girl's married sister from a trivial indiscretion committed before her marriage to the judge in whose courtroom the case is under trial. The girl assumes responsibility for her sister's wrongdoing, thereby clearing the entire situation.

The Eagle's Feather

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

GIVEN a role of good dimensions and Mary Alden can make it stand out like a cameo. This very able character actress has demonstrated for many years that she can be trusted with any assignment no matter how difficult. It isn't easy to portray the role of such an unsympathetic figure as the Eagle who is a pioneer type of woman, accustomed to living an isolated existence and working out her years in heavy toil.

She is a cold, stern, primitive woman of the soil, somewhat masculine in character—a woman whom the spark of romance has never touched—and then it comes to her late in life in the form of a young drifter, a late product of the World War. He finds sanctuary in her home and stays to work her ranch. He respects her but doesn't love her, although she has become softened in her fondness for him. His affection goes out to her adopted ward. The Eagle, having undergone such a transformation, becomes even colder and more relentless when she learns the true situation. She discharges the drifter and sends the girl out into a driving snowstorm.

From this point it is easy to guess the outcome. Indeed it is a perfectly obvious tale—one simple in design, rather inconsistent in its development, but withal interesting because of its picturesque central character. There is a very well planted reason for the subsequent villainy. On the adjoining ranch lives the vicious scoundrel and the Eagle holds a mortgage on the place. When the war veteran is ordered to foreclose the bad man has a motive to execute revenge. Therefore the girl in order to seek refuge from the storm finds shelter in his home. And the drifter arrives in time to save her from the villain's advances. The Eagle, meanwhile, realizes that she hasn't done the square thing and though there is no outward manifestation of contriteness, she makes it plain that she wishes to see the young romancers happy.

It's a one character story all the way, although James Kirkwood as the drifter succeeds in diverting a share of the spectators' attention. The honors, of course, go to Mary Alden who makes the Eagle highly convincing—and clearly defined in shading. George Seigmann's villain is well portrayed.

THEME. Character study of stern, masculine type of woman whose manner is softened by contact with love. Learns that her ward is the real object of man's affection and evicts her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Mary Alden's interesting portrayal of a stern, unyielding type of woman and James Kirkwood's effective performance of the drifter. The scene when girl is evicted. The realism.

DIRECTION. Has made figures convincing although he was burdened with one character story. Builds up to his main situation in a satisfactory manner. Is obvious, however, in making events so conveniently arranged. Hides the inconsistent plot with convincing figures. Allows it to drag occasionally.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Perhaps names of cast are unimportant to your clientele, but feature it as strongly acted story. Surely your patrons are familiar with Mary Alden and James Kirkwood.

DRAWING POWER. Should be a good bet for downtown city houses and in small towns.

SUMMARY. Fairly interesting character study, the highlights of which are clever performances by Mary Alden and James Kirkwood. Slender and obvious of plot and story is inconsistent. Figures seem real.

THE CAST

Delila Jamieson ..... Mary Alden
John Trent ..... James Kirkwood
Mrs. Trent ..... Rosemary Theby
Jeff Carey ..... Lester Cuneo
Martha ..... Elinor Fair
Von Brewen ..... George Seigman
Count de Longe ..... Craufurd Kent
Parson Winger ..... John Elliott

Story by Katherine Newlin Burt Adaptation by Winifred Dunn. Directed by Edgar Sloman.

SYNOPSIS—Pioneer type of woman gives employment to drifter on her ranch. She has an adopted ward, and the young people fall in love. The woman learns that she loves the drifter, and her attitude changes for a time. When she learns that her love is not reciprocated she evicts the girl, who finds shelter in villain's cabin. She is rescued by the drifter, and the hard-hearted woman, conscience-stricken, wishes them happiness.

Zaza

(Paramount—Six Reels)

OUT of the "Camille" school of drama emerges "Zaza," which reduced to screen terms, is nothing more or less than a study in romance, though heightened by a colorful sketch of the title role. The sponsors, in the main, have stuck by the original until the climax when a sop is thrown to the conventions by having the hoydenish music-hall artiste marry the man of her choice after his wife has conveniently died.

The picture is Gloria Swanson's. Make no mistake about that. From the moment that she steps into her ballet costume until she plays her lover's piano, the while he shuffles up behind her, the star holds the center of every scene. So we become interested in the manner in which she interprets the character. She suggests Lenore Ulric in "Kiki" in her bobbed hair and the mischievous high jinks during her ballet numbers. Again there is indication that she has taken a leaf out of Mae Murray's book of acting—if we may judge by her hysterical moments. Some will be reminded of Nazimova.

Allan Dwan has permitted her full latitude to act without a semblance of repression except in very brief intervals—and in these intervals the star is unable to demonstrate any flair for pathos. It is an uneven performance in some respects because Miss Swanson attempts to balance her nerve and vivacity with serious moments. Curiously her best work is when she is subdued during the tearing up of her beloved's portrait. The scenes back stage are rich in atmosphere and have been finely executed, but the star in her feverish effort to appear the irresistible hoyden causes the spectator to feel some relief when her high jinks are quieted. H. B. Warner, on the other hand, is too repressed. A little of his repression exchanged for the star's animation would have balanced the characters nicely.

The gay charmer of the Odeon learns that her lover is married and transfers her affections to a middle-aged roue. A caption indicates that a few years elapse with the war and the lovers are reunited when the wife is conveniently eliminated. The star's penchant for displaying a bizarre wardrobe is in evidence again. Her following is so large that the picture will prove a box-office bet in spite of the fact that its best moments are in the early reels. Along toward the finish it becomes tedious. There are some enchanting exteriors. Indeed it is perfect in settings, atmosphere and detail.

THEME. Romantic drama involving triangle of Parisian actress who wins love of married man under the impression that he is single. When his wife dies she marries him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The unusually fine atmosphere. The clever stage "business." The charming exteriors. The scene when Zaza learns that lover is married. The good supporting cast. Gloria Swanson's costumes. The conflict between the rival actresses.

DIRECTION. Shows fine discretion with his sets. Puts over a fine stage atmosphere. Holds interest in early scenes but allows action to sag toward the finish. A few episodes too abrupt. Gives star too much latitude in playing the title role. Has provided an artistic production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Star's name has real box office value. Play her up and mention that she plays a role made famous by many celebrated actresses. Play up her bizarre gowns. Use stills of exteriors. Put on a prologue suggestive of incident in picture—dancing, singing, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw big on account of star's name and title.

SUMMARY. A fair picture which sags toward the conclusion. Miss Swanson over-acts her role and doesn't succeed in expressing pathos. There is some enjoyable stage incident, but plot is easily anticipated.

THE CAST

Zaza ..... Gloria Swanson
Bernard Dufresne ..... H. B. Warner
Duke de Brissac ..... Ferdinand Gottschalk
Aunt Rosa ..... Lucille La Verne

Stage Manager ..... Roger Lytton

By Pierre Berton and Charles Simon. Scenario by Albert Shelby Le Vino. Directed by Allan Dwan. Photographed by Hal Rosson.

SYNOPSIS—Music-hall celebrity is determined to win affection of rich Parisian. She has a rival who cuts the rope of a swing in a song number, bringing injury to the young artiste. The rich suitor offers his love, but heroine learns that he is married and has a family. With a broken heart, she gives up her affection, only to be restored to him some years later when his wife dies.

The Fair Cheat

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

UTTERLY preposterous of plot is this picture provided you take it seriously, but if accepted for its farcial flavor it will doubtless afford a pleasant hour for any soft-boiled patron. The sponsors fortunately have not attempted to make it heavy with dramatic moments. Rather have they appreciated the humorous quality of the story by emphasizing the satirical points—with the result that it shapes up as a satisfactory picture.

Had the title role been wrongly interpreted—had Dorothy Mackaill attempted to make much labor over the comedy high jinks it would have spelled disaster. Instead she proves herself a right smart comedienne whose talent in this direction is as marked as her emotional gifts. Whatever she attempts has a ring of sincerity about it. To illustrate we will mention that in the role of the society girl she goes to bed with her hair neatly back—so that she appears almost plain. What a temptation it would have been for many to show their tresses in an elaborate coiffure. So she makes this picture really interesting through an adaptability to the role. And Edmund Breese in the silly role of the father plays so effectively that he almost appears genuine. Such a picture as this needed the most competent interpretation. And this is what it has received.

The idea concerns a millionaire's daughter in love with one of her father's employees—a match which does not meet with his approval since he believes the youth is after her money. So he concocts a scheme whereby he leaves her in New York to make her own way and advertises the fact that she has accompanied him on a yachting trip. The girl gets a job in the "Follies," and is recognized as one of the society buds. Meanwhile the youthful swain has learned of the remarkable resemblance of the chorine to his sweetheart and pays ardent courtship, his excuse being the latter's refusal to correspond with him. The newspaper boys penetrate her masquerade by planting the story that her father has been shipwrecked. And she wins his consent when he returns home.

The high spots of this picture develop from the stage incident and the farcial flavor involving the girl's deception. There is a crooked secretary who provides a melodramatic flourish. The speed of the picture eliminates its shortcomings. Indeed the gaps are hardly noticeable. Miss Mackaill's portrayal give the feature its outstanding value.

THEME. Comedy-drama which treats of society girl outwitting her rich father in marrying the man of her choice.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The clever portrayal of the heroine by Dorothy Mackaill. The stage atmosphere. The interesting incident. The manner in which the interest is held despite the ridiculous plot.

DIRECTION. Always keeps the spectator's attention by introducing good incident and balancing his plot with deft comedy strokes. Handles his players very well—especially giving Dorothy Mackaill an opportunity to flash a clever portrayal. Builds his plot with an even tempo.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title is attractive. Play up stage atmosphere and put out a teaser campaign on theme. Play up Dorothy Mackaill as one of the best newcomers of the screen. Bill it as highly enjoyable comedy-drama.

DRAWING POWER. Good for all program and neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. A slender story is made interesting by clever balancing of incident and comedy. Carries a sparkle and is finely played by Miss Mackaill and a well balanced cast. Never becomes tedious.

THE CAST

Morgan Van Dam	Edmund Breese
John Hamilton	Wilfred Lytell
Camilla	Dorothy Mackaill
Gloria Starke	Marie White
Rutledge Stone	William Robyns
Crittenden Scott Buckley	Harold Fashay
Sloman Zeigler	Bradley Barker
Sam Hiller	Jack Newton
"Bunk" Willis	Tom Blake

By William B. Laub. Directed by Burton King. Photographed by Alfred Ortlieb.

SYNOPSIS—Society girl wins father's consent to marry man of her choice at the end of a year, provided she tells him that she is going to Europe with him—the father believing that the youth will fall in love with another girl and that his daughter's affection for him will cool. She enters the chorus and her fiance falls in love with her, and through her deception outwits her father.

The Six-Fifty

(Universal—5100 Feet)

THERE may not be much plot material in this picture, but because of intelligent direction toward making it a human, simple document, it is destined to please most audiences—particularly those who enjoy realistic slices of life unmarked by any stressing of dramatic bombshells. The story is really slender and the director has surprised us in extending it through feature length without making it appear padded. An adaptation of the play of the same name by Kate McLaurin, it moves with all the simple, human strokes so consistent with the plot and characters.

It is a study of home-folks—of a young married couple on a farm. Their placid life is as even and well regulated as the background and events which move about them. The early footage is given up to planting the characters, showing the young couple living in perfect harmony, the wife given to day-dreaming—and several shots of rural manners and customs—such as a birthday party and the choir rehearsal. But there is a symbol of the bright and active life beyond the horizon. It is indicated when the "six-fifty" dashes through the hamlet on its way to the city. Every time it passes the farm-house the wife rushes to the window to follow its flight. She would like to taste city life. This character wins sympathy because she is not given to quarreling with her husband. She is discontented, but not a fault-finder. She accepts her monotonous existence with just a bit of pathos in her eyes.

Then the train is slightly wrecked one night—and three passengers are brought into the little farmhouse as patients. One is a young lawyer who becomes interested in the wife, another is a young woman who arouses the heroine's envy with her smart clothes, while the third is a wealthy widow. The latter invites the lonesome wife to visit her. And eventually she has her wish fulfilled. After a taste of hectic adventure in the city, she is glad to return to her farmer husband—to discover that he has built a creamery during her absence. Her future looks brighter in the community.

The homespun touch is emphatic throughout—and Renee Adoree as the uncomplaining wife succeeds in making her character wistful and honest and convincing. Her moments of pathos are excellent. Orville Caldwell as the husband looks and acts genuine. A snug little document, certain to be appreciated by home-folks.

THEME. Homespun drama of young married couple on farm—the wife rebelling against the monotony of her life. She appreciates the simple virtues of the country after a taste of the city.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Renee Adoree's charming portrayal of the wife—the pathos in her serious moments when she would taste adventure in the city. The rural incident. The details of the home. The scene when wife meets the young stranger. The simple, human note. Orville Caldwell's manly performance.

DIRECTION. Manages to keep slender story going to the end—without stressing incident or padding it with rural hokum. Is splendid with his detail. Keeps to the homespun touch throughout, thus making his story convincing. Might have tempered Bert Woodruff's comedy as the useless old man of the home. Train wreck not convincing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up title—and link up with stores featuring merchandise selling at 6.50. Also play up the fact that picture is adaptation of play. Use questions, cards and throwaways suggestive of theme.

DRAWING POWER. Should be suitable for program and neighborhood houses. Good for small towns and cities.

SUMMARY. A simple, human little document which wisely keeps to its plot—without plunging into false dramatic fireworks. A study of rustic simplicity—of a discontented wife which is convincingly told and competently acted.

THE CAST

Hester Taylor	Renee Adoree
Dan Taylor	Orville Caldwell
"Gramp"	Bert Woodruff
Christine Palmer	Gertrude Astor
Mark Rutherfrod	Niles Welch

By Kate McLaurin. Scenario by Harvey Gate and Lenore Coffey. Directed by Nat Ross. Photographed by Ben Klein.

SYNOPSIS—Young married couple on farm celebrate their first wedding anniversary. They are happy for a time when wife becomes discontented and longs to taste life in the city. The wreck of the "six-fifty" train brings three victims to the house who invite her to New York. She accepts the invitation of the wealthy widow and learns that city life is too hectic. She returns to her husband, happy to be with him again on the farm.

The Meanest Man in the World

(Lesser—First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

GEORGE M. COHAN has a knack of making old plots look new. Take his stage hit, "The Meanest Man In The World" for example. Dissecting it we discover nothing unconventional in theme or characterization, but there is such a snap to it—such spontaneity of action that it affords constant enjoyment. Transferred to the screen, the play carries on the same sparkle—indicating that Director Eddie Cline and the scenario writer have not forgotten George M.'s way of putting it over. There is a neat freshness to the picture and a compactness of incident, which, coupled with some excellent titles—all of which are saturated with humor—make this number one of the best light romantic comedies which have graced the screen in some time.

A spontaneity of effort has guided those in charge and the players have co-operated in splendid fashion. There were opportunities to spoil things here. Irrevelant hokum could have been added which would have been a departure from Cohan. As it is a few liberties are taken with the original material, but these help in making it entertaining. Cline has not stressed the rural incident. He keeps it always within bounds. As a result the characters never irritate us with some misplaced hokum.

We follow the adventures of a tender-hearted lawyer who admits himself a failure. A client, a mean old skinflint, orders him to evict a certain J. Hudson from his farm or suffer foreclosure. But the "J" stands for Jane and she turns such an appealing expression upon the lawyer that he cannot carry out his resolution of being the "meanest man in the world." The reason the hard old man wanted to foreclose is his discovery of oil on the property. So the picture develops the race-against-time situation—with the lawyer and his friend and the girl, outwitting the oil promoters—and sinking the well. The oil spouts over the top of the derrick in the nick of time—with just two minutes to go.

The scenes are neatly dove-tailed, the tempo is even, and the humor is abundant. There is a flash of drama and a few episodes of romance. And it is played in dashing style by Bert Lytell, Bryant Washburn, Blanche Sweet, Forrest Robinson and Helen Lynch. We predict audiences will eat it up everywhere.

THEME. Comedy drama of a young lawyer who resolves to overcome his tender impulses by becoming the meanest man in the world—the type of man who would evict widows and orphans from their homes and foreclose mortgages.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The sparkle of the comedy high jinks which are evenly distributed throughout action. The easy performances of Bert Lytell, Bryant Washburn, Forrest Robinson, Blanche Sweet and Helen Lynch. Walter Anthony's effective titles.

DIRECTION. Has kept it active and amusing with clever gags and incident, balancing his scenes with comedy and pathos. Gives the players plenty of chances to score and they don't overdo it. Builds to a rousing finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put it down as clever picture adapted from one of George M. Cohan's stage successes. Play up its snappy action and incident. And mention the important players.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any type of house.

SUMMARY. A highly diverting comedy-drama which carries a real sparkle—which dashes merrily on to its conclusion, generating plenty of laughs and adequately balanced with pathos. Is capably acted and well titled.

Adapted from George M. Cohan play. Directed by Eddie Cline.

SYNOPSIS—Young lawyer is a failure because he is so soft-hearted. A grasping client orders ejection of poor tenant and also orders the collection of a debt from a storekeeper or foreclose the mortgage. The lawyer fails with his missions, though he had resolved to become the meanest man in the world. He learns that the storekeeper is a girl and falls in love with her. He also learns the grasping skinflint has discovered oil on her property. He outwits his client and saves the property from being foreclosed

The Marriage Maker

(Paramount—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHATEVER merits this picture may have had in its original shape as a play for William Faversham a few seasons ago are not discernible in the screen version. In the first place it is difficult to make a satirical fantasy out of such slender material. Upon the stage its shortcomings were covered up with effective dialogue and superb pantomine as displayed by Faversham. As a film play the spark fades out early and there is nothing of consequence in its incident and by-play to keep it interesting. In other words, it is a single-track idea which never leaves its groove.

The play was known as "The Faun," which has been re-named "The Marriage Maker," doubtless because film patrons might find the original lacking a magnetic quality which would draw them to the box-office. The protagonist is a shadowy personality who never becomes dominant despite his intrusion into most of the action.

George Arliss, a master of pantomine, might have given the role real eloquence. Charles de Roche works hard enough to make the role fantastic, but his efforts are fruitless, notwithstanding that he goes through considerable exertion. His study lacks imagery and deft shading. He bounds on the scene in a tiger skin—his idea being to make mismated couples seek their rightful partners and appreciate the elemental instincts which guide the animal kingdom. So through suggestion he implores the impoverished nobleman to marry the girl of his choice. He also seeks her out during a heavy rainstorm and tells her that she is denying herself and her love and her right to happiness. Another couple are also influenced to follow their natural destinies. And with his work completed he departs for the open spaces—to find communion with the rabbits, pigeons, et al.

For four reels de Roche jjumps about in nervous fashion arranging the romances. He is humored by the young nobleman who is prevented from committing suicide. The picture, however, drags considerably and never once intrigues the imagination. The humorous moments are scarce, though a mirthful title is observed here and there. It carries an artistic production, but is weakened by a frail plot and a poorly defined characterization.

THEME. Romantic comedy-drama carrying a fantastic flourish as faun appoints himself a marriage maker and straightens out mismated couples enabling them to find their true mates and enjoy happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good taste in the settings. The good titling. The easy performance of Jack Holt. The appropriate exteriors. The even tempo of story.

DIRECTION. Has provided good production, but fails to realize comic and fantastic flourishes of story. Is handicapped by slender story which carries wide gaps. Is unequal to the task of making de Roche's pantomime effective. His best scene is in the climax during storm.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put over a fantastic dance number symbolic of the "faun." Exploit it as successful comedy-drama in which William Faversham starred. Play up theme that there is a Jack for every Jill, that men and women are born to be mated, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For highbrow audiences and select neighborhoods.

SUMMARY. A creditable attempt to put over an imaginative fantasy, but plot material is weak and interpretation of title role is inadequate. Likely to prove tiresome as it never moves out of its groove.

Lord Stonbury ..... Jack Holt

His only friends are a little girl, his mother and the village drunkard. Unable to stand it any longer he runs away and years later returns a successful manufacturer, determined to obtain revenge, only to find this effort thwarted by real love.

Cast—Very good; all-star with John Bowers, Frankie Lee, Sylvia Breamer and Tully Marshall.

Classification—Rural drama.

As A Whole—A beautiful story, straightforwardly told.

Best Points—Consistency of theme, beautiful photography and acting of Frankie Lee, Gertie Messenger, Tully Marshall and John Bowers.

Shortcomings—Marjorie Daw tends to overact.

Settings—Very becoming. Mostly exteriors. One big, luxurious interior in reception scene, Exteriors photographed from effective angles, making them colorfully picturesque.

Photography—Excellent.

Lighting—Very good.

Direction—Tells story interestingly, entertainingly, without waste of footage.

Exploitation—You can afford to spend on this one.

Exploitation Possibilities—Many money-making tieups can be suggested, for the theme will appeal to mothers' clubs, social workers, boys' clubs, Y. M. C. A.'s and other civic organizations of that type. Good department and boys' stores tieup possibilities. Book stores and school authorities would probably help. Boy angle best bet.

Adapted from story, "Youth Triumphant," by George Gibb. Directed by Lilian P. Ducey.

SYNOPSIS—Patsy, a child of slums, is forced to flee from a drunkard guardian who pretends to be her mother. The child is cast out of a machine in which she had sought shelter and later found by the wealthy Godfrey sisters, who adopt her. "Ma" Slavin learns of her whereabouts years later and seeks to claim her, only to be baffled by Chris Van Loor, an eccentric cripple, who believed that the Slavin could establish the identity of the child. Detectives are put on the trail and after a series of adventures it is discovered that Patsy, now Patricia, is in reality the deserted daughter of Chris' brother and influential Conway's grand-daughter. Her parentage established, Patricia marries happily.

"The Way of the Transgressor"

Independent Pict. Corp.—5000 Feet

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$25,000.

Producer—Premium Picture Productions, Inc.

Theme—A former convict, accused of a crime he never committed, determines to "go straight" only to be hounded out of every job by a distrustful "master man," who is finally beaten at his own game by the man he had "railroaded" to jail and the woman he had scorned.

Cast—Good. George Larkin starred with Lura Anson, however, surpassing in histrionic ability.

Classification—A melodrama of the underworld.

As a Whole—A fast-moving picture worth the price, with plenty of fistic combats. Nothing to fear from censors. There is a murder committed, but this is very cleverly handled. A good buy for exchanges whose clients seek melodramas of the sensational type.

Best Points—The acting of Lura Anson and realistic fights.

Shortcomings—Timidity of Ruth Stonehouse, who seemed to have hesitated about complying with directorial orders.

Settings—Not more than seven interior sets used in entire picture. These were shot at from different angles and give feature substantial setting atmosphere. The home of the "master man" is a luxurious set.

Direction—Bearing in mind sales value, a creditable production.

Photography—Good.

Lighting—Acceptable.

Exploitation Investment—Doesn't warrant too much layout of money in exploitation.

Exploitation Possibilities—Usual crook program stuff. But do not overdo it.

Producer Advertising Plans—Trade paper advertising.

Accessories Prepared—Lithographs, advertising cuts, production cuts, advertising and production mats, lobby display, slides, press book and music cue sheet.

The Cast

"Silk" Raymond	George Larkin
Ruth Barclay	Ruth Stonehouse
"Moose" McKay	Frank Whitson
Jim Finley	Al Ferguson
Olive Stark	Lura Anson
Charlie Wong	Carl Silvera
"Spider"	William Moody

Directed by William J. Craft.

SYNOPSIS—"Silk" Raymond, a notorious safe cracker, is railroaded to jail. While in prison he meets and falls in love with Alma Barclay, "the angel." He is finally freed and determined to prove his innocence only to encounter bitter opposition from "Moose" McKay, the "master mind," who, by informing Raymond's employes of the ex-convict's identity, succeeds in forcing "Silk" to rejoin the gang. However, this renewed alliance results in the downfall and death of the "master mind," who is also in love with Alma, but, in discarding his old sweetheart, and doublecrossing Raymond, pays the price when a faithful Chinese servant stabs him to death. With McKay out of the way, "Silk" is able to live an honest life and make himself worthy of the love of Alma.

RAYMOND HATTON, the independent director, reached New York this week. He will remain in the East for several weeks.

TRULY B. WILDMAN of Enterprise Distributing Corporation of Kansas City has come to the conclusion that a personal tour of his territory every six weeks is a necessity in that it enables his firm to ascertain the real demands of the exhibitor and at the same time effects a co-operation between theatre owner and exchange that works to the mutual advantage of both.

SALES representatives of independent distributing companies in New York bring back different stories concerning the financial status of the market. Some say this promises to be the greatest season in the history of independents, while others contend there is altogether "paper negotiations." The fact remains, however, that good productions are much in demand, for exhibitors are not clogging their books this season. Even at this early stage of the 1923-24 season one finds many more representative first run showings of independent pictures than ever recorded before. That's a good sign.

INDEPENDENT film men were much in evidence at the golf tournament this week. Among those who either wielded a wicked putt or waded through the "eats" were Lon Young, Watt Parker, Sam Morris; Charles Goetz of Dependable Pictures, New York; Sam Zierler of Commonwealth, New York; Charles C. Burr, Ray Johnston of Arrow; Jake Wilk, Louis Auerback, F. Heath Cobb, Harry Ascher of American Features, Boston; Sam Saxe, Bobby North, Irvin Lesser, Jack Cohn, Joe Brandt, Jesse Goldberg, Lester Scott, 2nd, and many others too numerous to mention.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Ruth of the Range"
Pathe Serial—15 Episodes

"RUTH OF THE RANGE" is Ruth Roland's latest 15-episode serial, directed by Ernest Warde, Miss Roland is her usual daring self in the first three episodes shown by Pathe this week. She performs daringly hair-raising stunts with such ease that one marvels at her every move. There is seemingly no feat, no matter how dangerous, this lady is incapable of performing satisfactorily and successfully. But while herself an athletic wonder, Miss Roland, like any other serial star, must necessarily depend in no small degree on the work of the supporting cast. And in this particular, the supporting cast lives up to every expectation of even the most careful star. Miss Roland couldn't want for a better male lead than Bruce Gordan. He is unafraid and does his work well at every turn. He is a hard worker throughout, although cognizant of the fact that it is Miss Roland who is the star—and, yet one cannot help praise his efforts for they contributed in no small measure to the excellence of the first three episodes. There is plenty of adventure and romance with the thrillers injected at the right moment. The story runs smoothly throughout with the characters moving along consistently. The direction is satisfactory with the photography, one of the outstanding features. The settings, mostly of the western exterior type, were carefully selected, Ernest Warde, Lorrimer Johnston, Andre Peyre and V. Omar Whitehead, all work acceptably.

The Cast

Ruth Remington.....Ruth Roland
Robert Remington.....Ernest Warde
Bruce Burton.....Bruce Gordon
Peter Van Dyke.....Lorimer Johnston
Jim Stain.....Pat Harmon
Judith.....Andre Peyre
J. Hamilton Camp.....Harry De Vere
Captain X.....V. Omar Whitehead

SYNOPSIS—Robert Remington, an inventor of "fuelite," a substitute for coal, is strenuously opposed by the Olympus Coal Company, Peter Van Dyke with whom thirty years previous he had fought a duel. In his nervousness, Remington shot before the signal was given and Van Dyke reserved the right to take his shot at any time. Van Dyke seeks the inventor's patent papers, telling his daughter that unless she delivers those papers, he will now take his shot. Captain X, a confidant of Van Dyke's, who is for some mysterious reason an ally of Remington, is instrumental in indirectly saving Ruth Remington and Bruce Burton, a young chemist. Ruth is surrounded by spies in the employ of the coal company, who make life miserable for her. ROGER FERRI.

"Roughest Africa"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

YOU have had burlesque on spectacles and super specials. Now along comes a travesty on the African hunt pictures with the inimitably funny Stan Laurels doing some exceedingly wild hunting. This is the first of a series of Stan Laurel two-reel comedies that Hal Roach is contributing to Pathe's short subject program. And it is a splendid addition, if "Roughest Africa" is a criterion of future releases. This one is a humdinger, just the thing to make any program sparkle with a hilarity that will be refreshingly relished. It does sparkle with snappy burlesque that unfolds innumerable surprises. This one is so funny that were it shown to the "wild" animals, who participate so nobly in the picture, they too could not help but chuckle—it's every bit that funny.

Assisted by the intrepid cameraman, Stan starts out to out-Johnson and other notable explorers and huntsmen. But what happens once he starts is what furnishes a multiple of laughs. His first adventure is with a porcupine, then a bear, elephant and lions, in that order. To those who have viewed the African pictures this burlesque should prove a riot; to those who have not seen them, "Roughest Africa" will treat them to hilarious revelations seldom enjoyed in a five-reel comedy.—ROGER FERRI.

"Should She Marry a Scientist"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is the eighth episode of the Hal Roach two-reel dramatic series, "Her Dangerous Path," starring Edna Murphy. Our heroine consults the prophetic sands for the solution. She is forced to flee from a mutinous crew with three men, a scientist, a captain and a pearl merchant. They reach an uninhabited island, where the scientist, in his search for subjects, neglects the girl, while the captain threatens her only to be repulsed by the merchant, who is finally killed. When death seems inevitable for the girl, a secret service man who had been cast into the sea by the rebellious crew and swam his way to the island, appears, subdues the treacherous captain and saves the girl, who is now satisfied she can never be happy with a scientist more interested in bugs and plants than her welfare. This is the usual South Sea island stuff minus wasteage of film, with plenty of fighting.—ROGER FERRI.

"The Limit"
(Educational—One Reel)

CLIFF BOWES and Virginia Vance are mentioned as stars in this one. Why any credit should be given Miss Vance is problematical, for her bit is a posing one that any lassie could assume. Fred Hibbard directed and Francis Corby photographed. The comedy revolves about the hunt of two men for "wild game," the reward for the best "catch" being the hand of the fair Virginia. There are laughs, but most of the stunts are anything but new, with the comics clowning to excess at times when laughs would have rewarded careful work.—ROGER FERRI.

Pathe Review No. 39
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is a well-put-together magazine that can not help register with the hardest-boiled spectator. The subjects embodied in the picture are sufficiently varied to hold interest at all time. "Down on the Farm" revives happy memories, while "The Phantom Proofs" is a Popular Science number that offers good study, "Tarnished Temples" from the Germany of old is picturesque. "Harpooning Swordfish off Long Island" is exciting, while Pathecolor adds to the beauty of "The Cathedral City of Brittany—Quimper, France."—ROGER FERRI.

"High Life"
(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is one of the Mermaid group with Lige Conley in the featured role. Much of the action transpires among a fashionable society set, presided over by a severe hostess, who taboos jazz and dancing. A parrot and a dancing manikin—such as is operated by a revolving record in a talking machine—are employed to provide some laughs.—ROGER FERRI.

"Hodge Podge"
(Educational—One Reel)

E. W. Hammons' presentation of Lyman H. Howe's latest one-reel novelty is bound to dignify any program. This one is entitled "Some Sense and Some Nonsense," depicting picturesque and comical angles on varieus countries. It is a travelogue of the new type with a potpourri of interesting shots and animated cartoons that puts this reel in a class by itself. Mr. Howe attempts, in a very humorously entertaining way, to explain the riddle: why does a globe-trotter trot? The novelty takes the spectator from the everglades of Florida to Italy, Hawaii, Alaska, Japan, with a peep at a caricature of Geisha girls, Mexico and back to New York City. A very enjoyable release of a satisfactorily interesting and diversified series. —ROGER FERRII.

"While the Pot Boils"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of Robert C. Bruce's western tales, directed by the author and photographed by John M. Lamond. It is a minute study in character, with a half-witted gentleman of the road standing out conspicuously. Photographically, it is a beautiful thing, with the spectator treated to a glimpse of the intimate ways of the tramp, carefree, irresponsible and unthinking. There are a half dozen unique characters thrown together into this reel; one in particular, an elderly rural gentleman, being so real in mannerisms that you feel he will walk out of the screen any moment. With rural settings for a background, blended with a decorative lighting that fascinates, this goes to make 12 or 14 minutes of out of the ordinary entertainment and study.—ROGER FERRI.

"Seeing Double"
(Arrow—Two Reels)

THE theme of mistaken identity with gentlemen of similar looks is not altogether new, but Eddie Lyons gives this a backdrop of royalty into which is injected a new twist. Eddie has his own troubles bossing a gang of hoodlums, but these are multiplied when he is selected by a "gentleman raffles" to impersonate the expected prince. Eddie has his own ideas about princely table manners, but when the real nobleman puts in an appearance even might gives way to consequences, for the arm of law threatens to land our hero a staggering blow. But Eddie is something of a runner and he outran the disillusioned mob and sleuth, happy the aristocracy had never claimed him.—ROGER FERRI.

"Love in a Cottage"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS is Cartoonist Paul Terry's contribution to the "Aesop's Film Fables" series dwelling on newlyweds. The fun centres about the groom's despondency over hardened biscuits, biscuits that are so hard he is driven to drink, only to be awakened to a realization that he is a proud father—of a regiment of kittens. This is the usual funny cartoon.—ROGER FERRI.

A MUSIC HALL or small theatre capable of seating 250 persons and suitable for the holding of private picture exhibitions and many other sorts of entertainments, in the Pomeroy department store, Harrisburg, was formally opened for public inspection on September 11, in celebration of the store's forty-fifth anniversary. The management announced the use of this hall will be available, without charge, under the rule of "first come first served," to civic organizations and musical organizations, and for committee meetings, lectures, motion picture exhibitions under private auspices and similar affairs.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent motion picture and other theatres in Harrisburg, who is chairman of the Chamber of Commerce committee that is arranging the annual "Good Fellowship Cruise" of the Chamber, to be held October 9, 10 and 11, when the members will visit York, Baltimore, Norfolk, Newport News and Washington, addressed a meeting of the Harrisburg Rotary Club on September 6 when he explained the many features of the trip to the Rotarians. One of the features is to be the filming of the members in the various towns visited.

A private showing of "Hollywood," for the benefit of the Harrisburg newspapermen, was given in the New Regent theatre in that city, on the evening of September 9, prior to a week's run of the picture in that theatre. The newspapermen were the guests of Peter Magaro, manager of the New Regent, on that occasion.

The week of September 2 to 9 was set aside as Paramount week in the city of Columbia, Lancaster County, and the festivities opened with a parade of the city officials, the fire department and some of the fraternal and civic organizations. Special ceremonies were held in Locust Street park, where Mayor Moore, of Philadelphia, delivered an address. Dr. S. S. Mann, the chief Burgess; W. H. Lucas, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Ralph K. Reel, president of the Rotary Club, served on the reception committee and greeted Mayor Moore. Eli Orowitz, Paramount publicity expert, inspired the celebration, working chiefly through the local bankers who were convinced the week would do the town good financially, and enthusiastically endorsed the project.

Albany

BEGINNING at once, the Troy theatre, in Troy, N. Y., will run its shows from Saturday rather than from Sunday, the other houses in the city opening their week on Sunday evening.

Another former newspaper man, Norman L. Sper, better known perhaps as "Jimmie," is making good these days as the manager for Al Lichtman productions in Albany. Mr. Sper was one time manager of Warner Brothers' exchange, in Buffalo, and for some years, was connected with the sporting department of various New York sheets. George David, of the Stratford, in Poughkeepsie, was a visitor along Film Row last week. Louis Buettner, owner of houses in Mechanicville, Cohoes and elsewhere, in town the past week, signed a contract with First National for its pictures for all theatres controlled by Mr. Buettner.

Norman L. Sper

The Regent, in Geneva, N. Y., attracted a capacity house last Wednesday night, when in addition to the feature picture, Mayor Catchpole presented "Miss Geneva" to the audience. "Miss Geneva" was the city's entry in a beauty contest conducted by one of the Syracuse newspapers during State Fair week.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange in Albany, has just received a portable projection machine and plans to do much in the way of screening for exhibitors from now on.

Quite a number of the exhibitors and film exchange managers attended the Dempsey-Firpo fight in New York. O. H. Stacey, of the Majestic, in Albany, was down, while Meyer Schine was also near the ringside. Marvin Kempner, of the Paramount exchange, was among those present.

Everyone along Film Row had a glad hand this week for that veteran showman, Charles McCarthy, of Hoosick Falls. Mr. McCarthy does not make many trips to Albany, but has many friends among both the exhibitors and the exchangemen.

Burlesque is going over so well at Harmanus-Bleecker Hall in Albany, these days, that some of the owners and managers of picture theatres of that city, are complaining of rather poor business.

Charles Charles dropped a few shekels this past week by placing too much faith in Firpo.

Fred Robke, salesman for Metro, in this section, had his automobile badly smashed in a collision during the past week.

John J. Walker, until recently the owner of the Barcli in Schenectady, likes his neighborhood so well that he has just opened an oyster and chop house across the road from the theatre. From now on, it's a safe bet that all the film men around this section will make it a "Meet-me-at-Walker's."

R. S. Bendell, manager of the Selznick Distributing offices here, entered two German police dogs at the State Fair, and carried off three prizes.

Matters are still unsettled between the operators in the motion picture theatres of Albany, and the owners and managers of the houses. A special meeting of the operators has been called for the near future, at which further consideration will be given to a 20 per cent increase in wages offered by the owners. The threatened trouble with the musicians has been ironed out, and there will be no increase in wages along this line.

Julius Boxhorn, formerly of the Sam Harris theatre in New York city, is the new leader of the Mark Strand orchestra in Albany, succeeding Colby Shaw, who has been with the house since it opened three years ago, and who has left on an extended vacation.

The past week brought the first frost of the season, and with continued cool evenings, business in the motion picture theatres of Albany, Troy and Schenectady, took a decided impetus. The majority of the houses reported a 20 per cent increase.

Stephen Boisclair, organist at the Leland theatre in Albany, N. Y., went in rhapsodies one day last week. The reason was a son, the first child to grace the Boisclair home. Patrons of the house declare that on the day the child arrived that Boisclair played like one inspired.

The Albany Theatre Corporation, of Schenectady, has filed papers with the secretary of state in Albany, noting its dissolution. The theatre is included in the recent combine of houses in that city.

So successful has been the stock company playing at the Majestic in Utica this summer, that Nate Robbins may decide to play stock instead of pictures during the winter.

"Mike" Kallet, owner of houses in Rome and Oneida, is to erect a new marquis at his Rome house, the size and design to be the same as in Oneida.

Spick and span, with a brand new hat, Meyer Schine, of Gloversville, head of one of the biggest chain of houses in this state, spent a portion of the past week in New York City.

Buffalo

HERE'S George Hall, manager of the Capitol theatre, one of the finest community houses in Buffalo and one of the best known exhibitors in this neck of the woods. But look at George! He's not a deep sea diver coming up for air, but a real speed boat enthusiast at the wheel of Baby June, the little water demon that brought home the bacon in the Chamber of Commerce trophy race in the International Motor Boat Regatta on the Niagara River last week. And when the Baby June crossed the line a winner, old George was right behind the wheel. George believes in getting away from his theatre now and then and allowing his brain to run in different channels. And sports of all kinds find a real booster in Mr. Hall, Esq. George is associated with George Hanny in the operation of several theatres in the South Park section. He has been in the theatre business in Buffalo for a decade or more.

George Hall

They're off! On their honeymoon! Yep, Earl R. Brink and Gladys Robinson. A real reel romance. Earl has been booker at the Paramount exchange for lo, these many moons, while Gladys was secretary to former Manager Allan S. Moritz and remained at the exchange during the R. J. McManus regime. Gladys was an employe for six years and Earl is still on the job although there are rumors that he will go on the road after his honeymoon which will take the couple on a two weeks' trip up the lakes. Earl is the son of Col. Howard F. Brink, local manager for Educational.

Exhibitors, meet R. J. McManus, better known as "Dick," who has recently come to Buffalo to take over the management of the Paramount exchange in Franklin Street. Dick joined F. P.-L. in Saint Louis way back in 1917. Two years later he was stumping the territory around Kansas City for the same company. He returned to Saint Louis in 1920 and in June, 1921, was appointed manager of the Paramount exchange. In December of that year he was transferred to the management of the Kansas City office and remained there until the following April, when he jumped back to Saint Louis again. He left that old Missouri city last June to come to the Queen City of the lakes as F. P.-L. manager, succeeding Allan S. Moritz, now district manager in this state for Preferred Pictures. Mr. McManus is well known throughout Southern Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas, having traveled over every inch of that territory. He is fast becoming acquainted in Western New York, where already he is making a host of friends.

The controversy over mothers-in-law continues to bring many letters to the Chicago Tribune's Voice of the People column which is unsolicited propaganda for a picture of that name and of considerable publicity value.

Des Moines

AN attempt was made to rob the F. B. O. exchange safe last Saturday night but the theives were discovered and frightened away without their loot. The robbery comes on the heels of the arrest of five members of an alleged yegg band who are charged with looting a number of safes here.

The robbers were discovered by Seigel of the Seigel Furniture store which is next door to the F. B. O. offices. While visiting his store shortly after six o'clock he heard noises in the next building and upon investigation found that the back door of the establishment had been broken open. Policemen were rushed to the scene but the yeggs had fled. The knob of the vault had been broken off but the bandits had not succeeded in opening the door.

Colds have seized exhibitors, salesmen and managers. Dan Burgum of the Garden theatre has a cold. Herb Groves who within the last few weeks assumed charge of the Strand theatre had to take to bed. Jess Day, manager of the Palace and Garden theatres, has an awful cold. F. L. Davie, manager of the Universal exchange was inoculated against a cold with a new serum.

The A. H. Blank Enterprises have moved into their new offices in the Commonwealth Building. Previously the offices were in the Iowa Building over the Des Moines theatre. Last Saturday the offices were moved to 300 Commonwealth Building over the Capitol theatre. Some changes in the personnel of the office have also been made. John Shipley, who was formerly in the employ of Mr. Blank but who recently has been engaged in other work, will have charge of publicity for the Blank string of theatres. Dorothy Day will continue in charge of special publicity. Arthur Stolte, who for the four years since the opening of the Des Moines theatre has been acting manager there, will have charge of booking and buying while a new manager will come to the Des Moines at the end of the week. His name is not yet made public. H. M. Thomas is a directing manager for the theatre string.

The Capitol theatre which opened so auspiciously a few weeks ago with a program of vaudeville and pictures is doing very good business.

The Star theatre of East Des Moines is undergoing repairs and is closed for a time following a fire in the projection booth which did considerable damage. The fire took place after hours. H. M. Vickers is the manager of the Star.

Mrs. Spalding, of Pleasantville, was in Des Moines last week to see about pictures for the fall.

E. P. Smith, of Cheriton, was in Des Moines to visit the exchanges last week.

Interesting figures among Iowa exhibitors are the Langlois Sisters of Buxton. They are French women who came to America 18 years ago and for 14 years have lived in Buxton and run the picture theatre there.

The Langlois Sisters are building a new theatre at Mine 20 to which the whole town of Buxton, 4,500 souls, have moved. With the closing up of the mine at Buxton and the opening of the mine called 20, Buxton is no more, the buildings many of them were moved by rail to Mine 20, twenty miles away and a new town, as yet unnamed, is rapidly springing up.

Fred Hagerman of the Palace theatre at Waverly opened his theatre on September 15. He just returned from Denver.

The Community theatre at Plainfield will open the fall season on October 6. W. C. Dayton acts as Secretary for the Community theatre. The Gem theatre at Oelwein of which Ted Bryant is manager, has been completely remodelled at a cost of $11,000. The inside of the theatre is all new, new floors, new stage, new seats, new machines. new lobby, everything. The building was run back and the theatre enlarged to a 400-seat house. It is now one of the prettiest theatres in Iowa. Ted Bryant, who has been in the motion picture game for eight years, is one of the leading exhibitors of northeastern Iowa.

The Star theatre of Dubuque, which has been closed for the summer, has reopened.

Canada

THE Allen interests, formerly directing the largest chain of picture theatres in Canada as well as a number of large theatres in the United States, are continuing to make progress in re-establishing themselves in the Canadian theatre field following the collapse of Allen Theatres, Limited, last spring. The latest development has been the purchase of the Royal theatre at Peterboro, Ontario, for $70,000. This purchase was made by Dominion Films, Limited, which is the new company organized by the Allens. They have secured a number of picture houses in the Ottawa Valley as well as in western Ontario.

Dominion Films, Limited, with its chain of exchange branches in six cities of Canada, is distributing both English and American film productions on an extensive scale. The brands handled include Preferred Pictures, as well as twenty-five selected British releases. Considerable success was gained in the presentation of "Rob Roy" at Massey Hall, Toronto, during the two weeks of the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto. This was followed by the presentation of "The Prodigal Son," another English special feature, in Massey Hall, which also proved to be a popular attraction.

Luigi Romanelli, for six years director of the orchestra of the Allen theatre, Toronto, and general supervisor of musical presentation for all theatres under the control of Allen Theatres, Limited, for a number of years, has forsaken the picture theatre field. Announcement has been made of the appointment of Mr. Romanelli as general director of music for the United Hotels Company, which operates large hotels in a considerable number of Canadian and American cities.

Manager Oral Cloakley of the Regent theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, a former Allen house now operated by Famous Players Canadian Corporation, announced on September 15th that he had secured "Richard the Lion Hearted" for its world premiere public showing at the Regent theatre, starting September 22. The Ottawa Regent gained prominence recently by having the first presentation of "If Winter Comes" this engagement preceding the Broadway opening of the picture.

Formal announcement has been made of the appointment of D. Fisher of Winnipeg, Manitoba, as the manager of the Garrick theatre, one of the new and succesful moving picture houses of Winnipeg.

The news is forthcoming at Montreal, Quebec, that Candian Exhibitors Exchange, organized five years ago by the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Ontario, will be known in future as Associated Exhibitors of Canada, this organization having recently been incorporated as a company. This follows the amalgamation of a number of independent exchanges in the Dominion, affecting the Canadian Releasing Corporation, Equity Pictures Corporation, F. B. O., and others. Physical distribution is through the Canadian Educational exchange and the offices of the Educational branch at Montreal have been moved from the first floor of the Albee Building to more spacious quarters on the fifth floor of the same building in order to accommodate Associated Exhibitors.

A similar move has also been made at Toronto, where the Associated Exhibitors have taken possession of office facilities in the film building at Victoria and Dundas streets, occupied by Canadian Educational. Canadian Universal and Regal Films, Limited, are also located in the same Toronto building.

R. K. Evans, general manager of Canadian exchanges of United Artists, has announced the appointment of George A. Margetts as sales manager for Western Canada for the company, with headquarters at Calgary. Mr. Margetts is a veteran of the Canadian exchange business. He succeeds A. A. Hixon, who has resigned.

Sam Glazer, well known to all Canadian exhibitors, has also been appointed sales representative for United Artists in the Ontario territory and he will make his headquarters at Toronto.

Film Flashes From the Florida Territory

The Film Booking Offices have established a branch exchange in the Casino theatre building, Jacksonville, to supply the wants of their Florida patrons.

W. L. Stephens, representing the Fox News, and George McCollom, of the Pathe News, returned to Tampa this week from a 12 days' trip to the "snapper banks," where they shot some 2,000 feet of films showing the snapper fishing industry.

G. E. White, who recently soul his theatres in Mulberry and Brewster, is now making a tour with an advertising idea.

Boston

COINCIDENT with the appearance in Boston of one of the first feature pictures under Metro's new production policy, "Strangers of the Night," a new policy for the local exchange was also inaugurated. Critics from all Boston newspapers were invited to a luncheon at the Copley Plaza, followed by a screening of the film in the Metro projection room. The hosts were Leon J. Rubinstein, exploitation man, and Joseph Di Pesa, publicity man for Loew's here. "Ruby," as the former is affectionately known, outlined the new Metro plans, which met with the scribes' approval. Nearly twenty were present, among them being Manager Brennan of Loew's State, where the film is playing this week.

Things are buzzing around Film Row nowadays, and all the managers are wearing broad grins. Everything points to a big year ahead. There are lots of good pictures on the way and in the making, and the theatre men know it.

Benjamin Stein has been made Metro's salesman for the Maine territory, having been sent there to fill the large boots of Milton Hill, who has been called in to be assistant in the exchange's large, new, and mighty ambitious exploitation department under the tutelage of "Ruby."

"Ruby," by the way, is getting things all dolled up in his hangout. The fact that it is the exploitation department is announced in no small manner on a sign by the side door on Peidmont street, which is the exploiteer's private entrance. When you get in there is no doubt left at all as to the nature of the office. Everything that can put a picture over, from hand heralds to 24 sheets, are in evidence.

Herman Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Film Corporation, has got things all jake for his season's releases, with 52 premieres all lined up. He has announced the output in various ways, stressing the "one a week" idea, one announcement giving just the titles of the features in the order of their appearance, another giving titles, authors, directors, camera men, and like information under separate headings, and a third billed as a manager's qualification test. When you get through the result of all the figuring is 52.

After combing the film district of Boston, Manager Dembow, Goldwyn-Cosmo's New England manager, has finally located proper quarters for that concern. After doing everything but make over the exterior of the old F. B. O. offices of Church street they have moved into what looks like a really fine place. One of the least of the features is the fact that there are plenty of entrances, and again lots of sunlight. The new First National exchange building taking up the end of the block bounded by Peidmont, Church, and Winchester streets, is about the only one that can beat it for convenience, light, and efficiency.

A small but mighty select house in Boston, that has long enjoyed a steady and popular vogue with film fans, has recently added to its laurels by turning itself into a first run house. This is the Fenway, out on Massachusetts avenue.

R. E. MacIntyre, mentioned in dispatches from Tokio as one of the prominent Americans who escaped injury in the earthquake, is a Somerville, Mass., boy who went over to the Orient last year as an office manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. As a boy he was a mascot with the Red Sox ball team. He joined the Famous Players forces many years ago and during the last few has won repeated and rapid promotion.

Fire starting from a lighted cigarette that was carelessly thrown into some film scraps on the floor of the operator's cage in the Exchange theatre of Lewiston during a matinee a few days ago, damaged the projector. When the fire department arrived they found clouds of smoke pouring from the theatre entrance. On investigation it was found that the blaze had been confined to the projection booth, and the fire was put out with chemicals.

Massachusetts' cities on the Merrimack River, Lawrence and Lowell, have had to give up their outdoor park movies for the year, the weather proving too sharp of evenings now. They have proved a mighty popular thing in these cities, and Supt. John W. Kernan, in charge of park affairs in Lowell remarked of the great success of the feature this year.

Things in Boston are shifting rapidly as far as the big specials are concerned. Paramount's "The Covered Wagon" is on its 18th and last week at the Shubert Majestic after a run the success of which will be a byword around here for some time. Universal's "Merry-Go-Round" at the Park theatre has completed the second week to great business backed up by mighty favorable paper reviews, and that company is getting ready to score again with the opening this week of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at the Tremont Temple, where it will play at top prices after being exploited and billed all over the surrounding territory for some time. The much heralded "Monna Vanna" also opens up at the Fenway.

The quota for Boston in the Japanese relief fund has already gone over the top by about 270 per cent, but that is not all, for on Thursday night the theatres of the city are giving a four-barrelled benefit in as many houses.

St. Louis

THE Park theatre, Cape Girardeau, Mo., has been closed for repairs and redecorating. It will reopen in about two weeks.

Elmer Brient, formerly manager of the Hall Amusement Company's houses at Centralia, Ill., has joined the sales organization of a prominent automobile agency at Centralia, Ill., temporarily, at least, deserting the ranks of filmdom. The Hall Amusement Company theatres, the Grand and the Illinois, were recently sold to the Reed, Yemm & Hayes circuit.

J. Le Beaume of Equity Pictures was a St. Louis visitor of the week.

Roy Netemeyer, formerly with the Pathe sales organization, has been appointed a salesman for the local F. B. O office. His first sales trip proved very successful according to Manager Tom McKean.

William Goldman of the Kings and Queens theatre is in New York City. It is said that business in connection with his new Grand boulevard house was responsible for the journey East. Bids on the construction work have been taken from local contractors.

C. E. Penrod, district manager for F. B. O., was a caller. Tom McKean, local F. B. O. manager, attended the grand opening of the New Pantages House at Memphis, Tenn.

Jack Heffler of Quincy, Ill., is back from his vacation trip to Michigan.

R. E. Rice of Kansas City, Mo., has taken over the Yale theatre at Macon, Mo., and changed its name to the Royal theatre. Rice bought the house from Earl Hayes, who conducts a theatre in Moberly, Mo. Hayes found it inconvenient to operate houses in two cities, so decided to dispose of his Macon house.

Through the courtesy of William Goldman, owner of the Kings theatre, members of the National Gymnasium, were given a pre-review of "The Spoilers," the climax of which is a thrilling boxing bout between Milton Sills and Noah Beery. About 100 boxers and athletes were guests of the club at the review and gave the picture a strong endorsement.

At a joint meeting of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade and the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, it was decided that both organizations would do all in their power to boost the international aeroplane championship races to be staged in St. Louis this month. The world's greatest airmen will be on hand for the races.

Other officers are: David Russell, Columbia theatre, vice-president; Paul Beisman, American, secretary; J. O. Hooley, Rialto, treasurer; Oscar Dane Gayety, chairman executive committee; George H. Lighton, Shubert-Jefferson; Charles Preston, Grand Opera House, and Edward Butler, Empress, members executive committee. The organization meets on the first Tuesday of each month.

Harry L. Pitner has joined the sales forces of the local First National office. He will travel Southern Illinois and Southern Missouri.

M. G. Kennedy has resigned from the First National sales staff. He has not announced his new connections.

R. C. Seery, district manager for First National, spent several days in St. Louis last week.

The premier showing on "The Spirit of St. Louis" was given at the Grand Central theatre, St. Louis, at 9:30 a. m., Wednesday, September 19. The picture which was made by the Rothacker Film Company of St. Louis, graphically tells the history of St. Louis and is to be used for exploiting St. Louis throughout the world.

Fred Hoelzer of the Ivory theatre had returned from a trip to New York City.

St. Louis exhibitors have been urged to get their friends to write their Congressmen asking for the repeal of the music tax and the admission war tax.

The St. Louis Exhibitors' Supply Company has sold two Simplex Mazda equipped machines to the Charleston theatre, Charleston, Mo., operated by C. W. McCutcheon.

S. E. Pertle of Jerseyville, Ill., was a St. Louis visitor of the past week.

Sam Sigoloff of the Union is back from a tour of Eastern cities and is looking dandy.

Cleveland

HOWARD REIFF, one of the premier exhibitors in Cleveland, makes the third member of the firm of Scoville Essick and Reiff who operate one of the important suburban theatre chains in the city. Reiff turned over his worries this week to his partners, while he went on to watch Dempsey knock out Firpo. Reiff has the reputation of being the best natured exhibitor in the territory.

Howard Rieff

Christie Deibel, owner-manager of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, came out of the Zukor Golf Tournament with honors and a silver loving cup, to commemorate his low score.

R. C. Steuve, of the Orpheum, Canton, was one of the Ohio exhibitors who attended the Dempsey-Firpo fight in New York last week. Frank Greenwald, of the Greenwald-Giffith exchange, accompanied him.

Demotte Smith, of the Columbia theatre, Alliance, was in the city last week. J. J. Murray, of the Opera House, and Hippodrome, Warren, was a guest of the local Goldwyn exchange this week.

L. Menthe, manager of the American theatre, Alliance, was a visitor at the various film exchanges here last week. Nat Charnas of the Strand theatre, Toledo, used up about six gallons of Uncle John D. Rockefeller's gasoline to visit the Film Exchange Bldg. last week, and to book some pictures for future release.

A. H. Abrams of the Mozart theatre, Canton, was one of the out-of-town visitors among local exchanges last week. Messrs. Allwein and Schreffler of the Opera House, Shelby, were in the city last week, and carried away with them a contract for pictures released by Progress.

Martin Printz will show the Vitagraph feature "Loyal Lives" first run in Cleveland at the Circle theatre the week of September 30.

George W. Erdmann has severed his connection with the First National exchange, of which he has been office manager for the past year. Erdmann has been in the picture business for the past fifteen years, and his experience in all branches of the industry has rendered him one of the most valuable men in the field. His many friends hope that any new connections which he may make will not take him away from Cleveland.

Portland, Ore.,

A LOCAL news weekly produced by The Oregon Journal and the Liberty theatre, known as the Webfoot Weekly, is now being shown regularly at the Liberty theatre, first run, and in two other Portland theatres, second and third run. The reel is being exhibited in several towns in other parts of the state. The purpose of the reel is to reflect the spirit of the city and state and show motion pictures of all important news events, and human interest happenings. Success for the organization of the reel is due to Earl C. Brownlee, who recently left his place as dramatic editor of The Journal to take over a paper in Reedsport, and A. G. Raleigh, manager of the Liberty. Raleigh writes the captions for the reel under the pseudonym of Zack Moseby.

An air of gloom has descended over the erstwhile cheerful outer office of C. S. Jensen of the Jensen & Von Herberg circuit. Miss Myrtle Forbes, private secretary to Jensen, has gone away. She left this last week for South Dakota. Jensen's new secretary is Karl Hebring, formerly with the firm of Malarkey, Seabrook and Dibble.

A. G. Raleigh, manager of the Liberty theatre and director of publicity for the Jenson & Von Herbert circuit, took a brief vacation the first part of the week.

W. H. Newman, manager of the Columbia and director of Universal theatres on the coast, returned to Portland the latter part of the week after spending several weeks in San Francisco where he had charge of the opening of the new Cameo theatre.

Francesco Longo, the new director of music for the Rivoli theatre, who replaced Salvatore Santaella, has won the approval of his audiences with the special Sunday concerts.

The Columbia theatre has secured the services of a new press agent and advertising manager, Hal Reed, former director of publicity and advertising for the Herbert L. Rothchild theatres in San Francisco. Reed managed the exploitation of pictures for the California, Granada, Imperial and Portola theatres in San Francisco and Grauman's Hollywood Egyptian theatre in Los Angeles. He will also have charge of the advertising and publicity for the Universal Film exchange here. Reed was signed up by Manager H. M. Newman during the manager's recent visit to California.

Manager Ely of the Hippodrome theatre, one of the Ackerman & Harris theatres, has employed a new organist, George Ol'sene, who has in his brief term of service already won a wide following.

In the future all of the large first run productions shown at the Columbia theatre in Portland will be shown also at the Auditorium theatre in The Dalles, according to an announcement from John N. MacMeekin of the Columbia theatre company. The Auditorium theatre was recently procured by the Portland Amusement company and will be managed by that firm through the Portland office.

Joseph A. Stephenson, formerly travelling auditor for the Jensen & Von Herberg circuit, has been appointed auditor of the Portland theatres owned by the circuit. Stephenson formerly worked out of the Seattle office, but recently came to Portland and has established his residence here.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hamburger recently returned from a vacation spent in Hollywood, Hamburger is the assistant manager of the Circle theatre.

Gus A. Metzger, manager of the Rivoli theatre, recently contracted with Mme. Dee-Jean, a well known contralto, for a series of concerts. Mme. Dee-Jean is spending a few weeks in Portland before starting East.

Gus A. Metzger, manager of the Rivoli theatre, gave a percentage of the receipts of his theatre on Wednesday, September 5, to the fund for purchasing a radio set for the State hospital for the tubercular at Salem. Wednesday was known as radio day and through the indorsement of Governor Pierce, an effort was made by the Women's Progressive League, Inc., to raise the funds.

A. G. Raleigh, manager of the Liberty theatre, recently played the part of the game warden in one of Robert C. Bruce's Wilderness Tales called "Dark Timber." The picture was made near White Salmon on the Columbia river. Raleigh staged a fight on a lumber raft coming down a timber flume several hundred feet above solid ground.

After a successful month during August exhibiting return engagements of old favorites and features, the Blue Mouse theatre returned to first run pictures the first of September.

Mlle. Ada Androva, opera singer from Milan and Paris, has been giving special concerts at the Columbia theatre.

The "Pot Pourri of 1923," which was staged recently by the Motion Picture League of Oregon at a midnight frolic at the Liberty theatre was the most pretentious entertainment of its kind attempted yet by the league. "Hollywood" was shown for the first time in the Northwest. George Olson's orchestra was the added feature of the performance.

Production-Distribution Activities

All Cleveland to See "Man Next Door"

"THE MAN NEXT DOOR" by Emerson Hough, one of Vitagraph's 1923-4 specials with Alice Calhoun, James Morrison, David Torrence and Frank Sheridan, was picked for simultaneous showing in forty-eight Cleveland theatres beginning Sept. 2.

In commenting on this remarkable booking, the "News-Leader" said, "This, we believe, establishes a record for a simultaneous run on any feature play in Cleveland."

Press Book Issued for "Green Goddess"

In keeping with the scale of production and the elaborate presentation accorded "The Green Goddess," starring George Arliss, by Distinctive Pictures Corporation, its advertising department, in conjunction with that of Goldwyn Cosmopolitan, has isued an unusual press and service book for exhibitors.

The art cover, executed by the art department of Goldwyn Cosmopolitan, which will distribute the photoplay, is a most compelling piece of color printing. On the back cover is a reproduction of the 24-sheet poster which was especially designed for Distinctive by Eugene F. Savage, noted artist.

One page in the book is devoted to a single presentation idea—the same one which was used at the premiere showing at the Sam H. Harris theatre, New York. A half-page illustration shows the set which was the background to the sensational "Temple Devotional," danced by Olive Ann Alcorn. Detailed instructions are given for the reproduction of this set.

Goldwyn Campaign Backs "Six Days" Showing

Goldwyn is preparing to back up its Elinor Glyn picture, "Six Days," directed by Charles Brabin, with a big national bill posting campaign, and with a nation-wide publicity campaign, covering an unusual and far-reaching source. Both of these campaigns were arranged and put across by Howard Dietz, director of Advertising and Publicity for Goldwyn.

The unusual and artistic 24-sheet poster, which has been prepared for "Six Days," will be used in the national bill posting campaign. This poster is emblematic of the great love story told by Elinor Glyn in this production.

"Puritan Passions" Wins Approval

Critics Commend Adaptation of "The Scarecrow" as Presented by Hodkinson

TRADE PAPER critics were unanimous in their praise of the Film Guild production of Percy MacKaye's "The Scarecrow," distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation under the title of "Puritan Passions," starring Glenn Hunter. A pre-view showing of the film was held recently.

The MOTION PICTURE NEWS states: "This picture is decidedly out of the beaten path. . . . 'Puritan Passions' is an unusual film. Technically, the picture is very fine. The weird atmosphere is maintained in admirable fashion, the lighting first class and all of the production details have been carefully attended to."

"Exploit it carefully," says the Exhibitors Trade Review, "and you will receive the plaudits of your patrons. Its publicity features are manifold and they will get you the crowds. . . . 'Puritan Passions' needs honest treatment in your hands and, given it, will make you money and friends."

The Film Daily goes so far as to say that "'Puritan Passion' is one of the most unusual pictures ever screened. The story is full of dramatic values—contains twists materially different from those which motion picture audiences are accustomed to see, ending in a way which may prove a surprise to some fans."

The Moving Picture World says, "Hodkinson's newest Film Guild offering is an interesting allegorical production."

At a special pre-view showing held in Manchester, Mass., many Boston newspapers sent representatives in order to review the first presentation. Like the Trade critics, their praise was unstinted, they agreeing unanimously that "Puritan Passions" will prove one of the outstanding film attractions of the year.

N. Y. Reviewers Approve "Six Days"

Goldwyn's Production of Elinor Glyn's Story Wins Enthusiastic Commendation

GOLDWYN'S production of Elinor Glyn's screen story, "Six Days," directed by Charles Brabin, received its first showing in New York at the Capitol theatre this week. It is a big picture worthy in every way to rank with the five pictures already released this season by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan—"Three Wise Fools," "The Spoilers," "Enemies of Women," "The Green Goddess" and "Red Lights."

Joseph Mulvaney, writing for the New York American, said: "If there is an emotion of heart or brain that Elinor Glyn omitted from 'Six Days,' it is outside the experience of this reviewer. . . . A throbbing, colorful picture that assuredly should keep spectators guessing from the introduction to the final fade-out."

Beauvais Fox in the New York Tribune, says: "'Six Days' will make money—plenty of it. It is worth recommending to one's friends, worth taking children to. Here is a production that is spectacular but not a spectacle."

Helen Pollock in the New York Morning Telegraph, wrote: "'Six Days' is a film so tense in its drama that the agony of the characters is actually communicated to the audience. Corinne Griffith makes the leading part live in some good acting."

Quinn Martin of the New York World: "Undoubtedly it will be a success. Charles Brabin has taken hold of it and pictured everything the author wrote in quite workmanlike and effective fashion."

The New York Journal: "'Six Days' is alive with thrills. Interest and suspense maintained."

New York Telegram: "One of the important contributions to the current season of photoplays. . . . A most dramatic, colorful and absorbing story."

The Sun and Globe: "Easily the best material Mrs. Glyn has furnished the screen."

Don Allen in the New York Evening World: "So well did the patrons of the Capitol yesterday like 'Six Days' that it seemed to be the concensus that Elinor Glyn should have continued and spread it out to ninety days."

Henderson Devotes Week to Metro Features

"Metro week" in Henderson, N. C., last month was billed as "the greatest photoplay week in the history of Henderson." Three Metro pictures were shown during the week at the Riggan Opera House, and a number of effective newspaper contests and other tie-ups were instituted, resulting in packed attendance and enhanced prestige.

The Metro pictures shown included the Rex Ingram production of "Where the Pavement Ends," the Graf production of "The Forgotten Law" and the Technicolor production, "The Toll of the Sea."

"Michael O'Halloran" Be Square Buttons Ready

THE attractive "Be Square" buttons, the novelty accessory devised by the exploitation department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for "Michael O'Halloran," a picturization of Gene Stratton-Porter's successful novel, have been shipped to the various Hodkinson branches where they will be distributed at a very nominal cost to the exhibitors booking this production.

These artistically designed buttons carry a forceful tie-up with the theme of Gene Stratton-Porter's popular story of a newsboy whose motto, "Be Square" changed the lives of two families and brought happiness and contentment in place of discord. The buttons can be used in conjunction with the suggestion made in the clip sheet for the establishment of a "Be Square" club in every locality in which this production is played.

Badger to Start Work on "Swamp Angel"

Clarence Badger will be ready within the week to start camera work on "The Swamp Angel," which will be a First National release. Colleen Moore, who is to be featured, is stepping from "Flaming Youth," recently completed, to the featured role of "The Swamp Angel," and Ben Lyon, popular juvenile of the New York stage and prominent in Samuel Goldwyn's "Potash and Perlmutter" east, has been selected for the leading male role. Lyon was recently placed under a long term contract by First National following his success in "Potash and Permutter," and arrived on the Coast recently in time to enact a small role in "Flaming Youth."

"The Swamp Angel" is a story by Richard Connell.

Schertzinger to Compose Preferred Scores

An important step in improving the musical settings of pictures has been made by Victor L. Schertzinger, Preferred director, who, starting with his production of the David Belasco stage success "The Boomerang," will compose a special score for each of his productions before he starts directing, and then direct the scenes while the appropriate music is played. When the picture is cut the score will be cut with it, and a completely suitable music score will thus be secured.

"Strangers of the Night" Given High Praise

Harold B. Franklin, Director of Theatres for Famous Players-Lasky, after viewing "Strangers of the Night," the Fred Niblo production of the London and New York stage success, "Captain Applejack," issued the following statement:

"Strangers of the Night" is an exceptional picture. I say that it is exceptional because while it has the intellectual and highbrow and intelligent elements that the critics praise, it also has mass appeal.

"Strangers of the Night" is a great picture and should get money because it embodies suspense, mystery, humor, colorfulness and romance.

It has the intrigue and the suspense of the best mystery play you can think of. It embodies the thrills that have been responsible for the financial success of many pictures and the fascinations of pirate days and adventures. Something for all classes and ages of people to enjoy."

"Strangers of the Night" is a Fred Niblo production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces and was adapted by Bess Meredyth. It was photographed by Alvin Wyckoff.

First National Reports Foreign Sales

First National has disposed of the Chinese rights of a group of fifty-five productions to China Theatres, Ltd., of Tientsin, China. The territory covers China, Macao, Hongkong and Vladivostok.

Other sales reported by the foreign department are: Series of twelve Mack Sennett comedies to Ralph Minden, of Amsterdam, for Holland; "Daddy" and "Circus Days" for Spain, Spanish Morocco, Canary Islands, Portugal and Portuguese East and West African colonies to Companhia Cinematografica Hispano, of Madrid, Spain; "The Virtuous Vamp" and "The Voice from the Minaret" for Bulgaria to the Pallada Film of Berlin.

Bathing Girls Feature of "Temple of Venus"

Among the many spectacular productions offered by William Fox this season none is quite like "The Temple of Venus," according to the Fox offices. Phyllis Haver, Mary Philbin and David Butler are in the principal roles. The picture was directed by Henry Otto and filmed on Santa Cruz island in the Pacific Ocean. In order to present the right atmosphere, Director Otto used a thousand of the most beautiful bathing girls he could pick up along the West Coast.

"The Exiles" Completed at Fox Studio

Word has been received by William Fox from the West Coast Studios that John Gilbert's latest starring vehicle "The Exiles," is finished. This is a Richard Harding Davis story, adapted by John Russell and directed by Edmund Mortimer. Betty Bouton and Margaret Fielding have the leading female roles.

"Silent Command" Highly Praised

Fox Special Given Commendation By All Reviewers of Trade Publications

"THE SILENT COMMAND," the Fox Film Corporation special production which opened an indefinite engagement at the Central theatre, New York, on Labor Day, has been the subject of considerable praise on the part of reviewers in the national trade journals.

Below are quoted excerpts from the reviews appearing in the latest issues of the trade papers:

Moving Picture World: "Fox Film Corporation presents a picture that immediately pleases all lovers of good melodrama. It has dash and action, thrills and suspense combined with an absorbing story which has a novel and unexpected twist. And there is a continual increase in the tempo up to the whirlwind finish."

Motion Picture News: "Production headlights—the exceptional marine shots—the storm at sea—the sinking of the ship—the capable acting. Direction—creates a good climax—builds up important scenes so that suspense is dominant. Drawing Power—should go well everywhere."

The Film Daily: "Should do a profitable business. It is fine entertainment from the box office standpoint. It has all the elements of audience appeal necessary to make it a satisfying number."

Exhibitors Herald: "The picture has been well made and moves along swiftly up to the stirring climax. Edmund Lowe made a splendid Captain Decatur and he was given excellent support by Bela Lugosi, as the villain, Hisston, Carl Harbaugh, Martha Mansfield and Alma Tell."

Trade Review: "William Fox has succeeded in his endeavor to present a picture that will not only entertain but will make the public appreciate the dangers that the men of the navy are called upon to contend with."

N. Y. Critics Acclaim "Gold Diggers"

Screen Versio nof Belasco Play Wins Approval At Rialto Theatre Showing

SELDOM has the version of a highly successful stage play scored such a complete success as the Warner Bros. filmization of David Belasco's famous Broadway hit, "The Gold Diggers," by Avery Hopwood. Newspaper critics and reviewers acclaimed the presentation of the Warner Classic at the Rialto theatre, New York, and laid particular stress on the fact that the play did not suffer in its transformation into a photoplay.

"Somehow we were very much afraid that a screen version of 'The Gold Diggers' was going to be disappointing," wrote Harriet Underhill in the N. Y. Tribune. "So it is with delight that we state 'The Gold Diggers' is quite as good a picture as it was a play."

In the New York World, Quinn Martin wrote, "The first of the four stage plays which David Belasco turned over for a slight consideration to the Warner Brothers for filming came into the Rialto yesterday. It is Avery Hopwood's 'The Gold Diggers,' which Ina Claire under the management of Mr. Belasco, made famous on Broadway a few seasons ago . . . by virtue of an exceptionally charming performance by Hope Hampton, and an unusually laughable comedy characterization by Louise Fazenda, the picture is remarkably entertaining.

"A wholesome breeziness, spontaneous gayety and genuine humor prevade the screen version.

Fake Mediums Picture Is Approved

"Is Conan Doyle Right" Declared An Out of Ordinary Two-reel Novelty

PATHE'S startling screen expose of fake mediums, which was released September 16th, won the unqualified endorsement of the trade-press reviewers upon the occasion of its trade showing last week. The reviewers, in the course of their opinions, emphasized the opportunities for effective exploitation in this two-reeler with its mystifying action and possibilities of arousing discussion, and also described the production as a decided innovation in the field of two-reel novelties.

The Motion Picture News reviewer wrote as follows: "In the first place this subject does not give the answer to the question proposed—and therein lies the principal advantage for the clever showman. The picture is an expose of fraudulent practices as employed by fake mediums in fleecing gullible patrons who seek contact with the spirit world. Here at last is a 'showman's picture' in the short-subject field. As to the manner of mounting this expose of spurious spiritualistic practitioners, the entire subject has been handled in a highly entertaining manner."

Film Daily writes: "This two-reeler 'Is Conan Doyle Right?' gives in interesting fashion a number of the methods used by 'fake' spiritualists or so-called mediums in obtaining money from credulous persons who thoroughly believe that they have been put in touch with departed spirits. Aside from the novelty of the reel, the subject matter is such that it will, in all probability, cause discussion among your patrons and that is always good."

The Moving Picture World reviewer expressed the following opinion: "Almost anyone will follow with interest the revelation of the fake methods which so-called mediums employ for their own personal gains.

Many Sales for "Broken Hearts of Broadway"

Irving Cummings' production, "Broken Hearts of Broadway," has been unusually successful in the short space of time that it has been offered on the independent market, according to Mr. Cummings.

The picture opened at the Criterion theatre in Atlantic City to unusually large business and has been booked to open at one of the leading Stanley theatres in Philadelphia. It has played the Finkelstein and Rubin houses in Minneapolis and St. Paul. And has been bought by Capital Film exchange in New York, Moscow Film Co., Boston, All Star Distributing Co., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Griever of Chicago, Ill., Mid-West iDstributing Co., Milwaukee, F. & R. Film Co., Minn., E. Mandelbaum, Ohio, Lee Goldberg, Louisville, Ky., Royal Picture Corp., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. Cummings will produce a series of independent pictures to be sold on the State Right market.

Press Book Prepared on "Call of Wild"

In pursuance with Pathe's policy of co-operation with the exhibitor in the effective presentation of Pathe product to the public, an elaborate sixteen-page campaign book has been prepared on Hal Roach's screen adaptation of Jack London's famous dog story, "The Call of the Wild," which has just completed a highly successful four weeks' run at the California and Miller's theatres in Los Angeles, and will be generally released September 23rd to the exhibitors of the country.

Every phase of advertising, publicity, and exploitation is covered. Accompanying the campaign book in the form of inserts are a press sheet of newspaper dimensions, a handsome rotogravure supplement, and a thematic cue sheet.

Bill Hart Shooting "Wild Bill Hickok"

William S. Hart and the numerous members of his company engaged in the production of "Wild Bill Hickok" have materially increased the population of Victorville, Cal., where the Paramount star has established his temporary headquarters.

Under the direction of Clifford Smith, location scenes for this stirring tale of pioneer days, are being filmed in the vicinity of Victorville and the town will also be used as a background for some of the important action.

William S. Hart wrote the original story of "Wild Bill Hickok" and J. C. Hawks adapted it to the screen.

Production to Start on "Everyday Love"

William de Mille is scheduled to start production work on his forthcoming Paramount picture, "Everyday Love," at the West Coast studio September 20. Nita Naldi will play one of the featured roles.

"Everyday Love" was adapted by Clara Beranger from Julian Street's novel, "Rita Coventry."

"Broadway Gold" Wins Praise of Critics

Elaine Hammerstein in "Broadway Gold," the first production of a series with this star being franchised on the independent market by Truart Film Corporation, in addition to obtaining first-run representation in practically every center in which it has been thus far released, is also receiving unusual praise from the critics throughout the country, according to Truart.

Mae Tinee, in the Chicago Tribune, had this to say about "Broadway Gold":

"The picture as a whole is real. It's built from a good story that has mystery well sustained, love interest that keeps you guessing, and a plot that forms a pretty solid foundation for the whole. 'Broadway Gold,' with its wealth and worry, is one of the best of its kind I have seen."

When the picture played at the Lyric, Springfield, Ill., the Register commented:

"A tale that is decidedly unique and unusual. Miss Hammerstein as the chorus-girl is superb."

While playing first-run at the Apollo, Indianapolis, the Star said:

"The picture goes on without halting for breath. There are many exciting things that happen."

Distribute Lewis Photos at Postal Conventions

Several thousand autographed photos of Ralph Lewis, star of Emory Johnson's production, "The Mail Man," were distributed at the conventions of the letter carriers at Providence, R. I., and postal clerks at El Paso, Texas, last week, as a means of further exploiting the F. B. O. attraction among the workers of the postal service.

The distribution of the picture was handled by postmen from Los Angeles, who have already reviewed most of the Johnson picture as it was being cut and titled and who were so impressed with its dramatic development that they offered their services as special emissaries at the conventions for F. B. O.

Priscilla Dean Coming Waited in Mexico

"When Priscilla Dean comes to Mexico City on a personal appearance, if she does—and we have been trying to get her for a long time—she will get a bigger reception than was accorded Francisco Madero when he marched into Mexico City on horseback and overthrew the Diaz government."

Such was the statement made by Carlos Whitley, manager of the Ufa theatre, a 1,200-seat house of Mexico City, on a recent visit to Universal City where he inspected the methods of motion picture production in the Laemmle studios.

"Priscilla Dean is the greatest individual box-office attraction on the screen in Mexico," he further said. "We are looking forward now to 'White Tiger' and 'Drifting,' having played 'Under Two Flags' most successfully of any picture up to date."

Critics Approve "Mothers-in-Law"

Reviewers of New York Newspapers Give Praise to Gasnier Production

THE critics of the New York daily papers were loud in praise of "Mothers-in-Law." The general opinion was that it was Gasnier's finest production.

The New York Telegram said:

"'Mothers-in-Law,' in fiction and cartoon, are either comedy or tragedy. At the Cameo theatre last night in a premier performance a Gasnier production made them human beings.

"'Mothers-inLaw' stands out as one of the really worth-while pictures of the season.

"The early setting—the farmhouse that is old fashioned, the kind imagination pictures—has a certain wholesomeness about it that acts as a counter to the general blaseness of city life.

"The story is well told. The excitement and interest hold the audience. The action in the artist's studio is as elaborate and as well presented as any of the great theatrical productions."

The New York Evening World said:

"Mother-in-law jokes are all wrong. That is, if one believes the story told by 'Mothers-in-Law.' For the first time in screen history the mother-in-law comes in for her share of sympathy, and, judging from the applause of the young folks present, they seemed to agree with the film moral.

"Anyway, it tells a charming story in a very acceptable way, and we're right here to say that we were among those who applauded."

The New York Sun and Globe said:

"If you enjoy an avalanche of sentiment you will like this picture."

Pathe Booking Policy Is Unchanged

Not to Be Modified by Campaign for All-Pathe Program and Comedy Days

IN a statement emanating from the Pathe Home-office this week, announcement is made that Pathe's established booking policy will not be modified in any way by its recently announced campaign in behalf of all-Pathe-programs and extra-Pathe comedy-days.

All releases appearing on the Pathe program will continue as heretofore to be available to exhibitors on an individual basis, just as the theatre-owner prefers to arrange his bookings. Under this booking policy, contracts will not require the inclusion of any additional subjects in order that the theatre owner may secure the picture or the series that he especially desires. The open-booking policy will be pursued consistently with reference to all forthcoming Pathe releases, declares the Pathe statement.

From the viewpoint of the theatre-owner, the Pathe policy of selective booking becomes of highest importance in view of the huge production schedule now under way at the studios of Pathe's producing companies on the West Coast. This production schedule is the most elaborate in point of variety and numbers that has yet been undertaken under the Pathe banner. Both the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett producing organizations are faced with an especially arduous schedule in the two-reel field. During the coming season Pathe, under the plans laid down, will make available to the exhibitors of the country the most extensive array of two-reel attractions that it has lined up since launching upon the two-reel comedy field two years ago.

The Hal Roach production schedule is a particularly heavy one, calling in the two-reel classification for thirteen "Our Gang" laugh provokers, thirteen Will Rogers vehicles, and the same number of Stan Laurel comedies. In "The Spat Family" series there will be six two-reel productions made during the current season. In the field of one-reelers, the Hal Roach plans call for fifty-two one reelers including "Snub" Pollard comedies and the "Dippy Doo Dads" series. This schedule will provide Pathe exhibitors with a one-reel comedy release a week, and at the same time obviate the necessity of showing the same one-reel brand each week where the Pathe one-reel comedies may be made a permanent and continuous feature of a theatre's program.

On the Mack Sennett lot production activities are geared up to a high pitch to meet the Pathe distribution schedule of thirteen all-star comedies and eight Ben Turpin starring vehicles for the coming season. One subject from the all-star comedy series will be released every four weeks, while the Ben Turpin productions will be made available at greater intervals. Both these comedy brands are in two reels.

"Country Kid" Praised at Preview

Following the final cutting and editing of the new Warner Bros. feature, "The Country Kid," starring Wesley Barry, a preview was given at the Apollo theatre, Hollywood. Albert Dorris, motion picture critic on the Hollywood News, was lavish in his praise of the new picture.

"'The Country Kid' is excellent—and it did not cost a million—yet, there it is, thoroughly delightful and adequate. It is a picture any human man or woman can enjoy, even though it will go over the heads of the highbrows who wallow in art without knowing what it really means, and who have lost their perspective on the common people who have always made life what it really is.

"'The Country Kid' is a very inexpensive picture when a person is talking about million dollar productions, yet it is wonderfully rich in entertaining qualities and a tremendous mint in humanity."

Press Book Issued for "Eternal Struggle"

An unusually fine press sheet has just been issued by Metro for the Reginald Barker production, "The Eternal Struggle." Besides being an example of orderly, perfect make-up it has an aggregation of exhibitor's aids sufficient to round out a complete campaign in any territory. A strong line of exploitation suggestions and novelties, publicity and advertising fill the pages to profusion.

Newspaper stories of every kind and of different lengths are provided. A special magazine page intended for magazine or Sunday feature page is included. The publicity pages are interspersed with cuts of stars and scenes of all sizes, easily available from Metro exchanges throughout the country in either cut or mat form. A fine array of paper, of attractive color scheme, is also included and also a complete lobby display including lobby stills, hangers, paintings, slides and window cards.

Agnes Ayres Mistress of Grape Festival

Agnes Ayers, Paramount star, was chosen mistress of the Grape Day celebration held at Escondido, Cal., September 8.

According to the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, fruit production in Los Angeles County is the third industry with a weekly pay roll of over a quarter of a million dollars. The motion picture industry, producing in the neighborhood of seventy-five per cent. of all the pictures made, has a payroll of over half a million weekly and over one hundred millions annually.

A. G. Bennett, secretary of Escondido's Grape Day committee, wrote to Miss Ayres conveying the committee's invitation to serve Escondido as mistress of the celebrations.

"Virginian" Cast Signs for Leading Roles

When Tom Forman finished his screen version of Owen Wister's "The Virginian," the members of the cast set a record unique in the history of motion pictures. Four of the players immediately signed contracts to play leading roles in feature pictures.

Kenneth Harlan, playing the title role in "The Virginian," was selected for the principal male role in the picturization of "White Man," the successful novel from the pen of George Agnew Chamberlain. B. P. Schulberg will begin the production of this Preferred Picture within the next few weeks. Tom Forman will direct.

Florence Vidor, depicting "Molly Wood," began work in the featured role of "The Winning of Barbara Worth" from the novel by that name by Harold Bell Wright.

Pat O'Malley, the "Steve" of the Wister story, has just begun work in the leading male role of "My Mamie Rose," playing opposite Mary Philbin.

Sam Allen in the part of the aged Lothario, "Uncle Hughey," has just begun the study of the leading role in "Lightnin'."

Madge Evans, in Vitagraph's "On the Banks of the Wabash"

Ned Holmes Will Exploit "Puritan Passions"

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is planning everything in a big way for its latest super feature, "Puritan Passions," in which Glenn Hunter is the star. A New York theatre is being sought where this Film Guild production will be given its metropolitan premiere with many unusual accompaniments

To insure every possible box office angle of "Puritan Passions" being utilized and developed, Ned Holmes has been engaged by Hodkinson in an advisory capacity. Holmes will supervise the publicising, advertising and exploitation of "Puritan Passions."

Meighan Making "Woman Proof" Scenes in S. F.

Thomas Meighan, accompanied by his wife and thirty members of the cast of "Woman-Proof," the latest George Ade picture play, written especially for the Paramount star. has left Los Angeles for work on location in San Francisco.

Some unusually interesting location work has been done in making the current feature, including a stay for several days by the entire company in the high Sierras, 20 miles above Cascada, where construction work that fits into the story perfectly is in progress on a mammoth hydro-electric power plant for the Southern California Edison Company.

"Puritan Passions" May Appear on Broadway

There is a possibility that "Puritan Passions," the picturization of Percy MacKaye's "The Scarecrow," starring Glenn Hunter, and produced by the Film Guild for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, will have its premiere on Broadway, New York, sometime in the near future.

Sax Adopts Look and Book Policy

Exchanges Report Exceptional Results on Weber and North Product

SAM SAX, National Sales Manager for L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, has inaugurated a new sales plan for "Marriage Morals" and "Don't Marry for Money," which he calls the "look and book" policy.

Announcement of the plan was withheld until it was afforded an opportunity to prove itself. The policy was at first limited to five groups of exchanges, Masterpiece Film Attractions, of Philadelphia; Bond Photoplays, of Buffalo and Albany; Apollo Exchange, New York; All Star Feature Distributors, of San Francisco and Los Angeles, and Federated Film Exchange of Boston.

Mr. Sax outlined the policy to these exchanges, whereby none was to ask an exhibitor for a contract on either "Marriage Morals" or "Don't Marry for Money." On the other hand, both pictures were to be shown—the sale to rest entirely with the exhibitor after viewing them, and the pictures sold either separately or together.

In only three instances were sales made singly, and in each case the exhibitor pleaded a lack of sufficient open dates to take both.

The Apollo Exchange was the only one that did not utilize the wire, but made the report in memorandum form, with the information that forty-four houses had been booked in addition to the Loew circuit.

Bond Photoplays announced ten of the major cities closed in their territory with numerous subsequent runs.

All-Star Feature Distributors wired as follows: "'Marriage Morals' and 'Don't Marry for Money' booking fast under your look and book plan."

"Thirteen first run bookings first day of look and book policy," was the answer of Federated Film Exchange of Boston.

Masterpiece Film Attractions wire as terse, but pointed. "Mailing contracts today contracts five first runs thirty-one subsequent runs and fourteen smaller towns. Look and book policy proves itself."

Sam Sax is naturally much elated over the immediate success of the policy. He said, "It simply proves my contention that there is a very healthy independent market. Show what you have, and if it possesses real merit, the exhibitor will want it."

"Meanest Man in World" Previewed

Irving Lesser Is Host to Trade Paper Critics At Showing on Long Island

IRVING LESSER, vice-president of Principal Pictures Corporation, entertained a party which comprised trade paper critics and members of the First National advertising and publicity department at a pre-view of the screen version of George M. Cohan's stage success, "The Meanest Man in the World," at the Bayside theatre, Bayside, L. I., on the evening of September 13th. The "Meanest Man in the World" was recently announced as a First National picture.

The party, which numbered about twenty, motored to the Belleclaire Country Club, where dinner was served. Immediately after the critics and guests were taken to the local theatre where, without any advance notice, "The Meanest Man in the World" was screened before a capacity house. The audience accorded the picture an enthusiastic reception, punctuating the showing in a score of places by hearty applause.

Among those in the party were: Irving Lesser, Harry Wilson, Laurence Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sewell, Joseph Plunkett, Sidney Smith, Joe Dannenberg, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Watts, Miss Marjorie Adams, photoplay editor of the Boston-Globe; Lynde Denig, Bruce Gallup, Matt Taylor, Walter Eberhardt, C. L. Yearsley, Eddie Eckels, W. E. Mulligan, C. E. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. John Spargo, Max Roth and Ed McNamee.

"The Meanest Man in the World" is enacted by a cast headed by Bert Lytell, Bryant Washburn, Blanche Sweet, Ward Crane, Victor Potel and others.

Carlos Seeking Coming Truart Stories

A great deal of the time A. Carlos, head of Carlos Productions, making pictures for Truart Film Corporation release, will spend in New York, will be devoted to the consideration of plays and stories upon which the future activities of these units will be based.

The unit which made "The Unknown Purple" will start immediately upon his return to the Coast upon another all-star production which will be based upon one of the outstanding stage successes of the past year, now under consideration.

In addition to this vehicles will be obtained for the three forthcoming Richard Talmadge productions during 1923-24.

Production for both units will be started immediately upon Mr. Carlos' return to Los Angeles.

Forrest Signs for Lead With Mary Pickford

Allan Forrest would rather be leading man for Mary Pickford than a star in his own film.

On completion of his work in the role of Nikky in "Long Live the King," Jackie Coogan's latest production, Jack Coogan, Sr., is said to have offered Forrest a two-year contract. At the same time another producing company went to Forrest with an offer to star him.

While he was considering these two propositions Miss Pickford decided she wanted Mr. Forrest as her leading man in her forthcoming film version of "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," upon which she will soon begin actual production work. After weighing the opportunities presented in these three offers, he decided to accept that of Miss Pickford. Hence he will be seen in the role of Sir John Manners.

Hepworth to Distribute Eight Features

Announcement was made this week by Hepworth Distributing Corporation that its 1923-1924 output of eight special productions will be released on an attractive and equitable franchise plan to independent exchanges.

Joseph di Lorenzo, secretary of the corporation, and in charge of distribution, said that Cecil M. Hepworth, who has been producing pictures in London for over twenty years, is confining his activities on productions to the type of photoplay specially suited for the American market.

"So confident are we of the quality and box office value of these productions," said Mr. di Lorenzo, "that we are opening, within the next month, our own exchange to serve the Greater New York territory."

"Daytime Wives" Wins Praises on Coast

Critics of the Los Angeles daily papers gave high praise to F. B. O.'s "Daytime Wives," one of that organization's important autumn releases, on the occasion of its West coast premiere at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre, Monday, August 27th.

James N. Gruen, dramatic editor of the Examiner wrote: "'Daytime Wives' will undoubtedly arouse a lot of discussion. Emile Chautard did a creditable job of directing this picture."

Ted Taylor wrote in the Times: "A young lady who is due to travel a long way on the road to fame and fortune if her work in this picture is any indication, takes one of the three leads. She is Derelys Perdue, whose sweetness and sincerity as Ruth Holt, secretary to the building contractor, makes her at once welcome. A very human story is told by the flickering shadows."

S. F. Exchange Purchases Weber, North Product

Miss Mildred Rosenfield, representing the All Star Feature Distributors, of San Francisco, has purchased "Marriage Morals" and "Don't Marry For Money," from L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North for California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

Miss Rosenfield consummated the deal with Sam Sax, National Sales Manager for L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, after screening both pictures.

"U" Company Departs for Mountain Scenes

Jack Hoxie and a large cast have departed for Lone Pine, in the high Sierras, where the outdoor scenes of "Riders of the Moon," Hoxie's new Universal feature, will be filmed under the direction of Robert North Bradbury.

It is an original story by Isadore Bernstein, dealing with adventures of night riders.

In the cast are Elinor Field, Fred Kohler, William Welsh, Frank Rice, Ralph Fee McCullough, Jim Walsh, Ben Corbett and others.

Universal Busy with Productions

Warning of Period of Depression Not Taken Seriously from Indications

A moving picture authority has issued a warning to the trade that the industry is facing a period of depression following an unusual expansion during the last three or four months. He cites the unusual prices paid to screen stars, the scramble to sign them up at hitherto unheard-of prices and the feverish effort to provide as many films as possible for early Fall showing.

A glance at Universal City's production sheets and Universal's plans for the next few months fail to find any slackening of the industry at this important point. On the other hand, Universal City seems to be entering a period of intensive activity seldom if ever exceeded. Four big Jewel productions are now in various stages of completion. One is Priscilla Dean's picture "The Storm Daughter," by Leet Renick Brown, which is being directed by George Archainbaud. Another is Reginald Denny's first Jewel since finishing "The Leather Pushers" and is entitled "The Spice of Life," by Byron Morgan, which is being directed by Harry Pollard. A third is Virginia Valli in Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel "A Lady of Quality," and the fourth is Rita Weiman's stage play, "The Acquittal," with Claire Windsor, Norman Kerry and Richard Travers.

This week four more Jewels, which are Universal's capitol size pictures, will go into production. Of these probably the most important is Booth Tarkington's "The Turmoil," which Hobart Henley will make. George Hackathorne, Eileen Percy, Eleanor Boardman and Emmett Corrigan have the principal roles. The second production is "My Mamie Rose," by Owen Kildare in which Mary Philbin, the screen sensation of "Merry Go Round," will be starred. It is to be directed by Irving Cummings. Next comes little Baby Peggy's third feature "The Right to Love," by Bernard McConville, which Jesse Robbins will direct. The fourth is a sensational telegraph story entitled "The Signal Tower," by Wadsworth Camp. Clarence Brown will handle it.

The week following, Hoot Gibson will start a long planned feature of early western life entitled "The Pony Express," under the direction of Edward Sedgwick.

Four companies are working regularly on five reel productions of lesser importance.

Tiffany-Truart Units All at Work

Five Companies Busily Engaged in Turning Out Product for Season

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice president and general manager of Tiffany Productions and Truart Film Corporation, reports the greatest activity of that corporation since it entered the ranks of the independent productions.

Five units, within the next ten days, will be busily engaged in turning out product for the 1923-24 season. Director Bob Leonard, director-general of the Tiffany Productions, is in the midst of work on "Fashion Row," Mae Murray's second vehicle of the season. The Mae Murray productions are released through Metro Pictures Corporation.

Larry Semon, recently signed to a long-term contract by Truart, will soon be shooting on "The Girl in the Limousine," adapted from A. H. Woods' stage success, by Wilson Collison and Avery Hopwood. This is the first of the farceur's pictures for Truart and will be followed immediately by picturizations of three other stage triumphs during the present film year.

Elaine Hammerstein is well into work on "The Drums of Jeopardy," adapted from Harold MacGrath's novel under the direction of Edward Dillon. Three other stories have already been selected for the balance of the current year series and these will be announced shortly.

Richard Talmadge will soon begin work on the second Truart picture, being produced by Carlos Productions. The novel is now being adapted.

The fifth unit which will be under way within a short time is the Carlos Productions all-star unit which has just completed "The Unknown Purple." A big stage play, for which A. Carlos is completing negotiations in New York will be the basis of this production and work on the adaptation is already proceeding.

Mr. Hoffman expects within the next thirty days to have an additional unit at work, which will complete the plans of Tiffany-Truart for the coming year.

Anthony Does Titles For "Drivin' Fool"

Walter Anthony did the titles for the Regents Pictures Corporation's comedy drama of automobile thrills entitled "The Drivin' Fool," for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Jackie Coogan delivers his first for Metro, "Long Live the King," to Vice-President Joe Engel of Metro's West Coast Plant.

Postal Delegates Guests at Powers Studio

More than one hundred delegates to the National Federation of Postal Clerks' Convention which took place last week at El Paso, Texas, visited Hollywood to see Emory Johnson's production "The Mail Man," which pays a tribute to the ideals and loyalty of mail workers throughout the nation.

Led by Thomas Flaherty, editor of the Postal Clerk, the official national clerks' publication, they went out to the Powers lot in a big motor bus. They were shown the various companies at work and then enjoyed a special pre-view of "The Mail Man." Emory Johnson and his talented mother, Emilie Johnson, who writes all of her son's stories and who also conceived "The Mail Man," were also introduced to the mail workers.

Zane Grey in Arizona for "Call of Canyon"

Zane Grey, famous American novelist, has gone to Flagstaff, Arizona, to confer with Director Victor Fleming on the production of "The Call of the Canyon," the second of Mr. Grey's stories to be picturized by Paramount. He is accompanied by Lucien Hubbard and the three will be in conference for several days.

Mr. Fleming and members of the cast have been in the vicinity of Flagstaff during the past two weeks making scenes on the identical spots described by Mr. Grey in this story of Western life.

Chautauqua Commends "If Winter Comes"

"IF WINTER COMES," the William Fox translation of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, was the subject of cordial commendation on the part of the American Chautauqua Institution in a letter voluntarily addressed to Fox Film Corporation this week.

"I am sure you will be interested to know the unusual satisfaction which we feel in reference to the presentation here of 'If Winter Comes'," writes Charles H. Tarbox, an official of the organization.

His letter continues, in part: "From the way some of the people spoke, the audience's reaction was very favorable to the picture. It is therefore a real tribute to the production, the director and the producer.

"I feel sure you will have a splendid success with the picture."

"Eternal Struggle" Is Lauded in Chicago

Both press and public approved "The Eternal Struggle," the new Reginald Barker production of the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces at the showing at the Chicago theatre last week, according to Metro.

"'The Eternal Struggle' has been well produced," wrote Mae Tinee, critic in the Chicago Tribune. "There's rather an original twist to the plot, a nice dangerous storm and enough love making to please the State Street flapper."

"The drama takes place against snowy backgrounds and amid beautiful scenery," wrote Genevieve Harris in the Chicago Post. "It is all excellently photographed. The story is skillfully handled so that the outcome is in doubt for a long time. The picture is entertaining melodrama."

With Renee Adoree in the cast are Earle Williams, Pat O'Malley, Josef Swickard, Barbara La Marr, Wallace Beery and other noted players.

"Spanish Dancer" Is Acclaimed

Paramount Executives and District Managers Approve Pola Negri Feature

THAT Herbert Brenon, in his Paramount production "The Spanish Dancer," in which Pola Negri is starred, has turned out not only an artistic masterpiece butone of the greatest box-office attractions of this year of big pictures, is the unanimous opinion of the Paramount home office executives and district managers who saw the picture at the Criterion theatre Tuesday morning.

In "The Spanish Dancer," they say, is seen the Pola Negri of "Passion" and "Gypsy Love." The cast, headed by Antonio Moreno, is well balanced and extremely capable, the settings are magnificent and the story most skillfully unfolded, leading up to a thrilling climax and a most logical and satisfying conclusion, it is claimed.

Among those who witnessed an advance showing of the picture in Los Angeles was Hallett Abend, editor of The Preview, the weekly film magazine published by the Los Angeles Times, who, in the issue out under date of October 3 says:

"'The Panish Dancer' is Pola Negri's best American-made film. It is a well balanced production of many fine parts, all handled with sureness, convincing fidelity and artistry. Direction, settings, photography, costuming—all of these things are magnificent.

"Most of all, it tells a gripping, colorful story in a logical way. It moves with certainty and precision. At times, indeed, it moves so swiftly that it sweeps one away from the world of today into the romantic past of high adventures, great passions and clashing conflicts. In other words, it is a production that will help to make motion picture history in this season of release of 'bigger and better' photoplays."

Topical Comedies Proving Popular

Grey Finds Story Based on Current Happening Meets General Approval

THE topical comedy—one based on some current happening or current craze of note—is the most successful picture comedy today, according to Tommy Grey, supervisor of comedy production at Universal City, following a tour of the country that took him to New York, Chicago and many other cities, where he interviewed exchange officials and exhibitors to ascertain the most desirable form of comedies from the seller's standpoint.

"Opinions were widely divergent," he says. "Some cities prefer one comedian, some another, but out of it I arrived at a sort of average conclusion that I think is enlightening.

"Topical comedies—that is, comedies based on widely known happenings or new crazes—seem to be the best sellers.

"As to comedians, my trip has taught me that we must make more of the Chuck Reisner comedies, his first series, 'The Pencil Pusher,' in which his adventures as a newspaper reporter are shown, are in great demand. The Bert Roach comedies are also in lively demand, but since Bert's elevation to big features I don't know whether I'll be able to get him again. Universal is using him in bigger things now.

"The old-style of comedy chase and mishaps has passed; the day of custard pie in pictures is gone forever, and the Reisner type of comedy has supplanted it. Hokum seems dead."

Special Orchestra For "Try and Get It"

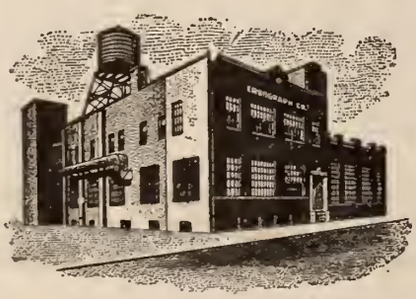
Ben Bernie's orchestra, one of the big time vaudeville attractions was used in several scenes of Bryant Washburn's "Try and Get It," his first Grand-Asher production. Mr. Bernie brought his remarkable aggregation of musicians direct from one of the local theatres. On a specially constructed stage at the Grand studio, they dispensed sweet or jazzy music while the cameras ground.

"Hell's Hole" Next Fox Special for Release

"HELL'S HOLE" will be the sixth Fox Film Corporation special to be released during the present season. According to announcements this week, this big production, which features the popular Charles Jones, is scheduled for distribution September 23.

The first five specials already released are "If Winter Comes," "Soft Boiled," "The Eleventh Hour," "The Silent Command" and "Monna Vanna." "If Winter Comes" and "The Silent Command" are now showing in Broadway theatres for indefinite engagements.

Jones is supported by Ruth Clifford and Maurice Flynn. Others in the cast are Kathleen Key, Hardy Kirkland and Eugene Paulette.



The adaptation by Bernard McConville is from the original story by George Scarborough.

Fashion Revue Staged For "Try and Get It"

Thousands of dollars' worth of gorgeous imported gowns, hats and shoes from Swobi's exclusive shops, Los Angeles, were employed in a magnificent fashion revue staged at the Grand studio this week by Peggy Hamilton, regarded among the foremost fashion directors in this country. Furs from Willard George were also displayed upon a dozen or more of the loveliest models in the city, each of whom is celebrated for some especial characteristic of feminine pulchritude.

The revue was used in Bryant Washburn's first Grand-Asher picture directed by Cullen Tate, called "Try and Get It." The gowns were from such celebrated Parisian modistes as Worth, Jenney, Jean Patou, Poriet, Milgrim, Massaue, Lanvin and Premet. The feature will be pleasing to feminine film goers as the modes are all well in advance of current fashion.

"Six Cylinder Love" on B'way Soon

"SIX CYLINDER LOVE," the stage success starring Ernest Truex which William Fox has made into a screen comedy under the direction of Elmer Clifton, will be introduced to Broadway shortly. It will be recalled that the William Anthony McGuire play is an automobile story, a condition which the moving picture version has developed with entertaining realism, it is said.

Deluxe Acquires Truart Franchise

Through Alexander S. Aronson, General Manager of Sales, of Truart Film Corporation, negotiations were completed this week with Mike, Al and Lou Rosenberg, whereby their independent exchange, the De Luxe Feature Films, Seattle, Washington, acquired the Truart franchise for the territory comprising Washington, Oregon, Montana, northern Idaho and Alaska.

This exchange is already handling the Edward Dillon production "Women Men Marry," which is being franchised by Truart, and the new deal starts with Elaine Hammerstein in "Broadway Gold," to be followed by "The Drums of Jeopardy" and the three succeeding Hammerstein special productions. The arrangement also includes "The Empty Cradle."

C. B. C. Issues Attractive Sales Folder

As another means of co-operating with its franchise holders, and helping to get its product to exhibitors and other interested parties in the most attractive form, the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation has issued an attractive sales folder.

The folder is printed in two colors and gives in display form the features which C. B. C. is producing and distributing this year, together with a short synopsis and the casts featured in each production.

"Forgive and Forget," "Yesterday's Wife," "The Marriage Market," "Innocence," "Pal O' Mine," "Traffic in Hearts," "Discontented Husbands" and "The Barefoot Boy," are all effectively treated.

Authoress to See "Long Live The King"

Mary Roberts Rinehart, famous American authoress, whose brain child "Long Live the King" has just been filmed by Jackie Coogan, will go to Los Angeles to see the celluloid version of her "pet" novel at its premiere presentation in that city.

"Long Live the King" was directed by Victor Schertzinger and adapted for the screen by C. Gardner Sullivan, with continuity by Eve Unsell. Frank Good photographed and Irene Morra edited the photoplay. The entire production was under the personal supervision of Jack Coogan, Senior.

Essay Contest for School Children

Will Complete for Associated Exhibitors Awards on "David Copperfield"

A $3,000 prize essay contest country-wide, open to pupils of both public and private schools, is the monster project announced this week by Associated Exhibitors, in connection with the coming distribution of its seven part feature, "David Copperfield," to be released September 23rd. The competition is intended to interest pupils, teachers and parents in the high type of picture which this adaptation of Charles Dickens's masterpiece represents.

Three hundred and thirty students will profit from the offer, and, in addition, the three schools, of whatever character and wherever located, having the largest number of prize-winning pupils in proportion to enrollment, will receive cash awards, to be applied on school libraries or for whatever purpose the school authorities may elect.

The pupils' prizes will be awarded to two groups—to students 12 years of age or under, on March 31st, and to those 13 and over on that date. Essays of 500 words or fewer are to be submitted, the younger children writing on the subject, "The Characters I Like Best in 'David Copperfield,' and Why," and the older contestants discussing the question, "In a 5-Reel Motion Picture of 'David Copperfield,' Which Scenes and Characters Should be Included?"

To each group 165 cash prizes are to be given—a first prize of $100, four prizes of $25 each, and 160 of $5 each, a total of $2,000 to be distributed among 330 contestants. Three additional prizes aggregating $1,000—$500, $300 and $200, will be awarded to the schools with the greatest number of prize-winners, in proportion to enrollment. If a tie occurs the prize affected is to be divided.

The list of judges, each of whom has endorsed the project and expressed a willingness to serve, includes Miss Olive M. Jones, the president of the National Education Association; Miss Gertrude Lane, editor of Woman's Home Companion; James K. West, president of the Boy Scouts of America, and William A. Johnston, editor of the Motion Picture News.

"Courtship" Booked by Grauman

World Premiere of Charles Ray Production for Los Angeles at $1.65 Top

CHARLES RAY'S production, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," will have its world premiere at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles, beginning September 24. It has been booked by Sid Grauman as the first picture under his new two-a-day long-run policy at $1.65 top admission price.

Announcement of this booking was made this week by John S. Woody, General Manager of Associated Exhibitors.

In this, the most ambitious effort of his career, Charles Ray has entered the realm of independent producer-stars who are seeking to draw from the cinema art the expression of its highest powers. While others have sought themes in foreign locales, he has taken a chapter of American history, the story of the adventure of the Pilgrim Fathers. He has threaded it with the love story of John Alden and Priscilla Mullins, as related to Longfellow's epic poem.

In "The Courtship of Miles Standish" Mr. Ray has entered the list of those producers, the cost of whose product is said to approach the million dollar mark. The picture, now in ten reels, involved more than eight months' historical research and physical work, and a financial outlay declared to be more than $800,000. Eight cameras shot nearly 200,000 feet of film from as many angles for scenes in the production, 10,000 feet being finally culled from this vast footage. In the cast are eighty-seven name parts, said to be the largest number ever to appear in a motion picture.

The piece de resistance in the production is the Mayflower, an exact replica—save that it is of steel construction—of the historic craft, being built at a cost it is stated, of $64,000—a sum as large as many entire pictures entail. This "set," the costliest of its dimensions ever built, is such a remarkable work of art that patriotic societies of California have urged that it be purchased and placed in one of the city parks of Los Angeles as a permanent memorial. From 70 to 100 men were employed for eleven weeks on this single construction. Persons who have had pre-views declare that the sea storm scenes in which the Mayflower figures are the most realistic of the kind ever filmed.

Supreme Photoplays Buys "Barefoot Boy"

Territorial buyers are said to be expressing great interest in the new Mission Film Corporation feature, "The Barefoot Boy," which C. B. C. is distributing.

The latest sale to be completed is that to Supreme Photoplays Co., Inc., of Pittsburgh, which purchased the feature for the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia territory.

"Where North Begins" for Red Cross

THE Red Cross Chapter of Oyster Bay selected the Warner feature, "Where the North Begins," starring the police dog hero, Rin-tin-tin, as the special feature to be shown at the Lyrice theatre in Oyster Bay in the local benefit to swell the relief fund for devastated Japan.

Mrs. F. L. Lutz, chairman of the Emergency Relief of New York City and treasurer of the Oyster Bay Chapter of the Red Cross, was in charge of the arrangements and selected "Where the North Begins" because of its unusual appeal to all classes and because of its power as a drawing card, it is said.

"Spat Family," "Our Gang" for N. Y. Strand

The Mark Strand theatre, New York City, has booked the entire current series of 'The Spat Family" and the "Our Gang" Comedies, which are being distributed by Pathe. This assures Broadway presentations for both these Hal Roach brands of two-reel laugh-provokers and their subsequent showing in the other palatial Mark Strand house in Brooklyn.

"Let's Build," the initial number of "The Spat Family" group, won the unqualified approval of trade-press critics upon its recent preview, being hailed as a genuine innovation in the two-reel comedy field. The "Our Gangs" have already scored in previous Broadway showings, being singled out for special commendation by the metropolitan critics, and the coming "kid" comedies in the new series are expected to add materially to their prestige as leaders in their field.

"Green Goddess" First on Honor Role

"The Green Goddess" has been placed first on the honor role of great feature specials of the last three months by F. W. Mordaunt Hall, motion picture critic of the New York Times. In a three column editorial article in the issue of September 16, Mr. Hall analyzes all of the productions which have been shown in legitimate theatres on Broadway, and then says:

"Summing it up, weighing the pros and cons, giving marks for good work and taking some of them away for deficient stories and misacting, we humbly conclude that the four best pictures of the quarter are 'The Green Goddess,' 'Rosita,' 'Little Old New York,' 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame.'"

FROM THE EXHIBITORS HERALD, AUGUST 25, 1923

THE BENN NEW STANLEY COMPANY HOUSE PHILADELPHIA, PA., WILL BE READY IN SEPTEMBER

THE new BENN THEATRE, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, probably the handsomest and most commodious in southwest PHILADELPHIA AND ONE OF THE LARGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT THEATRES IN THE CITY, WILL BE FORMALLY OPENED TO THE PUBLIC ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON, SEPTEMBER 1, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE STANLEY COMPANY OF AMERICA. The policy of the Benn will be the presentation of feature photoplays on first run in this section of the city, the best of music and the house will be operated along the lines of Stanley policy which means that the entertainment will be of the highest grade in every respect.

Boom Seen for Neighborhood

The new Benn Theatre is the result of the many requests made by the business men and residents of the section in which it is located and those from many squares surrounding 63rd and 64th streets, Woodlawn and Saybrook avenues, the block in which the new structure is located. This locality for miles about is fast becoming a densely populated section. Where, but a few years ago, was practically nothing but lots except for the buildings on Woodlawn avenue, is now built up with handsome stores and thousands of dwellings. All these have been but meagerly served in the way of theatrical entertainment. Except for the Orient Theatre, under the direction of Mr. Benn, and a few other smaller motion picture theatres, most of them lacking the accommodations necessary for the demand made upon their capacity, the residents have been compelled to go many blocks for the pleasure. Then, too, still more dwellings are being erected and a greater demand is being made for housing in that section in view of the fact that more than 50,000 new inhabitants are expected in the near future due to the fact that Henry Ford is to erect a huge exporting plant at Sixty-third street and Eastwick avenue while the Westinghouse Company is erecting another immense plant in that territory.

With this in mind and also the fact that there was no theatre adequate in capacity or environment to supply the demands now being made for better amusement places and that will be made in the near future, thousands of businesses and residents in Southwest West Philadelphia laid the facts before the Stanley Company of America and that organization at once called in their architects and plans were drawn for a new theatre and dance hall.

Auditorium Seats 2,000

In the Benn Theatre, the people of West Philadelphia have a place for amusement of which they feel proud. The lobby, the entrance to which is from Woodlawn avenue, is 25 feet wide and extends a distance of 100 feet to the theatre proper. The size of the theatre is 78 feet by 143 feet. It is of steel core with concrete foundations. The roof is of slate and gypsum slab. The stage is located at the west end of the auditorium and the seating capacity is 2,000. There are twenty fire exits of which ten lead to Saybrook avenue, and the balance to wide courts connected also to Saybrook avenue. The interior finish of the theatre is artistic, gold and ivory being the predominating colors. Mural paintings are above the lighting coves while the lighting throughout is of the direct type, the light trough being placed alongside of the theatre. The ceiling is of the vaulted type and is free from fixtures or obstructions of any kind.

In the spacious balcony are ladies' rest rooms with [illegible] exposures, no artificial being necessary, a lounge room for men, manager's offices, switchboard room, generating room, booth and other necessary spaces for the operation of the theatre. The ladies' rest rooms and the men's rooms are fitted in the most luxurious style, tile and marble being used in profusion, and they are well ventilated.

Excellent Projection Room

The layout of the booth and generating rooms is modern and the type has been well studied, both being [illegible] embodying the latest [illegible]. These include THREE MACHINES [illegible] spot light, and [illegible] any form of entertainment. The ventilation in these rooms, as well as in every other part of the theatre, is OF THE HIGHEST TYPE AND SUCH AS TO INSURE THE GREATEST DEGREE OF COMFORT FOR THE OPERATORS. There are stairways leading from the foyer to the balcony which will be found exceptionally pleasing in appearance and their artistry is enhanced and enriched by a handsome marble fountain on the lower landing.

The lighting [illegible] any of special note for it is said to be the "last word" in the up-to-the-second application of this work. It is augmented in the auditorium and a most beautiful effect is brought out by twelve ornamental plaster "odd" glasses from the ceiling supplied by three circuits of colors controlled by dimmers from the switchboard. The cove lights are also controlled there but connected with dimmers to bring out the lovely effects. The heating is of the direct type located underground by direct work. The ventilation is taken care of by four 8-foot diamond multiple blade fans of the reversible type to blow in or exhaust and capable of distributing 240,000 cubic feet of air per minute, making a perfectly well ventilated house.

The theatre is equipped throughout with fire alarm systems and also protected by the system of the Philadelphia Local Telegraph Company, communications between the various alarm locations in all parts of the theatre being taken care of by an extensive interior telephone system. To avoid any confusion in case it is desired to empty the house quickly, the house lights can be controlled from any part of the building by remote control switches. There is a buzzer alarm system to summon employees to any part of the house and one of the features of the Benn are cloak rooms for patrons and dressing rooms for attendants located in convenient places.

The orchestra pit is roomy and will contain the console of a Kimball organ which will be installed in the house. This is one of the latest type of instruments from these builders and closely follows the design of the organ in the Stanley Theatre. There will also be installed an Ampico concert grand player piano and additional means of musical entertainment will be provided by the Stanley Company of America. The plaster work here is highly enriched, especially the fronts of the organ chambers and the proscenium arch. The stage, which is large and roomy enough to accommodate large traveling companies, is equipped with the most modern appliances and the paraphernalia is controlled with the latest scientific methods in stagecraft. The stage settings and draperies will be of velour, and special pains have been taken to make these one of the most picturesue and artistic yet designed for the purpose.

Palace at Versailles Reproduced

The lobby is finished in marble, decorative plaster scheme being below and mirrors above the vestibule will attract the eyes for there is a large dome over the ticket booth and special attention is called to the lighting features here and in the lobby where are reproductions of some of the features in the Palace at Versailles, France. The lobby decorations are simple yet rich. Nothing has been left undone in every portion of the theatre to place the visitor in a receptive frame of mind for enjoying the Stanley standard of entertainment which will here be provided.

In the same building operation, although separated from the theatre by courts, there is another structure which is 63 feet by 100 feet and this contains four stores on the ground floor and a large dance hall on the second floor. This building is of steel and concrete with brick and limestone and marble finish. This building is also fireproof, has a large number of fire exits, its heating and ventilation plant is modern in every respect. The dance hall contains all requisites for the comfort and convenience of patrons, even as the theatre. The dance floor is of the highest type of maple. Special lighting has been arranged and the hall is airy and will be found delightful.

Construction and Presentation of Prologue

Details of Attractive Number Simple and Inexpensive to Build

THE value of prologues need hardly be argued. Suffice it to say that they add to the program the touch of spice and diversion necessary to overcome the feeling of restlessness and monotony resulting from close attention to the silent characters on the screen.

Picking up the somewhat interrupted series of presentations supplied us by our Missouri friend, Mr. Herschel Stuart, manager of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, another example of a neatly executed prologue will be described. The title, aptly chosen, is "Pierrot's Serenade to the Girl in the Moon." A brief outline of the action is somewhat as follows:

The opening scene, Fig. 1, shows Pierrot seated on a bench to one side of the stage, mandolin in hand, singing to the Girl in the Moon. The Girl is seated on a platform attached to the Moon in such a manner that it is hidden. While Pierrot is singing, the Moon, with the Girl, is slowly lowered by means of invisible wires, and as the song is finished she abandons her seat in the moon and goes into a Flirtation Toe Dance.

Pierrot makes advances to the Girl, who repulses him, and goes back to her seat in the Moon. As Pierrot sings the chorus of the song the Moon and the Girl slowly rise to the position first occupied when the curtain rose on the scene.

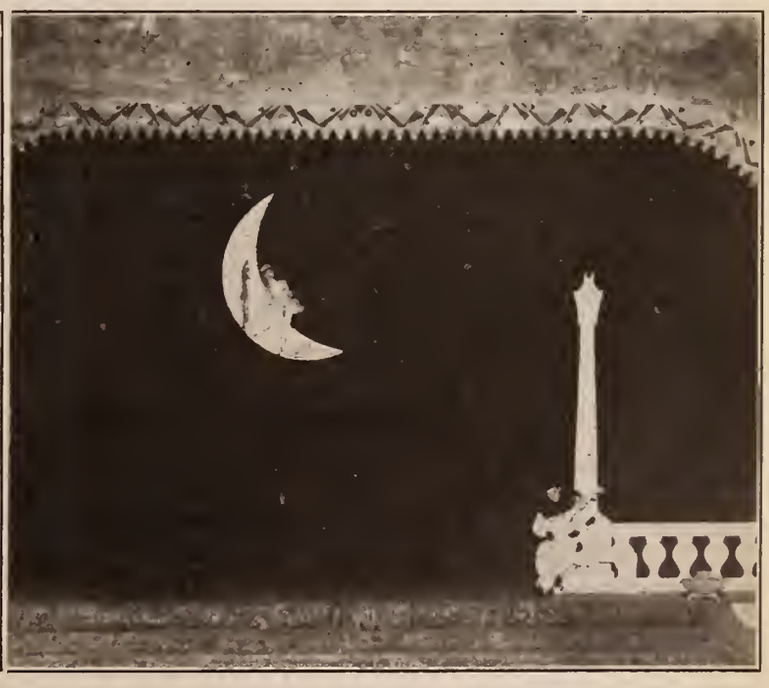
Construction of Set



The props needed for this set are few and comparatively easy to make. The main piece, of course, is the quarter moon on which the girl sits. This can be constructed as follows: On a square piece of beaverboard measuring about 10 feet on a side draw two straight lines, A' and B, Fig. 2, through the middle of opposite sides and at right angles to each other. These lines will divide the board into four equal squares. At the intersection of the line, point P on the sketch, drive a nail and tie a piece of twine around it. This twine should be at least six feet long. After one end of the twine has been fastened to the nail at point P carefully measure off a distance of 4½ feet on the cord, starting from the nail and at that point fasten a heavy pencil or piece of black wax crayon. Then move the pencil or crayon with the string attached over to point C, and, holding it taut, trace a curve on the beaver board through points D and E by swinging the pencil in an arc around point P.

When this has been done, measure off, on line A, a distance 3½ feet to point M. Take the nail with the string tied to it from point P and drive it into point M. Measure off 5 feet 9 inches on the string and fasten the pencil at this new distance. Starting again at point C describe another arc CNE and the quarter moon will be outlined on the beaver board. This should be cut out along the lines just drawn and a small seat or platform fastened to one side. The opposite side, representing the face of the moon, should be covered with crushed tin foil.

The moon should be suspended from piano wires attached to the cradle or seat as shown in Fig. 3. The exposed part of the cradle, the wires and any other parts which would be visible to the audience should be painted a

Program for S. M. P. E. Convention Embodies Diversified Technical Papers

FINAL arrangements have been completed for what promises to be the most interesting and entertaining of the many conventions held by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. This coming convention opening at Ottawa, Canada, on Monday, October 1, extends over a period of four days, during which time it is arranged for the presentation of numerous technical papers and special entertainment for both the members and visiting ladies.

As Ottawa is the site of the governmental buildings of the Dominion of Canada and is located in a country which is extremely attractive this time of the year, the members are presented a double incentive to attend this convention.

Following is the program as arranged by the Papers and Arrangements Committee:

MONDAY.

10-12 A. M.—Registration.

12-1 P. M.—Lunch.

1-2:30 P. M.—Address of welcome; president's address; minutes of the last meeting; unfinished business; report of Arrangements Committee.

3-5 P. M.—Dr. Alfred B. Hitchins of the Ansco Company, "The Motion Picture Engineer and His Relation to the Industry"; Dr. Herman Kellner of the Bausch & Loemb Optical Co., "Some Possibilities for Cold Light"; J. I. Crabtree of the Eastman Kodak Company, "A Study of the Markings on Motion Picture Film Produced by Drops of Water, Condensed Water Vapor and Abnormal Drying Conditions"; report of the Progress Committee, W. F. Little; report of the Advertising Committee, J. C. Hornstein; reports of the Publications and Publicity Committees, J. C. Kroesen; and report of the Papers Committee, L. A. Jones.

TUESDAY.

9:30-12 A. M.—John T. Beechlyn, consulting engineer, "A Method for Correcting Distortion in Oblique Projection"; Roscoe C. Hubbard of the Erbograph Laboratories. "A Friction Fed Film Developing Machine"; John G. Jones of the Eastman Kodak Company, "Design of Sprockets for Motion Picture Film"; C. Francis Jenkins, inventor, "High Speed Camera—3,200 Pictures Per Second"; report of the Auditing Committee, Dr. Gage; report of the Educational Committee, E. K. Gillett; report of the Electrical Devices Committee, Mr. Hertner; report of the Films and Emulsions Committee, Wm. V. D. Kelley.

WEDNESDAY.

9:30-12 A. M.—C. F. Jenkins, "Latest Apparatus and Methods of Transmitting Jhotos by Radio; L. A. Jones and E. E. Richardson of the Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories, "Thermal Characteristics of Motion Picture Film"; Earl J. Denison of the Famous Players-Lasky Studios, "Sprockets and Splices"; report of the Membership Committee, H. A. Campe; report of the Optics Committee, Dr. W. E. Story, Jr.; report of the Film Perforation Committee, John G. Jones; report of the Historical Committee, Wm. V. D. Kelley; report of the Reciprocal Relations Committee, A. F. Victor; report of the Utilities Committee, Wm. Kunzman.

2-5 P. M.—Election of Officers; F. H. Richardson, "Camera and Projection Speed Synchronization"; C. E. Egeler and Ralph Farnham of the National Lamp Works, "Some Practical Considerations in the Application of Objective Lenses to Motion Picture Projectors"; Dr. Herman Kellner of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Co., "Can the Efficiency of Condensers Be Increased?"; report of the Standards Committee, Dr. W. E. Story, Jr.; report of the Nomenclature Committee, Dr. Gage; report of the Studio Committee, Max Mayer; report of the Safety Committee, Mr. Davidson; report of the Theatres Committee, F. H. Richardson.

Evening—Banquet.

THURSDAY

9:30 A. M.-12:30 P. M.—Douglas E. Brown, "The Cost Items of Motion Picture Production"; Wm. V. D. Kelley, research engineer, "Stereoscopic Motion Pictures and Demonstration of Two-Color Anglyph"; report of the Laboratories Committee, A. B. Hitchins; report of the Projection Machine Committee, H. Griffin; report of the Camera Committee, C. L. Gregory; report of the Patents Committee, C. F. Jenkins.

Electrical Dealer and Exhibitor Cooperate

Reading over the sales bulletin "Contact," distributed by the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company throughout their sales force, the editor of this department noticed an article on a tie-up between Westinghouse distributors and motion picture theatres. As this article contains material which might offer exploitation suggestions to exhibitors throughout the country, it is thought of sufficient interest to be published.

"When the Blue Bird theatre announced as a coming picture, Buster Keaton's film, 'The Electrical House,' nearby electrical dealers got busy. As this theatre catered to one of the best sections of Denver, Colorado, it offered a good chance to advertise the home electric idea. This plan had been already tried when Buster's comedy was a first run picture so they knew how to go about it.

"It was planned to tie-in with the film and the manager of the Blue Bird promised to cooperate. The dealers featured a card in their window calling attention to this picture and the advantages of electrical servants in the home.

"The lobby of the theatre was decorated with the window display, 'Songs of the Housewife' and a large card telling where various appliances could be purchased. The office window adjacent to the theatre entrance was trimmed with electrical household helps and supplemented by fan shaped arrangements of attractive booklets.

"'Modern Ways for Modern Days' was distributed among the patrons of the theatre and after the show a careful check was made of how many of these booklets were thrown away—only nine during the two nights the film was shown.

"Dealing as it does with a burlesque of electrical equipment, the picture sets the average person thinking of things electrical. The display and the booklet, therefore, caught them in a favorable mood. Four people asked the cashier about the price of the Waffle Iron and the man who passed out the booklets had three inquiries."

John Eberson — Architect
Seating by American Seating Company

THE same care and thought that directed the planning and selection of the essential items of equipment for the new Majestic Theatre, Houston, Texas, were exerted in the selection of the theatre chairs. As in every other detail, only the last word in theatre chair perfection would do.

The one selected was a handsomely upholstered theatre chair of American Seating Company manufacture, roomy and comfortable, built to last a generation.

As further aid to audience convenience, the chairs in their placement were slightly staggered so that each occupant is just a trifle to the side of and a little higher than the one in front of him. This is a detail readily understood and appreciated, but is only one of the many that mark the completeness of this new theatre of the South.

Alternating Current Machinery

Lesson VII—Part III

Synchronous Motors

ANY ordinary alternating current generator can also be operated as a synchronous motor. Like the A. C. generator, the synchronous motor may have its armature wound for either one or more phases. The single phase type, however, is not self-starting for reasons which will be shown later, so the greatest demand is for the polyphase type, which also has a moderate starting torque.

Single Phase Motor

The synchronous motor in its simplest form is shown in Fig. 113, where A and B represent the sides of a coil of wire placed between two magnetic poles, one north and the other south. The magnetic flux between these two poles, it will be recalled, goes across the air gap from N to S, as indicated by the arrow.

If an alternating source of voltage be applied across the two slip rings, or collector rings as they are also called, connected to the ends of the coil of wire, an alternating current will flow through the coil. Suppose that at the particular moment under consideration this current is flowing through the coil in the direction shown by the arrow. Now, as stated many times before, if a conductor carrying current is placed in a magnetic field, a force will be exerted on the conductor which will tend to make it move. The direction of movement can be determined by Fleming's three finger right hand rule, and in this case will be down as indicated by the arrow.

Since the current is alternating, the force on the conductor is also alternating and in order to keep the coil rotating in the same direction, wire (A) must reach pole S at the exact instant that the current in (A) has completely reversed. In other words, while the coil has made a half revolution, the current is flowing in relatively the same direction and the effect is as if the coil had never moved and the current had never changed.

The speed with which the coil must rotate in order to cover the distance from one pole to the next while the current is reversing, is called the synchronous speed of the motor and depends upon the number of poles it has and the frequency of the current supplied the motor. It can be determined for any motor by following the formula.

A synchronous motor is, ordinarily, not so simple as that just described. Except for small horsepower ratings, the revolving armature type is not used but rather the field pieces with their windings revolve instead. The reason for the revolving field type is explained by the fact that the bearings and supports are subject to less of a strain due to the lighter weight resting on them and there is no strain on the end turns of the armature windings due to the centrifugal force on them which results when the armature is revolved at a high speed.

Instead of having only two poles, usually four or more are used. Of course the more poles a motor has the slower it needs to revolve in order to run at any given frequency as can be seen from the formula given for synchronous speed. Slow speed motors therefore cost more and are larger than high speed motors for the same power rating.

A typical diagram of a four pole motor is shown in Fig. 114. The path of the magnetic flux thru the yoke and pole pieces is indicated by the dotted lines. The reason for the reduction in speed can be seen since a pole needs to make only a quarter of a revolution to bring it under the conductor which is reversing its current, whereas, in the case of a two pole machine, fully one half of a revolution was required. The R.P.M. will therefore be cut in half.

It is necessary that the poles retain their same polarity all the time and since the armature is supplied with A.C., and, in turn, generates a back A.C., the necessary direct current to keep the flux flowing constantly in one direction is lacking. This D.C. must therefore be supplied from some outside source and in the case of large machines a small D.C. generator called an "Exciter," is attached directly to the main shaft of the motor and revolves with it. In this way, the field coils are "excited" and always retain their same polarity. This is also true in the case of generators.

Motor Characteristics

A single phase synchronous motor is not self starting and before any load can be applied to it the motor must be brought up to synchronous speed and the load then thrown on it.

When a synchronous motor is running idle the current it draws from the line is practically zero, just enough being taken to overcome the friction of the machine. The motor then is running at synchronous speed and the frequency of the generated back voltage is exactly the same as that of the generator supplying it with current. The current so generated by the motor is also practically equal and opposite to that supplied by the generator.

Assuming that the motor has the same number of poles as the generator, the pole on both machines will rotate together and the motor is said to be in step with the generator. Such a condition is shown in Fig. 115-A.

If the motor is now loaded such as by connecting it to a piece of rotating machinery, the motor will slow down for a moment and the poles will no longer be in step with those of the generator as indicated in Fig. 115-B. The result of such a lag is to make the voltage of the alternator and the back voltage of the motor equal but no longer opposite. Hence these two voltages no longer neutralize each other since they are out of phase and a current will flow thru the motor. This current will supply sufficient torque to keep the motor running but the angle of lag between the poles of the two machines will still remain. As the load is increased the lag is also increased and

Family Theatre, Batavia, N. Y., Will Soon Vie with the Largest

Few who pass the doors of the Family theatre in Batavia, N. Y., are aware of the extent of the work that is going on within, as Nikitas N. Dipson prepares the house for fall and larger business. Only the four walls of the original structure remain. When the work is completed and the barrieades removed Batavia folk will see a new and up-to-date theatre, bearing little resemblance to the former picture house. With its balcony, loges and improved seating arrangements, the new playhouse will provide a seating capacity of 1,250, just double the old figures. The whole interior will be much larger and extend through the full two stories of the building, instead of one. In addition, to provide for the high ceilings and to accommodate the mammoth dome, the roof is being raised 18 feet. The interior trim, which is now being finished at the plant of the Batavia and New York Woodworking Company, will be elegant and the floor will be carpeted with velvet. The hangings will also be of this material. Brass rails and other detailed decorations will serve to bring out the character of the theatre.

Indireet lighting systems will be installed, with a chandelier suspended from the dome to provide light when pictures are not being shown. The stage switchboard will be identical in type with that in the Eastman theatre in Rochester. The stage will be 28 feet deep and more than 50 feet in height, thus insuring ample accommodation for road produetions.

Not the least important feature of the new theatre will be the pipe organ, which is being built espeeially for the Family at a eost of $16.500 by the Hope-Jones Organ Corporation. Installation of this instrument alone will cost $1,850. The orehestra will oeeupy a beautifully designed pit. Chairs will be standard spring seat, upholstered theatre seats of a large and roomy type. Smoking and rest rooms will be located on a mezzanine floor in the rear of the theatre. With all new equipment and fixtures the booth will be built in a loft to the extreme rear of the auditorium. Entrance to the theatre will be in the center of the building with a store located on either side, while directly above the entrance will be the theatre offices as well as four others. Progress on the work has been more than gratifying.—Taylor.

New A. H. Blank "Capitol" Opens

The opening of the Capitol theatre, A. H. Blank's newest addition to his string, Des Moines, Iowa, was an auspicious one and placed the new theatre among the best in the state. The mezzanine floor of the Capitol is something new. From the center one may look down into the theatre lobby.

The Capitol plan of decoration is on the Spanish order with much black and red in the eolor scheme. The girl ushers wear green, gold and red costumes while the men ushers on the second floor are dressed as Spanish dons.—Phillips.

Testimonial Dinner Given Secretary of Supply Dealers' Ass'n

ON Thursday night, September 13, a testimonial dinner was given by the Motion Picture Supply Dealers' Eastern Zone to L. E. Barth, the national seeretary of the Association of Motion Picture Supply Dealers of America.

Mr. Barth, whose headquarters are in Chicago, eame to New York to assist the local organization in formulating its plans for the coming year, and a remarkable gathering of motion pieture equipment dealers were present with their friends.

Among the attendants at the dinner given to Mr. Barth were: H. H. Cudmore, toastmaster; L. E. Barth, national seeretary Association Motion Picture Supply Dealers of Ameriea; M. H. Connors of Cleveland; Pritchard of Cuba; M. G. Felder, Felder Sales Co.; J. C. Hornstein, Howell's Cine Equipment Co.; W. H. Rabell, president Independent Movie Supply Co.; J. C. Kroesen, the Edison Lamp Works; Isidor Pearse, Capitol Motion Picture Supply Co.; L. Katz of the Crown Motion Picture Supply Co.; H. Behrend of the Behrend Motion Picture Supply Co.; Sam Kaplan; Will C. Smith, Burwood Projeetor Co.; Hoy of the Hoy Reporting Service; Otto Greenbaum.

The dinner and meeting were very interesting to all those associated in the motion pieture equipment industry, and the plans of the National Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers were very thoroughly gone into.

One of the main topics was organization and co-operation among the equipment dealers of America for the benefit of the dealers and their exhibitors and friends. Also an edueational program was suggested for the education and uplift work of projection in the theatres throughout the United States.

International Conference Held in Zurich and Baden on Standardization

A conference of the seeretaries of national industrial standardizing bodies was held in Switzerland recently. Thirteen eountries were represented, including all of the more important industrial nations of Europe and Ameriea. The sessions were held in Zurich and in Baden.

A leading topic diseussed by the eonference was the interchange of information between the various national bodies during the development of the work in the different eountries. At the first eonference held in London two years ago, arrangements were made for the systematie interchange of completed work, and to some extent of information on work in progress. Experience had shown such an early interchange to be extremely important for the work within the different countries from the national viewpoint alone, and quite irrespective of the question of international standardization.

While it was not possible to overeome all the difficulties existing by virtue of the important industrial considerations involved, very substantial progress was made. It is believed that the steps taken will lead immediately to a substantially increased amount of interehange of information during the earlier stages of standardization work, and that the way has been paved for a much more extensive interchange in the future.

Provision was made for continuing the work of the conference on the many administrative problems of common interest, through a loose-knit eontinuing organization. An example of such work planned by the conference is the translation of technical terms of special importance or diffieulty in standardization work. There will gradually be built up such a vocabulary of technieal terms, mainly in English, Freneh and German, but supplemented as far as may be feasible and necessary by the corresponding terms in other languages. Another example is the work undertaken by the eonference on the elassification and nomenclature of standards.

New House for Pasadena California

Construction on a new 1,000 seat theatre at the corner of Pasadena Avenue and Avenue 56 will begin within sixty days, according to announcement by West Coast Theatres, Ine., following the closing of eontraets with the Messrs. S. E. Philpott and J. A. Lewis, owners of the property who will eonstruet a block containing stores, apartments and the theatre on a lot 100 feet by 151 feet.

The property will be cleared immediately so that foundation work can begin within a short time. Approximately $175,000 is the investment incurred, while West Coast Theatres, Inc. and C. L. Langley, Inc., who have leased the theatre for fifteen years, will equip it with every modern facility known in show business. It is planned to make the new house the most elaborate neighborhood theatre of its kind, and orders will be placed for 500 loge chairs and 500 leather cushion chairs, whieh will comprise the sitting capacity. A $25,000 pipe organ will be installed as well as modern ventilating and heating equipment. The stores will front on both Pasadena Avenue and Avenue 56.

As soon as the construction of the bare walls has been completed three shifts of decorators and painters will work on the interior of the theatre to place it in readiness for opening on October 1st.

An improvement in the Projection Department of the Liberty theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla., was considered necessary by the projectionist and the manager of that theatre. The way this was done is shown in the above view and also described in the accompanying article on this page

Makes Room for Projection Department

When you just naturally gotta have more room in your projection booth, and you haven't the room in the building, it's up to you to figure out some scheme, or else build a new theatre. Here's how one man beat the game without building a new house.

Down in St. Petersburg, Fla., is the Liberty theatre, operated by Burton H. Trumbull. Mr. Trumbull was up against the aforesaid proposition. The booth was too small for comfort; there was no more room available inside the building; so, after debating the question pro and con, he decided there was only one way to do it, and that was put the booth outside the building. The photo shows how Mr. Trumbull arranged it.

The gentleman at the window with the reel of film and the bright smile, is Cecil White, the chief projectionist. Cecil is well pleased with the new arrangement, for now he has a fine, big projection room with plenty of light and air. "Business at the Liberty is getting better every month," says Mr. Trumbull. "My business this summer has run 50% better than last."—L. Scott.

Homestead Theatre Co. Building

The Homestead Theatre Company of Cleveland, now owning and managing the Homestead Theatre, Lakewood, a high-class residence suburb of this city, will soon have another beautiful new house in Lakewood, on Detroit avenue at the corner of Woodward avenue. Work has already been started on the two-story structure, which will house a 1,400-seat motion picture auditorium and four store rooms on the main floor, and office suites on the second floor. The building is being erected at an approximate cost of $200,000. All the latest appliances and equipment are to be installed. In addition to physical equipment of the highest order, the Homestead Theatre Company will make a specialty of moral equipment. This means courtesy. Employes of the theatre will be trained in the gentle art of courtesy toward patrons. To this end, prizes will be awarded at stated intervals to the most courteous atendant, the theeatre patrons being the judges. The new house will not only be a temple of amusement, but will also be a community center. It will be available to clubs as a meeting place, whenever not in use, and will be featured as the neighborhood playground, whether for pictures or gatherings or speeches or for civic purposes. Another feature of the house policy will be an effort on the part of the management to have the patrons determine the character of the programs exhibited.

Construction and Presentation of Prologue

deep black to make them as inconspicuous as possible. In addition the seat should be covered with black velvet. The entire moon should then be counter-weighted from the pin-rail so that it can be slowly raised and lowered.

The balustrade and lamppose can be made of framed beaver board and then painted white. The outline should first be traced out on the beaver board to facilitate cutting it properly. A hole should be cut in the lantern to represent the glass panel, and behind this opening a 10 or 15-watt Mazda lamp contained in a shallow light box should be placed. The opening itself should be covered with tracing cloth or glazed or waxed paper to allow the light to shine through. Fig. 4 shows the construction of this prop.

A small bench also painted white completes the set.

Costumes

Pierrot—typical black and white costume made of light cloth. In addition a mandolin also painted in black and white.

Girl—with a white ballet dress trimmed with silver, silver headband and silver ballet slippers.

The background for the entire scene should be a black velvet curtain made to hang in folds.

Lighting

The lighting should consist of a white overhead spot on Pierrot and a light-green spot on the Girl in the Moon.

Simplified Electricity for Projectionists

vice versa. This lag is known as the "slip" of the motor.

Synchronous Condenser

If a synchronous motor is over-excited, that is, a larger current is sent thru the field current than is ordinarily required for normal operation, it will draw a leading current from the line. Now we learned some time ago that a condenser will also draw a leading current from the line whereas a reactance coil will draw a lagging current. For this reason over-excited synchronous motors are called synchronous condensers and are often connected to lines supplying a large number of devices, such as induction motors, which draw a lagging current, and so correct the bad effects of such lagging currents. The synchronous motors run part of the load and this operation is called power factor correction.

Invents Camera for Amateurs

A motion picture camera for the amateur, with which it is claimed the most inexperienced photographer can take pictures, as well as a projector for home use, which can be set up and operated anywhere provided electricity is at hand, is being manufactured in Milwaukee. John R. Frauler, a man who has been identified with the motion picture industry since its infancy, is head of the manufacturing concern.

Independent Movie Moves to New Quarters

William Rabelle, president of the Independent Movie Supply Company, has secured a lease on a new store on the street floor of the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City, at which place the Independent Movie Supply Company moved their salesrooms and offices on September 17.

These new quarters occupy considerably greater space than those of the former location on the fifth floor of the same building.

Mr. Rabelle started his career in the motion picture supply business in 1912 with J. H. Hallberg, who at that time was located on Greenwich Street, New York City. Mr. Rabelle soon after left the Hallberg concern to start in business for himself, and has since that time steadily expanded. He has at present three branch stores, one in Albany, one in Buffalo and one in New Haven.

The opening of this spacious store is just six and one-half years from the inception of the Independent Supply Company.

New Emergency Lighting System

An emergency lighting system that can be used when a theatre is cut off from outside electric current has been invented by Oscar Althoff, an exhibitor of Berwick, Pa. He announced that a stock company, to be headed by himself and the Rev. L. S. Baluta, has been organized to place the device on the market. The corporation will be known as the Crescent Novelty Company.—Berghaus.

WISCONSIN

Janesville—Saxe Bros. will begin work on a new theatre seating 1,200 to be situated south of the Grand Hotel. Plans being drawn.

Milwaukee—The Saxe Amuse. Co., will build a new theatre to seat 2,100 at 5th Ave. & Mitchell St., the site of the present Modjeska house. Structure will cost $430,000. Plot fronts 150 feet on Mitchell St., and 125 feet on Seventh Ave. Six stores will be housed on the main floor, four stories will be built and three added later.

ILLINOIS

Chicago—B. Leo Steif, 64 West Randolph St., is preparing plans for theatre and store building for 64th St. & Cottage Grove Ave., to cost $1,250,000.

Chicago—Architect Burrett Stephens, 37 W. Van Buren St., has been drawing plans for the one story $100,000 theatre, 75 x 133, on 1926-39 Monterey Ave. for Fred Hoffman, 10857 Longwood Drive. House to be of brick and terra cotta.

INDIANA

Wilkinsburg—Rowland & Clark Theatres, J. B. Clark, Colonial Theatre, Wood St., to build theatre, $50,000, one story and basement, 32x130, on Wood St., to be of brick. Architect, W. E. Snaman, Empire Bldg., Pittsburg. Architect taking bids.

WASHINGTON

Aberdeen—W. Andrews of Aberdeen and Walph Wade of Tacoma are interested in the building of a theatre building on the northwest corner of Broadway and Wishkah St., to have a frontage of 130 feet on B'way and 100 feet on Wishkah St., which will cost $100,000. Architects, R. H. Dobell of Hoquiam, and associated with him, Architect Pertica of Seattle. Building will be of reinforced concrete with stone or terra cotta trimmings.

J. C. JESSEN'S PRODUCTION NOTES BY WIRE

Studio and Player Brevities

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

First National

Maurice Tourneur, with the completion of "Jealous Fools," has been unable to find a suitable story for his next production.

Production of Booth Tarkington's "Misunderstood," a J. K. McDonald offering, directed by William Beaudine, is under way at the Hollywood studios. Henry B. Walthall, Irene Rich, Ben Alexander and Rockliffe Fellowes are entrusted with principal charcterizations.

Colleen Moore, with only a three-day rest, began production last week on "The Swamp Angel," with Clarence Badger directing. Ben Lyon has leading male role.

Another screen beauty contest winner, Clara Bow, a 17-year-old Brooklyn high school girl, has been added to the cast of "Black Oxen," now in its fourth week of production.

Christie

Bobby Vernon's next picture, recently entered into production, has the theme "Way out West in the open spaces, where a man's a man and women are even better."

Charlotte Merriam returned to the studio to play opposite Neal Burns in a comedy of newly married life. She recently played a prominent role in Tourneur's "The Brass Bottle." Jimmy Adams has begun a new farce comedy.

Goldwyn

A dinner was given Eric von Stroheim and principal members of the cast of "Greed" upon their return from location work in Death Valley on September 11th.

The casting of Conrad Nagel for the leading role in "Three Weeks" marks the third such important part he has enacted since joining Goldwyn four months ago.

Patsy Ruth Miller, returning from San Francisco at 7 o'clock in the morning upon completion of Victor Seastrom's "The Judge and the Woman," was forced to postpone vacation plans and leave again for the north at 10:30 the same day to appear as Douglas MacLean's leading woman in his new production, "The Yankee Consul."

Universal

Supporting cast for "The Storm Daughter," Priscilla Dean vehicle, George Archainbaud directing, comprises William B. Davidson, Tom Santschi, Alfred Fisher, Cyril Chadwick, J. Farrell McDonald, Bert Roach and George Kuwa.

Gladys Walton has completed "The Near Lady."

About one-half of the chapter play, "The Steel Trail," a story of railroad life in which William Duncan is starred, has been completed. The company is due back from location at South Fork, Cal., in a few days.

Robert North Bradbury has started production on three 2-reel Western subjects titled "Double Dealing," "Under Western Skies," and "Stolen Gold." Jack Mower plays principal role, with Eileen Sedgwick and Elinor Field in the important feminine roles.

Action stills from Regent Pictures Corporations presentation of "The Drivin' Fool," with Wally Van and Patsy Ruth Miller. It will be distributed by W. W. Hodkinson Corp.

Mary Philbin's initial starring vehicle, "My Mamie Rose," an adaptation of Owen Kildare's novel, is two weeks under way with Irving Cummings directing; cast includes Pat O'Malley, William Collier, Jr., Max Davidson, Lincoln Plummer, Edwin J. Brady.

With Jess Robbins directing, unusually rapid progress is being made on the third and largest Baby Peggy's Jewel productions, "The Right to Love." Winifred Bryson, Elinor Fair and Robert Ellis have important supporting roles.

George Hackathorne has been cast to play the role of "Bibbs Sheridan" in "The Turmoil" by Booth Tarkington, Hobart Henley's next special. Emmett Corrigan and Eileen Percy are also enacting important roles in this production upon which actual work started September 10th.

Paramount

Cecil B. deMille is engaged in preparatory work on his forthcoming production, "Triumph," Saturday Evening Post story by May Edgington.

Bebe Daniels, after a three weeks' vacation, is preparing to resume work in a production as yet untitled.

William S. Hart and company, under direction of Clifford Smith, spending several weeks on location a Victorville, Cal., filming scenes for "Wild Bill Hickok."

Ernest Torrence is due back from East to take important role in Zane Grey production, "The Heritage of the Desert," which Irvin Willat has arrived to direct.

The leading masculine role in "To the Ladies" has been entrusted to Edward Horton; no feminine lead has as yet been selected.

William deMille started production on "Everyday Love," September 20th; Nita Naldi coming from New York to play one of the featured roles. The story is an adaptation of Julian Street's novel, "Rita Coventry."

Thomas Meighan and supporting company have returned from San Francisco where water front scenes were filmed for his "Woman Proof." Complete cast: Lila Lee, Mary Astor, Robert Agnew, John Sainpolis, Louise Dresser, Edgar Norton, Charles Sellon, George O'Bryan, Vera Reynolds, Hardee Kirkland, Martha Mattox, Bill Gonder, Mike Donlon.

"Stephen Steps Out," Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.'s first production is more than half completed.

Pola Negri started work September 17th on her next vehicle, "My Man," with Herbert Brenon directing.

Willat Is Seeking Utah Locations

IRVIN WILLAT, who will direct Paramount's third Zane Grey production, "The Heritage of the Desert," left Hollywood last week for Lee's Ferry in Southern Utah, to study the locale of the story first hand. Similar to the practice in filming "To the Last Man" and "The Call of the Canyon," scenes will be taken at the exact spots described in the original story. Production is scheduled to start September 24.

In addition to the Southern Utah sequences, scenes will also be filmed in the Upper Colorado Canyon, famed for its spectacular beauty.

Metro

Thomas J. Hopkins has completed the script on "Angel Face Molly," the crook romance Viola Dana will next make under Oscar Apfel's direction. This is the fourth of the present series this star is making. Apfel directed her in the first picture she appeared in as a child actress, ten years ago in New York.

Cullen Landis has signed for one of the leading roles in Victor Schertzinger's "The Man Whom Life Passed By."

"The Tale of Triona" adaptation has been completed by Thomas J. Hopkins. Harold Shaw will direct. The picture will go into production under the tentative title of "The Living Past."

Complete cast of "Fashion Row," Mae Murray's next starring vehicle from an original by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin: Freeman Wood, Earle Fox, Mathilde Brundage, Elmo Lincoln. Picture expected completed in two weeks.

Work will be immediately started on filming "The Human Mill."

Here and There

Completed cast for "Beyond the Veil," a psycho-analytic production being made by A. K. Mozumdar, Hindu metaphysician, comprises Kathryn Maguire, leading woman: William Boyd, Sidney deGrey, Doris McClure, Arthur Rankin, Jack Giddings, John Hanlon, Del Lorice and Gordon Mullen; Frederick Bonds co-directing. Production in its fifth week.

The Goldwyn art and costuming department has now been engaged twelve months on the costuming for "Ben Hur," shortly to be placed in production.

Andree Lafayette signed contract with Meaney & Nehls, who will handle her business for her.

Pre-view of Chester Bennett's "The Lullaby," starring Jane Novak, will be held at Catalina Island, prior to the master print and negative being shipped east.

I. W. Irving, independent producer, making "Trapped," with his company has returned from three weeks' location trip to Catalina Island and is making waterfront scenes at San Pedro harbor.

Long term contracts now in effect prevent Lloyd Hughes from accepting a New York starring offer.

With J. P. McGowan directing and portraying the heavy role as well, Beverly Productions, a newly formed independent concern, have started on their first production, "The Whipping Boss," at Hollywood studios. Barbara Bedford, Lloyd Hughes, Eddie Phillips, Wade Boteler, Lydia Knott, George Cummings, Andrew Waldron and Betty Elmer comprise the all-star cast.

"We Would Know It!"

An old cabinet maker sandpapered with painstaking care the bottom of a table. "Why do that?" asked David Grayson in his worthy book "Adventure in Contentment." "No one will know that rough spot is there." And with a simplicity born of a conscience free of guile, the old fellow replied—"I will know it."

THUS is summed up in four words the many reasons why Standard Film Laboratories are depended upon by many of the greatest motion picture producers to deliver faithfully developed negatives and prints.

Within these laboratories are taken many precautions against the slightest imperfection. Many of these steps might be slighted, without detection by the layman. But——

We would know it!

So every inch of footage that goes through these laboratories is subjected to the same painstaking care—the same rigid inspection with never an instant's withdrawal of the constant vigilance ever maintained here.

This, together with the Standard Service, are available to every producer who entrusts his film to us whether it be a hundred feet or a million feet.

"ZAZA" is now playing its second S. R. O. week on Broadway. Louella O. Parsons, famous film writer, says in the New York Telegraph: "I went to see 'Zaza' on Thursday afternoon. Every seat was filled and there were many people standing. Tell me when such a condition has prevailed in any of the Broadway theatres at an early afternoon performance.

" 'Zaza' is the best thing Gloria Swanson has ever done. Like Bernhardt in some of her scenes. If Miss Swanson were a new star and suddenly appeared in 'Zaza', she would be a sensation. The public has proved that it adores the Allan Dwan type of picture."

Screen play by Albert S. Le Vino from the story by Pierre Berton and Charles Simon.

Carl Laemmle, Pres.,
1600 Broadway, N.Y.C.

OCTOBER 6, 1923

IN THE whole wildly exciting career of the Universal, no such flood of contracts has poured into our office as we are now receiving day after day and week after week!

It's an avalanche! It's a tribute to the fact that Universal is setting the pace for the whole industry as never before. For many years I thought Universal's business was big but it was nothing compared with the genuine BIG BUSINESS which is literally burying us now.

The eves of the whole trade are on Universal!

Why not? Who else has anything to equal "The Big Ten," our first supply of big pictures for the new season?

Who else can match "Merry Go Round" and "A Lady of Quality" and "Chapter in Her Life" and "The Acquittal" and "Morality" and "Thundering Dawn" and "The Spice of Life" and "Drifting" and "The Darling of New York" and "White Tiger"?

Any one of the big ten would be a triumph in itself, but to have a single company produce ten of the best pictures at one crack is something unheard of in the annals of the trade!

Universal has the pictures and, more important, the majority of the exhibitors KNOW IT!

In a big season of big things, Universal is the biggest bet of all. We're in the midst of an avalanche, but golly, we love it!

Carl Laemmle

The Most Beautiful Picture Ever Produced!

"Merry Go Round" Is Still Year's Greatest Sensation

'Chapter in Her Life" and "Drifting" Next Two to Get Praise of Critics in Universal's Sensational Big Ten

THE SENSATIONAL reception accorded by exhibitors and public to "Merry Go Round" is still the talk of the industry as Universal presents the next succeeding two Jewels in its Big Ten for the first half of the year. "Never did I see a picture do what 'Merry Go Round' did at our Imperial Theatre!" wired J. A. Partington, San Francisco, after the opening in that city. "Positively the most successful engagement!" declared Jack Root, manager of the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles. These are but typical of the hundreds of wires and letters received from exhibitors from all sections of the country.

"A Chapter in Her Life," Lois Weber's tremendous production of Clara Louise Burnham's story of "Jewel," the second of the Big Ten, has been given a hearty reception by the trade press. "It is ideal entertainment!" declares the Moving Picture World. "Ninety per cent of the folks who see this film will be deeply moved by it!" was George T. Pardy's sum-up in Exhibitors Trade Review. The Film Daily says "It is a pleasing picture."

Coming unheralded into the Capitol Theatre, "Drifting," the Universal Jewel starring Priscilla Dean, caused quite a commotion among New York press critics. "A success!" was The Sun and Globe's comment. "Sensational!" declared The New York Mail, while The New York Telegram said: "Miss Dean is as impressive on the screen as Miss Brady and Miss Mencken were in the spoken version." The cast includes Mat Moore, Wallace Beery and Anna Mae Wong. It was directed by Tod Browning.

These are but the forerunners in Universal's sensational Big Ten. Others now in production and in the process of cutting and editing will more than uphold the standard set by these three, according to Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

Gibson Specials Make Great Hit

UNIVERSAL has kept all its promises in regard to presenting Hoot Gibson in the best pictures of his career, as was proven with the release of "Blinky," the first of his eight Big Special Productions for the year, and "The Ramblin' Kid," which was enthusiastically received by New York critics at its pre-release showing at the Broadway theatre.

Both of these pictures reflect the great amount of care and study which was given to the selection of stories and production facilities for this popular young star. "The Ramblin' Kid" has been hailed as one of the finest Western pictures ever made, while "Blinky" stands alone as a rugged, virile drama of the great outdoors. Both were directed by Edward Sedgwick.

Plans for coming Hoot Gibson pictures are even more elaborate than those already completed, according to Carl Laemmle.

Baby Peggy's First Big Production

COMING on top of the nationwide publicity already launched on behalf of little Baby Peggy, the famous child actress, exhibitors will be doubly interested in the announcement of Carl Laemmle that this little girl will soon be presented in her first big production, "The Darling of New York."

Her tremendous success in Century Comedies, coupled with the enormous publicity which she has received, make this production worth the attention of every live showman in the country. Directed by King Baggot, and supported by a carefully selected cast of known excellence, this new Universal Jewel will be eagerly watched for by fans everywhere.

Baby Peggy is presented in her first full length production by Mr. Laemmle through the courtesy of the Century Film Corporation.

Demand for More "Leather Pushers" Granted

THE WIDESPREAD demand of exhibitors for a Fourth Series of the most successful two reelers ever made, the famous Leather Pushers series, has caused Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, to start production upon such a series, which in every way, will measure up to the remarkable box office standard set by the first three series.

Taken from the immensely humorous and inimitable stories of H. C. Witwer, faultlessly cast, and with production facilities of the finest kind, exhibitors know that this new series will serve them at the box office as no two reel subjects ever have in the past.

"U" Chapter Plays Booked by Hundreds

THE FINEST array of Chapter Plays ever offered by Universal, leaders in this field, are now available to exhibitors who seek the best and most sure-fire at the box office. Universal heralded its "Lucky 7" Chapter Plays for the season with William Duncan in "The Steel Trail," the resultant flood of bookings from all sections of the country breaking all records.

The next two in this series are "Beasts of Paradise," which is also meeting with a record-breaking reception from exhibitors, and which stars William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick, and "The Ghost City," starring Pete Morrison.

Universal's plans for Chapter Plays for the year are greater and more pretentious than ever before in the history of the company. Its huge success in this field in the past will be eclipsed by its 1923-24 Chapter Play productions, and all wise showmen know it.

Screenings

Denny's Next

Exhibitors everywhere are showing much interest in Reginald Denny's coming Universal Jewel production, "THE SPICE OF LIFE," being screened from Byron Morgan's popular speed story, directed by Harry Pollard. This is one of Universal's Big Ten.

Beauty in New Jewel

Following her triumph in "MERRY GO ROUND," showmen have made frequent inquiries as to Mary Philbin's next big picture. This will be a Universal Jewel, "MORALITY," based upon a story by Owen Kildare, directed by Irving Cummings.

Scoop!

International News has recorded another big scoop in being the first news reel to present complete pictures of the Japanese disaster in New York.

New Tarkington Story

Booth Tarkington contributes one of his biggest and most popular novels to Universal's new line-up in "THE TURMOIL," now being directed by Hobart Henley, with a cast including George Hackathorne, Eleanor Boardman, Eileen Percy, Pauline Garon, Emmett Corrigan and Buddy Messinger.

Like Title

The title, "WHITE TIGER," in connection with a Priscilla Dean picture has appealed to exhibitors who look to this fiery and emotional star for something different. Wallace Beery, Matt Moore and Ray Griffith are supporting Miss Dean in this big Universal Jewel, directed by Tod Browning, soon to be released as one of the Big Ten.

Expect Big Picture

Exhibitors who have watched Reginald Denny's meteoric career in "The LEATHER PUSHER" series and "THE ABYSMAL BRUTE" are anticipating a real picture in Reginald Denny's coming picture of cosmopolitan life, "A MAN ABOUT TOWN," Universal Jewel.

"Damned!"

"DAMNED," the sensational best seller, will shortly go into production at Universal City. Carl Laemmle promises a surprise star and director when he makes a complete announcement.

Scenes from a number of Universal Jewel Productions

Star Series Releases Popular with Critics

Exhibitors have already had a foretaste of what Universal has in store for them under "The Star Series" banner in the four big productions already released or announced as forthcoming during the month of September. Gladys Walton stepped out in a lavish society drama, "The Untameable," which was hailed as one of the best this lovable, frolicsome screen star has appeared in. Jack Hoxie whirled into action with "Where Is This West?" which topped the high mark he set in his first big Universal picture, "Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande," and "The Clean-up," Herbert Rawlinson's first big picture for 1923-24, rang the bell. The first of Universal's Eight Big Box Office Melodramas has been announced as "The Six Fifty," from the popular Broadway play of the same name. This is a gripping, melodramatic photoplay of a gingham girl who set her heart on silk-lined Broadway without counting the cost. It features an All-Star Cast, including Renee Adoree, Orville Caldwell and Niles Welch.

"The Gumps" Make Big Hit

THE release of "Uncle Bim's Gift" and "Watch Papa," first two of Universal's series of "The Gumps" in real life on the screen, was the signal for lively praise from the critics and a flood of bookings from exhibitors everywhere.

"They will be sure to get special attention," said Moving Picture World. "If succeeding comedies of The Gump series are as funny as this one," said Exhibitors' Herald of "Watch Papa," "it will be smooth sailing for Universal."

"The Acquittal," Powerful Mystery Drama, Soon Ready

"Thundering Dawn," One of Most Spectacular Thrillers of Years Also Soon Released

ONE of the most sensational mystery plays ever staged has been transferred by Universal into a fascinating, intriguing drama of the silversheet—a tense and thrilling mystery, the solution of which will defy the most clever among the fans of the screen. This is "THE ACQUITTAL," the Universal Super-Jewel in which Claire Windsor, Norman Kerry, Barbara Bedford and Richard Travers appear under the direction of Clarence Brown.

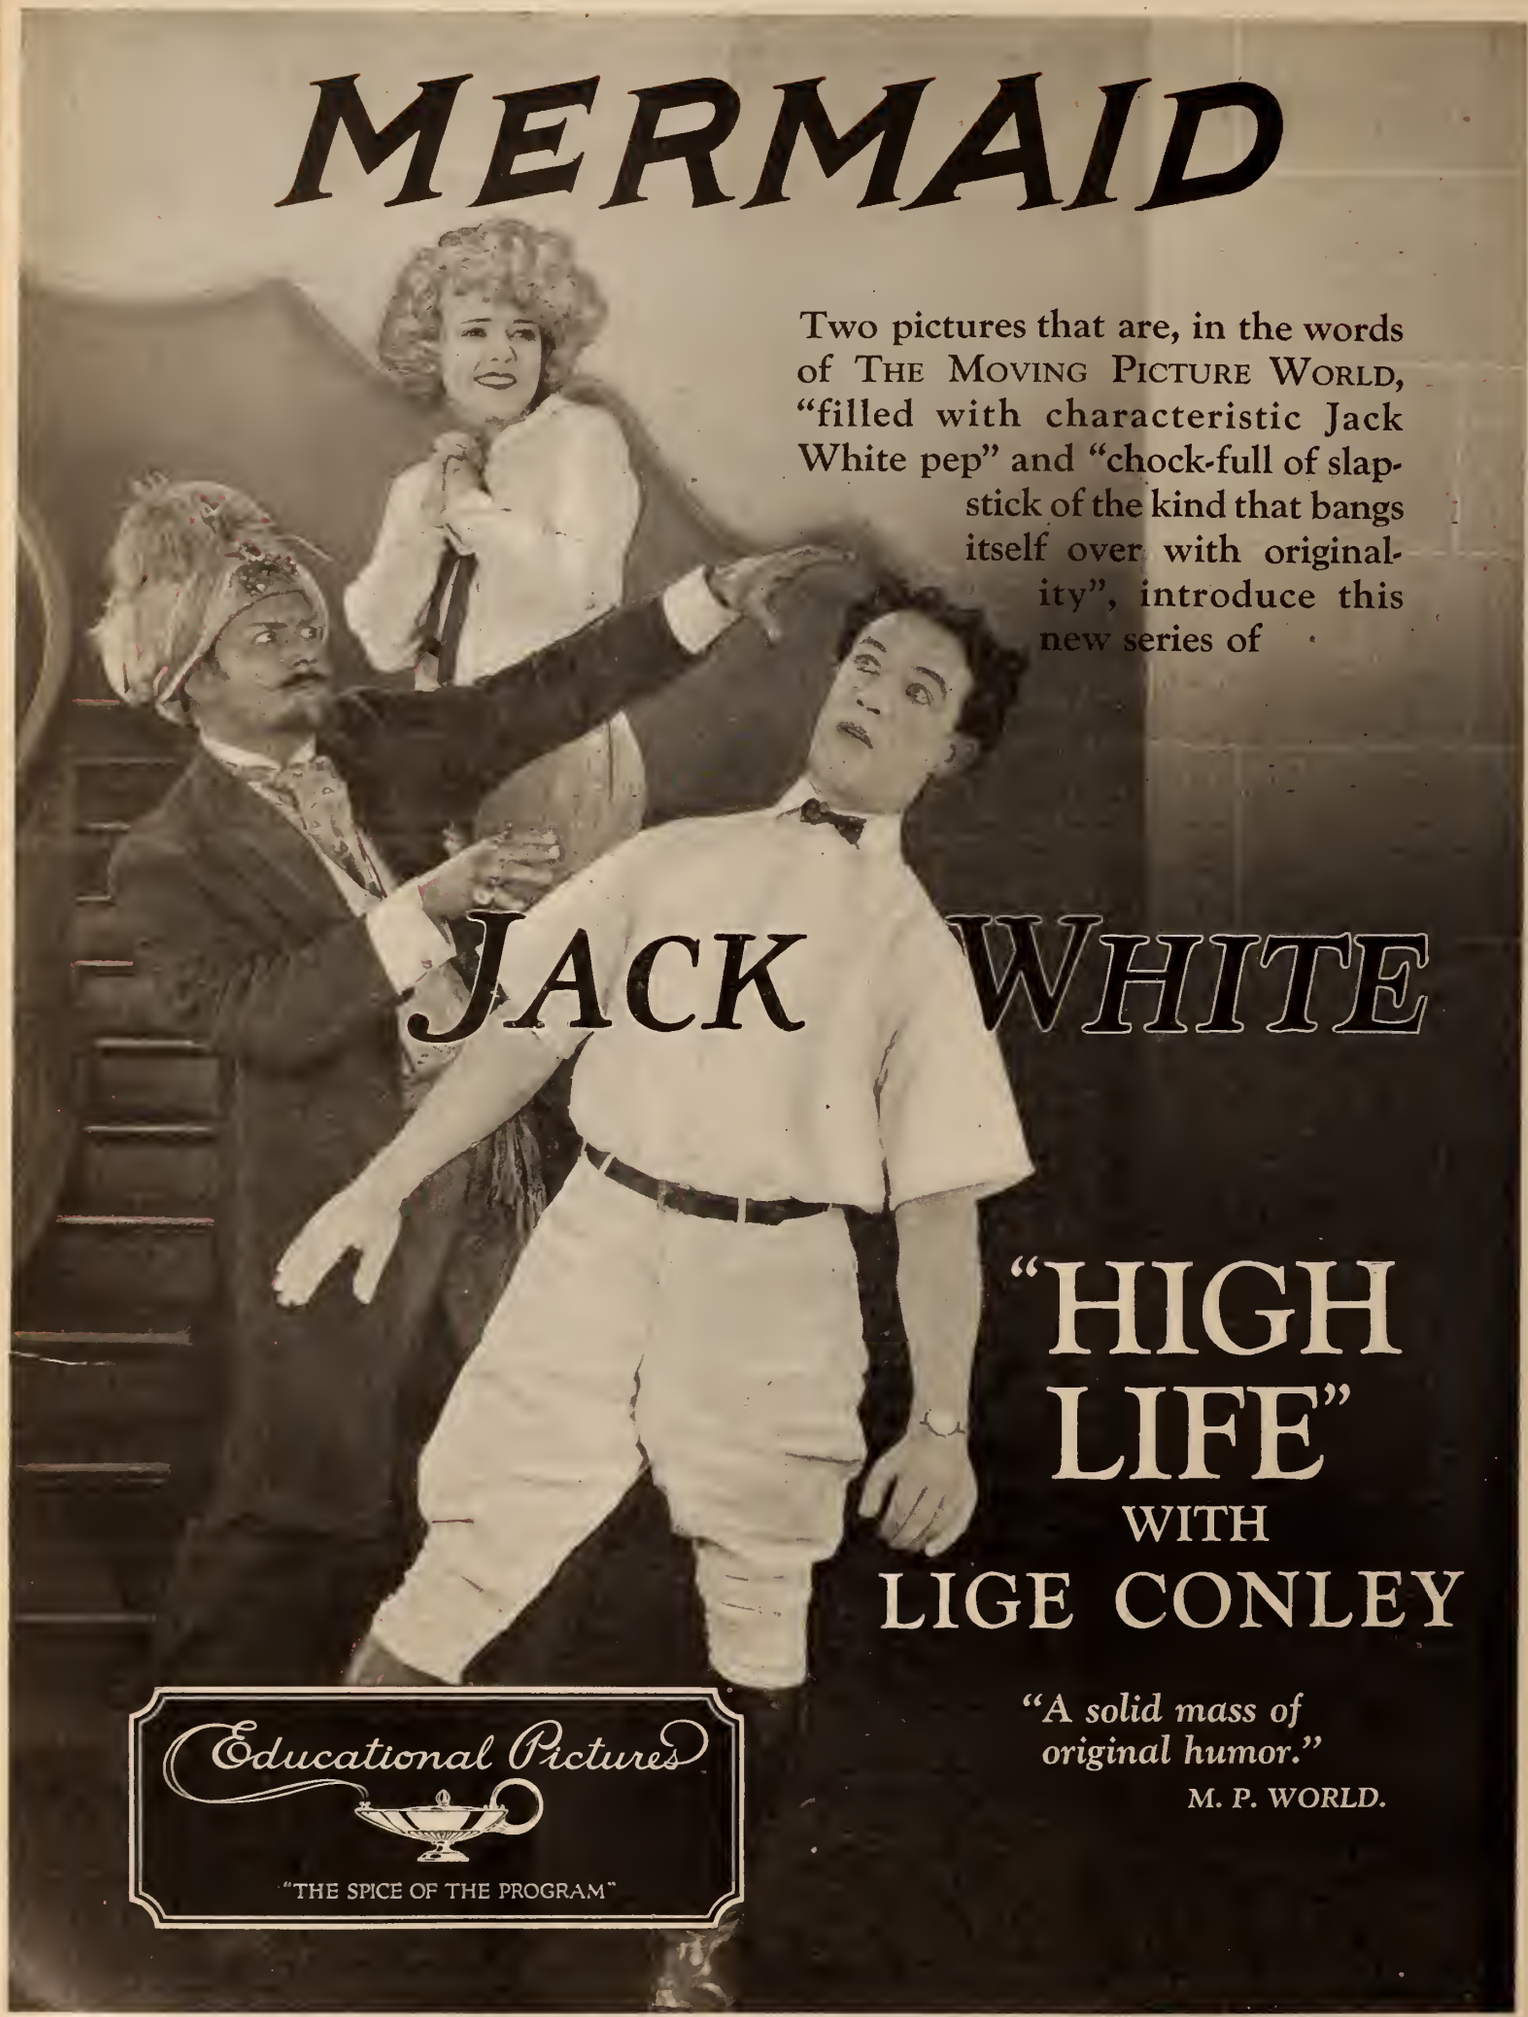
This production was adapted from the Cohan and Harris production of Rita Weiman's sensational play, and in its screen version is even more sensational than in its stage form. It will reach exhibitors as one of the really big productions of the year—a picture concerning which showmen can make big promises and live up to them.

Another great Super-Jewel included in Universal's Big Ten, and from which exhibitors all over the country expect big things, is "THUNDERING DAWN," a spectacular, thrilling, exciting melodrama of thrills and love. A cast headed by J. Warren Kerrigan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Tom Santschi and other screen notables under the direction of Harry Garson, have succeeded in producing one of the year's most spectacularly thrilling melodramas.

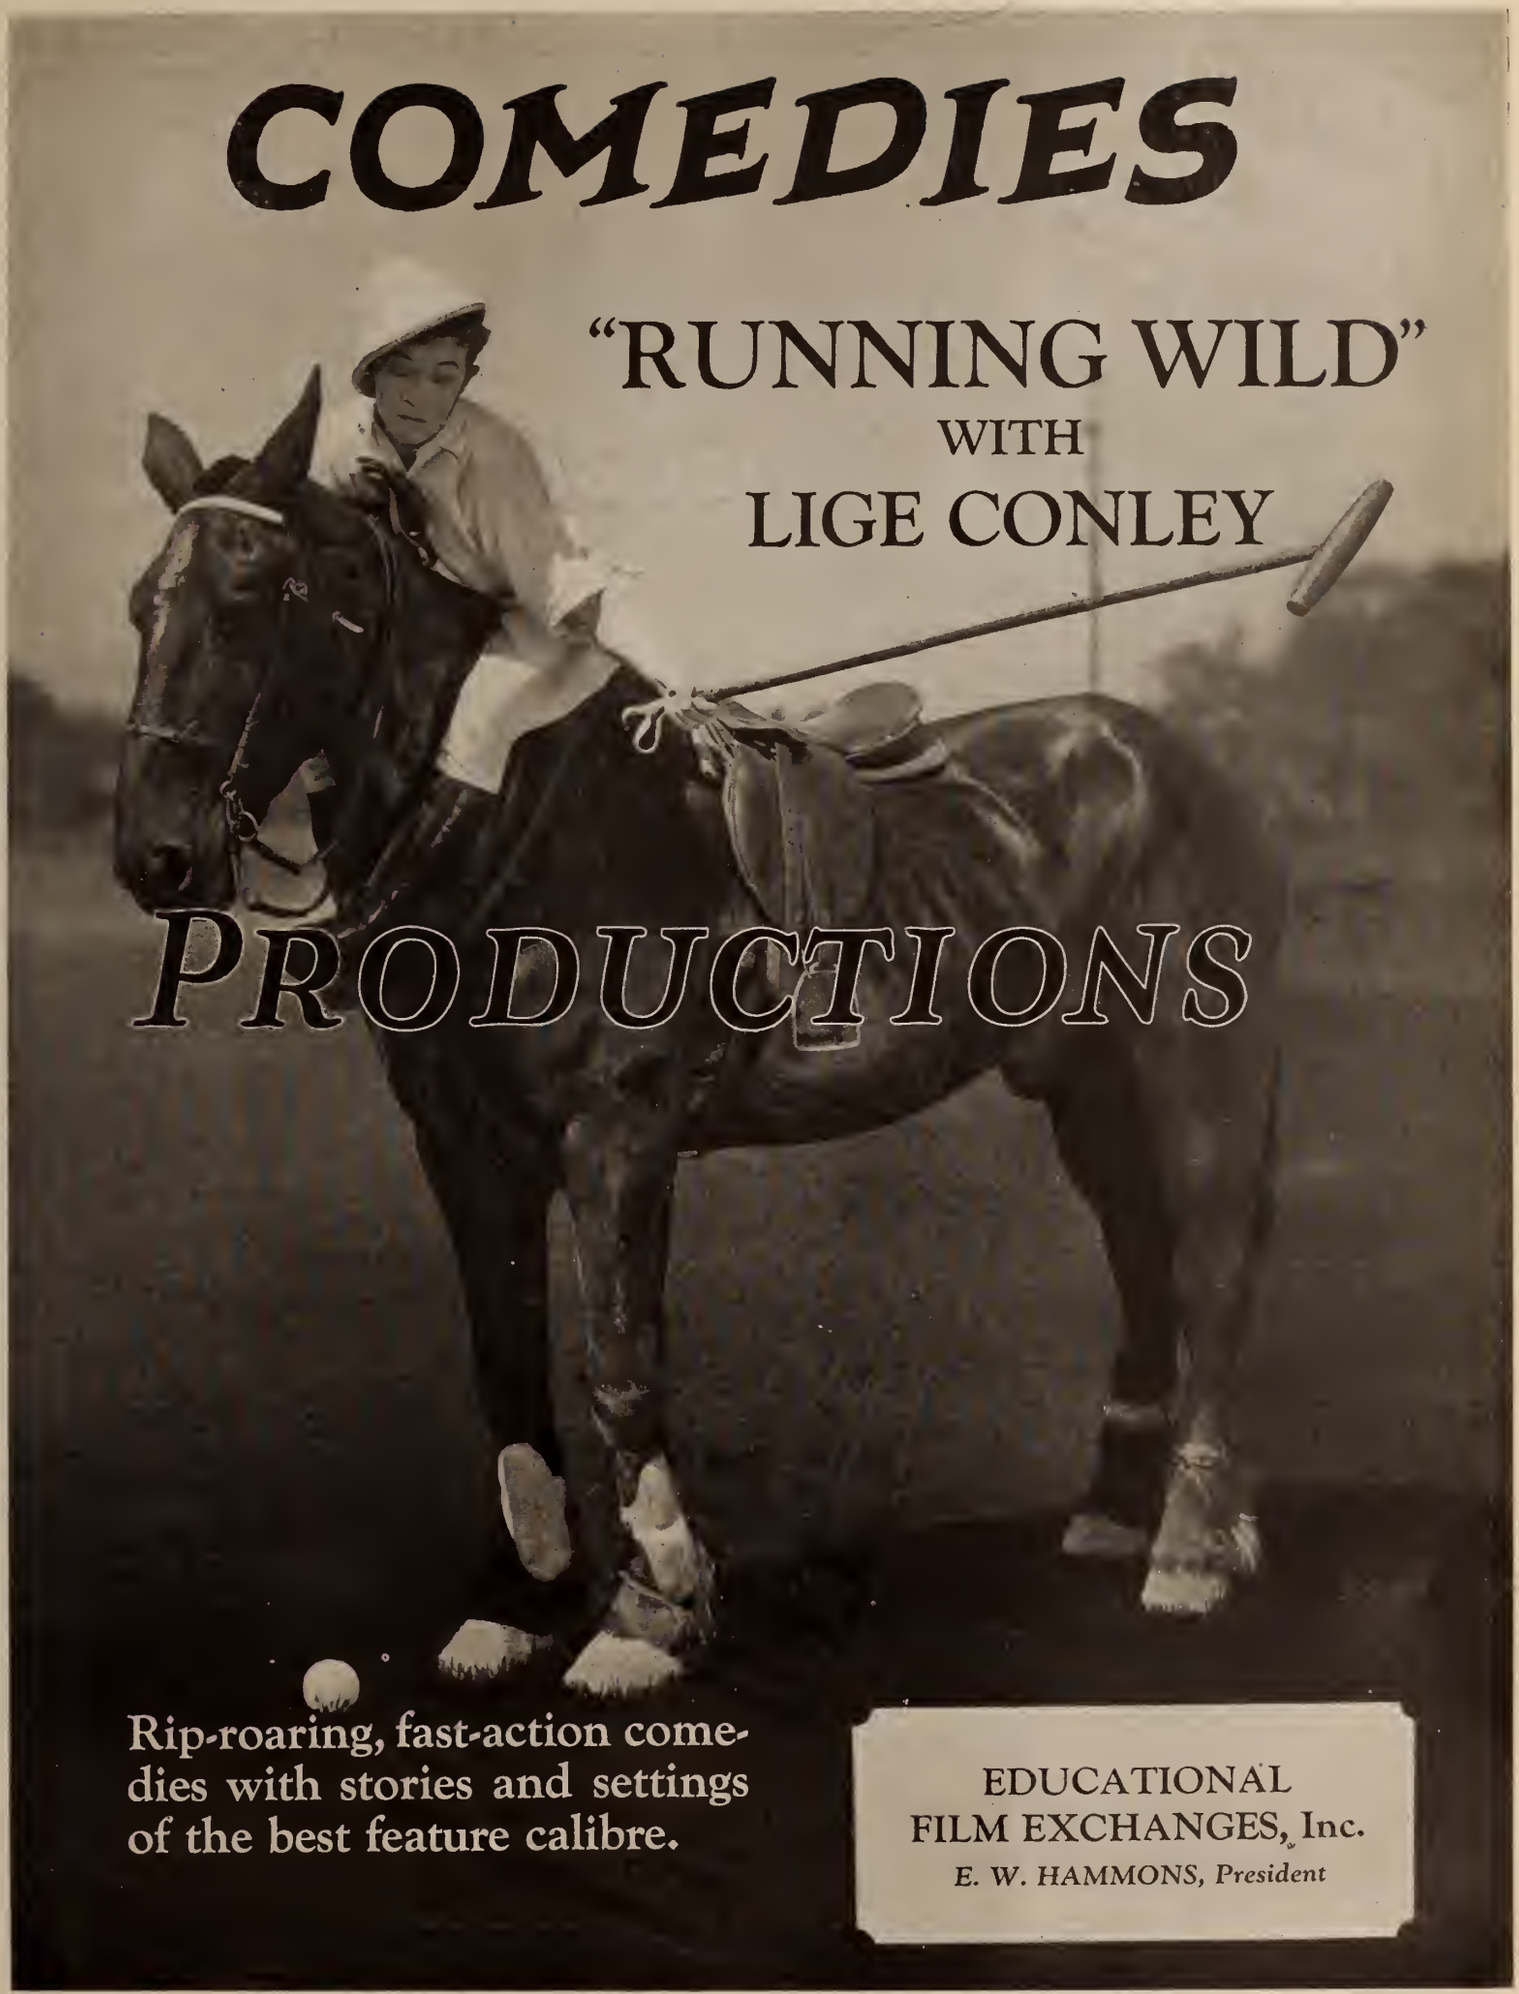
These two great productions, with "MERRY GO ROUND" and "A LADY OF QUALITY," a Hobart Henley Production, starring Virginia Valli, with Milton Sills and a great cast, comprise the four Super-Jewels which are included in the Big Ten, the group of pictures which for this year has overshadowed any other group in the industry.

Exhibitors were quick to appre ciate this group, both on merits a box office material, and because o the tremendous amount of nationa advertising and publicity back o it. It is well known that the publi demand for the Universal produc this year is larger than ever befor in history.

Universal One Reeler Popular



INCREASED bookings and pleased patronage has been the result of increased production plans for Universal One Reel Comedies, according to reports from all sections of the country. These sparkling comedies, featuring such popular stars as Neely Edwards, Bert Roach and Chuck Reisner, have proved to be among the most popular on the screen today.



Century Comedies Still Head the Field

Universal's announcement f coming Century Comedies indicat that in this field of amusement it in a position to offer exhibitors bigger, more varied, more popul program than ever before.

Baby Peggy, "the most talent child actress on the screen," popu lar Buddy Messinger, "Pal," th wonderful dog, Jack Earle and Ro coe Karns, famous fun-makers o the screen, as well as The Follie Girls, comprise Universal's remark able Century Comedy line-up fo 1923-24. As in the past they ar the most consistent two-reel com edies on the market.

Rouged Lips

With

Tom Moore

From the story "UPSTAGE" by RITA WEIMAN

Directed by HAROLD SHAW

Motion Picture News

Rouged Lips

(Metro—5150 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

PERHAPS no American writer today deals more intelligently with life backstage than Rita Weiman, and in "Rouged Lips," we have an adaptation of one of her best short stories, "Upstage." Naturally, short story presented a rather slender thread of narrative, and the story has been filled out with other incident, but the spirit of the original is fairly well kept, on the whole.

As a picture of life backstage, it is rather better than most, mirroring the petty squabbles and jealousies of the "chorines" with considerable fidelity.

Primarily, of course, it is a Viola Dana vehicle, and she romps through it in typical Dana fashion, her breezy "clowning" ably seconded by the equally breezy Mr. Moore. It is a picture of chuckles and giggles, rather than roars of laughter, but it goes along on its merry way at a smooth rate and should register well with Dana fans.

A well chosen supporting cast has been placed around the star, including the aforementioned Tom Moore as the wealthy young man who misunderstands the heroine, Nola Luxford as her chum, Burwell Hamrick as her chum's brother, Arline Pretty as a typical show-girl, and Francis Powers and Georgie Woodthorpe as the mother and father. As usual, the vivacious Miss Dana walks away with the picture, but the competency of the other members of the cast provides a balanced production.

The entertainment value of the production, as a whole, is high and the production is entirely adequate. One of the best things about a picture is the subtitling, which is snappy, colloquial and at times sparkling. The best of the laughs, in fact, come from the titles.

THEME. Chorus girl's efforts to maintain a "front" and please wealthy suitor, leading to misunderstanding of her character.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The traffic scenes. The opening night of the revue. The comedy in the dentist's office. The work of the star. Tom Moore as leading man. The snappy subtitles. The itneriors. The excellent photography.

DIRECTION. Backstage atmosphere has been very well maintained, on the whole. Dramatic values and characterization of the Rita Weiman story well preserved generally. Good sense of comedy values. Tempo good, considering padding that had to be resorted to to lengthen short story into full length feature.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. In Viola Dana and Tom Moore you have two players whose names will probably mean something at your box-office, and they should be featured prominently in all your advertising. Also play up the story and author at your discretion. The picture offers an opportunity for many tie-ups. The most obvious of these, of course, is the cosmetic tie-up with drug stores, beauty parlors, etc., on the title. A good tie-up offers, too, with ready-to-wear shops, and the dressing room scenes should be good for a lingerie window hook-up. A discussion on the ethics of using rouge might also be stirred up. Teaser possibilities do suggest themselves.

SUMMARY. Excellent vehicle for the star's comedy gifts, having high entertainment value and wide audience appeal. Not uproarious, but consistently amusing.

"Vivacious and cute."
—N. Y. Morning Telegraph.

"Its novelty pep is delightful. Viola Dana never looked prettier or played a role with more convincing vim and allurement. Many clever bits of acting."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"Art titles are catchier than anything we've seen in a long time. Viola Dana latest comedy cause for laughs and giggles."—N. Y. Daily News.

"Viola Dana is very alluring. Titles are laugh provoking. Miss Dana is convincing. The clothes she wears are well thought out and are intrusive in their good taste."—Variety.

"Rises head and shoulders above the welter of program pictures we've been saddled with lately. Gives everybody a chance to exercise the laughter muscles. Funniest sub-titles since Hector was adolescent canine. Warm, human, pulsating and funny. The last named above all others. Viola Dana and Tom Moore make a dandy light-comedy team."—Washington Times.

"The best Dana picture that has been made for a long time. Filled with backstage atmosphere authentic and compelling. Darn good entertainment. Viola Dana is an eyeful as the little chorus girl."—Washington News.

"Has deft touch. Directed with rare spirit. One of the few that depicts back-stage life with reality. Chorus rehearsing and mannerisms and attire of girls very good."—Billboard.

Opinions

E. L. Perry, Manager, New Franklin Theatre, Oakland, Cal:—

"As for the drawing power of this high class offering, we are sincere in telling you that it is our belief that you brought in many extra dollars at every performance."

S. N. Chambers, Manager, Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas:—

"These slides are the most gorgeous screen pictures I have ever seen and are a joy to behold, and the music accompaniment enhances their beauty to a marked degree."

P. E. Noble, Manager, Liberty Theatre, Portland, Ore.:—

"Your Dream Pictures are one of the highest class of entertainment we can get in pictures. Place us among the Coast applications for a showing of the new series when they come out."

David Harding, Manager, Liberty Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.:—

"Dream Pictures went further to please all classes of people than has any other presentation we have sponsored this season."

H. W. Perry, Manager of the Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Utah:—

"Be sure and keep us advised of the new numbers you expect to release next year for picture houses. We shall surely want to book them."

T. D. Moule, Manager, Capitol Theatre Co., Detroit, Mich.:—

"We are highly pleased with your Dream Pictures. Many favorable comments were received."

Salt Lake City Telegram, February 28, 1923.

"Dream Pictures which the spectators unanimously declared to be the most beautiful collection of color views of American scenery ever shown in Salt Lake."

Dream Pictures are released as a series of eight different numbers, one every four weeks. Each number runs approximately six minutes.

Love and Chuckles

Every woman always is in love with Love, and every man pretends he likes to laugh at Love. Mae Marsh, in "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing," gives both women and men their chance as she returns to the film in the greatest picture of her entire career.

Tears and Laughter

Women love tears, when not too long sustained by emotion. Mae Marsh, in her great screen version of "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing", a story millions have read, brings up tears only to quickly dissolve them into laughter that will sweep any audience.

Thrills and Chills

There are enough thrills and creepy sensations in Mae Marsh's new picture to satisfy any audience. In "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing" there is action so fast and swift, adventure so thrilling, that patrons are certain to talk about the picture to their friends.

Fast-moving Drama

Mae Marsh, in the role of the-next-best-thing to the son that never came, gives an intensely human portrayal in a film that never lags nor sags, but keeps moving rapidly to a sane and logical climax. Every human emotion is roused by her great art.

NORMA TALMADGE in "ASHES of VENGEANCE"

By H. B. Somerville.

Personally directed by FRANK LLOYD

A First National Picture

Unrivaled in spectacular splendor

NORMA TALMADGE, in this magnificent production, rises to the pinnacle of dramatic art with the sheer inspiration of unfaltering genius.

In "Smilin' Through" her art brought a message of happiness to hundreds of thousands; in "The Eternal Flame" she fathomed the depths of a woman's heart; in "The Voice from the Minaret" she breathed the tragic soul-cry for love of a neglected wife.

In "Ashes of Vengeance" she paints in scenes of vivid fire the yearning passion of a woman for a mate denied her. She portrays a woman's tenderest and deepest emotions with a delicacy, a deftness and a surety of touch that makes the character breath with the breath of life.

Her fine artistry is matched only by the massiveness of the settings, the gorgeousness of the costuming, the thrilling, tensely dramatic story, and a cast that is superb. And Frank Lloyd, the director, lifts you into the atmosphere of Old France with one bold sweep and holds you with a compelling, cumulative tension straight to the story's close.

On into the Rajah's courtyard swept the horde of frenzied natives!

Meanwhile the Rajah of Rukh smiled sardonically

"Vengeance! Sacrifice!" they shouted. On the whim of this hysterical mob rested the fate of the beautiful Lucilla.

Drama! Thrills! Suspense! Against a spectacular background of Oriental splendor, one of the most dramatic romances of theatrical history is unfolded. William Archer's melodrama made into a superb photoplay by Forrest Halsey.

"The Fighting Blood" offering is a knockout— It's good to know there's another coming next week !!!

— Los Angeles Times —

When a hard boiled dramatic editor steps out of his way to boost, you can gamble your last dollar that the stuff he boosts must be "the goods". How many series pictures do you know of where dramatic editors say—"It's good to know there's another coming next week" . . . and right now all over the country—

That's what more than 6100 exhibitors are saying—

We have on file in this office hundreds of letters from exhibitors boosting "THE FIGHTING BLOOD" series as the most consistent crowd getters and money getters they ever played. Thousands of exhibitors are wild over "THE FIGHTING BLOOD" series. They boost 'em and praise 'em to the skies. They say they are the best entertainment now on the American screen—

That's what millions of movie fans are also saying—

Ask any F. B. O. exchange manager to show you booster letters on these H. C. Witwer-Collier's Weekly FIGHTING BLOOD series. Ask any exhibitor who is playing them whether they are money getters or not. Get the facts. Compare the cash receipts of exhibitors on "FIGHTING BLOOD" nights to their other receipts during the week. You are positively missing the biggest bets on the screen if you are not playing "THE FIGHTING BLOOD" stories. It's what the people want. Get in touch with your nearest F. B. O. exchange today and book 'em.

Admission Prices

THE persistent rumor that admission prices were to be advanced in many theatres this season seems to have been well founded. From a hundred cities—both large and small—we learn of increases averaging possibly 10 per cent.

Undoubtedly this action is brought about by the certainty of even greater film rentals than ever before and an augmented overhead of various kinds that—generally—is unavoidable.

Undoubtedly, too, where admissions have been advanced, it has been accomplished only after a careful analysis which leads the theatre owner to believe that his best interests are being served.

And certainly, fixing a scale of prices is an individual problem.

It is this fact that leads us to suggest to those who would like to increase their net profit—probably now less than it should be—the amount of investment, time and attention required being considered—that such steps be taken only after thoughtful deliberation. It is not enough that others have raised prices and got away with it.

The public is not one iota interested in the fact that you are not making an adequate profit and that your expenses have increased. They judge your show by what you give them for their money and these views are largely comparative. Rolls-Royce may mean a definite value in automobiles, but a picture with a million dollar cost sheet and a two million dollar quota doesn't necessarily mean a show worth double admissions—again viewing the proposition from the fan standpoint.

The top prices of first class theatres today bring the motion picture into direct competition with vaudeville and the stock company, and while we have no fear that a good picture will hold its own on this basis, it is well to remember that the photoplay won its spurs as the poor man's recreation.

It is a far cry from five cents to two dollars, and the foundation of many a picture palace was laid with the dollars that came in a nickle at a time.

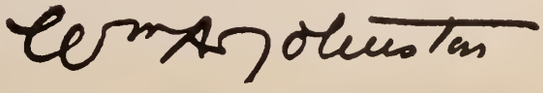
We talked recently with a theatre owner who has one of the finest houses in the country. He admitted that he wasn't playing to capacity three days a month and that he preferred S. R. O. at popular prices to half houses at twice the money.



Yet his scale has gone up ten per cent within the last two weeks. Evidently he has convinced himself that he can make a greater profit at the advanced figure.

Perhaps he can. He boasts a million dollar theatre located in a city of a million inhabitants—every one a possible customer.

We have no fears for the big house in the big town. Our word of caution is directed to the several thousand theatres of the several thousand middle class cities where the goose that lays the golden egg can easily be killed if the ante gets so high that Mr. and Mrs. Public feel the show isn't worth the money.

It doesn't matter what the show really is worth. It is what people think it is worth, that counts.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WE hear great things about Chaplin's production, "A Woman of Paris." United Artists are not trumpeting the values of the picture. Rather are they using the soft pedal so as to give the jaded public the surprise of its life. But from all accounts the king of comedians is as much of a genius in back of the megaphone as he is in front of it. We hear that he depends almost entirely on subtleties and innuendoes to establish his points. It is a picture of suggestion—a picture not dependent upon massive scenery or whirlwind action, but, on the contrary, a true-to-life portrayal of human nature.

It is said that "A Woman of Paris" will revolutionize the technique of the photoplay. It is even said that Chaplin is so elated over his achievement that he is contemplating a life of permanent retirement from film pantomime.

Artist that he is, the screen could ill afford to miss him, but if he is destined to lead the motion picture out of its conventional groove—away from its stereotyped channels—his place in the sun will be just as secure as a director. He has been the screen's salvation as an actor. If his directorial plans prove sound and are adopted, it is reasonable to believe that he will establish it as one of the fine arts.

OUR European spy informs us that Fannie Ward has become a grandmother. Which is interesting news in view of the fact that the actress has retained the charm and bloom of youth which makes her look scarcely old enough to be the mother of the child much less its grandmother. Fannie Ward's daughter, Dorothy, is the wife of Lord Plunkett.

BERT LYTELL is going to take a flyer in vaudeville. The actor who left the legitimate stage to become a screen star will return to a speaking role for a six weeks' engagement over the Keith circuit—beginning at the New York Palace and playing Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Chicago. The one-act sketch is called "Valiant," which was originally produced at a Lambs' Gambol.

REX INGRAM sails Saturday for Europe. His picture, "Scaramouche," opens Sunday at three different points, New York—the 44th Street theatre; Chicago—Woods' theatre and Cincinnati—Cox's theatre. Marcus Loew will leave for Chicago to attend the Mid-West premiere.

THE costume dramas having come into their own the past season or two, with plenty more to follow, Griffith is stealing a march on his rivals by producing one entitled "America." Most of the costume pictures are laid against English, French and Italian backgrounds—the only exceptions being "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Covered Wagon," two features which are not strictly of "costume" character.

Griffith's "America" with Washington at Valley Forge or leading his army—with Major Andre being caught as a spy—with the battles of Saratoga and the storming of Ticonderoga and the surrender of Yorktown should make mighty interesting drama.

We have been shown how France won her independence—we have viewed the rise and fall of kingdoms in Europe. The filming of our own high spots of history will be an achievement which will enliven the interest of every American.

BILL HART, having returned to the screen, is surrounded by his old staff, showing that the star who made the good-bad man famous possesses a fine streak of sentiment. Cliff Smith, who directed Bill in no less than forty-five pictures, is with him again for "Wild Bill Hickok," written by the star himself and adapted by J. G. Hawks. His erstwhile cameraman, Dwight Warren, is also on the job.

Let us catalogue this fact that Hart has really had but two directors in his entire screen career, the other being Lambert Hillyer. Which is something of a record.

NO sooner is Lillian Gish finished with "The White Sister," than Inspiration selects her to play another saintly role—that of Joan of Arc in the picture of that name. It will be made in France the early part of next year. Production will start immediately after the completion of "Romola," which is to be launched shortly in Italy under the direction of Henry King. No director has as yet been selected to produce "Joan of Arc."

IF you wonder how the millions are spent which total the cost of producing a big picture, Joseph M. Schenck would have you understand that it goes out thirty-seven different ways. And here they are:

1, scenario; 2, director and assistants; 3, art director; 4, cameraman and assistants; 5, cutter and clerk; 6, company prop man and grips; 7, star; 8, talent; 9, extras; 10, wardrobes, rented and purchased.

11, wardrobe labor and material; 12, purchased and rented props; 13, architects; 14, carpenters' salaries; 15, scenic salaries; 16, prop salaries; 17, carpenter material; 18, scenic material; 19, props rented and purchased; 20, props expense.

21, location cost; 22, dressing locations; 23, transportation; 24, hotels and meals; 25, auto, horse and boat hire; 26, electricians' salaries; 27, electrical material; 28, negative film; 29, developing; 30, cutting.

31, sample print; 32, labor and material on titles and inserts; 33, photographing titles; 34, film and developing same; 35, still photographs; 36, publicity and advertising; 37, miscellaneous.

CARL LAEMMLE returned from Europe Friday. He was accompanied by Abe Stern of Century Comedies.

DOROTHY MACKAILL, having completed work in the Barthelmess production, "Twenty-One," leaves next week for Hollywood where she will appear in "The Next Corner" for Famous Players. This will be her first trip to the Coast. That the producers consider this a very important production may be seen in the supporting cast which includes Lon Chaney and Conway Tearle.

Dorothy Mackaill has come along fast. It's only a season or two since she stepped from obscurity to a position where her services are in constant demand. Edwin Carewe gave the English actress her first big chance in "Mighty Lak' a Rose" and she made such an impressive hit that Dick Barthelmess grabbed her for his costume drama, "The Fighting Blade." Anyone who sees her as the impetuous maid in that Cromwellian romance will admit that she has the talent and personality to scale the heights.

THE stork paid a visit to Mr. and Mrs. William A. Johnston of Great Neck, Tuesday night, leaving a baby girl of seven pounds. Mother and child are doing nicely. Bill Johnston, the father, is the president and editor of the NEWS, and is registering such pride that he feels capable of bagging birdies on any golf course in the country. The members of the staff offer Mr. and Mrs. Johnston their heartiest felicitations.

THE stork is hovering in close proximity to the Buster Keaton-Natalie Talmadge menage—the big bird expects to descend with his tiny bundle around January. This will mark his second visit to the Buster Keatons.

A TRIBUTE to the drawing power of "The Covered Wagon" comes from D. Appleton & Company, publishers of Emerson Hough's books. The publishers do not issue actual figures on the number of books sold but they announced that in the six months since the picture was first released twice as many copies of the novel have been sold as in the twelve months previous to the first showing of the picture. In other words four times as many copies of "The Covered Wagon" are being sold now as were sold before the picture was issued.

This revival of interest in the book can be traced directly to an active demand on the part of the people who have seen or are going to see the picture. The books are selling in spite of book-dealers who are not very anxious to sell a two dollar book first published a year and a half ago, particularly since a new Emerson Hough novel, "North of 36," is now on the bookstands. Due to the interest in "The Covered Wagon," "North of 36" also is established as one of the six best sellers throughout the United States. Paramount has also acquired this property and is planning to produce it as a James Cruze production next season.

MOTION picture dramas may carry the mystery element which may be duplicated in real life. Take the strange disappearance of Augustin Le Prince for example. This pioneer of cinematography—who has rarely been recognized as such—was according to E. Kilburn Scott of the Royal Photographic Society, the first to make a successful camera to take photographs at more than sixteen a second—and was the first to show moving pictures on a screen (at Leeds, England, in 1889), disappeared September 16, 1890, at Dijon, France, entering a train for Paris. Since then nothing whatever seems to be known about him.

A note of ironic humor creeps into the story which we culled from Nature in the suggestion that he might have been kidnaped by agents of American inventors whom he had forestalled. Mr. Scott states that M. Prince was the first to appreciate the importance of using flexible film and the first to use perforations and sprocket wheels (patents dated 1888).

IT is said that Mrs. John Barrymore, professionally known as Michael Strange when she wrote the play, "Claire de Lune," will support her husband in the screen version of "Beau Brummel." While in France with him recently, a producer was struck by her personality and offered her a part in a production.

THE National Board of Review lists three pictures as meritorious enough to win the much-coveted asterisk for the week of September 22. The Board presents "The Cricket on the Hearth" (Selznick), "Little Old New York" (Goldwyn—Cosmopolitan), and "Scaramouche" (Metro).

FAMOUS is making big plans for Doug, Jr. Rumor has it that his first picture will be a special. It is rather difficult to get the right sort of material for the star because his age makes anything but light comedy dramas prohibitive. The younger Doug has inherited his father's smile and enthusiasm—assets which should carry him over many barriers.

RETURNING from Europe and expected in New York the latter end of the week are Betty Compson and Betty Blythe.

COMES word that Larry Semon as soon as he completes his last two-reeler for Vitagraph, will take a flier in vaudeville before he begins his contract with M. H. Hoffman. Other film luminaries who have returned to the two-a-day for a brief respite are Bert Lytell, Theodore Roberts, Nazimova, Ruth Stonehouse, Enid Markey and Ruth Roland. It is rumored that the Carter De Havens are likewise planning to return to vaudeville.

RUMORS of engagements (romances, not pictures), are coming in from our Coast spies. We have it that Richard Dix and Lois Wilson may soon walk to the altar—and that Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman expect to answer "I Do!" when the minister pops the questions at them in the near future.

SOME time ago Valentino changed his given name from Rudolph to Rodolph, the latter monicker being the correct one. Now Ramon Navarro has changed his surname from Navarro to Novarro, the last mentioned according to the Metro star being correct but which had been changed without his consent. We have it that neither one belongs to him, but were adopted for his stage and screen career.

HOPE DROWN, who rose from obscurity in stock to play the would-be film star in the amusing satire, "Hollywood," is now playing in the Frank Keenan stage play, "Peter Weston," which opened in New York the other night.

JANE and Eva Novak will make their first appearance together on the screen in "The Man Whom Life Passed By," the production of which was started recently.

JOSEPH KILGOUR, who is appearing in support of Bryant Washburn, will shortly leave for New York to appear in a revival of "The Easiest Way" for David Belasco. Mr. Kilgour created the leading male role in the original production of this play which featured Frances Starr.

BARBARA LA MARR has returned to Hollywood for six weeks where she will be engaged in the production of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," the actress playing the role of the lady known as Lou.

CHARLES RAY'S biggest effort, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," opened at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre last Monday for an indefinite engagement.

J. STUART BLACKTON has completed "On the Banks of the Wabash," and is planning to make a spectacular photoplay called "Let No Man Put Asunder."

FOX has selected Bessie Love to play the title role of "Gentle Julia," which is a screen version of Booth Tarkington's study in adolesence.

Kan. Exhibitors Aid Wheat Farmers

Propose One Day's Proceeds from Each Theatre to Be Placed in Wheat Seed Pool

MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS OF KANSAS, INC., may go into the wheat growing business.

A special committee has been appointed to formulate a plan whereby the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Kansas may help the farmers in the western part of the state in the matter of seed wheat. It was suggested that one day's proceeds from each theatre be placed in the seed wheat pool and indications are that the committee will recommend this plan when it reports.

October 9 is the date set for the benefit performances, when the entire gross receipts will be turned in toward the Wichita quota. M. B. Shanberg of Hutchinson is the chairman of the committee. Others are, R. G. Liggett. S. N. Chambers, E. E. Frazier, H. G. Keefer, Conrad Gabrial, Fred Fees, E. R. Ruch, H. H. Woody, W. S. McDowell, Walter Wallace and Harry McClure. Approximately $15,000 is expected to be raised.

Repeal of the Federal "war tax" of ten per cent. on theatre admissions was before the convention during the week.. Petitions have been prepared for signature by patrons of theatres all over the state. The petitions then would be forwarded to Congressmen from the various districts, urging them vote for the repeal of the law. A telegram from Senator Arthur Capper, in New York, indicated that he will vote for the repeal of the law, and use his influence in Congress looking to that end. Henry J. Allen, former Governor of Kansas, in addressing the movie men at the banquet Tuesday night, declared that in a few years, censorship of films will be a thing of the past because the producers and the exhibitors have sensed the public feeling in the matter of objectionable films and have ceased to produce that sort.

Sam A. Handy, of Kansas City, attorney for the exhibitors reported that progress is being made in the fight against the payment of the music tax imposed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. Two cases testing the validity of the tax will be heard in the United States District Court next month.

U Exchange Celebrates at Anniversary Dinner

The Big "U" Exchange, Universal's New York sales and distributing center, held an anniversary dinner last week at Zucca's Restaurant, near "film row." The anniversary marked the completion of the first year under W. C. Herrmann, the exchange manager, Dave Brill, the New York manager, and Lou I. Kutinsky, the New Jersey manager. These three executives were the guests of honor.

Jacob Hartman, the veteran service manager of the exchange, was toastmaster.

Among those present were Emil Rosenbaum and Joe Weinberg, of the entertainment committee; Les Sherwood; John Rohlfs; Lew Levy; Leo Abrams; Joe Friedman; Morris Epstein; Ben Rappaport; Ben Price; Nat Liebeskind; L. Hess; Sigwa Kusiel; Jack Fallace; Harry L. Tissot; Harry Davis; Nat Goldberg; Jack Mossberg; Phil. Winnick; Jim Holden; Walter Bernard; Harry Furst; Sol. Solomon and Joe Weil.

Smith Names Committee On Contract Disptues

A committee of three has been appointed by Howard J. Smith, president of the Western New York M. P. T. O. for the purpose of settling disputes that may arise over contracts. Those appointed are George Keating, Sid Allen and Mike Carr.

Illinois Exhibitors Approve Joint Meeting of Five Central West States

AT a special meeting of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and Directors, called by Secretary Ludwig Siegel, for September 24th, approval was voted of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana's proposal to hold a joint meeting of the directors of the exhibitors' organizations of five central west states at French Lick Springs on October 24-25.

Messrs. William Connors, secretary of the Indiana unit; Nathaniel Bernstein, of Michigan City, Indiana, of the Indiana Board, and Wallerstein, composed the committee representing Indiana at the meeting, and agreed, on behalf of their state organization to send out formal invitations to the officials of the Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and Michigan units to attend the gathering.

The primary purpose of the French Lick gathering will be to secure closer affiliation between the central western states with a view to more effective cooperation on matters in which they have mutual interest. Other matters of importance to exhibitors throughout the territory covered, will be put on the program for consideration.

It was made plain at the Chicago gathering that organization politics were to play no part in the French Lick conference, and it was agreed that those interested in the meeting had no thought of starting a new national organization. This was of considerable interest to those present, as two of the states to be invited to the French Lick meeting have seceded from the M. P. T. O. of A. since the national convention, which was held last June at the Chicago Coliseum.

It was also stated that there would be no officers elected.

Arkansas Theatre Owners Meet October 1

THE semi-annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas will take place at Hotel Marion, Little Rock, on October 1. The Arkansas organization convenes but one day in the fall with a three-day convention in April of each year.

The fall convention promises to be productive of much constructive work. New officers will be elected to serve the coming year. Eli Whitney Collins, retiring president, has called a meeting of the State Executive Board for September 30, at which time various angles of the industry will be discussed and the attitude of the Arkansas body to leading issues will be determined.

A new system of financing the state organization is also under consideration and the board will act upon this.

Kansas City Exhibitors Back President

If the results of the recent "ultimatum" served on members of the Kansas City Division of the M. P. T. O. A. by A. M. Eisner, president, can be taken as a barometer, the policy of the organization's head is due to be a most successful one.

Following the failure of Kansas City exhibitors to properly support the city organization, Mr. Eisner issued a statement about three weeks ago in which he told theatre owners flatly to "take it or leave it." This week a meeting was held and they "took it"—took it strong. The first twenty-one exhibitors approached to contribute to a fund to fight an unjust and ridiculous county taxation imposed against motion picture theatres, several music tax cases and threatened musicians' strike gave $1,385. There are about forty more exhibitors yet to be consulted on the matter and most of them already have expressed a willingness to co-operate financially. The fund, in addition to being used in supporting the taxation test case against Mr. Eisner, will be used in financing the organization, which now bids fair to become a strong one.

At the meeting a board of directors also was named, consisting of A. M. Eisner, Broadmour theatre; Jay Means, Murray theatre; H. H. Barrett, Colonial theatre; L. C. Walker, Warwick theatre, and R. Finklestein, Gilliam theatre.

Revenue Men at Work on Theatre Check-up

Field men of the Internal Revenue Department are continuing their work of checking the amusement tax returns of the motion picture houses, theatres, dance halls and other places of amusement in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. The latter territory is under jurisdiction of Chicago. It is expected that it will require more than a month to complete the check-up in this territory.

Conklin Eastern Manager of Standard Laboratories

Announcement is made that F. G. Conklin will assume the management of the eastern office of the Standard Laboratories in New York. He is on his way to this city for that purpose. Conklin until recently was special representative of Hope Hampton Productions.

Exhibitor Condemns Sales Methods

Cowan Oldham Gives His Views

COWAN OLDHAM, manager of Oldham's theatre, McMinnville, Tenn., takes some hot shots at the sales methods employed in the picture industry in the following communication addressed to William A. Johnston, Publisher of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Mr. Oldham does not mince his words. These are his views on the matter and because of its interest the letter is reprinted in full.

Mr. W. A. Johnston, Editor,
Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

Recently your valuable medium lamented the departure of Turner Jones from this industry. You called for others to institute methods whereby the picture business and the public would be brought more closely together.

Do you suppose for a minute that Mr. Jones could have been induced to change his line of endeavor if he had been satisfied that his further efforts would help bring the business to a substantial basis?

False Foundation

No, Mr. Jones saw the "writing on the wall"—he saw the impossibility of stabilizing a business that had a false foundation. He saw that merchandise marketed along lines absolutely contrary to every known successful principle was doomed to disaster, maybe not now, but like Mr. Pillsbury's Flour—Eventually.

If a salesman for Marshall-Field were to sell a merchant in Key West a couple gross of fleece lined underwear, they'd fire him by wire for obvious reasons, but in the picture business, if a salesman were to pull a sale by similar comparison, Mr. Sales Manager in New York would raise his salary and Mr. Producer would write him personally complimenting his ability to put one over.

Do you suppose the Goodyear Rubber Company's salesman for Corpus Christi has a certain set quota of business charged against him for that town and other towns in that section where they have rain about three times a year? No, but the chap up in Seattle is sure going to get his share of legitimate rainy goods business.

Let's study merchandising along lines as followed by successful manufacturers—don't send smooth tongued salesmen to me with a line of goods that are salable on the East side of your town or up in Minnesota or Kalamazoo because I might believe his talk and do my show more harm in one day than I could recover in a month.

You've heard the story of the Exhibitor who put on "A Doll's House" for a children's matinee—everybody laughed, thought it was a big joke—but wouldn't it have been much better for the business if that had never happened in that man's town? Yet, any day, the same thing might happen to me because I cannot accept the salesman's statement as to what a picture is and I'd be mighty apt to walk into the same kind of predicament if I didn't watch my P's and Q's.

You say that one particular Company is going to sell them individually this next season. And that this is a step forward—but old timers may look back over their files for the past several years and see the same old bunk and I'd bet my last dollar that I won't be able to pick what I want this year any more than I was last and the same old alibi will be handed out "I.E." Of course, Mr. Oldham, we will sell you any picture you select, but we could not afford to let you have it at the same rate as we would if you took them all.

Why Not Sample Prints?

If Mr. Sales Manager is really sincere in his efforts to place the business on a better basis, why not send his sample prints to his branches and then let his branch manager determine whether or not all of the goods sent him to sell are suitable for his territory. Surely my confidence in him would bring about satisfactory and very pleasant relations and he'd be mighty happy to know that he was not expected to palm off goods on me that I could not use profitably. And just a little further, wouldn't he order only sufficient prints to take care of his orders? How many thousand dollars are tied up in dead prints throughout the country to-day? Does Mr. Producer send his foreign representatives a couple hundred prints and the gentle advice—there they are, peddle them even if you have to use a lead pipe for a persuader?

Sell them pictures in Russia that the English like, and those folks over in Siberia the ones they want in Italy? Not by a jug-full! But it's all okay to make me use what they want in Wisconsin and the fellow out in Arizona what they want in New York.

Wouldn't it be ideal to know and feel that my exchange was just as much interested in my success as any legitimate commercial house is in their agent and after all is said and done, I'm just a middleman-good merchandise—and I succeed and pass on my success to the manufacturer—to the contrary, we both fail.

Put us exhibitors in a position where we can go out to our public with a feeling of confidence that insures our sincere belief in the value of our shows as a community necessity—a valuable educational medium and dispensers of bona fide entertainment—then and only then will you and I and everybody else in this industry know the assurance of future success.

Very cordially yours,
(signed) COWAN OLDHAM,
Manager, Oldham's Theatre.

Albany Houses Playing To Capacity

EVERY theatre in Albany is doing a capacity business these days. The return of better times has apparently landed with both feet. There are no exceptions. The neighborhood, or residential theatres, as well as downtown houses report business as measuring up to every expectation. Theatres generally in northern New York, are reporting business as far ahead of last year, and with every prospect of an excellent fall.

Paramount Pep Club Outing Success Despite Rain

In spite of the threatening weather, more than two hundred members of the Paramount Pep Club attended the club's annual outing at Asbury Park last Saturday. The party left by boat at West Forty-second Street at 8.45 A.M., going to Atlantic Highlands, from which point the journey was continued to Asbury Park by special train.

The headquarters of the club were at the Beach Arcade where the afternoon was spent in dancing and swimming. Luncheon and dinner were served at the Plaza Hotel Grill. Following dinner there was dancing until 8.30 when the party returned by special train, arriving in New York at 10.

Members of the club who were interested in golf were extended the courtesies of the Asbury Park Golf Club and witnessed a thrilling match between Gene Sarazen and Walter Hagen in which the former, winning by 2 up, set a new course record of 70, three under par, in a drizzling rain.

Paul Morgan, as chairman of the general committee, had charge of the arrangements for the outing.

Esthonia Issues Postal Film Regulations

Consul Harold B. Quarton, writing from Reval, Esthonia, under date of July 6, says that "all packages containing celluloid or articles manufactured therefrom, when transmitted by parcel post, must be packed in accordance with the following specifications:

"Crude celluloid in sheets, tubes, or rolls, and ordinary cinema films shall be packed in stanch modern cases. Articles wholly or partially manufactured from celluloid and acetic celluloid films, may be transmitted in strong pasteboard tubes. The conspicuous inscription 'Celluloid,' written in black on a white slip, and glued to the parcel must always be attached to the package."

Urges Wider Circulation of Pictures

President Doolittle, of Selznick Corp., Advocates Sound Business Methods

INTO the discussion on percentage bookings, star salaries, film rentals, and all the other supposed, or fancied, ills of the industry comes an article from W. C. J. Doolittle, President of the Selznick Distributing Corporation. Mr. Doolittle disclaims any knowledge of some universal panacea, but he insists that sound business methods will succeed here as in any other great industry.

"If we are to believe the general rumors everywhere being quoted, the producer, the distributor and the exhibitor alike, have failed to prosper for some time past and are all looking forward pessimistically to an even worse future," writes Mr. Doolittle. "If it is true that these three most important factors of the industry are actually operating on a losing, or even a 'break even,' basis, then it is equally certain that but one of two conditions must obtain; either we are manufacturing an article for which the general demand is rapidly decreasing, or, the costs involved in the manufacture, distribution and final marketing of our product are, in combination, in excess of what our product can be sold for.

"Producers to-day claim that they cannot, most of the time, get back their actual negative costs. Distributors assert that at regular distribution percentage terms they are lucky to get back their operating costs. While exhibitors, almost unanimously, declare that they are being so grievously overcharged for film rentals that they cannot get an even break, to say nothing of a reasonable profit on their investments.

"If they are all within the facts then it must be true that the whole fabric of our business is fundamentally unsound and, unless we retrench in production, distribution or exhibition costs, or in all three, then we are headed for the demnition bow-wows. But, granting that retrenchment is the real answer, where shall that retrenchment be made?

"We find the distributor confronted with the ultimatum of the producer: 'I must get a higher percentage for my pictures or seek some other channel of distribution.' The average distributor will have but one answer to make to this demand: 'I am barely getting by under the present arrangement and any decrease in my share of the gross spells ruin.' If the producer suggests that a higher rental be charged to exhibitors generally the discerning distributor will simply shrug an emphatic negative. The exhibitor is already being charged all that the traffic will bear. Try and pass the buck to the exhibitor and he will say (if he can control his temper long enough) that there are but two ways for him to pay increased rentals—to raise his admission prices or reduce his operating costs.

"I cannot conceive of a surer way to alienate our supporting public and effectually destroy the motion picture than to take it out of the cheap amusement class via the raised admission route.

"The producer cannot reduce his costs and continue to turn out box-office-audience-satisfying pictures; the distributor cannot pay the producer a higher percentage on the gross than he is now paying, nor can he, on the other hand, price the pictures he handles on any higher scale to exhibitors; the exhibitor cannot, by raising prices or by any other method, increase his gross receipts, nor can he further economize on his operating expenses. No wonder everyone asks: 'What's the answer?'

"If all the above premises be true; if we are all doing our best under existing conditions, operating at the lowest possible costs, and are still failing of prosperity, there is, there can be, but one answer, and that is wider circulation. Wider circulation for really meritorious productions, which means more money in terms of gross revenue to both the producer and the distributor, without disturbing present percentage arrangements. It also means, or certainly ought to mean, a definite revision downward of rental prices to all exhibitors."

Three New Incorporations Noted at Albany

The past week brought the following motion picture corporations in New York state: Palma Pictures Corporation, $10,000, John and Heywood Holden, Vida Sutton, New York City; Hollywood Enteprises, Inc., $20,000, Louis Rubin, Jacob Heilbraun, Louis Goldberg, Brooklyn; Schoolmaster Pictures, Inc., $20,000, M. L. Lesser, Pearl Cohen, New York; Whitman Bennett, Yonkers.

F.I.L.M. Board Chiefs to Gather in N. Y.

THE third of a series of territorial meetings of presidents of F. I. L. M. Boards of Trade of key cities east of Chicago will be held in New York some time in October. Problems involved in the working of the uniform contract will be up for discussion.

The first of these meetings was held in Chicago some weeks ago and the second at Los Angeles two weeks ago, when representatives from eleven cities participated. Charles C. Pettijohn of the Will Hays organization was present at the previous sessions and has just returned to New York.

Following the New York meeting, a National meeting is to be called in New York with presidents of the thirty-three boards and with exhibitor members of each board in attendance.

Jersey M. P. T. O. Directors Hold Meeting

A regular meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey was held at the Hotel Stacey Trent, Trenton, N. J., on Tuesday, September 25. The meeting was held in the Princeton Room of the hotel and a luncheon was served.

Those in attendance were R. F. Woodhull, president; Peter Adams, vice president; Henry P. Nelson, secretary, and the following members of the board of directors: Charles Hildinger, Trenton; Ben Schindler, Camden; D. J. Hennessey, Newark; Arthur B. Smith, Salem; Henry Manus, Lyndhurst; W. C. Hunt, Wildwood, and A. J. Moeller, general manager of the M. P. T. O. A.

The service division maintained by the New Jersey M. P. T. O. under the supervision and direction of Mr. Moeller is reported showing consistent progress.

A definite campaign was laid out relative to the seat and admission tax. A special legislative committee will be announced next week. Extensive National Motion Picture Day activities were reported and Peter Adams of Newark and Paterson, Charles C. Hildinger of Trenton, Ben Schindler of Camden, and R. F. Woodhull of Dover, are arranging for special campaigns.

A special public service program was also inaugurated under the direction of President Woodhull.

The next meeting of the board of directors will be held in Trenton at the Hotel Stacey Trent on October 17.

Broadway Theatres Drawing Excellent Business Despite Paper Strike

DESPITE the fact that New York has been in the throes of a pressmen's strike which crippled the newspapers, and resulted in combined editions much reduced in size from the regular issues, the Broadway picture theatres report no lessening of business.

On the contrary, business in general is excellent, and has shown marked gains in the past week or two. The week ending September 22, in which the Jewish holidays were observed, the Capitol did a gross in excess of $50,000, on "Six Days." "The Covered Wagon" boomed along at the Criterion, continuing to play to capacity, the figure being around $11,000. "Zaza" proved a big drawing card at the Rivoli, where the gross reached about $28,000 on the week. The Rialto figure was $19,000, approximately, with "The Marriage Maker" as the feature attraction.

Sunday of this week was a big day. The Capitol, continuing "Six Days," touched around $11,000; "Zaza" moved down to the Rialto and pulled $5,500; the Criterion drew about $1,800 on the day, and "Ashes of Vengeance," at the Rivoli, reached around $6,800. The Strand, with "Potash and Perlmutter," did a big business.

Washington Host to Ohio Film Board Chief

W. A. Kaiser, president of the Cincinnati (Ohio) F-I-L-M Board of Trade, was the guest at dinner last Tuesday at the Hotel Harrington of the Washington (D. C.) F-I-L-M board, whose territory overlaps the Ohio region. He discussed at length the workings of his film board under former regimes and as reconstituted by and with the approval of the Will Hays organization.

He referred to the film inspectors' training course as worked out in Ohio. Methods of closer co-operation between the respective exchange center film boards and better division of the no-man's land between the territories were suggested by him and endorsed by the Washington exchange men.

News Weeklies Show 'Quake Views

New York Sees Japanese Disaster

THAT the news weekly is an indispensable member of the motion picture program as well as constituting a business builder of unquestioned maximum value to the exhibitor was again demonstrated this week when the first pictures of the Japanese earthquake disaster were shown on the West Coast and in New York City. Exhibitors in the metropolis this week were enthused over the remarkable accomplishment of the various news weeklies, characterizing the record-breaking delivery of the much-awaited pictures as a service that surpassed in timeliness and enterprise even the newspapers which on Wednesday besieged the offices of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Pathe and Universal for prints from which to make photographs for their pictorial sections.

With official word of the arrival and exhibition of the films in New York and on the Coast came three distinct claims from the distributors. These claims are as follows:

Three Distinct Claims

(1) Paramount contends that it was the first motion picture company to have pictures of the earthquake delivered to New York and exhibited at Broadway theatres. This occurred Wednesday.

(2) International News claims that its pictures that arrived in New York late Wednesday were the first taken of the earthquake, only a slip in the transportation of the negatives to various points in Japan preventing it from showing the films on Broadway on Wedsenday night.

(3) Pathe gave out a despatch from San Francisco that its pictures were the first shown on the Coast or anywhere in this country. The Pathe pictures were first shown on the Coast Monday, September 24. They were scheduled to be released in New York Thursday, September 27.

Rushed across the continent by airplane from shipboard at Victoria, B. C., the Paramount earthquake pictures, according to a Famous Players statement, smashed all speed records, arriving in New York at 3:15 o'clock on the afternoon of Wednesday, September 26, and shown at the Rivoli, Rialto, Criterion and other Broadway theatres late that evening.

Universal, distributors of the International News Weekly, early Wednesday gave out word that their aerial messenger was expected to land at Mineola, L. I., late in the afternoon. A heavy fog that prevented the operation of even mail planes delayed the International carrier, it is said.

The enterprise with which the news weeklies producers rushed the pictures east attracted the attention of metropolitan newspapers as well as exhibitors throughout the country in general. The three firms apparently spared no effort to bring the pictures to America in record time, despite the near impossible obstacles the carriers were reported to have encountered.

The Paramount pictures, consisting of 2,500 feet of films, were secured by Tom D. Cochrane and R. E. McIntyre, Paramount managers in Japan, and it was through the cooperation of representatives of the Japanese Government as well as Canadian and American officials that they reached Curtiss Field, Mineola, Wednesday afternoon after the record-breaking journey half way round the world.

The film, which shows the ravaging conflagration which followed the earthquake as well as the buildings of Tokio and Yokohama swaying and crumbling to the ground while the people rushed for safety, was rushed by airplane to Kobe to catch the Empress of Australia, of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Lines, only to find that the ship had sailed several hours before. The pictures were taken by seaplane and put aboard the vessel at a point 100 miles off Kobe.

The Empress of Australia arrived at quarantine, Victoria, B. C., Sunday noon and the film was rushed by seaplane to Seattle, Wash. At both points the Canadian and American customs officials gave every possible assistance to George P. Endert and William Hanscher, Paramount branch managers at Seattle and Vancouver, in obtaining rapid clearance for the pictures in order that the transcontinental journey might not be delayed a moment longer than necessary.

Rushed by Plane

At Seattle the film was put in charge of Nick Namer, said to be one of the fastest fliers in the West, who hopped off for Great Falls, Mont., on Monday morning. At Great Falls the transfer was made to another plane, piloted by Eddie Stinson, who was to bring the film all the way to Mineola, making but two stops for fuel at Bismarck, N. D., and Chicago. At Marsh, Mont., Stinson was forced down by a heavy rain and fog and was delayed ten hours. Chicago was made after dark Tuesday in thick weather, but the flier resumed his journey at 1:30 a. m. and flew directly to Mineola.

From Mineola the film was rushed immediately by automobile to the Famous Players-Lasky laboratory, where positive prints were turned out in record speed and despatched to the Rialto and Rivoli for the evening performances and to Paramount exchanges throughout the country.

The arrangements for the record-breaking trip were perfected in every detail by George Weeks, divisional sales manager at the Paramount home office.

Despatches from the Coast tell the story of the success of the Pathe News. On Monday, September 24, the Pathe News released to regular customers pictures of the disaster. These pictures are said by Pathe to be the first to be shown in this country.

The story connected with these pictures is an interesting one. Ralph Earl, one of the first cameraman that the Pathe News had, who covered the Coast territory in the old days when the News was known as the Pathe Weekly, was the man who turned the trick. He was traveling in Japan at the time of the disaster and by a stroke of luck was on the spot when the repeated shocks were leveling Tokio and Yokohama. Earl saw his opportunity and secured thousands of feet of scenes. He took the first boat to the United States with his films, cabling Editor Cohen as soon as he could secure a wire.

When Earl landed he was met by Manager Kofeldt of the local Pathe office in San Francisco and Cameraman Johnson. These men labored to get positive prints made and shipped to all Pathe News first-run accounts on the Coast at the earliest possible moment. In consequence, its pictures of the event were said by Pathe to have acutally been shown in the theatres of the territory in advance of the publication of still pictures by the newspapers.

Prints Sent Out

By working all night Messrs. Kofeldt and Johnson were enabled to cover the entire territory in reported record time with shipments of prints. The negative was rushed by airplane and train to Chicago. The Chicago office of Pathe had been wired to meet the film and to at once proceed to have prints made to supply all first-run accounts in the Middle West. In order to insure that the editorial work was properly done, Editor Cohen sent his assistant, William Park, to Chicago by first train.

International News Reel pictures, taken from an aeroplane and amid the scenes of disaster on the day following the first 'quake, were shown to the New York audiences Thursday. A complete reel in length, and comprising in full the entire current issue of the International News reel, the pictures are said to bring home with frightful reality the extent of Japan's tragedy. Captain Ariel Varges, the organization's general European representative, was in Shanghai when the earthquake took place. He obtained an aeroplane the following day and flew the 1,500 miles to Tokio, reaching the earthquake zone while it still was active.

He obtained pictures in both Tokio and Yokohama. Both from the air, from the sea and on land he cranked the scenes. Varges flew back to Shanghai and put his film aboard a steamer. Then he hurried back to Japan for pictures of the rescue activities he knew would follow. The earthquake films, many hundreds of feet in length, began their slow trip across the Pacific. When they were landed in Vancouver, International News representatives rushed them to a nearby aviation field and soon they were speeding to the east.

They arrived in New York late Wednesday and were immediately rushed to the laboratory, where prints were turned out with exceptional celerity for country-wide distribution. Instead of holding the films on the West Coast and printing a few copies there, Edgar B. Hatrick, general manager of the International News, elected to rush the films east and print in New York.

Michigan M.P.T.O. Will Meet October 16-17

H. M. RICHEY, General Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, called attention this week to the change in date of the annual convention at Jackson, Mich. The meeting will be held October 16-17.

Elaborate plans are being made and the attendance, it is expected, will reach record proportions.

Cleveland Labor Trouble Nears End

Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., Settle With Musicians; Other Houses to Follow

LOEW'S Ohio Theatres, Inc., has settled with musicians for a 12½ per cent increase in the wage scale for the coming year. This scale covers the eight Cleveland picture houses operated by Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., including the Stillman, Allen, State, Park, Alhambra, Liberty, Mall and Dean.

It's the first move toward getting the musicians' wage scale settled in Cleveland where suburban picture houses have been without music since July 1st. At that time, the musicians submitted a new scale demanding a 20 per cent. boost. The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association offered to give them a 7½ per cent increase. Musicians refused to consider this offer. The members of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association have stuck together on the proposition.

Of the 150 suburban houses credited to Cleveland, only five disregarded the efforts of the organization to maintain a solid front against the exorbitant increase, which, it is claimed, is way in excess of reason. The five who refused to abide by the organization vote are the Jennings, Lorain-Fulton, Park National, Heights and Holtnorth. And these five have been expelled from the organization, for playing music, contrary to the vote of the majority.

This is the first time such an action has ever been taken by the Cleveland exhibitor association. And it is not known what methods, if any, will be evolved to reinstate these exhibitors as members in good standing of the organization. It is felt, however, now that the Loew circuit has settled the scale in all of its houses, including the big downtown first-run houses, that the settlement with the suburban houses will soon be a reality.

The strike of motion picture machine operators and stage hands of the Alton, Ill., theatres has resulted in a victory for the workers, the owners granting their demands for an increase of 25 per cent. in wages. The men were getting 80 cents an hour and struck for $1.

For a few days the theatres resisted the demands, and the managers and assistant managers acted as operators and stage hands. But finally they capitulated to the strikers, and the three motion picture houses of the city agreed to grant the raise asked.

There was no violence during the brief strike.

Appeal Filed in Knickerbocker Theatre Cases

United States Attorney Gordon and Assistant Attorney O'Leary have filed a brief in support of their appeal from the decision of Justice Siddons of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, sustaining demurrers to the indictment in the Knickerbocker theatre accident cases.

Forty-eight printed pages are taken up by the Government prosecutors in trying to show an error by Justice Siddons, in declaring the indictment invalid, in which manslaughter was charged against Architect Reginald W. Geare; John H. Ford, fabricator of the iron work; Julian R. Downman, assistant to the District Building Inspector; Richard G. Fletcher, contractor for the tile and cement work; and Donald M. Wallace, foreman for the general contrator.

Gilbert E. Gable's production of "Slave of Desire," which will be distributed by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Buffalo Houses Increase Admission Prices

BUFFALO houses have increased prices to meet increased wages granted in the industry. At Shea's Hippodrome the prices have been changed as follows: Nights, boxes, from 60 to 75 cents; orchestra, from 50 to 55 and balcony from 35 to 40; matinees, boxes, from 35 to 50; orchestra, from 25 to 30; balcony from 20 to 25.

At Lafayette Square there has been a five-cent boost on the entire lower floor and boxes there are also 75 cents now, instead of 70. At Loew's State there has been a five-cent raise. Several neighborhood houses have also sent the scale up because of the added cost of operation.

Campaign for Motion Picture Day Under Way

M. P. T. O. state officials throughout the country continue to respond enthusiastically to the call for National Motion Picture Day—November 19—according to a statement issued this week by national headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A.

Harry Davis, of Pittsburgh, National director, will call a mass-meeting of Western Pennsylvania exhibitors at Pittsburgh to designate sub-committees. William Bender, Jr., of Indiana, National Chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee, advises that sub-committees have been appointed covering the entire state.

Ohio has been divided into 40 districts with exhibitor leaders in each district to carry on the work. C. E. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, has announced a mass-meeting there for the purpose of naming committees.

Other leaders who report aggressive interest in the campaign are: C. E. Williams, of Nebraska; A. B. Momand, secretary of the Theatre Owners' and Managers' Association of Oklahoma; and G. B. Sparrow and Vincent Gould, President and Secretary, respectively, of the M. P. T. O. of Canada.

Scientist Acquires Rare Undersea Pictures

Dr. Paul Bartsch, National Museum scientist, who inspired the undersea pictures of the Williamson's, released last spring by F. B. O., spent his vacation in the Tortugas, West Indies, fifteen feet under the sea, garbed in diving helmet and equipped with a small, hand operated motion picture camera, taking marine biological pictures of life among darting red, blue and yellow coral fish, fauna and flora. To get them in focus he merely shooed them around by hand. San Salvador, the Columbus isle, was surveyed by him and pictures of shells, birds and flowers and bird eggs secured.

Milwaukee Appearance of Arbuckle Protested

A week of personal appearances by Roscoe Arbuckle at the Strand theatre, Milwaukee, has brought renewed protests from many quarters in that city. Despite resolutions adopted some months ago by the Wisconsin Motion Picture Theatres' Association against the showing of the comedian's pictures the Strand booked the week's engagement. The action brought opposition from the Milwaukee Federation of Church Women, the Milwaukee Women's Club and the Milwaukee branch of the Federation of Women's Club.

Analysis of British Film Industry

By Tom Terriss, the Director

[Editor's Note—Tom Terriss, an Englishman by birth, well known as a director both here and abroad, has recently returned to America after producing several pictures on the other side. His observations on the British film industry are given from first-hand knowledge.]

A CLOSE acquaintance with the motion picture industry of England during the last year has convinced me of the fact that the United States has little to fear from any competition in that quarter. One of the greatest handicaps that British firms have to contend against is the climate; even this, however, could be successfully overcome were they in possession of properly lighted and efficiently equipped studios. Satisfactory work in the general run of studios in England at the present time is impossible. With the exception of the Famous Players in Islington and the Alliance in Twickenham, their studios are more than a farce—they are a tragedy. Even the two above mentioned studios with their excellent equipment are impractical on account of their location, which tends to fill them with a foggy and misty atmosphere nine months out of the year.

The two leadings firms of the industry, Gaumont and the Ideal, have studios which would not be seriously considered by the smallest of independent producers in this country. Due to the great lack of space, their overhead must be increased to an unnatural extent. For instance, after one set is finished with, the unfortunate director, or producer, as he is called there, is compelled to lie idle and wait until the erection of his next set and the demolition of the old one. In the majority of cases he finds it impossible to shoot exteriors on account of weather conditions and many times in despair is compelled to take, the result being imperfect negative.

Sometimes there will be two or perhaps three directors endeavoring to produce under these conditions, in which case production will sometimes extend itself for months, when otherwise it should have been considerably less. These studios are very poorly equipped, resembling the Coytesville and Edendale studios in Fort Lee in the years past and under the conditions it is surprising that British pictures have been able to ever make any kind of a showing at all.

I believe there are many directors in England fully the equal of any in America, who, handicapped as they undoubtedly are, find it impossible to obtain recognition in the world's markets.

When a picture is produced in England it is as a rule a one-man proposition. Usually the director has little, if any, assistance. There are no scenario writers of consequence, very few cameramen who understand fully the values of proper lighting and tempo, no capable assistants or technical men, no title writers and such a being as a film editor is unheard of. There is no one whom the director may consult at the finish of his picture, the consequence being that he is compelled to foot it alone. I defy any man living to make a picture entirely off his own bat. I don't believe any man capable of filling such an onerous position. His vision is bound to become distorted, so warped and steeped with his own views, that try as he may he cannot, alone, overcome what shortcomings there may be (and there surely will be some) in his production. A fresh, alert and capable mind will at once point out the weaknesses; and a more perfectly balanced picture will be the result.

The whole state of mind of the British public in general toward motion pictures is one of indifference. Outside of a small coterie of fans, they take no practical interest, nor do they seem to wish to. As an example of this apathy, take the dire failure of "Merton of the Movies," one of the greatest successes of New York. This play is an amusing exposé of film life behind the scenes and the American public with its knowledge and appreciation of pictures in general go to see it in their thousands. But in England it was something new, something incomprehensible, something unnatural, and so it was a stranger in a strange land and, like the old anecdote, they said: "'eave 'arf a brick at 'im"—and they did.

The director in addition to his other handicaps has also this feeling of indifference and sometimes actual hostility to contend with on a great many occasions. The attitude of the public authorities in particular is distinctly hostile and all manner of petty and tyrannical restrictions are placed in the path of producing firms. To obtain the co-operation and services of any branch of governmental forces is almost impossible and only occasionally gotten with the aid of great secrecy and a vast amount of labor and time.

Capital still looks upon the motion picture as an expensive toy and, having been bitten by a certain amount of bogus companies, refuses to lend one penny toward an industry which is the fifth greatest in the United States. Despite this, however, questions are daily discussed referring to the Americanization of a certain portion of the British public through the medium of the motion picture. Alarmists who refuse to see the handwriting on the wall! Eighty-five per cent of pictures shown are American and will be so until producers and capital get together with the one big object—the placing of British firms upon an equal footing with those in America, together with an equitable proportion of the world's markets.

I believe that present conditions, despite all talk of advancement, substantiate my arguments when I say that there are less than a dozen feature pictures being made throughout the whole of England, which is hardly the talk of advancement, substantiate my arguments when I say that here are less than a

Unfortunately, there is a great deal of petty and childish jealousy of American pictures displayed throughout the trade. Because some bolder spirits, aware of the inferiority of British pictures, are tempting a few well-known American stars and directors to their studios, a howl has gone out that such are taking away the bread from the mouths of their unfortunate brothers and sisters. Refusing to believe that the creation of new atmosphere will help to relieve them from their slough of despond, they attempt to villify their efforts by every means in their power. This enmity is well fostered by certain of their trade papers (one of which actually only criticizes British productions) and the editor of one of them, who has lately just concluded a visit to the United States, where he was entertained in a most lavish and hospitable manner, has retaliated on his return home by villifying and abusing the whole American motion picture industry in the worst possible taste.

This paper, in criticizing the work of any American star or director in England, will either damn him or her in full measure or with faint praise, always adjuring the British public, however, that the part could have been played, or the picture produced to far greater effect by British artists or directors. Always asking why such and such an artist or such and such a director should be brought to his country when there were so many others more fully capable of carrying out the work and always forgetting the potent fact that there are at present engaged in motion picture work in the United States hundreds of English artists, who have an equal opportunity of success or failure in this country, without any question and I might add that some of the highest paid and most successful artists and directors in this country at the present moment are Englishmen.

Will Retain "Lucretia Lombard" Title

The title of the forthcoming Warner feature will remain "Lucretia Lombard," rather than "Loveless Marriages," as was announced previously. The picture is a filmization of the novel, by Kathleen Norris, and the first change in title was made because "Lucretia Lombard" suggested a costume picture.

"White Sisters" Continues at Ambassador

Lillian Gish in "The White Sister" will continue at the Ambassador theatre, New York, beginning with next Sunday afternoon's performance. It will be in for an indefinite run.

Its removal from the 44th Street theatre where it opened four weeks ago is due to previous contract engagements for that theatre.

Chaplin Discusses His New Picture

Declares He Has Taken Public At Its Word and Produced "Something Different"

CHARLES CHAPLIN is among the late arrivals in New York. He dropped off the Twentieth Century Limited Thursday morning and immediately went into executive session with a group of some fifteen interviewers in his apartment in the Ritz. He is here for the premiere of his own product, "A Woman of Paris," which opens at the Lyric next Monday night.

Never was producer nor director more enthusiastic over the creation of his own mind. Chaplin is both producer and director. His picture is a gamble—a big one for him, because he is attempting something different from any picture heretofore produced. He is not claiming that it is going to be a great success, but he is hoping. He is as much or more at sea than any one else as to how it will be received.

"The public has long been saying that it wants something new in the way of pictures," said the famous comedian. "It has been saying that directors are too frank in the handling of details in a picture. People have been complaining that directors did not give them credit for having any intelligence. Well, I have taken them at their word in my picture and I have left the greater part of it for solution to their intelligence.

"I have tried to create something human and something natural. There are subtleties in the picture, numbers of them, which will require rapt intelligenee to eateh or many of them will be overlooked. I have tried to keep my principals from acting. I have tried with delicate little natural touches to make my pathos, humor and drama clear, and at the same time I have tried to keep the members of the cast from 'mugging.'

"One of the most difficult tasks I had when I started this picture eight months ago was to make my east forget that they had ever appeared before a camera before. It required great energy and patience to keep them from registering joy, gloom and the other stock elements of pictures that are invariably registered in the same way. I think I have gotten my points over better by the naturalness of the action and the lack of facial expression than it could otherwise have been accomplished.

"For instance, I have a scene in a railway station when the young lovers are supposed to depart against the wishes of the boy's parents. At the station the boy is ealled back to his home and finds his father dead. He calls the girl on the phone and, without explaining why, lets her know that the trip must be deferred. She does not rant nor rave in the usual fashion, but by a shrug of the shoulder and in other subtle ways she clearly conveys the idea, 'huh, the usual story.'

"Then when they meet a year and a half later and she has beeome of the demi-monde in Paris, he discovers that fact when in displaying her wardrobe an article or two of men's apparel is disclosed. The young artist does not register an expression of horror. He does not rant and rave over the place. They discuss pleasantries in a very matter of fact sort of way, but at the same time the feelings of each and their actual thoughts, almost, are clearly defined.

"The demi-monde is not the usual type seen on the screen. She is of the higher class Paris type, refined, cultured and in no way objectionable. And in playing her, I am sure Miss Purviance will prove a revelation.

"I have every confidence that the public will get the meaning of the action in the picture and will grasp most of the points. Out in Vernon, California, I had a showing to which I invited quite a number of factory workers in order to get their reaction. At some of the more subtle points over which I had some doubts there were such ejaculations as 'Oh, boy,' and 'Hot dawg,' so I figured the stuff must be pretty good.

"There is nothing out of the ordinary in the story of the picture, except that each scene is a separate and distinct unit in itself and piled one on another they make the picture. I am not the least bit afraid regarding New York's opinion of the production. It has none of the massive sets nor extensive casts of some of the late showings, but I think it is a real big picture and that New Yorkers will get just what I have tried to convey in it."

Among the first questions fired at Chaplin was whether or not he had any intention of deserting the sereen and confining his efforts to directing productions. "Not a chance," said Charles. "I'm only anxious to get back to the coast so that I can start work on one of my own comedies, which will be in seven reels and I'll promise you will be funnier than anything I have ever done. I have the story about ready now and, believe me, it has a lot of humor in it. I only hope 'A Woman of Paris' is received in the way in which I expect it to be. If it is you will find a different art and quite a change in future productions generally."

Chaplin's present plans will probably keep him in New York for two or three weeks, and immediately following he will start work on his own picture in which he will be the star.

"Enemies of Women" Case in New York Settled Out of Court

DIFFICULTIES between the Gotham Amusement Co. and the Phoenix Amusement Co., both of New York City, over the showing of "Enemies of Women," were settled out of court this week, after legal steps had already been taken by State Senator James J. Walker, counsel for the Gotham firm.

The trouble concerned the booking of the picture by the Phoenix Company, which operates the Washington theatre, a Fox house. The Gotham claimed it had a prior contract with Famous Players for "Enemies of Women."

On Tuesday, Senator Walker, counsel for Gotham, appeared before Justice Whittaker, and secured a temporary injunction against the showing of the picture at the Washington, but later in the day it was revoked. The Senator then planned to seek another injunction, but finally the action was withdrawn.

Senator Walker and Saul E. Rogers, counsel for Fox, settled the matter out of court. The Gotham is a member of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and while the latter did not appear in the matter officially, it was generally understood that the suit represented the opinions of the T. O. C. C., in the controversy with Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan. Justice McCook, before whom the case was to be argued September 26, received notice of the settlement.

World Premiere of "Woman of Paris" Held

THE world premiere of "A Woman of Paris," Charles Chaplin's first venture as director of a picture in which he himself does not appear, was held at the Criterion Theatre, Los Angeles, Wednesday night, September 26.

A telegram from the West Coast office of Motion Picture News says: "All the city executives and the entire Who's Who of Filmdom attended. In subtlety of dramatic touch and insinuation rather than fulfillment of action, the production marks a great step forward. The sheer drama of life is relieved at moments by comedy. The appeal is deep and the motive rings true. Edna Purviance gives a great performance, but Adolphe Menjou is outstanding throughout."

Valentin Mandelstamm Visits United States

Valentin Mandelstamm, of Paris, arrived in New York recently. It is his second trip here within the period of a short time, because only a few months ago he was here in the capacity of delegate for French authors to the First International Congress on Motion Picture Arts.

This time, however, Mr. Mandelstamm intends to remain in America for a considerable period. His plans eall for a stay of a few months in New York and then he will go to the West Coast to engage in production activities.

Berkeley, Cal., Fire Films in Frisco Same Night

From the San Francisco correspondent of Motion Picture News this week comes news of an instance in speed in modern news service in the showing of the Berkeley, Cal., fire pictures the same night of the blaze at the California theatre in the Golden Gate City. The pictures were taken by International in the afternoon and flashed on the screen at 9:30 that same night. People in attendance had barely heard of the blaze across the bay from the late daily extras when they found before them actual views of the fire.

H. O. Davis With Cosmopolitan as General Manager

H. O. Davis, formerly vice president of Triangle, and well known also in the magazine field, will become general manager of Cosmopolitan Productions, succeeding George Utassy.

Mr. Davis, during his connection with Triangle, became famous for his belief that waste in studio operation could be largely eliminated, and thus became known for his advocaey of effieiency in production methods.

Norma Talmadge at Rivoli for First Time

FOR the first time in its history, the Rivoli theatre, New York, is presenting a Norma Talmadge production. "Ashes of Vengeance," the First National spectacle which enjoyed a month's pre-release run at the Apollo, is this week duplicating its success, and beginning September 30th will move to the Rialto for a second week.

The run at the Apollo was cut short by the arrival of "Poppy," a musical show which had previously rented the theatre. "Ashes of Vengeance" is a ten-reel production.

Pauline Garon Selected for "Turmoil"

Pauline Garon has been chosen for one of the principal roles in the Universal-Jewel screen version of Booth Tarkington's novel, "The Turmoil."

The picture was started during the week as a Hobart Hanley production.

Emmett Corrigan plays James Sheridan, Sr., the dominating character of the story.

George Hackathorne, Theodore Von Eltz, Edward Hearn, Eileen Percy, Kenneth Gibson and Bert Roach are the other players chosen so far.

Baker Will Direct Viola Dana in Special

George Baker is to direct Viola Dana in a special feature titled "Rose Bush of a Thousand Years," according to word from the Coast. Work will be started on the production immediately upon the completion of "Angel Face Molly," with which Miss Dana is at present engaged.

Winifred Allen Returns in "Big Brother"

Winifred Allen, former star in Triangle pictures, is returning to motion picture work after several years' absence from the screen. She has been engaged to play in Allan Dwan's new Paramount picture, "Big Brother."

Charles R. Rogers Joins Mastodon

Becomes Associate of C. C. Burr and Will Have Charge of Distribution

C. C. BURR, producer of Independent pictures, announced this week the affiliation of Charles R. Rogers, who becomes financially interested in Mastodon Films, Inc., as vice-president in charge of distribution.

Announcement was also made that the Mastodon organization has franchise plans outlined for the independent exchanges. Details are practically completed and will be announced shortly.

"I have always wanted to have another associate who understood film distribution to concentrate upon that important end of the business," said Mr. Burr. "The day has passed in the Independent market where you can handle one picture, because the exchange can't afford to buy one picture. The exchange can't afford to clog the works by buying one picture at a time, that may prevent it from buying a franchise for a continuous supply of meritorious product, which is what it must have to survive and meet competition today.

"The old method was productive of hardly anything more than one exchange in each territory surviving that era. It built nothing for anyone. They recently have learned what it has meant to have an organization serve them just as the national organizations serve their branches. We in turn can go a step further with them and co-operate by having a representative and sales-manager second to none in the industry at their service, whether it be to get a booking from the big circuits or look at a picture for them, or supervise their advertising requirements.

"Now I shall be able to devote my entire time to production which has been my most ardent desire but never before have I been able to contemplate this with any degree of security. But now with such capable hands on the distribution reins," concluded Mr. Burr, "I shall be able to devote my entire energies to the stories and turn out even better pictures."

Charles R. Rogers has been General Sales Manager of Select-Selznick Pictures, General Manager of Distribution of R-C Pictures Corporation, and is at present treasurer of Corinne Griffith Productions, released through First National; president of the Resolute Film Sales Corporation, and vice-president of the Hunt Stromberg Units. Mr. Rogers will retain his interests and official positions in the Griffith, Resolute and Stromberg companies in addition to his activities with C. C. Burr. Since going into business for himself, Mr. Rogers has been handling the distribution of Independent producers' product.

John Barrymore Arrives at Warner Studio

John Barrymore arrived at the Warner Brothers studio in Hollywood last week to star in the screen version of the Clyde Fitch play, "Beau Brummel," after a quick jump from Paris and New York. He was officially greeted by H. M. Warner and Jack Warner and tendered a reception at the studio following his arrival.

Mary Astor is to play the leading feminine role. Others in the cast are Irene Rich, Alec B. Francis, Carmel Myers, Michael Dark, Andre de Beranger, William Humphrey and Richard Tucker. Harry Beaumont will handle the megaphone for the production.

Buried for Five Hours By 'Quake

H. Wayne Pierson Tells Thrilling Story of Escape of Himself and Family

A THRILLING story of the escape of H. Wayne Pierson, and his wife and baby, from death in the recent Japanese earthquake was revealed upon their arrival at Seattle this week. Mr. Pierson was in Japan as the representative of United Artists.

Charles Dreher, his assistant, also reached Seattle from the 'quake zone, uninjured, but his mother, who was in Japan, was seriously injured, and is now in a hospital in the Western city.

Mr. Pierson and his wife were standing in a hotel corridor saying good-bye to some friends when the first earth tremor came. The child was in their room nearby. The walls of the hotel collapsed immediately, and they were buried in the debris, unable to reach the child. For five hours they struggled for life, and finally literally dug themselves out. After another hour's hard work, they reached what was once their room, and rescued the baby. "It was a miracle that we escaped," Mr. Pierson added.

In a telegram to the home offices of United Artists in New York, Mr. Pierson declared that all the records, film, and property of the company in Tokio were totally destroyed. Except for the clothes that they wore, Mr. Pierson and his family left Japan with all their "earthly possessions in a handkerchief."

He had been in the Orient ten months, supervising the United Artists offices already established, and opening new ones in Singapore, Bombay and other cities.

United Artists are endeavoring to get a new supply of prints to their Kobe office, so that their customers in Japan may be supplied with as little interruption as possible.

Arrangements have been completed for the resumption of business in Japan by Famous Players-Lasky, according to cable advices from Tom D. Cochrane, Paramount branch manager in Tokio, received by E. E. Shauer, director of the Foreign department.

Inasmuch as the Paramount offices in Tokio were totally destroyed, the task of opening new headquarters and obtaining enough prints to resume business within two weeks after the disaster called for herculean efforts on the part of Branch Manager Cochrane and his assistant, R. E. MacIntyre. Many prints of the latest Paramount pictures which were about to be released throughout Japan were destroyed by the earthquake and fire. One of the first acts of Manager Cochrane on the reopening of cable communication with the United States was to order new film for prompt shipment to Kobe.

Reports which have reached executives of the Famous Players-Lasky tell of the heroic service rendered by MacIntyre—"Bob" as he is known to many film men in New York and other cities—in his efforts to bring help for 150 stranded foreigners in Yokohama whose lives were in great danger. With another American, he walked many miles to bring assistance to the foreigners, many of whom were Americans, and all were saved before the fire and subsequent earthquake shocks completed the destruction of Yokohama.

Jane and Eva Novak Join Metro Feature Cast

Jane and Eva Novak have been signed by Metro Pictures Corporation for roles in "The Man Whom Life Passed By," written by and under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. The cast will include Percy Marmont, Cullen Landis, Lydia Knott, and Andre de Beranger.

Jane Novak has been loaned to Metro by Chester Bennett, to whom she is under contract.

Quotation by Shakespeare Suggests Title

"Hoodman Blind," the melodrama written by Sir Henry Arthur Jones and Wilson Barrett, which Fox Film Corporation is making into a picture at the West Coast studios, takes its title from a quotation from Shakespeare: "Who is it that hath so cozened thee at Hoodman Blind?"

"This Freedom," the latest story by A. S. M. Hutchinson has been put into screen form at the Fox studio, with Fay Compton as the wife who stakes her home duties against a business career. It is under the direction of Denison Clift.

"Drums of Jeopardy" Cast Is Completed

With the arrival of Elaine Hammerstein at Truart's West Coast studios, final decision was made on the cast which will support her in the picturization of Harold MacGrath's novel, "The Drums of Jeopardy," the second production of a series which Truart Film Corporation is making with this star.

Wallace Beery has been cast in the role of Karlov, the villainous, fanatical Russian.

Robert Warwick will have the role of Cutty.

Jack Mulhall is cast as Johnny Two-Hawks, Hawksley for short, a bit of human driftwood.

Badger Named to Direct Barbara La Marr

Following the return of Arthur H. Sawyer, General Manager of Associated Pictures Corporation, from New York to Hollywood, he announced, in connection with the contract securing the services of Barbara La Marr for five years, that Clarence Badger had been selected to direct the first picture in which Miss La Marr will appear under the new management. This picture will be a screen version of the Robert W. Service poem, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," and will be released as an S-L special by Metro Pictures Corporation.

"Monna Vanna" Has Opening on Broadway

THE New York picture-going public was given an opportunity to compare the William Fox presentation of Maurice Maeterlinck's spectacular drama "Monna Vanna," with the other massive productions on Broadway when, on Monday evening, September 24, the Central theatre held a highly entertained body of spectators. It is a stupendous production of the days when Italy was ruled by the sword and spear and each city maintained a separate government and warred on each other.

The leading male character is taken by Paul Wegener. Another valuable member of the cast is Olaf Fjord, who plays Vitelli, the conqueror of Pisa. The picture was directed by Richard Eichberg.

Preferred Pictures Makes Personnel Additions

Doubling the capacity and increasing the facilities of the Schulberg studios, the home of Preferred Pictures, has resulted in a corresponding increase in the personnel of the big picture plant.

Sam Jaffe has been made general manager for the company. Mr. Jaffee, who is one of the youngest executives in the industry, began his career with the Famous Players organization.

Fred Leahy has been made studio manager. Al Freudemann will serve as art director. Harry Strite has been made construction supperintendent, and Sid Street will serve as purchasing agent.

Hodkinson Will Release "Shifting Sands"

"Shifting Sands" has been secured by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation from the Luxor Pictures Corporation for early fall release. This desert drama was produced by Fred Leroy Granville, who took his company, players and equipment to Libyan Desert, North Africa, as called for by the story.

The cast includes Peggy Hyland, Lewis Willoughby, Mlle. Valia, Richard Atwood, Gibson Gowland, Tony Melford and Douglas Webster.

Some idea of the melodramatic moments of "Strangers of the Night" ("Captain Applejack") may be gained from these scenes in the Metro release, which is a Fred Niblo production.

Edwin Carewe Sails for Algiers October 6

EDWIN CAREWE, whose latest success is "The Bad Man," with Holbrook Blinn for First National, has announced his intention of sailing for Algiers on October 6. The purpose of the trip is to film "A Son of the Sahara" in its proper atmosphere and surroundings.

Goldwyn Changes Title on Seastrom Feature

As Victor Seastrom nears completion of the photography on his first Goldwyn Picture, a screen version of Sir Hall Caine's latest novel, "The Master of Man," a further change of title is announced.

The picture will be called "Name the Man!" At one time Goldwyn considered the title of "The Judge and the Woman" but this has finally been discarded in favor of the new and shorter title.

Conrad Nagel, Patsy Ruth Miller, Mae Busch, Creighton Hale, Hobart Bosworth, De Witt C. Jennings, Evelyn Selbie and Aileen Pringle have the leading roles.

Loew-Metro Club to Give Ball at Astor

The first annual movie ball of the Loew-Metro Club, an organization composed of employes of the Metro and Loew organizations, will be given November 1, in the grand ballroom of the Astor Hotel. Arrangements are now being perfected by committees of the Club, of which Marcus Loew is honorary president and Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, in charge of the Metro Eastern scenario department, president.

Many prominent motion picture people will be present at the ball. Metro stars, among whom ar Jackie Coogan, Mae Murray, Viola Dana, Alice Terry and others, will make special trips to the East to attend, and many other famous screen players, whose names are familiar to the public, have signified their intention to come.

The present officers of the club are Marcus Loew, honorary president; Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, president; David Loew, vice president; Rose Quinby, recording secretary; David Blum, financial secretary; Charles Quick, treasurer.

Viola Dana is again seen in one of her typical comedy dramas, "The Social Code," to be released by Metro.

Lillian Gish Will Play "Joan of Arc"

Lillian Gish is to re-create the life story of the most famous of all French heroines, Joan of Arc. According to an announcement by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., Miss Gish will begin work on "Joan of Arc" soon after she completes "Romola," her next big picture.

In accordance with Inspiration's policy of making pictures in the actual locale of the story, "Joan of Arc" will be produced in France, just as "The White Sister" and "Romola" were made in Italy.

Sills Opposite Viola Dana in "Angel Face Molly"

Milton Sills has been engaged by Metro Pictures Corporation to enact the leading male role opposite Viola Dana in "Angel Face Molly," by Fred Kennedy Myton. This production, fourth of a Viola Dana series for the Metro 1923-24 program, will be directed by Oscar Apfel. Thomas J. Hopkins is completing the screen adaptation.

Carl Anderson Back, Tells Production Plans

Carl Anderson, President of Anderson Pictures Corporation, returned on Monday to New York from a three week trip to Los Angeles. Regarding his production plans he had the following to say:

"While my trip was not entirely on matters pertaining to product for release by Anderson Pictures Corporation, I did arrange for the distribution of a few series of pictures. The first to be announced is a contract closed with John J. Glavey of Hollywood Enterprises, who will make a series of four productions, the featured player being "Eddie" Gribbon. Another production unit, which will likewise operate on a series basis, will be announced next week.

"Regarding our whole plan as it refers to product, it is our policy to deal with independent producers working in independent units. By this method it is possible to secure a higher degree of quality and a more careful consideration of our requirements than could be obtained from an organization which works on a quantity basis, all pictures being made on the same lot and under the same head. This is in direct line with our policy of unit handling."

Helene Chadwick Replaces Dorothy Phillips

Helene Chadwick, according to announcement from the Coast, has replaced Dorothy Phillips in John Stahl's "Why Men Leave Home," a Louis B. Mayer production for First National release. In addition to Lewis Stone and Mary Carr, who were announced last week, William V. Mong is now included in the cast. Miss Phillips is mentioned as the possible lead for the screen version of the stage play, "Thy Name is Woman."

"Eternal Three" to Open at N. Y. Capitol

"The Eternal Three," Marshall Neilan's second production for Goldwyn will receive its first New York showing at the Capitol Theatre, beginning Sunday, September 30th. This is the picture which Neilan wrote as well as produced. Frank Urson assisted in the direction.

"The Eternal Three" is a picture which glorifies the members of the medical profession who devote their lives to suffering humanity. Neilan has dedicated this production to the physicians and surgeons of the world.

Sales Drive Marks Laemmle's Home Coming

THE return this week of Carl Laemmle, Universal chief, from a three months' trip abroad, during which he supervised the enlargement of Universal's European organization, is being marked by Laemmle Home Coming Week, September 28 to October 6.

In addition to other features, the week will be a sales drive week, under the direction of Edward J. Smith, newly appointed general manager of sales.

Mr. Laemmle returned aboard the Aquitania. Although suffering from an attack of laryngitis, he was in good spirits and exceedingly cheerful over the outlook, both here and on the other side.

Foster Gilroy on Anderson Executive Staff

Foster Gilroy has affiliated himself with the executive forces of Anderson Pictures Corp. Mr. Gilroy has behind him a long and successful business career as an organizer and promotion expert. He began as a reporter on the Philadelphia North American and was later in the advertising business in that city.

Mr. Gilroy came to New York in 1908 as Promotion Manager of the Frank A. Munsey interests, handling both Mr. Munsey's newspapers and magazines. He then became General Manager of "Puck" and was editor of the magazine when it was purchased by W. R. Hearst. For the last two and a half years he has been advertising manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corp. It is understood that he will act in an executive capacity for Carl Anderson, whose organization is rapidly being completed.

Maxwell Off to Australia for United Artists

M. E. Maxwell, well known in the motion picture industry as able executive, salesman and general business-getter, left New York September 22 for Australia, where he goes to take up the duties of general manager of the United Artists Australasia, Ltd., with headquarters at Sydney. Mr. Maxwell went direct to San Francisco, whence he will leave for Sydney October 2.

Creswell E. Smith, who has been in charge of United Artists interests in Australasia for some time, will leave Sydney soon after Mr. Maxwell's arrival and will return to United Aritsts New York headquarters.

Goldwyn Makes Changes in District Supervision

James R. Grainger, General Manager of Sales of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation, has announced a number of changes in the district supervision of that office. This does not affect the personnel of the district supervisors, but does change some cities from one territory to another.

George F. Dembow has assumed supervision of the Albany office, so that the district now under him comprises Albany, Boston and New Haven with headquarters in Boston.

J. A. Koerpel, District Supervisor of the Michigan and Ohio territory has asumed district supervision of the Buffalo office, succeeding S. Eckman, Jr., who has been transferred to the home office.

This change resulted in eliminating the Indianapolis territory from Mr. Koerpel's supervision. His revised district includes Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati and Geo. A. Hickey, District Supervisor of the Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota territory has assumed district supervision of the Indianapolis office.

Anderson Offices Under Roof With F. B. O.

When Carl Anderson, President of Anderson Pictures Corporation, returns to New York from California, he will be ushered into the permanent offices of his company. These comprise the entire fourth floor of the building occupied by F. B. O.

Mr. Anderson's arrangement of distribution with F. B. O. makes it essential that the two companies work in close conjunction and it is logical that they be under the same roof.

Mabel Forrest Will Star in "Satin Girl"

Mabel Forrest will be starred in a Ben Wilson production entitled "The Satin Girl," according to Samuel V. Grand, president of Grand-Asher, who will release the picture.

Norman Kerry has been engaged to play the lead opposite Miss Forrest.

De Mille Production Unit Is Reorganized

A SWEEPING reorganization of the producing unit of Cecil B. DeMille, preparatory to the filming of "Triumph," his next Paramount picture, was announced by Mr. DeMille this week.

Lou M. Goodstadt, for seven years casting director at the Lasky studio, has been appointed to the post of business manager of the Cecil B. DeMille production unit.

Under the plan of re-organization, to the position of Assistant Director will go the greatest amount of authority and responsibility ever given it by any producer. Paul Iribe, who for the past two years has been Mr. DeMille's art director, will assume the title. Mr. Iribe, however, will still retain supervision of the art department and will add to his duties, supervision of the wardrobe and property departments.

Mr. Iribe will be assisted by Gene Lowry and Rudolph Berliner, who acted as DeMille aides in "The Ten Commandments."

Paul Ferron has been appointed by Mr. DeMille as production manager to handle the important technical details that arise during a production.

Mary Pickford's Next Is Well Under Way

Word has been received from Hollywood that Mary Pickford's next production, "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," is well under way, under the direction of Marshall Neilan. Allan Forrest will be Mary's leading man, while Clare Eames, well-known dramatic star, will make her movie debut in the role of Queen Elizabeth.

Mary Pickford in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall" will reach Broadway shortly after the first of the year, at about the same time that Douglas Fairbanks will reveal his fantastic production of "The Thief of Bagdad," now nearing completion at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios in Hollywood.

Following Mary Pickford in "Rosita" at the Lyric theatre, New York, will come the much-heralded Charles Chaplin production entitled "A Woman of Paris," featuring Edna Purviance, written and directed by Charlie himself, in which he does not personally appear.

Coast Approves "Little Old New York"

Cosmopolitan's starring vehicle for Marion Davies, "Little Old New York," has just been screened at the California theatre in Los Angeles, redecorated for the occasion. The hundreds of Hollywood notables that attended the first showing gave the picture and the star an ovation.

The showing at the California theatre is the first in the United States, outside of New York, where the film is still playing to capacity at the Cosmopolitan theatre. Abroad it is being shown at the Empire theatre, London, where it is duplicating its New York and Los Angeles success.

"Wild Oranges" Company Due Back From S. F.

King Vidor and his "Wild Oranges" company were due back in Los Angeles from San Francisco Thursday, according to word from the Coast. They went up to the Bay City to complete some necessary retakes, caused by the withdrawal of James Kirkwood.

Lichtman Claims "Shadows" Prints Are Pirated

AL LICHTMAN, President of Preferred Pictures Corporation, has issued the following statement relative to the distribution of pirate prints of "Shadows," now being shown in Cuba:

"The film distributing company, 'Carrera y Medina,' located in Havana, Cuba, have published an advertisement in the Cuban trade paper, Civilizacion, on the Preferred Picture, 'Shadows.' Under the title, 'El Velo de la Conciencia,' Carrera y Medina claim that they have exclusive distribution rights in Cuba on this production.

"This statement is absolutely false. Carrera y Medina have no rights whatever for the distribution of 'Shadows' or any other Preferred Pictures. The sole distributors for Cuba for 'Shadows' are the Cuban Medal Film Company."

Legal steps have been taken by Preferred, it is announced.

New Additions to Cast for "Hospitality"

The following have been added to the cast of "Hospitality," the second feature length comedy which Buster Keaton is now making for Metro: Kitty Bradbury, Joe Roberts, Ralph Bushman, Ed. Coxen, and Jean Dumas. In addition to these Buster Keaton's wife, formerly Natalie Talmadge, appears in the leading feminine role and Buster's father, Joseph Keaton, has been assigned a big role. Other players will be added later.

Buster is now on location with his company at Truckee, California, filming exteriors for "Hospitality."

"Hospitality" depicts the America of 1830 in the feverish days when railroads were first being built. Woven into the plot is a strong love story and a family feud. "Hospitality" will show many interesting things of the early '30's—the dress and manners of the times, the first railroad engine ever built, "The Rocket," and other features of early American history.

It was written by Jean Havez, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman and is being directed by Jack Blystone and photographed by Elgin Lessly and Harry Thorp.

Marshall Neilan's latest production, "The Eternal Three" will be distributed by Goldwyn. This layout of action stills is from the picture.

"Hoodman Blind," Special for Fox, Completed

"Hoodman Blind," one of the twenty-five specials which William Fox will release this season, was completed last week at the West Coast studios under the direction of John Ford. David Butler plays Jack Yeulette, the role played on the stage in this country by Frederick De Belleville.

Gladys Hulette plays Nance Yeulette, the feminine lead. She made her first stage hit as Tyltyl in the American stage production of Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird."

Harold Lloyd Oil Painting for Pathe Exhibitors

A beautiful oil painting of Harold Lloyd has been prepared by Pathe and will be available to exhibitors through the local Pathe exchanges, free of charge. Showmen signing "Why Worry" contracts will receive these oil paintings gratis upon application.

King Baggot Starts Work on "Blackmail"

Under the temporary working title of "Blackmail" King Baggot has started work on his new picture at Universal City. The story is a mystery play adapted by Raymond L. Schrock from the stage play "The Co-respondent," written by Rita Weiman, author of "The Acquittal. It was a recent Broadway success. Lois Zellner wrote the continuity.

Among the players so far engaged for the first scenes are Ruth Clifford, Charles Clary, Herbert Fortier, Arthur Howard, Joseph North and William E. Lawrence. Casting Director Fred Datig expects to be able to announce the other characters cast in a few days. Several notable players are in view for the leading roles.

Ben Lyon to be Opposite Colleen Moore

Ben Lyon, the young screen juvenile recruited from the New York stage, has been assigned to the leading male role in "The Swamp Angel," a forthcoming First National production in which Colleen Moore will have the featured role. The picture will be directed by Clarence Badger, who guided Lyon through Perlmutter."

Charles Rogers, left, who has joined the Mastoder Film Co. as vice-president of which Charles C. Burr, right, is president.

Bert Roach Is Added to Cast of "Turmoil"

Bert Roach was taken from the straight comedy field by Hobart Henley a year and a half ago to play one of the principal roles in "The Flirt," a Booth Tarkington story.

Again he was taken out of comedies by Henley when the latter made "A Lady of Quality," which is now awaiting release as a Universal-Super-Jewel special, a companion picture to "Merry-Go-Round" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

Now he is being taken out of the comedy series which he just started a couple of weeks ago to play the character of Dr. Gurney in "The Turmoil," another Tarkington novel.

Eleanor Boardman has been selected for the feminine lead in "The Turmoil."

Emmett Corrigan, Eileen Percy, George Hackathorne, Pauline Garon, Theodore Von Eltz, Edward Hearn and Kenneth Gibson also have been cast in the new production.

De Mille Is Making Plans For "Triumph"

"Triumph," Cecil B. DeMille's next for Paramount, will be a commuting production if present plans do not miscarry. Interiors are to be made at the Hollywood studio, while for exteriors the company will be brought to New York.

In all probability the New York trip will be so timed that Mr. DeMille will be working there on "Triumph" at the time his previous production, "The Ten Commandments," will have its New York opening.

"Triumph," which is a Saturday Evening Post story by May Edginton, is being adapted for the screen by the authoress.

"Steadfast Heart" to be October 7 Release

Distinctive Pictures Corporation announces that "The Steadfast Heart" will be released on October 7 through Goldwyn Cosmopolitan. This production is based on the Collier's Weekly story of the same name by Clarence Budington Kelland and was adapted to the screen by Philip Lonergan. The direction is by Sheridan Hall.

F. B. O. Managers in First of Fall Meetings

The first of the Film Booking Offices Fall sales meeting was held in New York at the home office Sunday and Monday of this week. Nearly one-third of the F. B. O. exchange heads attended the meeting, in addition to several special representatives and divisional managers.

The meeting was presided over by J. I. Schnitzer, vice president, and H. M. Berman, general manager of the sales department. The question of F. B. O.'s future product and policies was thoroughly discussed, with a result that a complete sales campaign for 1923-24 was outlined. The future policy of the advertising and exploiting of F. B. O. pictures was outlined by Nat G. Rothstein, while it was voted to increase the circulation of the F. B. O. News, edited by Ed Hurley, from 10,000 weekly to 15,000. Ten thousand of these will be mailed direct from the home office each week to theatre managers and owners instead of the exchanges mailing them to the theatres in their district.

Next week J. I. Schnitzer and H. M. Berman will make a flying trip to Chicago to attend a mid-Western sales meeting to be held in that city.

Those present at the New York meeting were L. G. Ross, Albany; U. T. Koch, Atlanta; J. L. Roth, Boston; F. W. Zimmerman, Buffalo; William Con, Charlotte; Paul Tessier, New Orleans; Charles Rosenzweig, New York; J. M. Flynn, Philadelphia; A. H. Schnitzer, Pittsburgh; F. L. McNamee, Washington, D. C.; E. C. Jensen, divisional sales manager; A. R. Cherry, division manager; J. Safron and S. Katz, special representatives.

Madge Bellamy Will Head Phil Goldstone Cast

Madge Bellamy has been borrowed from Thomas H. Ince by Phil Goldstone to head the cast of a special production which will be ready for the State Right market about December 1. It is titled "Do It Now." Others in the cast are Alec Francis, Arthur Hoyt, John Fox, Jr., Bill Nye, William Fairbanks and Dorothy Revere.

Ogle Is Assigned Role In "Flaming Barriers"

Paramount announces that Charles Ogle will play the role originally assigned to Theodore Roberts in George Melford's production, "Flaming Barriers."

Roberts will play in "To the Ladies," James Cruze's production.

On location in the high Sierras with "The Eagles Feather," a Metro Special.

Bebe Daniels Selected for "Heritage of Desert"

Bebe Daniels will head the cast of Paramount's third Zane Grey production, "The Heritage of the Desert," according to an announcement made by Jesse L. Lasky.

Ernest Torrence has been cast in an important role, with Noah Beery as the third member of the cast selected to date.

Production work on "The Heritage of the Desert" is scheduled to start September 24 at the West Coast studio. Irvin Willat will direct. Albert Shelby LeVino adapted Zane Grey's novel to the screen.

Just before returning to the Pacific Coast, Bebe Daniels completed the chief feminine role in Sam Wood's production, "His Children's Children," at the Long Island studio.

"When a Man's a Man" Will Have Arizona Premiere

Announcement comes from Mike Rosenberg, secretary of Principal Pictures Corporation, that the first Harold Bell Wright production, "When a Man's a Man," will have its world premiere in Tucson, Arizona. This is the home of Wright.

Wright is to be the honored guest and many of the Arizona characters who provided him with types for his book will also be invited guests.

Chief among the players are John Bowers, Marguerite de la Motte, Robert Frazer, George Hackathorne, Fred Stanton, John Fox and June Marlowe.

Associated First National Pictures will release "When A Man's A Man." This is the first of a series of nine Wright novels that Principal Pictures will give to the screen.

Eve Unsell Is Loaned to Famous by Schulberg

Eve Unsell, one of the scenario writers of the B. P. Schulberg studio, has been loaned to Famous Players to prepare the continuity for Pola Negri's next picture, "My Man." Miss Unsell has just completed the continuity for "The Boomerang," the Preferred picturization of David Belasco's famous stage success, which Victor L. Schertzinger will produce.

Action stills from "The Bad Man," starring Holbrook Blinn, an Edwin Carewe Production, to be released by Associated First National.

Shauer Named President of Paramount Pep Club

THE PARAMOUNT PEP CLUB, the home office employees' organization of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, held its annual election of officers Tuesday, with the following result:

Laval Photoplays Starts First Production

Laval Photoplays Ltd. of Montreal has entered the production field on the coast and is now busy with its first production at Universal City. The picture title has not yet been decided upon. Andree Lafayette and Jack Perrin are featured.

"If Winter Comes" Opens in London

"If Winter Comes," the William Fox picturization of A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, had its London premiere at the Palace theatre, September 10.

All the prominent film celebrities in London were present, including Betty Blythe, the American star; Ivy Duke, Chrissie White, Hilda Bayley, Flora LeBreton, Henry Edwards, Guy Newall, Maurice Elvey, Denson Clift, who directed "This Freedom," another Hutchinson story for Fox; and Thomas Bentley. Official and social London made up the balance of the audience.

Litson on First National Production Staff

Mason N. Litson, former general manager of production for Louis B. Mayer, has joined the J. K. McDonald-First National unit to fill the same capacity. His initial duties with this organization will be the handling of "Misunderstood," a screen version of the Booth Tarkington story, production of which was started this week at the Hollywood studios. Litson has been associated with West Coast production activities for five years.

"Misunderstood" is to be directed by William Beaudine. Its cast of players includes Henry B. Walthall, Irene Rich, Ben Alexander and Rockliffe Fellowes.

Lillian Rich in Leading Role With Hoxie

Lillian Rich is playing the leading role opposite Jack Hoxie in his newest starring vehicle, "Wyoming," which Robert North Bradbury is directing for Universal.

"Wyoming" is William McLeod Raine's novel, adapted to the screen by Isadore Bernstein.

Besides Hoxie and Miss Rich, William Welsh, Claude Payton, Lon Poff, George Kuwa and Ben Corbett have been chosen for the cast, with others yet to come.

The scenes above are representative of the new Branson de Cou "Dream Pictures," a series of slides explained by the article on page 1681.

Four Fox Specials Due in October

Program of Releases for Month Will Include Thirteen Novel Pictures

THE list of October releases announced by Fox Film Corporation includes four specials, "Does It Pay?" "No Mother to Guide Her," "Cameo Kirby" and "The Governor's Lady." Tom Mix is down for one picture, "The Flyin' Fool;" Charles Jones will be seen in "Big Dan;" John Gilbert's picture is "The Exiles;" Dustin Farnum's release is "The Grail," and William Russell's release is "Times Have Changed." On the Imperial Comedies list is "Up in the Air," and Sunshine Comedies has "Dance or Die." The Educationals include "Toilers of the Equator" and "Cloisters in the Clouds." These releases, thirteen in number, are among the novel pictures of the season's list.

"Does It Pay?" is a Charles Horan production, featuring Hope Hampton, and has a cast which includes Robert T. Haines, Roland Bottomly, Charles Wellesley, Mary Thurman, Peggy Shaw, Florence Short and Marie Shotwell. The release date on this picture is October 7.

"No Mother to Guide Her" is also a Charles Horan production. It features Genevieve Tobin. Other important members of the cast are Dolores Rousse, Lolita Robertson, John Webb Dillion, Frank Wunderlee, J. D. Walsh and Jack Richardson. This picture will be released October 14.

"Cameo Kirby" is a John Ford production starring John Gilbert. Taken from the play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson, it presents the star in a romantic role amid scenes of pre-war days along the Mississippi river. The supporting cast includes Gertrude Olmsted, Jean Arthur, Alan Hale, Richard Tucker, Jack McDonald, Eugene Ford, Eric Mayne and Phillips Smalley. October 21 is the release date.

"The Governor's Lady" is a Harry Millarde production. The original play, written by Alice Bradley, was produced on the stage by David Belasco. The screen version has a cast headed by Robert T. Haines and Jane Gray. Ann Luther, Frazer Coulter and Leslia Allen have important roles. The release date is October 28.

"The Flyin' Fool," the Tom Mix picture, is scheduled for release on October 28. The story was adapted from Max Brand's "The Gun Gentleman," and was directed by Lambert Hillyer. Betty Jewel has the leading feminine role.

"Big Dan," the Charles Jones feature, is from an original story written by Frederick and Fannie Hatton and was directed by William Wellman. Marian Nixon plays opposite the star. Trilby Clark, Jackie Gadsdon, Ben Hendricks, Lydia Yeamans Titus and J. P. Lockney are also members of the supporting company. The picture will be released October 14.

"The Exiles," starring John Gilbert, was adapted to the screen by John Russell from a story written by Richard Harding Davis. The director was Edmund Mortimer. Betty Bouton, Margaret Fielding, John Webb Dillion and Fred Warren are members of the cast. The picture will be released October 7.

"The Grail," starring Dustin Farnum, is from an original story written by George Scarborough, scenario by Charles Kenyon. The director was Colin Campbell. Peggy Shaw, Alma Bennett, Leon Barry and Carl Stockdale have important roles. October 14 is the release date.

Trio of scenes from "Mist of the Valley," a Hepworth picture to be released in November.

F. B. O. In Canada Will Be United Exhibitors

According to an announcement made this week in Canadian regional trade papers the Film Booking Offices in Canada will be known as the United Exhibitors of Canada and not Associated Exhibitors.

The change in the distributing title for the F. B. O. Canadian offices followed a conference between high Canadian officials and H. M. Berman, general sales manager. The charter title was made necessary out of courtesy to a Canadian firm now using a charter title similar to Associated Exhibitors and to avoid any possible confusion the F. B. O. agreed to the change.

Jackie Coogan Will Start "A Boy of Flanders"

Within four weeks Jackie Coogan will begin production on "A Boy of Flanders"—his second Metro production, taken from the story "A Dog of Flanders" by Louisa de la Rame who writes under the pen name of "Ouida."

Jackie is back in Hollywood from his vacation in the Sierra Mountains where he went with his parents after finishing work in his first Metro production, "Long Live the King," a screen transcription of Mary Roberts Rinehart's novel of the same name.

Cast for "To the Ladies" Is Completed

Assignment of parts to Z. Wall Covinton and Jack Gardner has completed the cast simultaneously with a start on the filming of "To the Ladies," a James Cruze production for Paramount.

Edward Horton, Helen Jerome Eddy, Theodore Roberts and Louise Dresser are featured players in this adaptation by Walter Woods, production editor of the Cruze unit, of the play by George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly.

The next production of Al and Ray Rockett is to be called "Dixie." It is to be in twelve reels and will feature George Billings and Ruth Clifford.

"Hunchback" Has Premiere in Pittsburgh

"THE HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME" had a successful opening at the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, early this week.

Universal did not stint in its preparations for the showing. Frank Halbert, formerly Keith manager in New York, was engaged to manage the production's run at the Pitt, and L. Vanderheim, formerly musical director at the Rialto theatre, New York, was selected as musical director for a twenty-eight piece orchestra.

James V. Bryson, managing the country-wide presentation of "The Hunchback" for Universal, transferred his headquarters from New York to Pittsburgh, where, assisted by H. Elliott Stuckel, exploiteer and publicity expert, he put through a vigorous advance campaign.

Many noted Pittsburgh people occupied boxes and lodges.

The next territorial premiere of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is scheduled for Philadelphia, where it will be presented soon in the Chestnut Street Opera House, one of the finest legitimate theatres in that city.

Olga Printzlau to Adapt "White Man"

Olga Pritzlau has begun the adaptation of George Agnew Chamberlain's novel, "White Man," which will be produced by Tom Forman as a Preferred Picture. Kenneth Harlan will be starred in this production.

The settings are being designed by Al Frendemann, art director.

"Twenty-One" Is Next for Barthelmess

The next Richard Barthelmess picture for First National, will present the star as a modern youth in a modern setting. It is entitled "Twenty-One" and production has been started in New York under the direction of John S. Robertson.

Dorothy Mackail, who played opposite Barthelmess in "The Fighting Blade" has the principal feminine role in this new picture.

Enid Bennett, Harrison Ford and Mary Alden have been engaged by Metro Pictures Corporation to appear before the camera in the picturization of "The Living Past" taken from William J. Locke's novel, "The Tale of Triona."

It will be directed by Harold Shaw from the adaptation now being prepared by Thomas J. Hopkins.

Oscar Apfel Will Direct "Angel Face Molly"

Oscar Apfel will direct Viola Dana in her newest starring picture for Metro, "Angel Face Molly," a crook romance written by Fred Kennedy Myton. This makes the third successive Viola Dana screen offering directed by Mr. Apfel.

The picture is the fourth of the star's present series.

Schertzinger's Assistants Named by Metro

Metro engaged Chet Lyons as chief cameraman and Wyatt Brnster, as assistant director to Mr. Schertzinger in the picturization of the latter's own story, "The Man Whom Life Passed By"—a new Metro Premier Feature which will form part of the Metro 1923-1924 program.

Creelman Will Scenarize Next Hunter Picture

James A. Creelman has been added to the scenario staff at the Paramount Long Island studio under the direction of E. Lloyd Sheldon. Creelman will write the scenario for Glenn Hunter's next Paramount picture which will follow "West of the Water Tower," current production. The title for the new picture has not yet been announced.

"Foolish Parents" Is Set for Oct. 7 Release

"Foolish Parents," the Associated Exhibitors feature, is to be released on October 7th. Peter Deare, a new star in the firmament of child actors has an important role.

It is a story that deals with the theme that money cannot buy happiness.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

WITH LENS AND PENCIL

In accordance with the announced policy of Ritz-Carlton pictures, MOTION PICTURE NEWS is distributing more than 11,000 prints of this picture, starring J. D. Williams, snapped in his office just as he had returned from a trip.

HERE you see the second release of Motion Picture News' own News Weekly. Events and personalities in the trade, caught by our cameraman, will come along from week to week. The Golf Tournament was our subject last week. Now we show you various film folk in their native lairs.

Richard A. Rowland is back from the Coast, where he held numerous important conferences with his lieutenants in Los. One of these is Earl Hudson, whose friends on the East Coast wonder how much longer the West Coast will claim him.

One of the "touches" which you don't see in the "shots" of Mr. Rowland happened just after the First National executive faced the camera. He similingly posed, and then hurried away to resume his talk with Samuel Goldwyn—or was it an argument?—about the exhibition value on "Potash and Perlmutter."

Back from the Coast, too, is Carl Anderson, who is the distributor for the T. O. D. C. He reports progress and registers satisfaction.

Still on the subject of transcontinental commutation, we record the fact that J. D. Williams, the big Ritz-Carlton chief, also arrived home this week, after an extensive tour West.

Who's the second Ritz star? J. D. may consent to tell soon. Then there's that other unanswered question: who's going to play Ben Hur?

AMONG those present on Film Row this week was Mrs. A. H. Sessions, recently appointed Branch Sales Manager of the Hodkinson Atlanta office.

HARRY T. NOLAN, of Denver, is at the First National home office, serving as a member of the Rotating Committee. Besides being one of the ablest showmen in the country, Harry is an expert at beating the reformers in Sunday closing and censorship campaigns.

WALTER F. EBERHARDT, making a series of sleeper jumps through New England in his Penrod and Sam suit, postcards that "this railroading is the apple sauce."

A CALLER this week was D. B. Lederman, Director-General of Universal Pictures of Brazil, in New York for conference with the home office.

WAYNE PIERSON, United Artists Representative in the Orient, has arrived in New York after a sensational escape from death in the Japanese 'quake. With his wife and child, Mr. Pierson was in a Tokio hotel when the disaster overtook the city. The hotel collapsed almost immediately, and the Piersons were buried in the debris. After five hours' strenuous work, the parents literally dug themselves out, and then fought their way to the spot where the child was lying under the fallen timbers. All escaped uninjured.

Charles Dreher, Mr. Pierson's assistant, also had a miraculous escape, but his mother was seriously injured and is in a hospital in Seattle.

LOUIS B. MAYER PRODUCTIONS have a new press representative. J. A. Daly, recently with the Universal Philadelphia office, succeeds Randall M. White, resigned.

AS a mark of esteem and respect, the home office staff of Hodkinson presented George Bruce Gallup with a beautiful lacquer cane with a gold band suitably engraved, upon his retirement from the organization. Bruce, as already announced, is with First National.

ARRIVALS from the Coast include Joe Engel, treasurer of Metro, and S. Barrett McCormick, manager of Fox's Oakland theatre, Oakland, Calif.

Carl Anderson had no more than returned from the coast, where he arranged the first production plans for Theatre Owners' Distributing corporation, than the NEWS cameraman was camping on the doorstep of the new headquarters of 723 Seventh Avenue to record him in imperishable celluloid.

This week, when the news weeklies have been using airplanes, submarines and radio to get their Japanese Earthquake pictures in first, MOTION PICTURE NEWS comes under the wire with this exclusive picture of the first refugee to arrive in New York, Wayne Pierson of United Artists, who was in the disaster.

The cameraman's usual alibi for unsatisfactory photography is to blame it on the laboratory— but the only fault with this picture of Richard A. Rowland was lack of light. He was deep in a conference to fix the exhibition value of a recent production, and the photographer had to catch him on the wing.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SHORT-LENGTH PRODUCTION

Short Subjects and Serials

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

U. S. Shorts Are Popular Abroad

American Subjects Gaining Favor—British Paper Editorializes Educational Film

REPORTS received in unbiased circles here indicate that there is a steady and encouraging increase in the popularity of American-made short subjects in foreign territory. Statements brought back to America by officials of short subject distributing organizations have been very encouraging, but these were in some quarters characterized as propaganda by those who have not got the best interests of the field at heart.

The fact, however, remains that bonafide reports substantiate beyond any doubt the observations of alert short subject men who have permitted no grass to grow under them abroad. Furthermore, trade paper editors in England and continental countries have observed the growth of the American short subject abroad to the extent that they have commented on it editorially.

Educational Film Corporation, for instance, is going after foreign business on an extensive basis. Pathe, Universal and other distributors of short subjects, with their product in this country concretely established, are devoting considerable energy along the line of educating the foreign exhibitor on the true value of shorts on a picture program. Grand-Ascher, whose pictures abroad are being handled by Apollo Trading Company, also are elaborating in their foreign activities.

Foreign distributors of American-made short subjects are playing an important part in the exploitation of those pictures. This is evident from the comment of the editor of the Film Renter & Moving Picture News, a London trade publication, on the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge series released in this country by Educational and in England by Ideal Films, Ltd. The publication said:

"As one would expect from the title, these pictures contain a little of everything, and are in their way, gems of interest and amusement. Not only do they contain some scenes of beautiful photographic interest, but everything in these one-reel pictures is so happily mixed up that they are a sheer delight to witness. 'Hodge-Podge' touches on the beauties of nature and skilfully brings in many humorous moments. They are just the kind of a picture that should be included in every program, for they are certain to please any audience."

Pathe Announces 1923-24 List of Serials

That Pathe is in no way slackening its activities in the field of episodic productions becomes evident from a statement in which it is announced that current and forthcoming releases on Pathe's serial schedule are sufficient to provide exhibitors with a full year of Pathe serials. The chapter pictures on schedule follow, together with their dates of release and expiration: "Haunted Valley," starring Ruth Roland, May 6 to August 12, 1923; "Her Dangerous Path," featuring Edna Murphy, August 12 to October 14; "Ruth of the Range," starring Ruth Roland, October 14 to January 20, 1924; "The Way of a Man," with Allene Ray and Harold Miller, January 20 to March 23, and "Leatherstocking Tales," adapted from James Fenimore Cooper's work, March 23 to May 25.

Abe Stern Back From Trip to Europe

Abe Stern, vice president of Century Comedies, arrived in New York on Friday, September 28, accompanied by his wife. Stern and his wife were on a business-pleasure trip through Europe, where they spent the major part of ten weeks. Conferences with foreign agents of Universal film exchanges composed the business end of the trip; visits to Carlsbad, Paris and Switzerland were the resorts for pleasure.

While in England and France, Mr. Stern purchased nine original stories for production when he reaches his Hollywood studios. Mr. and Mrs. Stern returned on the same boat with Carl Laemmle and his party.

Trade Showing for "Is Conan Doyle Right?"

Pathe's screen expose of fake mediums, titled "Is Conan Doyle Right?" will be given a special showing at the Palace theatre, New York City, at 11:30 a. m. on Tuesday, October 2. While the showing will be in the nature of a trade showing, the performance will take on the aspect of a semi-public premier.

Representatives of the city government have been invited as well as well-known figures in the world of science, including members of the Society of Psychic Research. It is planned to have some of the Psychic Research members address the body on the subject of spiritualism.

Roach Signs Rob Wagner as Director

Will Preside Over Will Rogers Series as Well as Write Stories for That Star

ROB WAGNER, a well-known author, has been signed to direct by Hal Roach, the Pathe comedy producer. This contract is enthusiastically hailed by Pathe officials as a notable addition to the directorial staff of Mr. Roach and materially strengthens his technical corps in anticipation of the heavy production schedule that confronts the Pathe studio forces for the current season.

Mr. Wagner will direct a portion of the Will Rogers comedy vehicles, which are now being produced by Hal Roach at Culver City for distribution by Pathe. He is now busy preparing the script for the next Will Rogers two-reel comedy, which will be put into production immediately upon the completion of the current subject.

The engagement of Mr. Wagner is in line with the policy, recently made effective by Hal Roach, of having alternating directors for each of his comedy companies. The system, which is indicative of the progressive methods of the Pathe producer, will facilitate production and at the same time cut down costs by doing away with wasteful interruptions and periods of idleness between pictures. Another advantage said to be accruing under the newly inaugurated scheme of alternating directors at the Hal Roach studios is the opportunity to improve the quality of production by allowing a director a sufficient interval to thoroughly polish his script and perfect all the production details before actual filming is started.

Before his advent to the West Coast studio circles, Mr. Wagner was a painter of note. After his arrival in Los Angeles he spent some time in observing and studying all the phases of life as revealed in and about the studios of the world's greatest film producing center. His observations and reflections were published in a series of thirty-two feature articles in a national magazine, which won nation-wide prominence for their author. His close study of studio methods led to his entry upon the directorial field.

Live Exhibitor Makes Ads Tell Story

A fine example of advertising the entire program and laying the foundation of a reputation of showing the best in features and

Short Subjects the market affords, is contained in the four-column newspaper "ad" of the Paramount-Empress theatre, Salt Lake City.

The advertising covers the feature, "To the Last Man," and the first of the Educational-Hamilton Comedies, "The Optimist." The "ad" is headed by a four-column announcement to the public that the Paramount-Empress is aware of the demand for the best in Short Subjects, and that, on account of their choice of Short Subjects, they believe they are offering the public a program with 100 per cent appeal.

Pictorial headlights from "Colombus," first of new series, "Chronicles of America," being released by Pathe

Short Subject Briefs

FARINA, the little dusky starlet of Hal Roach's "Our Gang" comedies, enters the ranks of the "growed-up" stars by becoming a party of the first part to a long-term contract, the terms of which assure his continued services as a leading comedian under the Hal Roach banner.

A. H. Geibler, newspaperman and screen author, has been signed by Hal Roach to write screen comedies for the Roach companies at Culver City, Cal. For the present, Mr. Geibler will confine his efforts to the writing of comedy vehicles for Will Rogers.

When the S.S. Seeandbee left Cleveland on September 10 for a cruise to Sault Ste. Marie it carried several Pathe programs for the entertainment of the passengers during the voyage. This marks the first time that motion pictures have been used aboard lake steamers, although efforts toward this end have been made continuously for the past few years by leading film companies.

Stanley B. White, sales manager in charge of Pathe's newly inaugurated special two-reel comedy department, left this week on a tour of exchange centers, which will take him successively to Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

Kenneth Webb has been engaged to direct a number of the productions of Yale University's dramatic "Chronicles of America" series, which are being distributed by Pathe. Mr. Webb's first subject will be made under the title of "Wolfe and Montcalm."

Joe Rock's 12th comedy for Grand-Ascher has been completed and he is now enjoying a well-earned vacation.

Sid Grauman's Metropolitan theatre, Los Angeles, and the Capitol in New York, have been added to the list of first run houses showing Kinograms, Educational's news weekly.

"The Limit," Educational-Cameo comedy is now in its second week on Broadway, having been moved to the Rialto following its run at the Rivoli.

Production is under way on the first of the three Jack White specials that Educational is handling. The picture is not yet titled, but in the cast will appear Mack Swain, Neely Edwards, Hank Mann, Lillian Hackett, and Jack Lloyd.

Charles Christie of Christie Film Company has returned from a trip to Europe where he combined business with pleasure. He reports that American-made short subjects are much more in demand in England than on the Continent.

Having completed his work at D. W. Griffith's studio in the blackface feature in which he will be prominently mentioned, Lloyd Hamilton left this week for Los Angeles to resume production of the two-reel Educational-Hamilton comedies. Ruth Hiatt will continue as his leading woman. "The Optimist," which is the first of the new series, was completed before Hamilton came East.

Vera Steadman, Christie comedy star, and Teddy Sampson, formerly with Christie, are in New York. This is Miss Steadman's first visit to New York.

International Naval Film "Beat," Firm Says

Broadway theatre managers and other exhibitors throughout the country are said to have bestowed praise to International News Reel Corporation and to Universal, which distributes that news reel, for the work in getting pictures of the naval disaster on the Pacific Coast. International claims to have beaten the field, getting pictures of the disaster on screen from coast to coast ahead of all competitors.

When word first was flashed to the Pacific Coast cities that seven United States destroyers had piled up on reefs near Point Honda, Cal., International claims it was the only news reel company that had a man available for duty. Others were getting the eclipse pictures. The International News man rented an aeroplane and sped to the scene of the disaster.

Work Started on Initial Jack White Special

Production work is well under way on the first of the three Jack White Specials, which will be distributed during the coming year by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. The picture is not as yet titled. It is being directed by Norman Taurog under the personal supervision of Jack White, and its cast includes such well-known laughmakers as Mack Swain, Neely Edwards, Hank Mann, Lillian Hackett, Jack Lloyd and many others.

C. B. C. Screen Snapshots Attracting Stars

C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation announced this week that its third series of Screen Snapshots would embrace all of the stars of filmdom. Among those who appear in the current issue are King Baggot, Baby Peggy, George Walsh, Alan Holubar, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Colleen Moore, Warner Baxter, Derelys Perdue, Mary Louise Hartje, Wallace Beery, Charles Ray and Bryant Washburn.

Author of "Fighting Blood" Invades New York

H. G. Witwer, author of F. B. O.'s "Fighting Blood" series, and a magazine writer, arrived in New York this week to go over a number of important business matters. Prior to leaving the Coast, he conferred with Miss Bea Van on the adaptations of future episodes of his series.

Baby Peggy Contest Is All-Around Winner

OF the many successful Baby Peggy Contests held throughout the U. S. during the past year and a half, one of the best was that recently staged by the Pantages theatre, Vancouver, by Manager George Pantages, assisted by the local Universal Exchange. One of the outstanding differences between this and previous "resemblance" contests was that the promoters were able to obtain full-page ads for the Vancouver Sun for three consecutive days instead of one. It was just as easy to sell the merchants the same space for three showings of the contest—interest as it was to sell space for one day only, writes R. A. Scott, manager of the Vancouver Universal Exchange. In this way theatre manager George Pantages helped swell the circulation as well as advertising for the paper.

Five Century Comedies On October Schedule

"LITTLE MISS HOLLYWOOD," one of the series of six in which Baby Peggy stars, heads the list of five Century Comedies being released for October by Universal Film Exchanges.

"A Regular Boy," with Buddy Messinger, follows as the second picture on this schedule. The story and direction are by Al Herman.

"Don't Scream," starring Pal, the canine star, is another release. This is Pal's second comedy for Century, and is his cleverest to date. Ernie Adams plays the important male role.

"One Exciting Day," featuring Jack Earle and Billy Engle, is another fast subject for October. This is the third picture with Earle and Engle, and is also directed by Al Herman.

The last release for the month is the third Follies Girls comedy entitled "Fashion Follies." All of the Century girls, George Monberg and Henry Murdock take part in this girlie revue two-reeler.

A most peculiar and singular coincidence is that, although the pictures were produced over a period of five months, Director Al Herman produced each and every one of the October Century Comedies.

Two new Century Comedies have been turned over to the studio editorial department for cutting and titling. Pal, the dog, is the star of one, "Any Old Port," and "The Detective," the other, is composed of an all-star cast. Al Herman directed both of them.

"Columbus" on October 8 Program of Pathe

"Columbus," a screen version of the highlights of Christopher Columbus' adventurous career and the first of Pathe's absorbing "Chronicles of America" series, will head the Pathe program of releases set for October 7. "Heavy Seas," the second of Hal Roach's "Spat Family" two-reel comedy series, is another release. Also included on the schedule are the ninth episode of "Her Dangerous Path," presenting Edna Murphy in a series of adventures as a detective's assistant; Paul Parrott in a Hal Roach one-reel comedy, titled "No Pets"; an Aesop's Film Fable, "The Cat's Whiskers," and Pathe Review No. 40.

"Topics of the Day" No. 40 and Pathe News issues Nos. 82 and 83 complete the program.

"Cloisters in the Clouds" Fox Educational

The Fox Educational Entertainment, "Cloisters in the Clouds," to be released October 28, portrays shots of monasteries built in Greece about a thousand years ago. Greece, then at war with Turkey, was forced to safeguard precious religious relics. As a hiding place for these treasures, the Greek Church built seven monasteries on the cliffs of Thessaly. Looming high among the clouds, this citadel is blazoned in sunlight, a picturesque reminder of constant faith.

Pathe Claims Scoop on Eclipse of Sun

Another scoop was claimed this week by Pathe News in the field of news pictures. The latest "beat" claimed by Pathe News is to be seen in the pictures of the total solar eclipse, contained in issue No. 76.

These views of the total eclipse were secured in Mexico, whence Pathe News dispatched a special camera expedition to work in conjunction with the staff of scientists from the Sproul Observatory.

Al Ray, New Scenario Head for Jack White

Al Ray, comedy and feature writer, actor and director, has been made head of the Jack White scenario department, according to announcement made this week by Educational. This appointment follows the completion of Mr. Ray's work as author of "The Courtship of Miles Standish," starring Charles Ray. He will prepare stories for the Mermaid Comedies and Jack White comedy specials.

Metro Handling New Fire Preventive Picture

W. E. ATKINSON, general manager of Metro Pictures Corporation, has completed arrangements whereby his organization will distribute "The Keystone," a special fire prevention film sponsored by the National Board of Fire Underwriters and which will be a special feature of the official Fire Prevention Week, beginning October 8. "The Keystone" will be shown many times during the day and evening during the Fire Prevention Exposition to be held at the 71st Regiment Armory while theatres throughout the country will be requested by fire chiefs to present the picture to their patrons.

Middle West Boosting Short Subjects

FOR some unknown reason there seems to be a greater activity among exhibitors of the Middle West and West than those in the East insofar as boosting short subjects in their advertisements is concerned. Result: the Westerners are really paving the way, although here and there in the East one finds the more alert showman emphasizing the importance of short subjects by spotting them in a way that adds to their attractiveness.

"Don't Marry For Money" is the latest of the Weber and North features. These scenes are from the production.

Royalty Pays Tribute to Fox News Man

JOHN T. PARKERSON, European representative of Fox News, has gained the distinction of being the first motion picture man in history to be received officially by a reigning monarch. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland gave Mr. Parkerson a 30-minute audience in the royal palace at The Hague on Saturday, September 1. accepting from him a specially prepared news reel made in conjunction with the twenty-fifth anniversary of her accession to the throne. The reel was tendered with the compliments of William Fox.

American Minister Tobin presented Mr. Parkerson to the Prince Consort and members of the royal court and the entire gathering, with Her Majesty, manifested deep interest in the film industry.

Queen Wilhelmina read a speech accepting the special reel, in which she is the central figure. She thanked Mr. Fox and said that to view the picture would afford her great pleasure. Her Majesty said she was particularly interested in the educational films circulated by the Fox Film Corporation, declaring that they are benefiting millions of children over the entire world.

Mr. Parkerson recounted the history of the Fox Film Corporation from its inception twenty years ago and Her Majesty complimented the organization upon what she terms its "marvelous achievements." wishing it continued success in the interest of world progress. The queen asked many questions concerning the manufacture and distribution of films and the gathering of data for the news reels, remarking about the efficiency and growth of the industry.

"Main Street" Displays, Tie-ups

Book Stores Aid in Exploitation of Feature; Novel Lobbies Are Prepared

TIE-UPS based on the novel of the same name, special lobby displays showing a street, appropriate placards, and the like, have been the outstanding features of campaign on "Main Street," several of which are described below.

For the expenditure of a little time and effort and a few passes, Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre, Sumter, S. C., obtained a full page of newspaper space and a window in the book store on "Main Street."

It so happens that in Sumter the owner of the book store in question also owns one of the weekly papers, and he made the proposition to give a full page of space and his window for display providing Mr. White would dress the window and write the copy for the ad. This advertising carried the message of "Main Street" into a number of surrounding towns, as the paper completely covers the county.

For every copy of the book sold at 75c a pass to the theatre to see "Main Street" was given, the passes furnished by Mr. White.

Street Lobby Display

For the showing of "Main Street" at the Victory theatre, Tampa, Fla., Manager John B. Carroll created an attention-getting lobby display.

The entire back of his lobby was first covered with wall board. From one of the 24-sheets on the film the part showing the store fronts on one side of the street was then cut out and mounted upon the wall board. All wording was eliminated. Additional store fronts and background was then worked in by hand, making an excellent reproduction of a village street. One of the old-style regulation green lamp posts of "them good old days" was erected at each end of the block, which put the proper "kick" in the picture.

Diversified Campaign

An excellent example of an all-around thorough campaign on "Main Street" is furnished by Manager John P. Read of the Gem theatre, Palestine, Texas, who utilized many angles in his exploitation.

One thousand blotters were furnished, gratis, by a local printer, advertising "Main Street," for the privilege of carrying the printing establishment's name at the bottom of each blotter.

A window display was secured in a local book store in which the novel was featured, together with photographs of the picture and cards giving the title of the picture and name of the theatre ten days in advance of showing.

Slides were run on the screen about the picture and a shadow box showing a scene of "Main Street" was in the foyer of the theatre.

Two of the special banners reading "Main Street—Gem Theatre" were swung in front of two of the most prominent Main Street stores one week in advance of play date.

The day previous to opening, and also during the run of the picture, a Ford auto float paraded the streets, which carried banners in announcement about the picture.

The big feature of Mr. Read's campaign was a "Main Street" edition in the Daily Palestine Herald, which was published the day before the opening. This special section included publicity about the picture and scenes from it, as well as ads from practically every merchant on Main Street. The history of Palestine's Main Street introduced the section, and all of the merchants' ads mentioned something about the theatre and the picture.

Endorsement Featured for "Law of the Lawless"

"The Law of the Lawless" was put over by Manager Thomas G. Coleman of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, Ala., with the co-operation of the Better Films Committee, which declared it to be "better than 'The Sheik.'" This recommendation was played up in all the advertising, and everywhere the cast was stressed and special attention called to Charles de Roche's first American pictures.

"VOICE FROM THE MINARET" ABROAD

Novelty Alarm Signal for "The Midnight Alarm"

Two novel ideas were used by Manager George E. Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., in putting over "The Midnight Alarm."

The first of these was a simple contrivance rigged up in the front portion of the lobby, just off the street entrance, which could be seen by everyone—those coming out of the theatre and those passing by on the street. Here a novelty fire alarm signal was set up, bearing the words "In Case of Fire," in red letters. The bell was a real bell and had a tapper. Every now and then a youngster would become interested in it and sound the gong. Needless to say, this attracted the attention of all within hearing distance. It was kept working for two days during the run of picture.

The other stunt which caused a lot of comment and, incidentally, a good deal of newspaper publicity, was the special performances for the boys of the fire department. Through the fire chief, an invitation was extended to all to be the guests of the Imperial on a certain day; the night shift to see it at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and the day shift at 7 p. m.

News of this spread rapidly over town and the picture profited by word of mouth advertising.

Ties Up With Candy Stores on Jackie Coogan Clubs

A new twist has been given to the Jackie Coogan clubs by Al Sobler, First National exploitation men in Chicago, by tying them up with a candy store and making a purchase a necessary qualification for membership.

The Nels Candy store sponsored the club at the time "Circus Days" was shown at the Glen theatre, Chicago. All children purchasing candy at Nels were given a membership card, entitling them to reduced admission rates when a Jackie Coogan picture was shown at the Glen theatre.

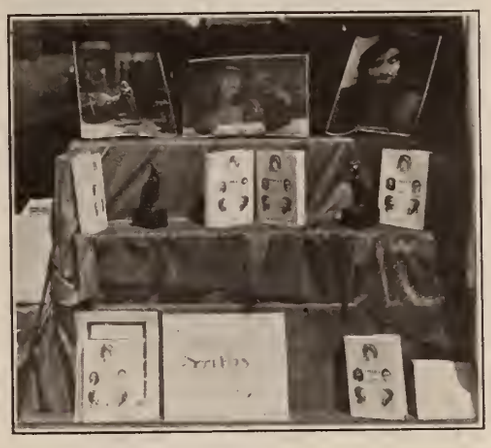
The new membership had the advantage of actually building up trade for the retail co-operator and establishing further good will for the theatre.

"Merry-Go-Round" Campaigns Told

Exploitation Used by Live Wires

LENDING itself well to exploitation, "Merry-Go-Round" is being put over in elaborate shape in many cities, reports show. Stories are presented on this page of such campaigns, furnishing many tested ideas for publicizing this picture.

Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre, Austin, Texas, began advertising "Merry-Go-Round" fully two weeks in advance of play date by running teaser ads in the newspapers, showing the title of the picture against the background of "whirls."



One week in advance of play date special window displays on the picture were seen about the town, some in drug stores, some in ladies' ready-to-wear stores and some in millinery shops. In every display Mr. Roberts endeavored to place some photographs and cutouts that gave the appeal of the elaborate scenes in the picture, such as the wedding scene.

Two weeks in advance of play date special signs and banners were placed on the steel frame work of Austin's newest hotel that is being erected next to the theatre. At present this is the center of attraction, so these signs rendered double service.

On the tile flooring was pasted a 24-sheet, which was illuminated by spotlights focused on it from the ceiling of the marquise.

Through the assistance of Universal's exploiteer, Jack Meredith, a rain insurance policy was taken out on the picture with a local insurance agency and this clever tie-up resulted in considerable publicity in the newspapers. In this connection a local taxicab company advertised that it would bring to the theatre free on Saturday, provided it rained, anyone desiring to see the picture.

Two hundred and fifty special letters were sent out to the Elks of Austin reminding them that Mary Philbin was the winner of the Elks' beauty contest at a recent Elks' convention and the letter solicited their aid to put over the picture.

Aid of Elks Solicited

Manager Barry Burke of the Palace theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, assisted by Universal's exploiteer, Jack Meredith, put over a splendid campaign on "Merry Go-Round."

Arrangement was made with a local insurance agency for 10,000 rain insurance policies and the announcement of this stunt was carried in all the local newspapers and in the issue of the "Palace Pep," which received a distribution of 8,000 circulation.

It was also arranged with the Yellow Cab Company to bring to the Palace on the opening date of the picture free of charge anyone desiring to see the picture, provided it rained. The taxicab company carried announcement to this effect on all their cars.

The local Elks' club furnished the theatre with stationery and a mailing list of 2,000—and to this number a special letter was written about Mary Philbin, the star in the picture, being also the winner of a beauty contest at a recent Elks' convention.

The "Merry-Go-Round" stickers were on the menus in practically all the eating places around town. Some of the soda fountains cooperated by selling a special "Merry-Go-Round" sandwich and a sundae by the same name.

A large toy merry-go-round was on display in the theatre foyer one week in advance of play date and during the run of the picture was placed on top of the lobby in connection with a large banner, announcing the picture, the cast and the director.

Special Advance Screening

In Macon, Ga., a Better Films Committee has just been organized, and Manager George A. McDermit of the Rialto theatre arranged for an advance screening for them in view of the valuable criticisms which he might obtain through them. They were very much impressed and endorsed it as an exceptional picture.

The lobby was made up to represent the entrance to a merry-go-round at a fair or amusement park, using a grill work interwoven with blue and gold paper festooning. Cartoon cutouts were placed on both sides of the box office. Across the center of lobby, on the grill work, a large egg-shaped sign read "Merry-Go-Round," and on the side grill work a circular sign bore the same wording.

On the top of marquee a large pin-wheel, eight feet in diameter, illuminated with electric lights, had wings painted in varied colors. This was kept in motion by a small fan motor. On top a large pennant carried the title.

PUTTING "THE FRENCH DOLL" OVER WITH A LAVISH AND ARTISTICALLY STAGED PROLOGUE
When "The French Doll" (Metro), showed at the Allen theatre, Montreal, Manager George Rotzky preceded it by a picturesque and entertaining prologue, with a special setting, as shown here

"Town That Forgot God" Is Given Strong Campaign

Two weeks in advance of play date, Manager Clayton Tunstill of the Rialto theatre, Chickasha, Okla., posted the regular paper around the town and began runnings ads in the newspapers one week in advance of play date.

There are no Sunday shows in Chickasha, so in order to attract the attention of those riding around town Sunday night, Mr. Tunstill had the theatre lobby lit up like a church and the large electric sign on top of the marquise carried the title of the picture—"The Town That Forgot God." This startling title attracted unusual attention from the church-going public.

Special cards were printed that carried a large red arrow and the copy was "The Town That Forgot God." These cards were tacked around town so as to have the arrow pointing toward the theatre. Large red arrows made out of comp board and painted red with the title of the picture in white were mounted on laths and stuck up alongside the roads leading into Chickasha.

The city also permitted Mr. Tunstill to place these signs on the telegraph poles. The cards and arrows carried no theatre name or date in order to arouse the public's curiosity, for Mr. Tunstill knew that his regular newspaper and poster paper would direct the people to the Rialto theatre.

Accident Insurance Stunt Aids "Safety Last"

The issuing of an accident insurance policy with every ticket of admission was the stunt employed by the Hippodrome at York, Pa., during its engagement of "Safety Last." The policy indemnified the holder in the sum of fifty dollars. The unusual practice of a theatre insuring every member of its audience against accident excited widespread and profitable comment. Despite the apparent financial risk assumed by the Hippodrome its chance of sustaining any loss, under the plan followed out, was practically nil.

In its formal and legal phases the document was a bonafide policy, bearing the organizational inscription of the Maryland Casualty Company on its face, and was issued by a local bond insurance agency, which co-operated with the Hippodrome in staging the stunt.

The policy was so drafted as to afford a maximum of publicity for the theatre and "Safety Last." The final clauses revealed the important contingencies upon which the payment of the indemnity depended. It was expressly stipulated at this point that the policy was limited "to cover only the accidental cracking of a rib, directly and solely from laughter while viewing the cinema, Harold Lloyd in 'Safety Last.'"

Another effective stunt designed exclusively for the ladies was the presentation to the women patrons of the Hippodrome of a sealed envelope across the face of which was printed: "Contents for Ladies Only." The enclosures comprised a safety pin, attached to a card on which appeared the advice: "Use This for Safety First When You Laugh and Roar at Harold Lloyd in 'Safety Last,'" and a dainty handkerchief, which the feminine members of the audience were recommended to use in drying their tears of laughter.

Clever Flasher Display on "Woman with Four Faces"

An unusual lobby display helped Manager C. A. McFarland to put over "The Woman With Four Faces" at the Queen theatre, Houston, Texas. It consisted of a lobby front designed to represent a frame with a small safe in the center of the room and a cut-out of Betty Compson leaning over it as if ready to blow it up. The burglar tools were lying on the floor and in Betty Compson's hand was an electric drill which flashed a spark when touched to the door. This spark was produced by means of an electric current and a buzzer concealed under the safe and was used to attract the attention. Across the entrance to this display was the title of the picture with a sales line and the cast.

Special frames were used in the hotels and the cafes which carried stills showing scenes from the picture and the title.

A novel feature of Mr. McFarland's campaign was the masks worn by the ushers and doormen also cashiers during the run of the picture.

DISPLAY THAT BOOSTED RUN OF "THE SUNSHINE TRAIL"

Manager A. H. McDonald and Ad Manager Russell Brown of the Rex theatre, Eugene, Ore., prepared this lobby display on "The Sunshine Trail" (First National). The rising sun was lighted from behind

NEW TYPE OF DEALER TIE-UP STUNT

Manager Harold Horne of Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, Tenn., is using these arrows, with signs changed weekly. This one ties up with "The Ne'er-Do-Well" (Paramount)

Offer of Pony Exploitation on "Circus Days" Run

The showing of "Circus Days" at the Capitol theatre, Cincinnati, was exploited through the medium of a contest, staged in co-operation with the Cincinnati Post, in which Jack Coogan offered a pony to the boy most resembling him.

The rules of the contest provided that all boys 12 years old or younger, living in Hamilton county, Ohio, and Kenton and Campbell counties, Kentucky, were eligible; that no make-up would be permitted in order to strengthen the resemblance; judges were personally to see those who most resembled the film star before making their decision.

In the story announcing the contest, the Post said: "Jackie Coogan is coming to Cincinnati next week in 'Circus Days,' a film version of James Otis' famous kid story, 'Toby Tyler.' Of course, you've read it.

"Jackie thinks a lot of the picture, which is to appear at the Capitol starting Sunday He and his dad, Jack, Sr., had the idea that it would be a fine stunt to give some Cincinnati boy a dandy pony, something every kid wants, but very few get.

"'Cincinnati kids have always flocked to see my pictures and I'd like to give 'em all ponies if I could,' said Jackie, 'but since I'll have to make it one I'll give it to the boy who looks most like me. I'll do it through the Post'."

"Rouged Lips" is Exploited Through Cosmetic Angle

Realizing the exploitation possibilities of the title, "Rouged Lips," Manager W. A. Doster of the Strand theatre, Montgomery, Ala., approached a druggist whose windows face the most traveled thoroughfare in the city, suggesting a tie-up. As a result, a most attractive window display of rouge and other cosmetics was arranged. Cards announced that Viola Dana would play in "Rouged Lips" at the Strand.

The location of the window was worth a good deal and helped to put over the show.

The picture was also announced on the mirror of the most popular soda fount. This has been found effective and is used regularly.

Questions on Alaska Used to Boost "Spoilers"

A novel newspaper exploitation tie-up for a picture was obtained for the showing of "The Spoilers" at the Temple theatre, Toledo, Ohio. Manager H. C. Horater and Eddie Carrier of the Goldwyn exploitation force, induced the Toledo News-Bee to go into the stunt strongly. A series of twenty questions were propagated in regard to Alaska and its history in the columns of the News-Bee.

Money and ticket prizes were offered for the best set of answers to the twenty questions given here:

1. Where is Iditarod? 2. What is a malamute? 3. What does Chinook mean? 4. What is meant by mushing the trail? 5. Where was the Treadwell mine? 6. At the closest point, how far from Alaska is Siberia? 7. Where does the government railway in Alaska start and terminate? 8. In what latitude and longitude is Nome situated? 9. What is a Totem Pole? 10. What is the name of the city of "Totem Poles?" 11. What is meant in Alaska when they speak of "a man from the outside?" 12. How high is Mount McKinley? 13. What was the date of the big fire at Valdez? 14. How many white people and how many Indians in Alaska? 15. How tall does celery grow in Alaska? 16. Where are the reindeer ranches in Alaska? 17. To what territory does the Dawson territory belong? 18. What is meant by the word "Klondike," and when was the first Klondike rush? 19. When and from whom did the United States buy Alaska? 20. What is meant by the "Spoilers?"

"Trail of Lonesome Pine" Given Soft Drink Aid

Manager Clayton Tunstill of the Rialto theatre, Chickasha, Okla., arranged a tie-up with the Keen Kola Bottling Company whereby the theatre gave away a bottle of soda water with each ticket purchased during the run of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

The tie-up resulted in excellent publicity for their drink and it cost the theatre nothing.

ATMOSPHERIC LOBBY FOR "OMAR"

Allen theatre, Toronto, was dressed as shown here for "Omar the Tentmaker" (First National) under the supervision of J. B. Crouk, general manager

The way the soda water was distributed was from a small stand built on the outside of the theatre to represent a soda fountain and as the patrons entered they received a bottle of soda water. Some would go inside and drink it while looking at the picture and others drank before entering. The theatre ushers disposed of the empty bottles.

Mr. Tunstill writes that he was surprised at the results of this stunt. Business was increased and the people continued calling all during the engagement to ask if the bottles of soda water were still being given away. More than 1,500 bottles were given away in two days.

Boxing Bout Prologue Puts "Abysmal Brute" Over

Additional interest was given to the showing of "The Abysmal Brute" by Manager George A. McDermit of the Capitol theatre, Macon, Ga., who staged as a prologue a three-round boxing bout between two local youngsters, 80-pound boys, with a fake knock-out at the finish.

Mr. McDermit had no reluctance in staging a boxing bout in Macon, as Stribling, the middleweight champion of the South, is the pride of Macon, and boxing matches are attended there by the American Legion and some of the best people of the city.

This stunt was the occasion of publicity gratis on the sporting page.

Builds Own Stage Coach on "Girl of Golden West"

Great attention was attracted in East St. Louis by a stage coach, attended by two horsemen in western regalia, making its way through the heavy traffic, which proved to be a ballyhoo for "The Girl of the Golden West" at the Lyric theatre.

To Manager Larry Richardson goes the credit for the ingenuity of the exploitation campaign for there were no stage coaches in civilized East St. Louis. Manager Richardson improvised his own coach from an antiquated carriage dug up in a wagon maker's shop. When it was finished, however, it had every appearance of a vehicle used by the 49ers except that it seemed too new for that decade.

As a prologue for "The Girl of the Golden West" Manager Richardson used a western scene. The stage pages withdrew the draperies to reveal the Comedy Four in chaps and sombreros who staged a comedy song and dialogue that led up to an appropriate climax with the entrance of "The Girl," and later of "The Stranger." The prologue closed with "The Girl of the Golden West" song rendered by "The Stranger." It was a family affair for the Stranger was none other than Manager Richardson's brother and the Girl was Mrs. Richardson.

"Trifling With Honor" is Shown Boys and Girls

Manager Harry Gould of the Hippodrome theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, started his campaign to advertise "Trifling With Honor" by inviting the newsboys, the messenger boys, campfire girls and baseball players to a preshowing of the picture. A large audience responded to the invitations and went away boosting the picture.

A large cut out featuring the baseball angle was placed in the lobby of the theatre with the title of the picture in cutout letters extending across the entrance.

A full page tie-up was arranged with the Fort Worth Press.

ONE OF 23 REXALL WINDOWS IN ST. LOUIS TYING UP WITH "ENEMIES OF WOMEN" SHOWING

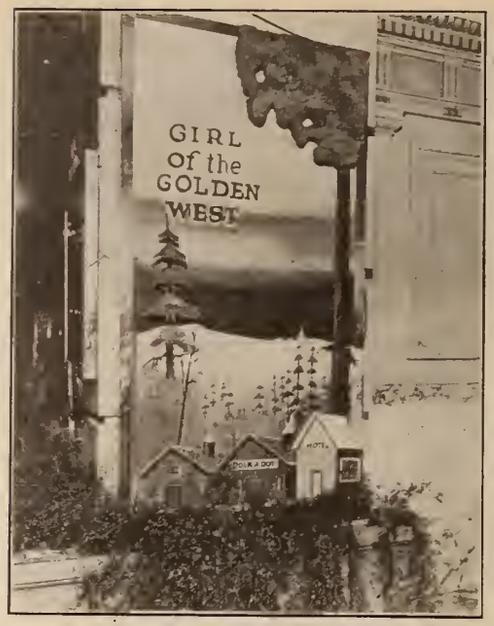
When "Enemies of Women" (Cosmopolitan), was shown at the Kings theatre, St. Louis, the management succeeded in obtaining display windows on the cosmetic angle in 23 Rexall drug store windows, one of which is shown here

Heavy Campaign Put Over on "Enemies of Women"

A strong mercantile tie-up was put over by Homer Gill, Goldwynner, when he engineered a hook-up with the Kroger Grocery & Baking Company of St. Louis on "Enemies of Women" at King's theatre. This is one of the biggest bakeries in St. Louis, and its tie-up was to advertise its Country Club brand of bread and its Velvet Cake at the same time that it exploited the showing of "Enemies of Women" at King's theatre. The daily output of this brand of bread is 50,000 loaves. As the tie-up covered a period of six days, 300,000 loaves of bread carried inside the oiled paper wrapping a small circular regarding the showing of the picture. The insert was placed inside the wrapper as the loaves were run through the wrapping machine.

The herald inserted in each of these 300,000 loaves of bread read as follows:

"Hot Ovens are 'Enemies of Women.' Serve Country Club Velvet Cake—surprisingly good and delicious. Serve Country Club Bread—a perfect loaf. Don't fail to see 'Enemies of Women' by Blasco Ibanez, author of the 'Four Horsemen' and 'Blood and Sand,' at King's theatre, starting Saturday, September 1."



In addition to distribution of the 300,000 loaves of bread, The Kroger store printed 750 1-sheets.

Special "Enemies of Women" cards were placed in 800 barber shops for one week prior to the opening of the picture at the King's theatre. This window card, 11x14 in., was printed in green, as was the Kroger herald and 1-sheet, and read as follows:

"Poorly groomed men are 'Enemies of Women.' Let your barber fix you up and then see 'Enemies of Women' a story of genuine high life, at the King's theatre, starting Saturday, September 1."

NEAT SILHOUETTED LOBBY DISPLAY
Manager Raleigh of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., designed this attractive display for "The Girl of the Golden West" (First National)

Phonograph Company Boosts "Lorna Doone" Showing

Manager Clayton Tunstill of the Rialto theatre, Chickasha, Okla., arranged a tie-up with the Edison Phonograph Company of Chickasha to assist in advertising "Lorna Doone."

A phonograph was decorated specially for the occasion and placed in the lobby of the theatre, and played the record "Lorna Doone." The Edison company also advertised the picture and the theatre in their windows and wherever their records were sold.

Other window tie-ups secured by Mr. Tunstill were with jewelry stores, music stores and dry goods stores.

The local library co-operated by placing special announcements on their bulletin boards about the picture and putting extra copies of the book in prominent places in the library.

Special Phonograph Record Aids "Enemies of Women"

William Goldman, proprietor of the King's theatre, St. Louis, Mo., pulled a unique stunt to exploit the showing of "Enemies of Women" at his house recently. In advance he had the Cameo Record Company of New Jersey make twenty-five special phonograph records which started out with a stirring military march, which was quickly interrupted by a human voice announcing: "Just a moment, please! Don't fail to see 'Enemies of Women' at William Goldman's King's theatre, commencing September 1." Then the band continued to play for a few minutes when the voice would cut in again.

Commencing on August 26 Goldman had boys with small phonographs ride the street cars of the city, giving concerts with the announcement record. He also had the phonographs used on the prominent downtown corners during the day and at night on the centers of activities for movie fans. In addition he equipped a large Reo truck with a loud-speaker and a phonograph and toured the prominent streets of the city. Two passenger automobiles with phonographs were also used. Twenty of the records were kept constantly in use.

In addition a tie-up was worked with the Kroger Grocer and Bakery Company, which operates 350 stores in St. Louis and St. Louis County and sells 50,000 loaves of bread daily. Inserts exploiting "Enemies of Women" were placed in every loaf of bread sold by Kroger the week prior to the opening of the show at the King's.

Flapjick Turner Displayed in "Spoilers" Lobby

When Manager Graham of the Grand theatre, Centralia, Wash., booked "The Spoilers," he decided to attempt something unusual in the way of a lobby display. He obtained one of the cut-outs that the Alber Bros. Milling Company uses in advertising its pancake flour. This cut-out shows the flapjack turner, which is operated automatically, flipping the flapjack every time it is turned.

This piece of exploitation was put in the lobby by Mr. Graham and attracted all kinds of attention.

USING A JUVENILE REVUE AS A PROLOGUE IN CONNECTION WITH THE SHOWING OF "PENROD AND SAM"
What patrons voted one of the most pleasing prologue offerings on record was staged by Newman's theatre, Kansas City, Mo., on "Penrod and Sam" (First National), when thirty-five juvenile entertainers were engaged for a kiddie revue

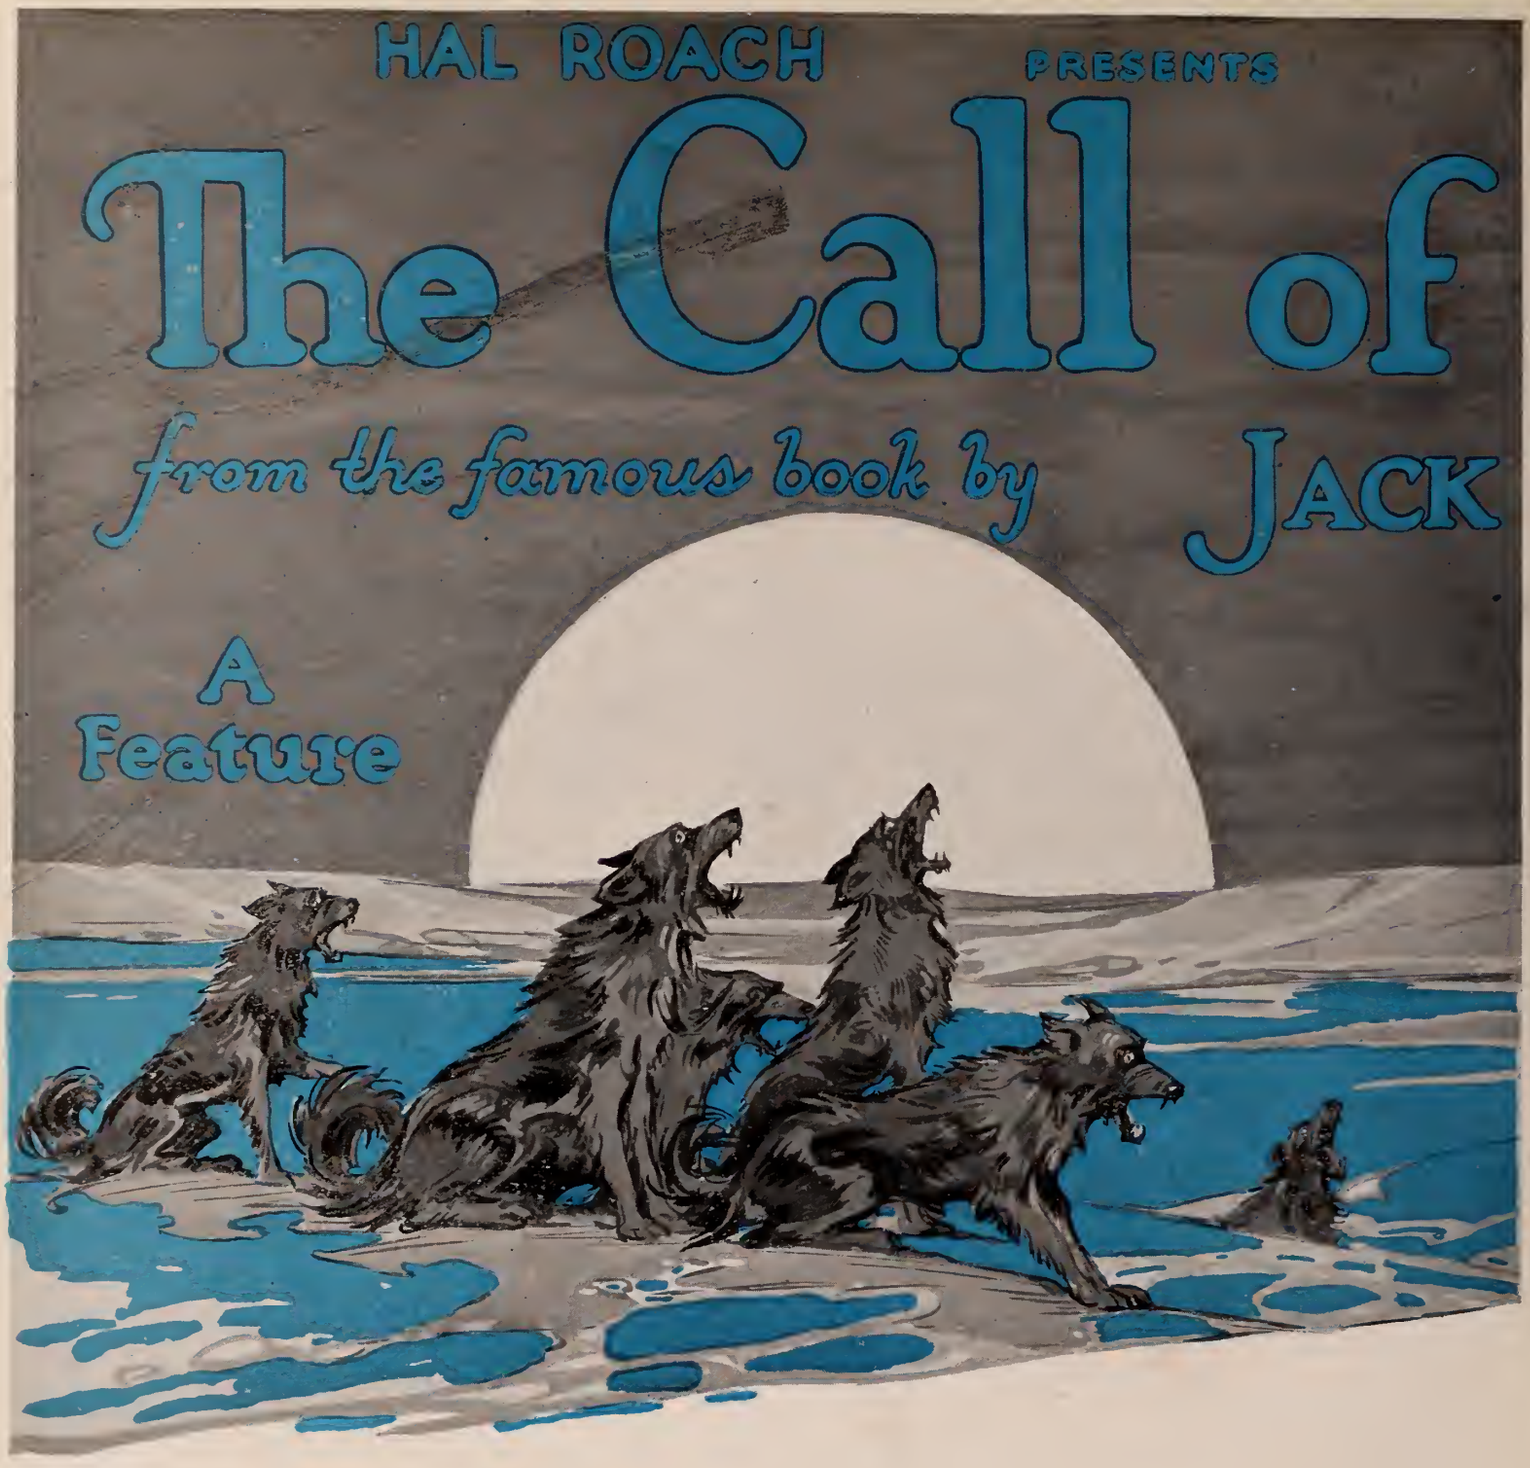
Is Conan Doyle Right?

Two parts

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a very distinguished Englishman, says this life is merely the vestibule for the Hereafter; that we take up life in the next world just where we leave it off here; that he is in constant communication with those who have passed on; and that their message is one of Hope and encouragement to mankind.



Sir Arthur is honest in his beliefs; there are others who are not, who seek to profit from the tears of the bereaved. This great two reel picture shows up the fakers and the crooks who seek to commercialize Spiritualism.

Everybody in your community is either for or against Doyle's beliefs. It's the biggest topic and the biggest little picture of the day. Play it up and PROFIT.

Stan Laurel Comedies

Two parts

A new comedy face, sure to be famous, is peeking above the horizon

Watch this chap "do his stuff." With sober face and serious manner he builds up his situation until the climax is reached. Then the sun breaks from behind the clouds, his face beams, he wriggles in ecstacy while your crowd roars.

That's pantomime and it takes an artist to do it. His manner, his style and his methods are his own.

The name "Stan Laurel" is going to mean a lot more a year from today than it does now.

Newspaper Series Precedes Showing of "Hollywood"

Since the playing of "Hollywood" at Manager J. G. Evins' Odeon theatre was coincident with the reopening of the house under a new policy, the lobby put on an unusually dressed-up appearance in honor of the occasion, being profusely decorated with palms, loaned by a local florist.

The campaign on "Hollywood" began two weeks in advance with four-inch space calling attention to the fact that a girl must have accomplishments, rather than beauty, in order to be successful in the movies. These were followed by thumbnail cuts of stars, until a series of nine were published. At the same time an announcement was made that a pass would be given to each person on the opening afternoon presenting at the box office a complete series of these star illustrations. Responses were generous and the theatre isued 300 passes on the opening afternoon, most of them to children.

A mailing list of 1,000 was covered with the rotogravure sheets on this production.

Two thousand heralds were distributed to patrons of the Lucas theatre the week previous to opening, the Odeon being closed at that time for renovation anf redecorating.

Radio Contest Tie-up Made on "Enemies of Women"

When "Enemies of Women" was shown at Manager G. B. Ten Eyck's Orpheum theatre, Trenton, N. J., a tie-up was made with the Radio Chain Stores company, by which free tickets were given to the first hundred persons who correctly deciphered a radio message. The radio message was printed on a special herald which contained the international code. The Radio Chain Stores paid for the printing of the heralds and Mr. Ten Eyck arranged to have them distributed at the public schools. The school children were greatly interested in this stunt and carried the heralds home and enlisted the aid of their parents in deciphering the radio message, thus insuring that a great portion of the residents of Trenton were made aware of the showing of "Enemies of Women."

Window displays were obtained in drug stores and women's wear shops. Special cards, painted by a local sign painter, were placed in shoe stores, phonograph shops, hair dressing establishments, hardware stores and cigar stores.

SIMPLE LOCOMOTIVE BALLYHOO

Manager William L. Boulware of the Forum and Palace theatres, Hillsboro, Ohio, prepared this simple locomotive ballyhoo from odds and ends on "The Fast Mail" (Fox)

Railroad Heralds Given Out in "Hollywood" Campaign

City Manager Bruce Fowler, assisted by House Manager Raymond Willie, put over a most effective campaign on "Hollywood" at the Palace theatre, Dallas, Texas.

A thorough teaser campaign was begun two weeks in advance both in the newspapers and out-of-door advertising. One week in advance of play date small one column ads carrying thumb-nail cuts of one of the stars were run in the newspapers, no two ads carried the same cut.

The title of the picture, "Hollywood" was spelled out in cut-out letters and strung from the top of the Palace sign down to the end of the marquise. Each letter was cut in the shape of a star and was painted in flashy colors. Across the front of the marquise were hung special cut-out letters of the same color scheme.

On the back side of the theatre, which fronts on a newly paved street where there is considerable traffic, was elected a special illuminated sign announcing the picture and here again the letters were in shape of stars.

Ten thousand "railroad" heralds were inserted in envelopes of the Southern Pacific railway in order to give the ticket the appearance of real railroad coupons and these were given away at the theatre one week in advance of play date. Also 2,500 fanfotos with information about the picture printed on the back side were given away at the theatre.

Hyman Presentation on Run of "Three Wise Fools"

During the showing of "Three Wise Fools," which marked the Fourth Anniversary of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Managing Director Edward L. Hyman put on an especially elaborate presentation, in commemoration of the event.

A Chauve Souris number, The Incident of the Clock, was used. It required a set-piece china mantel clock and three singers. There was a baritone prologue to the specialty, with the singer in Colonial dress in front of the antique gold draw curtains. The curtains were flooded with amber and orange lights from the sides, which dimmed out as the baritone finished the prologue and the curtains parted to reveal the set. On each side of the clock and appearing as though part of it were a man and woman (tenor and soprano) also in Colonial dress, harmonizing with the clock. As the clock struck 12 the figures came to life, and came down the steps from the clock and went through a minuet. Then they ascended to their original positions, and as the baritone finished the numbers the curtains closed on the set as it was first shown.

There was another special presentation on the same program which equalled the Clock Incident in effect but was lighter in body. This was "Rose In the Bud," with a set-piece vase twelve feet high from which protruded a single red rose bud sized in proportion to the vase. On this bud was thrown a rose pink spot from the side overhead. A basso in amber spot from the booth sang "Rose In the Bud" during the course of which a ballet dancer attired in rose petal costume appeared peeping over the top of the vase from inside. She then came down for a toe dance under a green and rose pink spot from overhead.

Circus Wagon Ballyhoo Is Used on "Circus Days"

Not to be outdone by the picture, Manager U. K. Rice of the Auditorium theatre, Winston-Salem, N. C., started his own circus in connection with the showing of "Circus Days." Digging the old stage coach out of the mausoleum he did it over in circus style, loaded it down with two clowns and an orchestra, put four horses at the front and said "Giddap."

The ballyhoo worked wonders. From dawn to dusk youngsters followed it around on the street.

UNUSUAL EFFECT IN AN ENCLOSED FRONT BY GARNER ON "THE BRIGHT SHAWL" SHOWING

Something a little different in lobby displays on "The Bright Shawl" (First National), was gotten by Manager B. B. Garner of the Casino and Auditorium theatres, Lakeland, Fla., enclosing the front with painted beaver board

Tickets Rain From Air for "Enemies of Women"

When "Enemies of Women" played at the Alamo theatre, Louisville, Goldwynner H. T. Snowden arranged with an aviator from the Bowman aviation field to fly over downtown Louisville on Saturday preceding the showing, and from a height of many thousand feet to throw overboard 500 white cardboards, each of which was good for an admission to the Alamo to see "Enemies of Women." The theatre management tied up with the Louisville Herald on this stunt, and the paper published a daily story notifying the women of Louisville that each one of them who caught one of the tickets would be admitted as guests of the Herald to see "Enemies of Women" on any day of its showing.

An "Enemies of Women" contest was arranged with the Louisville Post, which attracted a great deal of attention and commanded much space in that newspaper. Prizes were offered for replies giving a list of the ten most insidious "enemies of women."

Another contest tie-up was with the Louisville Safety Council and the Times. The Safety Council printed large cards which were placed on the fenders of street cars and carried in store windows, on trolley poles and in other conspicous places. These cards read: "Careless Drivers Are Enemies of Women. Don't Get Hurt. Louisville Safety Council," and the title of the picture was in much larger type than the rest of the card. In conjunction with this safety contest the Times offered $5 for first prize in the contest, which read: "How would you punish careless and drunken drivers?" Three dollars was offered for second prize; $2 for third prize, and two tickets each to see "Enemies of Women" to those submitting the next ten best lists of suggestions.

Gets Plenty of Atmosphere in "Circus Days" Front

Jerome Casper, managing director of Rowland and Clark theatres of Pittsburgh, is a firm believer in "atmosphere" as a showman's asset. He has conceived many notable lobby displays for the various theatres in the "R. & C." chain, making it an important factor in each and every one of them. One of his best was for "Circus Days," which was shown in the Liberty theatre.

SIMPLE "LOST AND FOUND" LOBBY

Manager C. B. Stiff of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., when playing "Lost and Found" (Goldwyn) obtained the desired atmospheric effect with the simple means shown here

Casper went the "limit" in the creation of "atmosphere" for this picture. The aroma of the "big top" was brought into the foyer of the Liberty theatre during the week previous to the showing of "Circus Days" and the audiences were undoubtedly "sold" before they left the theatre. The first thing to attract the eye as one entered the foyer was an immense tent stretched between the two stairways leading to the balcony. In the center of this there was a reproduction from a scene in the picture. Stuffed animals were there in profusion and the clown tight-rope walker and trapeze performer came in for a great amount of attention. Pennant and balloons were other further adjuncts of this display. While this display was elaborate, it was not over-done in the least.

During the week of the showing of "Circus Days," the exterior of the Liberty continued the good work that was done the week previous in the interior. The box-office by reason of the hand-painted beaver board frame that enclosed it looked for all the world like the place you buy your tickets to see a circus. Above the entrance doors there was a top of a tent marked "Main Entrance" and one of similar dimension on the other side of the box-office marked "Exit." On top of the lobby a large hand-painted design on canvas gave further evidence of the fact that "Circus Days" was showing in the Liberty.

Question Cards Are Used in Campaign on "Trilby"

Manager Frank L. Browne of the Liberty theatre, Long Beach, Calif., has used questionnaire exploitation for several years, but he finds it still good if not used too often.

In the case of "Trilby" he has 10,000 postcards printed and distributed asking questions as follows:

"Who is Andree Lafayette? What film company is she with? Is she a Blonde or Brunette? What is the Name of the Picture in Which She is Starred? When is it to Play the Liberty theatre? How Many People Will Pay to see it the First Day?"

The fact that there was an added glamor around the name of Andree Lafayett who was just commencing to build film fame for herself increased the interest in the questions. Manager Browne asked his patrons to call up the theatre if they needed additional information in solving the problems: giving him direct contact with his patrons. He offered suitable recognition for those who turned in the best answers; and their number showed that questionnaire can still be relied upon to interest the public.

White Rose Gas Hook-up on "White Rose" Showing

M. A. Malaney, in charge of publicity for Loew's Ohio theatres, pulled a crackerjack publicity stunt recently in connection with the showing of "The White Rose" at the Stillman theatre, Cleveland. Malaney tied up with the White Rose Gasoline Company. There are forty White Rose gas stations in Cleveland. And every one of the forty stations devoted their blackboards to clever phrases referring to White Rose gasoline and to the picture, "The White Rose."

One of them was: "As Pictured at the Stillman, 'White Rose' is Something to 'Gas' About." Every day a different one appeared. And on the screen at the Stillman there appeared on the news reel a picture of the man as he was writing out these sayings. It was splendid advertising for the picture, as it reached every section of the city. Incidentally, the White Rose gasoline got some extra publicity—just enough to make the arrangement interesting to both parties concerned.

RAILWAY STATION IS SUGGESTED IN ORIGINAL LOBBY DISPLAY ON "HOLLYWOOD" SHOWING

Manager Hugo Plath of the Palace theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., prepared an appropriate and ingenious lobby display for "Hollywood" (Paramount), transforming the lobby into a railroad station, with gates, ticket station, etc.

Identification Contest Is Stunt on "Hollywood"

PETER MAGARO, proprietor of the Regent theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., put over an excellent exploitation scheme on "Hollywood" with the co-operation of the Harrisburg Telegraph.

During the week prior to the appearance of "Hollywood," the newspaper printed five coupons on five successive days, each containing four pictures of stars appearing in the film play, the pictures in the coupons changing each day. A series of prizes totaling $55 in cash and thirty tickets to the play were offered to those readers of the newspaper correctly naming on the coupons the largest number of the actors and actresses whose pictures were printed.

The first prize was $25, second prize $15, third $10 and fourth $5. The next fifteen prizes were pairs of tickets to the play.

ENCLOSING THE THEATRE FRONT DURING "HOLLYWOOD" SHOWING

This unusual effect in a beaver board front was created by Manager H. B. Clarke of the Goring theatre, Greenville, S. C., during the showing of "Hollywood" (Paramount)

Artistic Window Cut-out is Made for "The Spoilers"

During the showing of "The Spoilers" at the Capitol theatre, New York City, a window cut-out was prepared which attracted great attention.

The display was made by painting on beaver board the characters from "The Spoilers" shown in one of the fight stills. The figures were hand-painted on beaver board and then cut out and mounted within the frame of an old oil painting. It showed the fight between Milton Sills and Noah Beery, with Robert Edeson holding the door against all comers. The display was lighted by a globe concealed behind the door, which reflected its light on those standing in the doorway; and by another light concealed behind the proscenium on the left, illumiating the figures of Sills and Beery. Painted curtains were shown at each end of the frame picture, giving it the appearance of a stage. This display was first used in a store window near the Capitol theatre, and after the show taken to Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's New York exchange.

"Strangers of the Night" Stunts

Details of Early Campaigns on This Release Given for Other Exhibitors

REPORTS of the first campaigns on "Strangers of the Night" are now being received, and a number of the ideas employed are listed below for the convenience of other exhibitors planning their campaigns on the picture.

For the showing of "Strangers of the Night" at Loew's State theatre in Boston, Bert B. Perkins, Metro's exploitation manager, brought about a very effective tie-up between this picture and the Travelers Aid Society of that city.

The Travelers Aid Society distributes a one-page leaflet, one side of which carries a list of "dont's" that travelers are warned to observe for their safety while en route. These are distributed from counters of stores and receive wide circulation.

On the front of the leaflet, which carries only the seal of the society, Metro's exploitation manager imprinted, with the sanction of the society, the words:

"Caution to Travelers Against the Advance of 'Strangers of the Night.' Donated and Distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation."

More than 150,000 of these leaflets, with the Metro imprint, were distributed. It aroused a great deal of comment and successfully aided "Strangers of the Night" at Loew's State theatre. So effective did the stunt prove that Expoitation Manager Perkins is now making efforts to consummate a national tie-up on these leaflets with "Strangers of the Night."

Private Screening is Held

Charles Morrison, manager of the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., was fortunate in being able to obtain a print of this film far enough in advance to hold a private screening, which he did for a selected list. There was a record attendance at this showing and many valuable signed criticisms were the result.

Of course, these were capitalized upon in his campaign.

Unusually effective was the full-page co-operative ad accomplished, the central space of which was devoted to a 30-inch display ad of the theatre for "Strangers of the Night."

Special newspaper stories were secured free.

Misspelled Word Contest

Booked at short notice, and in the absence of the necessary advertising matter in advance, F. J. Miller, Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., resorted to the newspaper contest of misspelled words. That it brought results is proved by the fact that three thousand replies were received by the newspaper.

The picture was personally endorsed by Mr. Miller in all notices a week in advance.

The telephone was also brought into use and three days in advance of opening prospective patrons were called on the wire and informed that "Strangers of the Night" was one of the few pictures which carried the personal recommendation of the management.

ROUBLES AND MARKS DISPLAYED IN "DON'T MARRY FOR MONEY" LOBBY

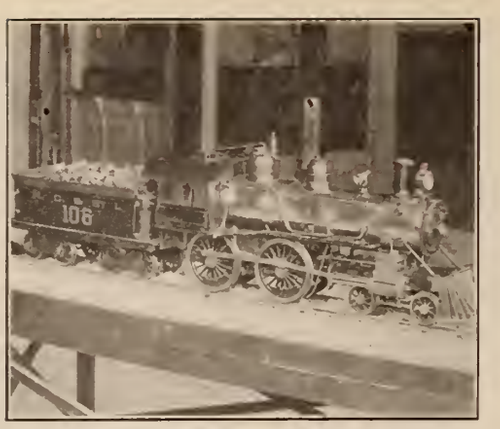
Foreign paper money of the type now almost valueless was used in the lobby and on the usherettes' costumes at the Central theatre, New York, during the showing of "Don't Marry for Money" (Weber and North)

Mothers-in-Law Day is Put Over on "Mothers-in-Law"

When "Mothers-in-Law" played at the Lincoln theatre, Union Hill, N. J., Gerald Gallagher, advertising manager for Haring and Blumenthal, who handled the entire campaign, inaugurated a local "Mothers-in-law Day" by proclamations in the program, lobby and newspapers.

As the local newspapers were already full of the "Mothers-in-law Day" idea, having run the stories of Mrs. Clara A. Griswold of Boston, who has founded a national association for honoring the mother-in-law, the idea of a local day met with response from the newspapers and the merchants.

The Hudson Dispatch of Union Hill picked up the idea and solicited the local merchants, with the result that a co-operative full-page ad was easily obtained. Furniture, automobile, electric, clothing and specialty dealers and jewelers, restaurants and others came in on the full page, with the suggestion that everybody should buy something for his mother-in-law. One-fourth of the page was devoted to a straight ad from the picture.



The advertising all carried the announcement that all mothers-in-law would be admitted free if accompanied by their son-in-law or daughter-in-law.

Stickers Placed on Sunday Papers to Aid "Brass"

For a lobby display on "Brass," Manager Earl Settle of the Palace theatre, McAlester, Okla., made use of a 24-sheet cutout which was varnished in order to make the rich colors stand out. This cutout showed a man and a woman pulling the wedding ring into pieces with the title of the picture in the center.

Twenty-four small cutouts were placed in different windows about the town and the book stores co-operated by giving a special display of the copies of the novel.

Mr. Settle met the 5 o'clock train Sunday morning and placed 300 stickers announcing the picture on the cover page of the Daily Oklahoman, a paper that receives a large distribution in McAlester.

MINIATURE LOCOMOTIVE DISPLAYED
Manager C. B. Stiff of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., obtained this model locomotive to put in the lobby during the run of "Westbound Limited" (F. B. O.)

Unusual Features Mark 7th Anniversary Program

The seventh anniversary of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, was observed by an unusual program of advertising, decorating and exploitation, in which First National was featured strongly, since Robert Lieber, president of the company, is vice-president of the company controlling the Circle.

Ace Berry, manager, drew all his department heads into conference to make the seventh anniversary a memorable week.

Advertising of the coming event began two weeks in advance with a preponderance of "Dulcy" 24-sheets in the paper used. A check-up of the bill-posting showed 50 downtown locations and numerous boards in the residential, suburban and outlying districts. Heavy newspaper space, far above normal, was used. Some of the newspaper copy was ordered as far as four weeks in advance.

At a heavy expense an unusual decorating program was gone through with. The outer lobby was done over in voluminous folds of gray and gold satins with posters specially prepared by the Circle's artists, replacing the customary two-sheet posters. A huge birthday cake had the pedestal of honor in the center of the lobby. Yes, they had seven candles, but of graduated sizes to symbolize the theatre's growth.

On the mezzanine floor fall colors predominated, obviating the need of re-decorating when the time came to remove the summer seats for autumn usage. Bay trees, cut flowers and palms were there in profusion.

Ben Caldwell, production manager and art director, was responsible for the decorations and Modest Altschuler, symphonic director, prepared the elaborate musical program. For this one week the program included the Taylor-Macey-Hawked Trio, comedians of the vaudeville stage who were making a transcontinental tour.

Newspaper Runs Serialized "Souls for Sale" Story

"Souls for Sale" was published serially in the Pittsburgh Post as a means of exploiting the showing of the film version of the novel at the State theatre. The tie-up with the Post was arranged by Goldwynner Wm. N. Robson and publication of the serial was simultaneous with the showing of the film. A box on the first page of the Post called attention to the serialization of the novel. A two-column cut of a still was used on an inside page.

A window display that collected hundreds of persons was made at the Kaufmann & Baer Co., and was a reproduction of a scene from the picture. A motion picture camera was left in the window all week. Each day at noon movies were taken of the passing crowds and this film was subsequently shown at the State theatre along with "Souls for Sale." All of the figures, the director and the man and woman posing in front of the camera in the window were wax. The window was most attractive; it included an opened book advertising the showing of the film at the State and called attention to its revelations of life in Hollywood. Special cards announced that movies of the crowds would be taken at the noon hour each day. The display was arranged by C. B. Frost of Rowland & Clark assisted by Robson. The Kaufmann & Baer Co. advertised the window in their newspaper display advertising.

GETTING THE TROPICAL ATMOSPHERE INTO THE LOBBY FOR "HUNTING BIG GAME IN AFRICA"
Manager Jack Minnis of the Prince theatre, Tampa, Fla., made effective use of trellises and suitable foliage in preparing his lobby display on "Hunting Big Game in Africa" (Universal)

Around Town With the Independents

By ROGER FERRI

AL KAHN'S Film Classics, Inc., Exchange, releasing Warner pictures exclusively in the Omaha territory, is getting splendid returns. All of the first-run houses in that territory have been signed up on the series. And, by the way, L. A. Getzler, who was formerly Hodkinson manager in Omaha, is now selling Warner pictures in northern Iowa.

CLIFF REED, who is associated with Johnny Walker and Eddie Polo, was in New York this week with prints of the first two releases of the new Eddie Polo series. Matt Radin of Capitol Film exchange of New York purchased the metropolitan rights to the series.

SHERWOOD MACDONALD was another visitor to the metropolis this week. He brought a print of "Bareback," a circus picture that will be State righted.

BUSINESS in the South is apparently very much on the increase for independent distributors, judging from reports that have come from Atlanta and New Orleans. Arthur Bromberg, of Bromberg Attractions, Inc., finds this a season that promises big returns for the independent exchange man with the real product.

AND THE BALL ROLLED ON

When F.B.O. executives set winning pace at big film golf tournament last week

BERT CONLON, who is representing a number of independent producers and distributors on the West Coast, visited New York this week, but returns to Los Angeles next Tuesday. Bert is authority for the statement that Los Angeles is crowded with publicity men, many whom would welcome the chance to return to New York.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the formation of the Richmond Distributing Corporation with Dave Mountain, foreign sales manager for Arrow Film Corporation, as the head, was made this week.

BETTY SCOTT, casting agent for independent producers in the East, leaves next week for the Coast, making the trip by automobile.

IKE CHADWICK of Merrit-Arrow Exchange and the Chadwick Distributing Corporation, of New York, returned this week from a trip that covered every film key city in the country.

DISTRIBUTORS delinquent in the delivery of accessories are having their troubles these days, for local exchangemen are refusing to lift prints when their orders for paper, stills, lobbies or novelties have not been filled.

SAM WARNER is in New York, and will remain in the big town for a month or so.

CHESTER BENNETT is planning a new series of five features, starring Eddie Hearn. The stories will deal with various phases in the life of Daniel Boone.

THREE independent producers are negotiating with the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation for the distribution of their product. Inasmuch as these producers are at present tied up by contract with two other distributors their identity at this time can not be divulged.

PHIL GOLDSTONE has three new pictures, "The White Panther," "The Torrent" and "Do It Now," en route east. Two of them are all-star features, while another stars Madge Bellamy. He is also making a series of four "Snowy" Baker features.

BERT PARKER this week purchased the South American and West Indies rights to the new Eddie Polo series.

THE late summer was far from a good business period in New England, according to Herman Rifkin of Eastern Feature Films Corporation of Boston, who visited Motion Picture News offices this week. Herman says business is now picking up and there is no reason why independents should not have a very profitable season, as he added, "New England exhibitors are real friends of the independent."

IT was definitely ascertained this week that none of the Charles L. Blaney pictures, one of which has been completed, will be released on the independent market.

SI GRIEVER, of the Griever Exchange, Chicago, and one of the best known exchangemen in the market, is after big independent pictures, according to a report that has come East.

BOBBY North is enthusiastically looking forward to the completion of "It's A Boy," which will be released through Weber & North.

NATHAN HIRSH of Aywon Film Corporation this week completed three sales on his "Big Boy" Williams. Nathan, by the way, is having two series of productions produced for distribution through his office.

LOUIS BAUM of Equity is getting to be quite a globe trotter. He recently returned from a trip to Europe. Now along comes word to the effect that he is to make a tour of the exchange centers.

LOUIS AUERBACK announces that Export & Import have acquired the foreign distribution rights to Victor Fisher's all-star production, "Enemies of Children."

NEW HAVEN, Conn., is growing as independent exchange center. Four of the seven independent exchanges of Boston now have established branches in the Elm City. "Bill" Shapiro of Franklin Exchange now has an office there.

HARRY T. NOLAN of Denver was seen around New York's film row this week.

AL LICHTMAN and Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of New York are again partners in the metropolitan distribution of Preferred Pictures. Al bought Sam's franchise for New York late in the summer, but last week the two got together, with the result that an agreement was negotiated whereby Zierler will continue handling Preferred Pictures through his splendidly organized exchange.

THREE foreign agents came here this week with English and French-made photoplays. They sought to effect a connection with a leading independent firm, but in vain. It required less than ten days to convince the visitors that only the very best is wanted from the foreign producers here, for on the 11th day they found themselves on board ship, bound for home.

ABE WARNER is recovering rapidly, according to hospital authorities. However, he will not be able to leave the hospital for several weeks yet.

INDEPENDENT exchangemen are wondering what has happened to the plans of producers who promised numerous series of "specials." One firm announced ten pictures, another 12 and still another 18. So far nothing has been given out relative to the materialization of those picture schedules.

THIS is Independent Month in Missouri. And it is reported to be a successful experiment. The exchanges in St. Louis and Kansas City pooled their interest and conducted a systematic advertising and exploitation campaign that proved its effectiveness in a deluge of booking dates.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Call of the Wild

(Roach—Pathe—6725 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE'S a picture which takes you to the white open spaces revealing backgrounds as vital and picturesque as the action which accompanies them. There is always a note of reality about a story which features a dog. The plot may or may not be arbitrary, but the spectator is not concerned with the ingredients which compose it if his interest is caught by the simple measure of showing the dog continually in the foreground.

Buck, the St. Bernard, carries the burden of this plot on his massive shoulders. We first see him as a Christmas gift to a group of children, after which, growing to maturity, he is stolen and sold into slavery as a sledge dog of the North Country. The theme is based upon the dog's devotion to those who treat him kindly and his hatred for the "man with the club." We follow him mushing over the huge drifts of the Klondike region, learning from the other huskies the art of piloting a sled and becoming hardened to the rigors of the North. He asks no quarter from any of his four-footed rivals—and his chance to settle an argument with a vicious wolf-dog proves his gameness beyond any question.

It is when the story introduces a tenderfoot party of explorers that it loses some of its forcefulness. This may be comedy relief, but it doesn't advance the action nor heighten the thrills. And the players taking part in this episode are certainly shown up by Buck. The conclusion shows him finding a true friend—one for whom he fights to the death—and then the call of the wild beckons and he finds his mate in a she-wolf. The dog shows little evidence of coaching. Indeed he appears almost human, and Jack Mulhall, as the devoted friend, is the only player who succeeds in appearing convincing.

THEME. Dog picture showing St. Bernard's devotion for those who treat him kindly and his hatred for those who are vicious toward him. Adaptation of Jack London's story.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The realism of the action. The naturalness of the dog hero and his four-footed friends. The picturesque exteriors showing a vast expanse of white spaces. The mushing of the dog-teams. The climax when the dog kills his friend's assassin.

DIRECTION. Succeeds in making story realistic. Handles his dogs in highly intelligent manner and with the result that there is little evidence of coaching. Might have eliminated the comedy relief—which destroys the realism while it lasts. Some gaps visible which may be due to faulty editing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up author and adaptation of one of the finest dog stories ever written. Use stills of Buck, the St. Bernard. Ballyhoo with St. Bernard dog and decorate lobby with dog-sled, etc. Play up vivid backgrounds and emphasize that it is a picture of the white, open spaces.

DRAWING POWER. Title and fame of author will draw them in. Good for any locality.

SUMMARY. Interesting dog story—with dog actor carrying the honors. Shows up the players with exception of Jack Mulhall. Mostly a series of scenes of dog-team mushing over snow. Gaps here and there and mediocre comedy relief destroys some of the realism and suspense.

THE CAST

BUCK ..... By Himself
John Thornton ..... Jack Mulhall
Hagin ..... Walter Long
Mercedes ..... Laura Roessing
Charles ..... Sydney D'Albrook
Hal ..... Frank Butler

By Jack London. Directed by Fred Jackman

SYNOPSIS—St. Bernard dog is stolen from children and sold to vicious miner of the North. He is cruelly treated and registers hatred. The dog is sold to mail carriers who use him in dog-team. He suffers various degrees of torture through a change of ownership until he finds his true friend in young prospector. The dog avenges the death of his friend by killing the vicious miner, and the call of the wild guides him to find his mate.

Times Have Changed

(Fox—5082 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE placed William Russell in a hodge-podge domestic mix-up which includes a touch of domestic drama, swings into a slice of small-town atmosphere, follows through with sequences of back-stage life and develops into crook complications with the inevitable pursuit. The star hasn't any opportunity to appear convincing. A little less restraint on his part would have suited the character better. He plays a young army officer who marries a girl of Mayflower ancestry. When they get talking about their respective family trees the domestic complications begin.

That the idea is slight may be appreciated when the gossipy aunt presents the couple with a crazy quilt which eventually gets away from them. The hero leaves town to recover it and accidentally encounters a charming flapper of the community. This, of course, starts the gossips talking. After a sequence of small-town atmosphere, the complications develop and we discover the husband in a mix-up with a couple of actresses. There isn't much head nor tail to it—since the story leads up to a melodramatic climax involving the hero with a gang of diamond thieves who have hidden their loot in the quilt. The pursuit follows and after the difficulties have been straightened out the young couple are established in a home by themselves—away from prying relatives.

There is nothing of consequences in theme or treatment. It is mild and obvious, with little surprise or suspense to hold the interest. The story being slight, the director has been compelled to enliven it with hokum. It should satisfy those audiences who do not ask too much in the shape of screen entertainment. Mabel Julienne Scott makes the wife a sympathetic figure.

The titles are the best points in this feature. They are witty without being wise-cracks.

THEME. Comedy-drama of young married couple, featuring husband leaving the domestic roof for the city and becoming complicated in a mild flirtation or two—all because of wife's relatives who intrude.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The easy performances of Mabel Julienne Scott and Allene Ray. William Russell's effort to appear convincing. The witty titles none of which are forced, but which carry spirited humor.

DIRECTION. Keeps it moving with creditable incident in spite of frailness of plot. Hasn't had much opportunity to supply action, but plays safe by treating story lightly without burdening it with heavy triangle situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title carries comedy angle which can be exploited in teaser campaign. Feature star and the two prinicpals in feminine support. A dancing number would make an effective prologue. Ballyhoo a crazy quilt.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses featuring daily change of bill.

SUMMARY. Slight of plot and always obvious, but made fairly interesting through incident and the good titling. A story of little consequence.

THE CAST

Mark O'Rell ..... William Russell
Marjorie ..... Mabel Julienne Scott
Al Keeley ..... Charles West
Aunt Cordelia ..... Martha Mattox
Uncle Hinton ..... Edwin B. Tilton
Cousin Felix ..... George Atkinson
Irene Laird ..... Allene Ray
Jim Feener ..... Dick La Reno
Gabe Gooch ..... Gus Leonard
Dirty Dan ..... Jack Curtis

By Elmer Davis. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Directed by James Flood.

SYNOPSIS—Young wife permits her gossipy relatives to run her home until she learns eventually that they are driving her husband from her. They are presented with a quilt which becomes lost and the husband goes to the city to recover it. He gets involved in some theatrical atmosphere and runs afoul of a gang of crooks. They are happily established in a home by themselves after the husband returns from the city.

Thundering Dawn

(Universal—6600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is the technical side of this picture which gives it its appeal and because of the atmospheric backgrounds, the rapidity of action in the climax—and the estimable effort made to achieve a note of reality in these settings there is no question that it emerges as a good box-office attraction. The theme is not so substantial. It concerns the regulation South Sea formula showing a rich youth exiling himself from civilization and becoming a derelict, only to be saved when his fiancee arrives with a determination to lift him from the depths.

The motivation is weak because it is poorly established just why the hero went away in the first place. The director has apparently sacrificed reason for punch. We discover a father and son partnership becoming involved in legal and financial difficulties—the father suffering a stroke—and the youth running away to the South Seas. And it isn't well pointed how he manages to become a derelict upon such short notice. There is a mysterious, sinister figure—one never sharply defined—lurking about, who works in collusion with a honky-tonk temptress and a powerful planter to embarrass him. These characters never ring with sincerity because of the theatric touches which involve them. The uncanny professor is given to pedantic speech and the girl is attired too becomingly for such a location.

So we pay attention to the atmosphere and try to forget that the youth had no real reason to sink to the depths inasmuch as his fiancee is faithful. When the latter arrives—attired in a manner suggestive to Fifth Avenue promenaders—the plot develops the familiar premise of showing the planter keeping the hero a derelict in order to covet her. Then comes the rushing climax depicting the rainy season—with a typhoon spoiling the evil designs of the villain and his partners in crime. The hero is rescued by the girl and taken back to civilization after the storm is ended.

The characters here are not so genuine as they are picturesque—but the title writer is somewhat responsible in making the captions too flowery. It is well staged, however, and carries excellent atmosphere—the story effects and miniatures furnishing excitement and suspense.

THEME. Melodrama of rescue from depths of derelict by his fiancee—the story being based upon South Sea formula.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The effective backgrounds, suggesting real atmosphere. The honky-tonk sequences. The storm and subsequent typhoon. The realistic catastrophe when island retreats are wrecked. The creditable acting by Tom Santschi, Winifred Bryson and Anna Q. Nilsson. The suspense in the climax.

DIRECTION. Has given it good production, paying particular attention in providing real and picturesque atmosphere. Allows players to overact with exception of Tom Santschi and Winter Hall. Doesn't establish any sound motive for hero's plight.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put on South Sea prologue, featuring native dances, etc. Decorate lobby accordingly. Put out teaser campaign. Exploit title and have vocalist sing "Mandalay," etc. Feature principal players.

DRAWING POWER. A good audience picture for the average house.

SUMMARY. Carries box-office value, but motivation isn't sound. Obvious once characters are planted. Carries thrilling climax and is well staged to bring out all the atmosphere. Titles too flowery and most of the players overact.

THE PLAYERS

SYNOPSIS—Old respected family is happy until the husband and father gets involved in financial difficulties. Son protects father's name by running away to South Seas where he becomes a derelict. Is tempted by adventuress and sinks to the depths. His fiancee, realizing that everything is not right, hastens to him and rescues him. They return to civilization.

The Fighting Blade

(Inspiration—First National—8500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THAT Richard Barthelmess is going in for the bigger expressions cannot be denied after viewing the impressive and artistic seventeenth century romance, "The Fighting Blade," based as it is upon the dramatic events leading to the overthrow of Charles I, by Oliver Cromwell. It is a distinct departure for the star—who, because of his adaptability for the role of the courageous swordsman, succeeds in establishing himself firmly on the heights.

The Barthelmess of the simple, though rugged homespun drama is thoroughly at home in costume drama. Not since he reached stardom has he had such dramatic opportunities as are presented here. Director John Robertson has permitted him to get the utmost from every scene, dwelling long enough upon the romantic episodes to show a different Barthelmess.

This swashbuckling story holds one in a tight embrace because of its emotional sweep—to say nothing of the spectacular appeal so well established in the gorgeous sets—all of which have been faithfully reproduced by the art director, Everett Shinn. The sponsors have seemingly co-operated in perfect harmony to record accurately a story replete with clashing elements—a story rich in daring exploits, plot, intrigue, adventure and romance.

There are a dozen important characters and none are neglected, though the heroic Dutchman, whose deadly sword swept an earl from his castle and a monarch from his high estate that he might serve his sweetheart and his champion, Cromwell, naturally, is the guiding spirit of this eloquent romance. The episode when the impetuous girl saves the young swordsman by hiding him in her bed is fraught with deep suspense—a colorful moment indeed. The feature carries characteristic pomp and ceremony—suggestive always of the glamour, the regal trimmings and trappings of the period. The sincerity of the portrayals calls for a word of praise. Dorothy Mackaill humanizes the high-strung maid in a manner which thoroughly stamps her as an actress always in sympathy, with her role. She might have stepped forth from an old tapestry during the scene when she dons her bridal robes. She puts the utmost feeling into her study. The other players are genuine—all of them being ideal for the parts which they so ably portray.

THEME. Romantic costume drama of Cromwell period when Charles I was overthrown and the Protectorate established.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The splendor of the settings. The conflict of king and aspirant. The sweep of drama when the swordsman is hidden by his sweetheart. The suspense. The tone and quality of atmosphere and backgrounds. The inspired acting and the excellent direction. The perfect titles.

DIRECTION. Has brought out all the romantic atmosphere of story establishing the glamour of court, the net of intrigue, the pomp and ceremony. The attention given to star, enabling latter to get the utmost out of his emotions. The crashing climax. The dovetailing of scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Calls for high-class presentation. Keep exploitation dignified. Play up title and star and leading players. Feature director.

DRAWING POWER. High class picture for high class houses.

SUMMARY. An exceptionally fine costume drama, well staged, eloquent of period in which it is laid. Well scenarioized, directed, titled and acted.

THE CAST

Karl van Kerstenbroock.....Richard Barthelmess
Thomsine Musgrove .....Dorothy Mackaill
Oliver Cromwell .....Frederick Burton
Roaring Wat Musgrove.....Bradley Barker
Earl of Staversham.....Lee Baker
Viscount Erisey .....Morgan Wallace
Lory Trevor .....Phillips Tead
Viscount Carisford .....Stuart Sage
Charlotte Musgrove .....Allyn King
Joan .....Marcia Harris

By Beulah Marie Dix. Scenario by Josephine Lovett. Directed by John Robertson. Photographed by George Folsey.

SYNOPSIS—Adventurous swordsman comes to England from Holland to avenge his sister's death. Kills the assassin and becomes involved in adventure and intrigue. Enlists in service of Cromwell and leads his forces against Charles I. His life in danger when acting as spy, he is hidden by girl who becomes his sweetheart. She aids him to escape and he returns at head of battalion to dethrone king and rescue his beloved.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

" Cuckoo "

(Universal—One Reel)

WILLIAM WATSON directed this comedy co-starring Neely Edwards and Bert Roach, who are presented in tramp toggery. The hobo "getup" seems to maximize Neely Edwards' comedy value. This reviewer, for one, would like to see him do more of the kind of work he does in this comedy. The tramp role suits him to the letter, and, with a good gag man supplying him with food, he should have no trouble adding to his laurels as a comedian. He is a great bet and worth watching. "Cuckoo" is in one reel—short and snappy. Two tramps, after being shaved, find themselves unable to pay. They work the shaves out, only to meet a beautifully dressed woman who offers them $1.000 if one of them will marry her and leave her immediately after the ceremony. They are taken to a spacious institution that turns out to be an insane asylum. The opportunities for laugh bits are not lost with the big laugh, a final punch in the form of an expose that all the characters, including the "bride," are mentally unbalanced males. A sure-fire comedy, good for any program with a comedy gap.—ROGER FERRI.

" Bringing Up Buddy "

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

THIS is a straight knockabout comedy, Buddy Messenger featured, but with the gentleman playing a Jiggs father type grabbing the spotlight. Buddy gets into all kinds of messes at an informal reception given to friends by his folks. The chicken is served alive, the anniversary cake animated with an abbreviated pyrotechnic display and like bits. Buddy is hefty with his hands and his best showing comes as a student at an academy, where he is sent by his father, following a near-riot at the reception. Buddy arrives at the academy and is informed that he must be initiated. He doesn't object to this. But when they use him for a target he rebels and proceeds to pugilistically inject his own personality into the situation, knocking out his opponents left and right. And to perfect the job he delivers a swift left on the jaw of an indignant tutor. Finally Buddy is told by his fellow-students that he must defeat Terrible Tony if he chooses to lead them. A fight ensues, but an over-enthused audience puts an abrupt end to it, with Buddy en route home on the run, an exasperated superintendent in hot pursuit.—ROGER FERRI.

" The Trail of the Wolf "

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS two-reel Western starring Jay Morley is a corker, with plenty of thrills, a few timely laughs and adventure with the action centered about a stranger, who turns out to be a marshal in search of the murderer of his brother. The story is effectively outlined, with every foot of film being made splendid use of. No exhibitor who wants a diversified program can afford to overlook a picture of this type. The characters are convincing and go about their work entertainingly. It is a splendid outdoor Western melodrama with only one woman character, Gladys McConnell, and she is very good. The photography and direction are flawless. With five exceptions, all the shots are exteriors. There is an element of crookedness in several heavy characters that gives the story enough background to make it stand up favorably with the regular run of Westerns of considerably greater length. George Pyper wrote the story and scenario, while R. N. Bradbury directed and Harold Smith directed.—ROGER FERRI.

" Handy Andy "

(Educational—Two Reels)

"POODLES" HANNAFORD, for years one of the most famous mimics that clowned at the New York Hippodrome, has finally invaded the screen and the latter can be thankful that he has, for he is an artist in every sense of the word. Tuxedo Comedies, Inc., signed him for a series of two-reel comedies that Educational will release. " Handy Andy " is the first. And it is a wow. It is one of the truly funniest comedies it has been the pleasure of this writer to see. Here is a clown who can be funny without the utilizatition of age-worn tactics. He is original. Any comic who can have his back turned to his audience for a couple of hundred feet and hold attention is worthy of being watched, for he is a comer. " Poodles " does just that.

Clowning on the stage and screen are two different things. But " Poodles" is funnier on the silver sheet than he was back of the footlights, and if you know " Poodles "—and who is there who doesn't—you can draw your own conclusions as to his maximum value as a comedian. In " Handy Andy," Hannaford portrays the role of " a handy man " about a rural hostelry. He does everything from bellhopping to mowing the lawn—and does every bit with a finished artistry that puts him in a class by himself. This writer just roared with laughter all through the unreeling of " Handy Andy." And as we write these lines, bearing in mind some of the stunts that we enjoyed so immensely, we cannot keep a smile off our face. " Poodles " doesn't overlook an opportunity. He is surrounded with a good cast. The chap who plays the clerk—we wish we had his name—is superb. He is a Frank Bacon-Lightnin' Bill type. When he and " Poodles " get together hilarious stunts follow that make you laugh until your sides ache. Here's one comedy that no exhibitor can afford to overlook. —ROGER FERRI.

" Golden Gems "

(Educational—One Reel)

E. W. HAMMONS presents this novelty that dwells on famous songs, a modernized revival of old tunes. The tunes are beautifully introduced, pictorially, followed up with the chorus which the chorus sings. The running speed is synchronized with the music which, timed properly, should furnish your program with a novelty that will grip everybody, for the choruses are led up to entertainingly, making an especially big appeal to the older folks, while the younger ones will find much interest in the comedy introduction of the various episodes upon which the songs are constructed.—ROGER FERRI.

" Columbus "

(Pathe—Four Reels)

"COLUMBUS " is an educationally fascinating four-reel treat, treated in entertainment fashion; that is, despite its historic value plus its faithfulness to details, it has drama and a punch that few pictures of greater length lack. This is the first of a series of pictures based on the progress of America, from its founding to the present. And this first release is a document that is preciously vivid, intensifying in interest and with a magnetism that holds one's attention undividedly. The producers of this series have not ransacked the pages of fiction, rather they have dug deep into history with an accuracy the very frankness of which furnishes dramatic stability that is refreshingly out of the ordinary and impressive.

The history of America as the basic theme of American cinematographic entertainment is not new, but substantiation of contentions that facts, based on actual occurrences in the upbuilding of the nation, furnish romance abundant to incorporate into a vehicle of genuine entertainment is made concrete in " Columbus." There is no attempt at exaggeration; it is a straightforward, faithful pictorial record of an explorer's enterprise, punctuated with human interest that one finds in the willingness of Queen Isabelle at self-sacrifice, the confidence of friends in Columbus, the trials, tribulations and mockery that the latter submitted to and the conquest.

Here is that much " different picture " exhibitors have been seeking. Properly exploited, there is no limit to the financial returns on such a picture. " Columbus " strikes this reviewer as a thoroughly perfect showman's picture that will make winners of " lemon " houses. This picture appeals to no one class; it is universal in appeal. It is worthwhile entertainment, educatitonally, fascinating and a peach of a bet for the showman who likes to go out and hustle when he has been given a good thing.

" Columbus," initial release of the " Chronicles of America " series, was produced with the aid and co-operation of the history department of Yale University. The various releases will vary in length from two to four reels. Scenically, this first release is excellent as is also the photography. The direction showed strict adherence to historical facts. Edwin L. Hollywood can feel proud over this work. The cast, as a whole, is very good. It embraces Dolores Cassinelli, Fred Eric, Robert Caillard, Howard Trusedell, Leslie Stowe and Paul McAllister.—ROGER FERRI.

" One Exciting Day "

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a Century Comedy, starring Billy Eagle, with the fun centered about the adventure of our hero among Bolsheviks and at a powder plant. It is a knockabout sort of affair with not one of the stunts new. Our hero, in the clutches of the Reds, is assigned to deliver a " bomb " that delivers him into a peck of trouble once it reaches its destination, after a series of funny adventures wherein the messenger comes within an ace of landing in the clutches of the law. He is captured and put to work in a powder factory and there he proceeds to tangle things up. The factory bits are the best.—ROGER FERRI.

Regional News From Correspondents

Canada

IN making its formal announcement for the fall and winter seasons, Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, offers the claim that it is the only film renting organization in the Dominion which is in a position to book an exhibitor for a complete programme of features, comedies, serials, topical reels, scenics and special short subjects with three changes of programme each week for the 52 weeks of the year.

Regal Films, Limited, which is affiliated with Famous Players Canadian Corp., announces that it is the exclusive Canadian distributor for Metro, Pathe, Warner Bros., Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, Selznick and Betty Balfour pictures.

Regal recently secured the Canadian rights from the Welsh-Pearson Company of London, England, for the new series of Betty Balfour features, the first of which to be released in Canada is "Squibs, M. P."

The announcement is also made that Regal Films, Limited, has bought the Canadian rights for the Hepworth production, "Lily of the Alley," which is to be released shortly in the Dominion. The managing director of Regal Films, Limited, is N. L. Nathanson. The company has branch offices in Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Calgary, St. John and Vancouver.

P. C. Taylor, manager of the Universal branch at St. John, N. B., for the past two years, has been appointed general sales manager for Canadian Universal with headquarters at Toronto by Clair Hague, general manager for Universal in Canada. Mr. Taylor is being succeeded at the St. John office by J. A. Kirkpatrick, who has been at the Toronto Universal office for a number of years.

Armand Rondeau, manager of the Metro-Warner department of Regal Films, Limited, Montreal, is making slow recovery from the stroke of paralysis which he suffered some weeks ago. During his illness, Charles Lalumiere, manager of the Montreal Pathe office for a number of years, is temporarily in charge of Metro-Warner business in Montreal.

J. R. Polansky of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been appointed a salesman on the local staff of Canadian National Film Company, which is the Allen distributing organization at Winnipeg. Mr. Polansky was a clerk with Regal Films at Winnipeg for four years. M. Triller has been added to the Regal staff at Winnipeg.

The Allen theatres in Canada are gradually passing out of the picture under their original names, following the acquisition of the former big Allen chain by Famous-Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto.

The Allen Theatre at Brandon, Manitoba, one of the first of the Allen houses, was no longer called "Allen" after September 22, the name of this long established theatre being changed to "Capitol" to conform with the name of numerous F-P houses throughout the Dominion.

At Vancouver, B. C., the Allen Theatre, one of the finest of the former Allen chain, has been rechristened "Strand" as there is already a Capitol Theatre in Vancouver. The Strand is operated under the management of W. P. Dewees and John Shuberg.

J. B. Sparrow of Montreal, who was elected president of the Canadian Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association at its recent organization convention in Montreal, has long been identified with the theatrical business in Canada, having been identified with his father for a number of years before he entered the business on his own account. Mr. Sparrow is a graduate of the Montreal High School, Bishop's College at Lennoxville and the Royal Military College, Kingston. He joined his father in his large theatre enterprises in Canada and on the death of Mr. Sparrow, Sr., he became head of the J. B. Sparrow Theatrical and Amusement Company, Limited, Montreal, having His Majesty's Theatre, Montreal.

Mr. Sparrow served as an officer in the Canadian Expeditionary Force during the war and when hostilities ceased he became a member of Dominion Rubber System, a Canadian firm affiliated with the United States Rubber Co. A year ago he again entered the theatre business when he took over the Court theatre, Montreal, from Loew's Montreal Theatres, Limited, the latter having got behind in payments to the Sparrow Company, it is stated. For the past two years, Mr. Sparrow has been Director of Religious Education for the Province of Quebec.

James C. Adams, formerly manager of the Capitol Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, has been appointed manager of Loew's Theatre, Montreal, in succession to J. D. Elmes who has returned to the United States, the appointment being made by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation.

The Pantages Theatre, Market Street East, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been leased by a New York syndicate and the house, which has been closed for some weeks back, will shortly be re-opened. The Pantages was built in 1914 with Winnipeg Capital. Perry Wishart, a former film exchange manager of Winnipeg, will be one of those identified with the Pantages under the new auspices. The Pantages has been closed since the decision was reached to offer Pantages vaudeville in conjunction with moving pictures at the Capitol Theatre, which is operated by Famous Players.

C. Curner has reopened the Strand Theatre at Sydney Mines, Nova Scotia, this house having been closed since early summer. The theatre found conditions rather difficult because of local strike troubles but the situation is now clearing.

Ed Seamans, manager of the Strand Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, announces that he will reopen the Strand in October. He has booked the Bert Levey vaudeville circuit for his house in conjunction with moving pictures.

Children's Corner Concerts have been revived at the Carrick Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, for the present season under the direction of Mr. G. N. Foley of Winnipeg. She specializes in the development and presentation of the talent of young children and extra concert features by the small tots are staged each Saturday at the Garrick after the youthful artists have been coached by Miss Foley. These numbers proved to be very popular in the Manitoba Capital last season.

M. McCullough, doorman at the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, for a long period, has moved to Vancouver, B. C., where he has joined the staff of the Strand Theatre, formerly the Allen Theatre, which is now directed by John Shuberg.

Several of Winnipeg's leading moving picture theatres are being redecorated both inside and out. These include the Province, Monarch and Bijou houses. The Bijou is being reopened after being dark for a couple of months.

The St. John Opera House of St. John, N. B., has been re-opened under the control of F. G. Spencer, who has secured a lease of the house, after it had been thoroughly refinished and changed. A complete set of new seats has been installed. The theatre is now under the management of A. L. Gaudet, formerly of the Unique Theatre. The St. John Opera House is one of numerous theatres in the Maritime Province operated by Mr. Spencer.

A. E. Smith opened a brand new picture theatre at Oxford, Nova Scotia, on September 25, which he has called the Capitol Theatre. The new house is a cement structure with handsome front.

An attempt to rob the Globe Theatre, Toronto, managed by Fred Piton, was foiled by Officer John Milling of the Toronto Police Force when he discovered that one of the doors of the theatre had been pried open. This was at midnight and, on entering the theatre, he found one Charles Frohman hiding between the seats. Frohman was wearing canvas gloves and was carrying a flashlight. In the manager's office, a variety of burglar's tools were lying around. Two days' receipts were in the safe but they had not yet been reached. Fred Piton, manager of the Globe, declared that Frohman had been an usher in the theatre seven years ago and knew the layout of the building well. Frohman was later convicted.

The picture theatres of Toronto have joined with the Canadian Red Cross Society in gathering a relief fund for the Japanese earthquake sufferers. The Famous Players Canadian Corporation placed large streamers in all their local houses asking patrons to subscribe to the relief fund and Red Cross Nurses opened stations in the theatre lobbies for the receipt of donations.

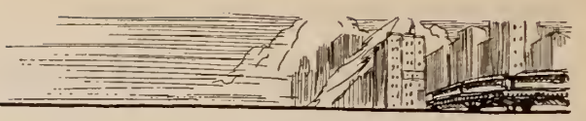
Manager Wilson of the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has installed a brand new orchestra in this fine large house under the direction of E. V. Einarson, a well-known local musician. There are 10 pieces in the new organization.

Activities of Week in Detroit Film Circles

THE resignation of Clyde Wixon, who for the past several years has been manager of the Adams theatre, has caused promotions and changes in managerships in all the Kunsky first-run houses. Malcolm McInnis, formerly manager of the Madison, is now at the Adams; Russell Chapman has gone from the Capitol to the Madison and a Mr. Thorne who, for the past twenty years has been a theatrical performer "back stage" and has been touring recently as a member of the Texas Comedy Four, will assume the house managership of the Capitol.

Constitution Week is being appropriately observed in the Kunsky motion picture houses. The film used is included in the topical screen magazines. It consists of a brief statement of the history of the Constitution and the American's Creed. The music, played by the orchestras is of an appropriate character.

George W. Trendle, general manager of the Kunsky Enterprises, left for New York. He will look over the big specials now running in the Metropolis.



Theatre thieves are now operating in Adrian, Mich. The Croswell theatre safe was taken from the office to the auditorium and then blown open. The loss is reported at $1,000, which was covered by insurance.

"Red" Brady, owner and manager of the Exhibitors' Supply Co., celebrated the fourth anniversary of the founding of his business on September 15. Brady is the state distributor for Motiograph De Luxe projectors, Fort Wayne Generators and other supplies.

Horseback riding is now becoming popular with Detroit film men. G. W. Trendle, Art Elliott, T. Moule and several others may be seen early in the morning exercising their equestrian skill in Palmer Park and its environs. Trendle has just purchased his own horse, a six-year-old chestnut "Pal."

Chicago

THE array of big features being offered to the Chicago public this fall is doing much to stimulate the public interest in motion pictures and increase theatre attendance, not only in the Loop but throughout the territory reached by the Chicago daily papers and served by local exchanges. "Merry Go Round" opened at Balaban & Katz's Roosevelt, Monday, following the four weeks' engagement of "Ashes of Vengeance." "Potash and Perlmutter" is having its local premiere showing at the Chicago; "The Covered Wagon" is completing its exceptionally long run at the Woods theatre, where it will make way for "Sacramouche," Metro's Rex Ingram picture, on Sunday night. At Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum, "Rupert of Hentzau," the Selznick feature which is heralded as one of the year's big offerings, opened Sunday following five weeks' showing of "Human Wreckage," and at McVicker's Gloria Swanson's "Zaza" is the attraction. At the Harris theatre, "If Winter Comes" ends its run on October 1, and will be followed in this house by "Monna Vanna," the Fox attraction. Harold Lloyd's "Safety Last" is closing its eighteen weeks' engagement at Orchestra Hall.

A change in the management of Pathe's Chicago office will bring back to Film Row one of the most popular and experienced of film men, Fred Aiken, who, after having been connected with other lines of business for the past two years, will take charge of the Pathe exchange on October 1, when Manager H. O. Martin will step out. The latter has not made any announcement as to his future plans, but it is known that he has several fine offers in view and it would not surprise Film Row to see him remain with Pathe, although not as manager of the Chicago exchange. In any event, Mr. Martin will take a vacation lasting several weeks before resuming active work. It is understood during the twenty-two months he has been manager of Pathe, which, by the way, is the longest period any man has held this job, that he has materially increased the business and put the exchange on a highly profitable basis.

S. A. Marcus is opening the Grand theatre at Lincoln, Illinois, which had been closed for the last year. It is understood Mr. Marcus will institute a policy of pictures and vaudeville.

Among the new records hung up by pictures recently is that of "Circus Days," which broke all house records at the iLncoln Square theatre, Decatur, where the front doors were also broken by the throng of youngsters crowding in to see the matinee, and the Fort Armstrong, at Rock Island, which reports the biggest business in its history with this feature.

As a result of arbitration of differences between Messrs. Stoolman and Pyle, of the Rialto Theatre Co., Mr. Pyle will continue to hold the presidency of that company.

Walter Fleugel, who recently took over the Capitol theatre at Pekin, from Manager Fredericks, has taken charge of this house in addition to the Empire.

Eugene Saunders, of the Palace theatre, Harvard, was a Chicago visitor this week. Elaborate musical presentations are now the order of the day at the Stratford theatre, and among the operatic stars signed up by Mrs. Henoch for these presentations, are Mila Luka, baritone, Orville Rennie, tenor, and Charlotte Van Einkel, soprano.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" established what is believed to be the world's record this week, when it was shown at fifty-five theatres in the city of Chicago and its immediate suburbs for a solid week. The houses showing the picture included thirteen northside theatres, eighteen southside, twelve on the northwest side, six on the westside and six in the nearby suburbs. Manager Simmons is justly proud of the record made by the sales force which he heads, in breaking the record previously held by "Over the Hill," which Clyde Eckhardt, while Fox manager at Chicago, put into forty-three theatres in one week. W. F. Seymour, eastern and central divisional sales manager, and Jack Edwards, director of publicity for Hodkinson, co-operated with Manager Simmons in this big achievement. One of the biggest newspaper advertising campaigns ever put over in this territory, heralded the showing of the picture in the fifty-five theatres. Quarter and half-page ads led up to full-page ads in the Sunday papers, which were followed up by generous ads throughout the week.

It is understood that Walter Nealand, popular exploiteer of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Chicago exchange, will continue asa member of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan staff, although a recent general order from the New York office, separated publicity men throughout the country from the payroll.

G. A. McGuire, editor, is at the Chicago Rothacker laboratory with the negative of "Thundergate," directed for First National by Joseph DeGrasse. As soon as he can get back to Hollywood, he will manipulate the editorial scissors for Clarence Badger, who starts October 1 on "The Swamp Angel," with Colleen Moore.

The sudden death of Isador Natkin, veteran film salesman, at Maryland, Wisconsin, last week, was a shock to his many friends on Film Row and exhibitors throughout the territory. He had a host of friends in the industry, with which he had been connected for many years, having been an exhibitor in the days of the five-cent houses on Halstead street, and a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Executive Committee as early as 1913. The funeral was held from a chapel on West Fullerton Avenue on Friday, many film men and exhibitors being present to pay the last tribute, including his brother-in-law, Bill Weinschenker, of Greiver Productions.

Leading exhibitors and many players of the speaking stage attended the private viewing of "Zaza," at the Playhouse on Friday, as guests of H. B. Warner, who stars in this picture with Gloria Swanson. Mr. Warner at the present is playing in "You And I," at the Playhouse. Among the prominent theatrical people noted in the audience were: Violet Heming, Arthur Byron, of the Warner Company; Ferdinand Gottshalk, who plays the part of the duke in the picture; Ann Pennington, Lew Fields and others.

Members of the American Farm Bureau, which held a convention in Chicago last week, spent several hours in the Acme Motion Picture Company's studios, where they viewed educational pictures and were shown the plant. Subsequently the plans for circuits of programs of farm pictures, to be shown all over the United States, were made. Oscar E. Bradfute, of Xenia, Ohio, is president of the organization. The organization also passed resolutions protesting at the portrayal of farmers in motion picture as "hicks," declaring the farmer today is an automobile owner, business man and up-to-date citizen.

A private showing of "The Fifth Year," a nine-reel film portraying Russian life during the period 1922-23, was held at the Pathe Projection room on Tuesday. Many prominent citizens and a number of film men attended the preview of the picture, which will be shown at Orchestra Hall on October 6.

The Lydia theatre at Cicero, Illinois, after being closed for some time, has reopened with pictures and vaudeville.

The Woodlawn theatre at Evansville, Indiana, is having its seating capacity enlarged by three hundred seats and is being redecorated throughout. The house is remaining open while the work is in progress.

Universal's Chicago exchange spent its portion of the prize money in the chapter play contest, in defraying the expense of one joyful evening, a box party at the Illinois, where "The Clinging Vine" held the attention of the "U Go-Getters" during the early part of the evening followed by a dinner dance with Peggy Wood as the guest of honor. Some of the Universal salesmen were exhibiting beautiful watches, won in the contest.

A trade showing of "Pioneer Trails," Vitagraph's feature, was held at Aryan Grotto last Tuesday, and brought out one of the largest exhibitor audiences of the season. The popular Woodlawn theatre orchestra furnished the incidental music.

News of Week in Cincinnati

THE recent establishment of a film inspector's school in the Cincinnati exchanges, has met with great success. So much so that some of the exhibitors who have been receiving some of the film inspected by the school graduates have labored under the impression that at times it was a brand new print. This is only a small part of the improvement contemplated in local exchanges by the Film Board of Trade. Numerous others are to take place which will help to facilitate matters in the film building to a great extent and bring about a better understanding between the exhibitors and exchange offices.

Much of the credit for these improvements should go to W. A. Kaiser, whose efforts as chairman of the Film Board have at all times been towards the betterment of conditions in local film circles.

"The Covered Wagon" closed its most successful run at the Grand Opera House last Saturday. As a picture attraction it holds the record in attendance at that house or any other house that has ever played pictures at top prices in Cincinnati.

Arthur Warde, representative of Metro, arrived in Cincinnati the other day to make arrangements for the opening of "Scaramouche" at the Cox theatre, Sept. 30.

Much comment is being expressed over the wonderful lobby which Howard Frankel has constructed at the Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio. The picture playing there is D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose," and the entire decorative scheme is in accordance with the atmosphere prevailing in the picture.

G. H. Moesser, of New York, has joined the local Metro sales force and will start out on the road to meet the exhibitors and show them his fall product.

Albert P. Kaufman, formerly of the Griffith and Universal forces, has been appointed publicity director for Metro in the local territory. Mr. Kaufman will divide his time between the Cincinnati Metro exchange as well as the Detroit office. He will assume his duties at once.

Bill Clark, genial press agent for the Libson interests, has departed for his vacation. While he is away, Harry Martin is taking care of his work.

W. C. Bachmeyer, district manager for Metro, has just returned from Pittsburgh, where he attended to the opening of the new Loew theatre in that city.

Bill Danzinger, Paramount exploiteer, has been devoting the greater part of his time helping the exhibitor in the smaller towns. As Bill explains it, it can be readily seen why. As a rule the theatres in the larger or key towns invariably employ a press agent. That to a large extent does away with the services of an exploitation man. In the smaller towns, however, the exhibitor as a rule is not an experienced showman and does not appreciate the value of an experienced press agent; consequently, he more than any one else needs the urgent co-operation of the competent exploiteer.

A. S. Junghams, West Virginia salesman for Metro, made his monthly appearance at the Metro office last week.

St. Louis

CAN a man be classified as a burglar when apparently his sole purpose for breakiing into a picture theatre in the wee sma' hours in the morning is to learn the trick of operating a motion picture machine?

That's the question that the police of East St. Louis are endeavoring to answer. At first the detectives were sure they were on the trail of a burglar, but a little sleuthing developed that nothing had been taken from the Little Broadway theatre, Thirteenth street and East Broadway, the owner of which had complained to the police that his show-house had been burglarized.

The motion picture machine bore evidence of frequent use after the regular operator had departed. Nothing else in the theatre was disturbed.

"The Spirit of St. Louis," produced by the Rothacker Film Corporation for the City of St. Louis was given its world premiere at the Grand Central theatre, Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, Wednesday morning, September 19. The picture depicts the history of St. Louis from its foundation by Laclede.

"Madsaluse" by Carit Etlar, a Danish motion picture of wonderful scenery and beautiful romance, was shown on the Statler Hotel Roof Garden, St. Louis, Wednesday evening, September 19, for the benefit of the National Convention of the Danish Brotherhood in America It was the first time the picture was shown in America.

William Goldman, owner of the Kings and Queens theatres, returned from New York City, Saturday, September 22. While East he conferred with Jimmy Grainger of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan productions relative to the new house on Grand boulevard at Morgan street which Goldman contemplates erecting. The new picture palace will be the St. Louis first-run house for the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan productions, and the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan organization has consented to purchase a substantial block of the building bonds in return for the first run contract. In the meantime Kings serves as the first-run house for the G.-C. films.

G. E. McKean, manager of the local Fox exchange, and his son Claude, manager of the Educational department, spent three days in Springfield, Ill.

George Cohen has sold the Empress theatre, Springfield, Ill., to L. Douglas of South America. Douglas came to America but a few weeks ago.

Jack Heffler, owner of the Orpheum theatre, Quincy, Ill., and U. M. Dailey, formerly salesman for the F. B. O. and other exchanges in St. Louis, have perfected plans for a $200,000 hotel and theatre building in Fort Madison, Ia. The new show-house will have accommodations for approximately 850 and will be among the finest houses in that section. Construction will start within ninety days.

George Lawrence, of Halls, Tenn., has opened the Lawrence Opera House at Humboldt, Tenn. It will play pictures with occasional road shows.

Walter Light until recently with the Fox organization in Kansas City, Mo., has returned to St. Louis. He is undecided as to his future plans.

C. D. Hill, of the Hodkinson exchange, visited Quincy, Ill., and Springfield, Ill., during the week. Andy Dietz, formerly booker for the local Pathe exchange, has been promoted to the sales force and is now traveling Northern Illinois.

J. L. Lynum, of Whitehall, Ill., was a visitor of the week. Don Davis, Associated Exhibitors' manager, spent much of the week out in the territory.

Henry Lowry, of Highland, Ill., was seen at the local Paramount office. Other callers were Joe Hewitt, of Robinson, Ill., and J. Roman, of Benald.

Bill Beynum, of the Opera House, Divernon, Ill., is back from a tour of Europe. He reports that he had a very pleasant time while outside the so-called jurisdiction of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"Buns" Derby is selling "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Common Law," and other Select pictures in Southern Illinois.

Visitors of the week included: Oscar Wesley, Gillespie, Ill.; Mrs. Pert, Gillespie, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; George Newsume, Mount Vernon, Ill.; Mike Doyle, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, Poplar Bluffs, Mo.

Leo Keiler of Paducah, Ky., and his associate, Lee Goldberg, were visitors to St. Louis during the past week. Joe Hewitt of Robinson, Ill., was another caller.

Charlie Werner of Metro is back from a tour through Southeast Missouri. He reports that the cotton crop outlook for that vicinity is very good and much prosperity is expected.

Roy Dickson, Select manager, also spent a great deal of the week out in the territory.

Visitors of the week included: Jim Reilly, Princess theatre, Alton, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin; Charles Barber, Tilden, Ill.; William Schuckert, Opera House, Chester, Ill., and C. E. Luttrell, Majestic theatre, Jacksonville, Ill.

Jack Underwood of Enterprise visited Fulton, Columbia and Jefferson City during the past week.

Harry L. Pitner has joined the forces of the St. Louis office of First National. His territory covers Southern Illinois and Southern Missouri.

M. G. Kennedy has resigned as salesman for First National. He will make his future connection known shortly.

Harry Weiss, Manager First National, spent three days last week in Chicago attending a sales conference with General Manager Eschmann and District Manager Seery.

Billy Weiss, formerly salesman for First National, is now with Skouras Brothers' St. Louis Film exchange.

R. C. Seery, District Manager First National, of Chicago, spent Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 4 and 5, in the St. Louis office.

Cleveland

J. S. McLEOD, assistant general manager for Metro, spent the week just passed, in the Cleveland office. McLeod is making a tour of the leading exchanges in the country—just to get that personal touch with local conditions.

A. A. Schmidt was in town all day last Monday. He got in in the morning, and left that same night for Chicago, en route for California. Schmidt made no announcement of his future connections.

H. B. Borgias, who has been service manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange for the past six years, left Saturday for New York, to take on new duties in the home office, under General Manager E. J. Smith. Borgias and Smith worked together when Smith was manager of the Cleveland of the local exchange, some three years ago.

Dan Stearns, who has been on the Universal selling force for some time, has been promoted to the position of service manager, succeeding H. B. Borgias, newly appointed member of the home office staff.

Mrs. H. M. Herbel, wife of the Universal central district manager, and better known as Gladys Walton, is living at the Hotel Cleveland with her husband, who is making Cleveland his headquarters. Mrs. Herbel has retired from professional life—temporarily, we hope—and is enjoying the calm of private citizenship.

James R. Sheldon, special representative out of the First National home office was in Cleveland for a few days last week, going over matters with local division manager H. A. Bandy.

J. A. Keerpel, central Goldwyn division manager, has had Buffalo added to the chain of exchanges under his jurisdiction. Keerpel now covers Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati.

Eddie Carrier, well known all over the country by reason of the unusual exploitation stunts he has pulled in connection with Goldwyn pictures, has left Cleveland, where he has been in charge of Goldwyn publicity for more than a year, to become assistant general manager of the Ascher circuit in Chicago.

The Cleveland Goldwyn office will dispense with its exploitation department. J. A. Keerpel, Goldwyn division manager, just back from New York says that Goldwyn pictures are strong enough to stand alone.

The home office of the Standard Film Service Company will be located on the second floor of the Film Exchange Bldg. on and after October 1st. Standard Film Service Company has been in the Sloan Bldg. for the past six years. This move will leave all branches of the organization under one roof. The Cleveland office of the organization, under the management of Maurice Lebensberger, has occupied space on the sixth floor of the Film Exchange Bldg. since the first of September. With the coming of the Standard Film Service Company into the Film Bldg. every film exchange in the city is in that building, with the exception only of United Artists. This company maintains its offices on Prospect Ave. and East 14th Street.

Another romance has developed in local film circles. Helen Bell, of the F.B.O. office, and Harold Dunn, salesman for F.B.O. are to be married on October 6th. Prenuptial entertainment for Miss Bell includes a Miscellany Shower arranged for her last week by several of her girl associates, and a luncheon at the Winton Hotel, at which the hostesses were Carol Sladdin of the Progress Pictures Company, Gertrude Sledz of W. W. Hodkinson and Miss Van Owen.

The Film Board of Trade of Cleveland held one of its semi-annual parties last Monday. This one took the form of a chicken dinner at Willie's on the Lake Shore. Needless to say there was 100 per cent attendance, and everybody had a good time. All business was taboo.

Joe Trunk of the Dome Theatre, Youngstown, and John Kessler of the Alhambra, Canton, were both important guests of the local First National exchange this week, where they signed up for practically the entire fall and winter product.

A. G. Constant, who owns and operates the American theatre at East Liverpool and the Strand at Steubenville, was a guest in the Cleveland Film Exchange Bldg. last week. Among other things, Constant arranged to show First National pictures at his houses during the coming season.

T. B. Tonner, manager of the Rex theatre, Steubenville, took time out of his vacation in Atlantic City, to postcard friends in Cleveland exchanges, saying that the New Jersey Board Walk is just as good as the pictures have it.

Washington

MANAGER LOUIS J. FOSSE, of the Shubert-Belasco, Washington, which is under indefinite lease to the Marcus Loew-Metro organization, for the world premiere of "Scaramouche," announces that at the expiration of the Loew contract, Carl Laemmle of Universal, acting through Manager H. S. Brown, of the Washington Universal exchange, will take over the house for an indefinite Southern premiere of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

J. C. DeWalt, manager of the Hodkinson exchange, has been transferred again to the West. George A. Faulkner, former manager, and more reeently manager at the Hodkinson Buffalo branch, was sent back here, taking over the office last Monday morning. Last Christmas he was with Famous Players' Canadian exehange at Vancouver, and at New Year's he was in Washington, relieving S. A. Galanty, being in turn relieved by DeWalt of Oklahoma City, and ordered to Buffalo.

The York theatre, Baltimore, which ran Saturdays only during the summer, began its regular daily schedule of performances Saturday.

Reeent callers on film row, Washington, ineluded E. G. Hanson of Charleston, West Virginia; S. M. Sachs, of the Masonic theatre, Clifton Forge, Va.; I. P. Weiss, Weiss theatre, Emporia, Va.; W. J. Riehards, Riverside, Greensboro, N. C.; R. Mason Hall, Grand, Norfolk, Va., who went on to Ohio, visiting the Cincinnati exchanges; William Dalke, operating a ehain of five theatres in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, from Woodstock, Va.; Col. Al C. Frey, of the Fairfax theatre, Culpeper, Va.; John W. Hamilton, of the new Hamilton, in Martinsville, Va.; Harry Bernstein, of the Wells theatres, Norfolk, Richmond and other points, who viewed the Ambassador opening with Jake Flax, E. J. Martin, George Faulkner, Harry Hunter, F. L. McNamee. Miss Conradi, of the Film Board; George Roberts, A. Dreisner and other film row regulars.

H. M. Wolfe has severed his connection with the technical staff of War Department theatres, Washington, and has entered the sales and technical service of A. Dreisner of the Washington Theatre Supply Company. He is now in southern Virginia for Mr. Dreisner.

Rudolph Berger, acting for Ritz productions, was in town some ten days ahead of his ehief, J. D. Williams.

Manager George Roberts, of the Fox exchange, announced that the private showing of "The Silent Command" at the National Press Club, planned originally for September 15, had been postponed until Sunday, September 23, at the explicit request of President Coolidge. Guests of the Press Club Sunday, besides the President and Mrs. Coolidge, were selected from many leaders in the nation's life.

Hal Roach, Pathe purveyor of eomics, came to Washington last week as the guest of Manager R. C. Robin of Pathe exchange and Harry M. Crandall, operating the Metropolitan, new Ambassador and a flock of other theatres. Arriving at midnight, Thursday, Roach paid a visit to the new Ambassador theatre on Friday afternoon, before proeeeding to New York.

Harry O. Schwalbe, secretary-treasurer of Associated First National Pictures, was the principal caller Thursday at the Mather building offiee of First National. He inspected the new Ambassador, later.

J. D. Williams, president of Ritz productions, was observed parked on an easy sofa with J. D. Pryor, of Danville, Va. Perhaps the Pryor boys received the low down on how to fill their new National at Richmond and their Danville theatres with bookings of Williams' Ritz productions.

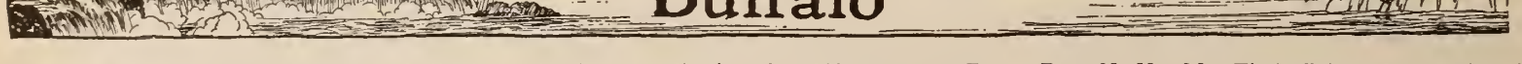
C. L. Claflin, of the Southern Motion Pieture Corporation, local Motiograph distributors, has been in and around Chicago the past two weeks, returning last Saturday. W. E. McCarten, his assistant, has been doing some filming and sales promotion in the southern end of the territory.

Manager H. S. Brown, of Universal, announces the appointment of George L. Lockwood as a member of the Washington sales staff, replacing Ed Heiber. Heiber has been transferred to Philadelphia, where Jules Levy has made him his assistant general sales manager, in eharge of the Universal novelty comic, "The Andy Gump-Ok, Min" series.

The young men and women of the Paramount shipping-inspeetion rooms tendered a jolly birthday party, on Saturday evening, September 23, to Mrs. Henderson, of the inspection service, at her residence in Alexandria.

Harry Williams has recently been imported from the Charlotte, N. C., sub-exehange of Paramount, to be a shipper in the Washington shipping room of Paramount.

W. A. Kaiser, president of an Ohio film board of trade, was a recent District of Columbia visitor along film row.



Mayer Jaekson of Baltimore is eonsidering the purchase of a magnificent munieipal organ for the new war memorial being erected on City Hall Plaza, Baltimore.

T. J. Smallwood, popular Lovettsville, Va., exhibitor, is the recipient of condolenee on his frame theatre having been wiped out, sans insuranee, in the recent $20,000 fire there.

Guy LaFayette Wonders, operating the Rivoli, Baltimore, aceompanied by his new golf kit, left the Monumental City last week, to participate in the Bayside, L. I., Fall Film Golf Tournament at the BelleClaire Country Club. Guy is rated, in Baltimore, some golfer.

The beauty of the theatre having impressed itself upon all who have seen it since its formal opening last Thursday night, Crandall's Ambassador theatre at Eighteenth street and Columbia road, northwest, will take its place as one of the most important units in the conduct of the public service and educational work which is conduеted on behalf of the Crandall organization by Mrs. Harriett Hawley Loeher. The new playhouse, by virtue of its location and the important residential section of whieh it constitutes the hub is an ideal place for the pursuit of the type of work that is under Mrs. Locher's direction.

Harry Mann, exploitation export for F. B. O., was in Washington last week in eonferenee with Nelson B. Bell, director of advertising and publicity for the Crandall theatres, on the matter of "selling" Mrs. Wallace Reid's "Human Wreekage."

Buffalo

VINCENT R. McFAUL manager of Shea's Hippodrome, eommencing Monday, October 1, has arranged for a big fashion promenade to be staged by the Hengerer department store models who will parade behind the "Hipp" footlights in the latest modes from the Rue de la Paix and Fifth Avenue. Milady delights in these fashion shows and the Hipp matinee business is swe'led to record proportions. Mr. McFaul puts on a fashion revue every spring and fall. Another event of importance the coming season will be the showing of "If Winter Comes," the week of Oetober 21, following an elaborate exploitation eampaign.

There is going to be another important change along film row soon. Watch for it. We'll tell you about it soon.

J. A. Korpel, new Goldwyn district manager, was in town this week to confer with Tom Brady, local manager. J. Stanley, auditor, is spending a few days at the Buffalo exehange. Mr. Brady announces that the new Strand in Elmira opened last Monday with "Three Wise Fools."

Clayton P. Sheehan, district manager for Fox, with headquarters in Buffalo, has announced the engagement of his sister, Estelle, to Dr. William F. Gallivan. Mr. Sheehan also announces the signing of contraets for the entire Fox works by Ned Kornblite in Binghamton and M. A. Shea of Jamestown, Auburn and Bradford. Harold P. Dygert, of Associated Theatres, Inc., controlling a chain of houses in western New York, has also submitted an application for 100 per cent Fox product. W. J. Kupper, manager of the Fox Pittsburgh exchange, was in Buffalo last week end. Mr. Sheehan has now arranged the following territories for the sales staff: Buffalo, J. Emerson Dickmon; Rochester, Tom McDermott; Syracuse, Bill Rowell; Southern Tier, Bill Mahoney.

The local chapter of the L. O. O. N. in Fairport, N. Y., has completed negotiations with Associated Theatres, Inc., owners of the Clark building in that city, for the lease of the hall for lodge purposes this season.

Harry Dixon, of F. B. O., appeared on the streets on the Jewish New Year with a new low erown derby. Every one wished him a Happy New Year and some one sent him a New Year card printed in Jewish. Harry has purchased a soft hat—with a high crown. It goes well with his new false teeth.

One of the surprises of the week along film row was the resignation of Gene Markens from the First National sales staff. Gene has been a star salesman for First National for lo, these many moons. Edwin Walsh is now a salesman in addition to being booker. Ed bought a new Buick sedan a few weeks ago. Now it is a wreck. It skidded on the Transit Road and ended top down in a ditch.

Harry Levy and Simon Tisehoff, of Rochester, have purehased the Faculty theatre in Caledonia, N. Y. The house has been run for the past three years by Blouvett & Merritt, of Le Roy, N. Y. Mr. Tischoff has also purchased the Plaza in Rochester from John Novak.

Buffalo has lost a good exploitation man. Roland G. McCurdy, who has been in charge of this department at the Universal exehange, has been transferred to Atlanta office. Probably "U" wants to wake up folks down below the Mason-Dixon line. Charlie Goodwin, who has covered the Rochester territory for Universal for several years, has been brought in to cover the Buffalo city territory on features. Frank Moynihan has been sent to Rochester.

The first anniversary of the new Strand theatre in Niagara Falls is being celebrated this week. A. C. Hayman is showing "Hollywood," a number of fine short subjects and offering in addition an exeellent music program.

E. O. Weinberg may soon beeome manager of one of the Universal theatres. At least Eddie was called into New York last week for a talk with the head of that department in the Universal offices.

Herman Lorence has augmented the orchestra in the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and engaged Arthur Fleury of Buffalo as the eonduetor. They do say as how the Bellevue is drawing more folks than Billy Sunday down in the Cataract City.

J. P. O'Connor, of Peoria, Ill., has arrived in Buffalo to join the Paramount sales staff, according to an announeement by "Diek" McManus, branch manager.

Albany

EMPLOYEES in the Albany First National exchange here met this week and organized the First National Club, the first organization of its kind among the film exchanges of the city. It is proposed to have screenings of late releases each Tuesday evening, while later on there will be a number of dinners, dances and similar affairs held. A committee consisting of Edward Lewin, Mrs. Paula Thomas, Ella Rourke and Renee Craven, has been named to perfect further organization. A president will be elected in the near future. The idea of the club is entirely social and will probably result in similar organizations among employees of the other exchanges.

G. A. Woodard, manager of the Fox exchange here, and R. S. Smith, represented the Albany office at the recent funeral of Frank A. Tierney. A floral cross, six feet in height, was received from the Fox office.

Charles Seasonske, one time of Watertown, but now of Johnstown, was shopping along Albany's film row the past week.

Frank V. Bruner, manager of the local Pathe exchange, is mourning a badly smashed automobile resulting from a collision near Albany last Tuesday night. It is figures that $300 will just about meet the cost of the repairs.

Tom Lee is back in town after an absence of several years, returning with the new Capitol theatre, which is due to open as a Shubert house on October 1. Mr. Lee used to be in Albany when he served as treasurer under Charlie Robinson, who opened the Grand.

No settlement has yet been reached between the theatre owners of Albany and the operators. Matters are still pending and a settlement will probably be brought about within the next week.

Thousands who visit the Clinton Square theatre in Albany know the young lady in the ticket office at "Alice." She came there five or six years ago under Fred Elliott, and has many friends. From next Saturday night, Alice will no longer be associated with the theatre. She is to be married that evening.

Among the exhibitors in town during the past week were Myer Schine, of Gloversville; Mrs. D. S. Regan, of the Star, in Greenwich; Mrs. E. Walton, of the Happy Hour, in Lake Placid; Elmer Griffin, of Kinderhook, and Rae Candee, of the Gaiety, in Utica.

Robert Landry, of Ogdensburg, announces that he will remodel his house, known as the Grand, in Malone, during the coming month.

With the Lyceum in Champlain, N. Y., once more in full swing, the proprietor, W. S. Kennedy, is a busy man. Mr. Kennedy, aside from operating the theatre, is postmaster, express agent and custom house officer.

The Newton Falls Paper company, which operates a theatre there, three nights a week, has just booked the Universal features for the coming year.

L. L. Connors, owner of the Victory, in Cambridge, N. Y., was elected second vice-Commander of the American Legion, of New York State, at the recent Saratoga gathering.

Jack Mathews is rapidly recovering at Saratoga Springs from an attack of rheumatism and will shortly be back to the Plattsburg theatre.

The many friends of Frank V. Bruner, local manager of the Pathe exchange, extend their sympathy in the loss of his wife last week.

The mystery surrounding the loss of a film known as "Scrap Iron" by the local First National exchange, and which was reported to the police, has been cleared through the discovery of the film at a nearby fruit store where it had been left by mistake.

After being thoroughly repainted and remodeled, the Graylin, in Gouverneur, N. Y., is due to reopen in the near future.

From all accounts "Vic" Warren, owner of the Strand, in Massena, is doing about the best business of any of the exhibitors in all northern New York. Such is the word which is brought back each week by the road men.

The theatre at Bolton Landing has closed for the season. George Peterson has opened his house, The Star, at Mineville, for four nights a week.

One of the finest fellows in northern New York is E. F. Gaylord, who runs the Amusement Hall at Cranberry Lake. One feels perfectly at home with Mr. Gaylord at once, and the man's personality is probably responsible for the excellent business which the house is enjoying.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Richardson, who have been running the Strand at Schroon Lake, will leave in the near future for Florida, where they will spend the winter.

Film salesmen covering northern New York were given a surprise this week when the road was opened from Loon to Tupper Lake. This road has been three years in making.

Julius Boxhorn, the new leader of the Mark Strank orchestra, Albany, has already scored a hit with his audiences. In fact, Mr. Boxhorn is being applauded even before the orchestra starts in.

E. Barbey is now the leader of the orchestra in the Strand theatre, in Carthage. He was formerly connected with the orchestra at Crandall's theatre, in Washington, D. C.

Soloists will return to the Mark Strand, in Albany, during the coming month. They were eliminated during the summer season in cutting down the overhead.

The Park, in Utica, owned by Goldstein brothers, is sporting a brand new sign, while the house is being equipped with a $28,000 organ. The house is operating during the improvements.

S. N. Burns, salesman for the Pathe exchange, did some clever work in Utica last week in exploiting "Pioneer Trails." Real Indians off the reservation, a couple of covered wagons, and a band were used in the street parades.

H. D. Tann, owner of the theatre in Hammond, N. Y., and incidentally the only house in the town, doesn't let much of the long green slip through his fingers. While Mr. Tann operates the projection machine, his wife runs the ticket office and his two daughters act as ushers.

Picture theatres at Albany will find some competition from now on with the opening of the Capitol, a Shubert house, given over to the spoken drama. Robert Forbes, of New York, will manage the theatre, which will open with "Blossomtime." Aside from burlesque and vaudeville the picture theatres of the city have had no opposition from the legitimate stage in several years.

Edgar B. Haines, salesman for Universal out of here, is a mighty fine photographer and at the same time, besides selling pictures, helps many an operator in adjusting his shutters. Each week when Mr. Haines returns here, he brings not only contracts, but some excellent photographs taken along his route through the scenic north.

A new marquee is being erected by John Angelo, owner of the Family theatre in Utica. In fact, the entire house is being remodeled and upon completion will rank as one of the finest in the city.

The Lyric, in Utica, has just about finished its remodeling, which will bring about an extra 300 seats. The house is owned by Vincent Daniels.

Kansas City

AFTER being closed since last May, the Strand theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, opened Sunday night with Jack Roth, manager of the Apollo theatre, as the new manager. The Strand lobby has been remade and is effectively lighted. New fixtures and decorations and a $10,000 Hope-Jones organ have been installed.

It was a jubilant delegation that welcomed Mae Busch in the union station at Kansas City Monday night. The star, with Raymond Griffith, R. A. Flynn and William Walling, was on her way to New York to co-star with Hobart Bosworth in "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model."

The following changes in management, erection of new houses and remodeling of theatres in the Kansas City territory have been announced:

Crystal theatre, Topeka, Kans., taken over by the Hostettler Amusement Company; new theatre (yet to be named) under construction at Eighteenth and Vine streets, Kansas City, by Homer Eblon, seating capacity 1,000, Powers projection machines and Minusa screen; Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mo., reopened by S. E. Wilhoit; Star theatre, Nevada, Mo., redecorated by Sears-Jones Circuit.

The general contract and lease of the Westmoreland theatre, excavation of which now is under way in Waldo, Mo., a suburb of Kansas City, will be let next week, according to W. C. Gumm of the Waldo Realty Co. The house will be a community theatre.

Motion pictures of Campfire Girls of Kansas City at their annual camp at Grandview, Mo., were shown at the Pantages theatre, Kansas City, all this week and received liberal newspaper mention. On the screen the picture shows the routine work of the girls as if filmed in one day, when in reality "shots" were taken throughout the summer camp period.

Stanley Mayer, who has been covering the Wichita territory for the Kansas City First National office, has been succeeded by C. G. Craddock, formerly with the First National office in Montana. Mr. Mayer has accepted a position with the Des Moines office of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Al Scrogham, former poster clerk in the First National office at Kansas City, has been named as manager of the St. John theatre, a suburban house of Kansas City. He has been succeeded at First National by the Chester Borg.

Back to work again, but it's hard for A. L. McLaughlin, Kansas City Metro salesman, to talk of anything other than the motor trip which he and Mrs. McLaughlin enjoyed to Chicago and Marion, Ohio.

To the junk shop with the ol' bus! Bring forth a brand new Overland Red Bird for W. C. Haynes, Goldwyn representative in the Kansas City territory, who holds fast to the assertion that the appearance of the new "boat" has helped his sales.

MANAGER J. C. CHATMAS of Marlin, Tex., was in Dallas buying new pictures for his theatre. Manager Ryan has opened his new Grand theatre at Roxton, Texas.

Fred Chavey operates the Palace theatre at Cleturne, Tex., and also sells Goldwyn films and reports big business in both branches of his business. The Royal theatre at Laredo, Tex., has reopened after having been redecorated and remodeled.

The Liberty theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., has reopened after having been shut down to remodel and redecorate. The management has reduced admission prices to 10 and 15 cents, and will show feature pictures with orchestral music. In order to get the people to visit the Liberty the management had a special street car, handsomely decorated and with music to run over all of the city lines for two or three days prior to opening. The street cars of the city bore legends on back and front in circus style, advertising opening day. Bill boards and newspaper advertising was also had in profusion, resulting in capacity business for several days after the opening. Bob Hutchison, the manager, has been wearing a smile that won't come off as the result of his successful advertising stunts, which took well with the people.

J. D. Wineland of Picher, Okla., has returned home after an overland trip to the Pacific Coast. The Little theatre at Dallas opened September 15.

Salt Lake City

LOUIS MARCUS, district manager for the Salt Lake City and Denver territory for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left for New York City on business pertaining to the new policy adopted by this company of distributing pictures. He will be absent two or three weeks.

E. C. Mix, manager of the Select exchange, recently returned from a successful trip to the key centers of Montana and Idaho.

Paul Schultz has been added to the sales force of the Select Pictures Corporation, and will cover the Montana territory. Schultz was formerly with the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Company.

W. F. Adamson, manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Company, president of the Intermountain Film Board of Trade, returned last week from the convention of Film Board of Trade managers of the Western Division, which convened in Los Angeles September tenth and eleventh. Mr. Adamson said the convention was a huge success with the discussion of many important things that will prove equally beneficial to producer and exhibitor alike, when adopted in general, the resolutions being passed at the convention. Ways and means of saving the film organizations many thousands of dollars were devised, and when put into effect will result in this saving. The convention met with C. C. Pettijohn, counsel for the Hays organization; Michael Narlein, counsel for the Los Angeles Film Board of Trade, and Louie Nathan, San Francisco Board of Trade counsel.

A new manager in the person of R. S. Stackhouse, has been appointed for the Vitagraph exchange, to succeed John A. Rugar. Mr. Stackhouse is known in this territory, having been connected with the exchanges in this city several years ago. Prior to his appointment here, he was with the Seattle Vitagraph force.

H. Bradley Fish, Western Division manager for Vitagraph, is in Salt Lake City for several weeks, supervising the work of this branch exchange. He is enthused over the way the new product is taking hold and predicts good things for the coming features. He expects to leave for Denver upon the conclusion of his work here.

Walter S. Rand, Western Division manager of the United Artists Corporation, and his wife, are visiting in Salt Lake City, and Mr. Rand is renewing his many acquaintances here. His father, W. R. Rand, a veteran exhibitor, now operates the Isis theatre on East Broadway.

Art Schayer, a Salt Lake City boy who has made a good climb in the film world, and now representing Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, was in this city for several days last week.

W. F. "Doc" Bandford, division manager of Goldyn-Cosmopolitan, is expected in Salt Lake City this week, according to the local exchange.

J. D. Solomon, manager of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange, met with a mishap last week which resulted in a broken arm. The accident happens to be his left appendage, however, which as H. Bradley Fish remarked: "Still left him with his contract-writing arm."

News of the death of his father-in-law, T. P. Witsel, in Philadelphia, was received last week by J. D. Solomon. Mrs. Solomon left immediately to attend the funeral.

Business is wonderful, according to W. B. Corby, manager of the resident Film Booking Offices exchange, with the big features going over in a mighty pleasing manner.

H. M. Forman, auditor from the New York offices of the Film Booking Office Company, is here going over the records of the local exchange.

Manager Corby has added a new salesman to his force in Dave Barnholtz. Mr. Barnholtz was identified with the Universal exchange prior to his change. In his new capacity he will work the Idaho and Wyoming territory.

Eddie Armstrong, assistant general manager of the Western Division, for Universal, arrived in Salt Lake City and while here conferred with B. A. Gurnette, resident manager.

Another division manager is in our midst in the person of W. S. Wessling, holder of that title for the Western Division representing Pathe. Mr. Wessling came from Butte, Montana, and will spend several days here with W. G. Sieb, local manager for Pathe, thence to Denver.

George G. Hayes, manager of the Salt Lake office of the Associated Exhibitors, is elated over the lineup that is presented on the new season's productions, with the galaxy of well-known stars working on super-feature pictures.

A farewell party for "Fat" Saunders, who closes his country store season in this territory, was given full swing on the stage of the Alhambra theatre, in Ogden, Utah, last week. Nearly all of the film men of both Ogden and this city were present and a general good time was enjoyed.

H. L. Skinner, a prominent exhibitor in Ogden, has resigned from his film activities to become a candidate for mayoralty honors.

Big Boston Campaign For "Strangers of Night"

"Strangers of the Night," Metro's adaptation of "Captain Applejack," Walter Hacketts' international success, is being given a special exploitation campaign in Boston, where the Fred Niblo production opens at Loew's State theatre on the 16th.

Bert B. Perkins, Metro's manager of exploitation, has been in Boston the past several days arranging the details of what promises to be one of the most farreaching campaigns ever put over in the city. The line of exploitation being followed is that outlined in Metro's elaborate press sheet for "Strangers of the Night," a plan that was so particularly successful in the case of Buster Keaton's "Three Ages," when the comedian's full length comedy played the Warfield in San Francisco.

Ethel Shannon Adjudged Make-up Artist

Ethel Shannon has been put in a class with Lon Chaney as a make-up artist by Cecil Holland, leading professional make-up artist of Hollywood. According to Mr. Holland, Miss Shannon's feats of make-up in "Maytime" place her as the foremost feminine make-up artist in the world, right alongside of Lon Chaney, who is considered the greatest make-up expert.

Miss Shannon has four roles in "Maytime"—a maid of the 1830 period, a girl of twelve, an old woman of sixty-five, and a young lady of the present day.

Melford Finishes "Light That Failed"

George Melford has completed the production work on his most recent Paramount picture, "The Light That Failed," and is now cutting and editing the film.

London Praises "If Winter Comes"

Newspaper Critics Are Unanimous in Approval Following Palace Showing

THE news columns of all the London papers highly commend the William Fox version of "If Winter Comes" following its opening at the Palace. Harry Millarde was hailed as "the American Dickens" and a "veritable Cromwell of the movies."

Nearly all of the critics took personal pride in the fact that the Mark Sabre of the screen version, upon whom they heaped praise lavishly, was an Englishman and that most of the photoplay was made in England. Few overlooked the opportunity to point out, too, that the author also was a Briton.

A few excerpts from the London criticisms follow:

The Evening News—"It's a great success. Strongest dramatic fare for some time."

The Evening Standard—"A big and beautiful thing."

The Morning Post—"Mr. Harry Millarde must be congratulated."

The Daily Express—"A Niagara of pictured emotions. A master film. Harry Millarde is the American screen Dickens. The film is a movie mosaic. It is soul vivisection."

The Daily Graphic — "Back waters of English country life never before have been so excellenly conveyed to the screen."

The Daily News—"No better adaptation can be imagined than Harry Millarde's version of 'If Winter Comes.'"

The Daily Herald—"This is the stuff of drama—admirably played by Percy Marmont."

The Times—"Percy Marmont's appearance and personality fulfill entirely our conception of Mark Sabre."

The Daily Telegraph—"A striking screen version. Makes amends for many of the crimes with which film producers are often reproached."

The Daily Mirror — "Depicts every aspect of the story. It should have a long run."

The Sunday Express—"Millarde is a veritable Cromwell of the movies."

The advertising campaign which preceded the opening of "If Winter Comes" was distinctly British. Void of all the American ballyhoo methods, the staid London papers carried deep two column ads extolling in dignified fashion the strength of the story of "If Winter Comes," giving prominence to A. S. M. Hutchinson and Percy Marmont, both Englishmen. Many of the ads carried almost life-sized heads of Hutchinson and Marmont.

Publishers to Aid Essay Campaign

National Association to Help Exploit "David Copperfield" Contest

ASSOCIATED Exhibitors' $3,000 "David Copperfield" prize essay contest received a powerful recruit this week when the National Association of Book Publishers voluntarily enlisted in the campaign to exploit it. Not only will this organization, composed of practically all the representative book publishers of the country, carry on a special drive in behalf of sales of the Dickens masterpiece, but it will scatter broadcast information regarding the film and the prize offer for essays by school children, it is said.

An idea of the extent of the campaign already started by the association was given by Miss Marion Humble, executive secretary, at the main offices, New York. Announcements of the contest will be sent to 2800 book stores and public libraries, covering practically the entire United States, an will be inserted in all correspondence from these offices. Besides book dealers and librarians, school teachers form the largest proportion of persons with whom the organization is in close touch.

Many leading publishers, meanwhile, have declared their intention of supplementing the association's drive through the medium of their own extensive sales organizations. Literature descriptive of the contest will be distributed through many branch offices throughout the country, and book store displays, arranged to boost the sale of "David Copperfield," the novel, will exploit the prize essay project also.

Not only are 330 prizes, with a total of $2,000 cash offered to students, but three additional prizes, aggregating $1,000, will be given the school having the greatest number of prize winners, in proportion to enrollment.

"Printer's Devil" Named Among Month's Best

The National Board of Review has selected the Warner feature, "The Printer's Devil," starring Wesley Barry, as one of the best films issued during the month of August. "The Printer's Devil," according to the National Committee for Better Films, is a photoplay especially suitable for family groups and young people.

Universal Is Leaning Toward Specials

The Universal Pictures Corporation is going in heavily for the big "specials" under the supervision of Bernard McConville, which experts believe the public today wants more than average pictures.

Hobart Henley, whose production of "A Lady of Quality" was completed not so long ago and is the next Universal-Super-Jewel offering of the company, is working on "The Turmoil," Booth Tarkington's portrait of American life.

Clarence L. Brown will start shortly on "The Signal Tower," a short story by Wadsworth Camp.

Irving Cummings is well into production on Mary Philbin's new Universal-Jewel starring vehicle, "Morality."

Reginald Denny is being directed by Harry A. Pollard in an original story by Byron Morgan, "There He Goes," under the working title of "The Spice of Life."

Edward Sedgwick just completed Hoot Gibson's "The Extra Man," and will start soon with the same star in "Hook and Ladder."

"The Right to Love" is the title of the third big starring vehicle of Baby Peggy, directed by Jesse Robbins, produced by Universal and Julius and Abe Stern of the Century Film Corporation.

Tour of Leah Baird Is Proving Popular

The personal tour being made by Leah Baird in connection with her Associated Exhibitors successes, "Is Divorce a Failure?" and "The Destroying Angel," having stretched eastward across the southern states, promises to keep the popular star uninterruptedly busy during her entire trip back to the West Coast.

A statement by Associated says the home offices are besieged with demands for dates, not only from key centers but a large number of other towns.

Commonwealth to Handle Preferred Fifteen

Commonwealth Film Exchange will distribute the fifteen new productions of Preferred Pictures Corporation, in Southern New York, as a result of a deal just completed by Al Lichtman, president of Preferred, and Samuel Zierler, president of Commonwealth.

The franchise for the distribution of the first eight Preferred pictures, was already held by Mr. Zierler and the new arrangement gives him the entire Preferred output. The list of the Preferred Fifteen, which are produced by B. P. Schulberg, includes "Mothers-in-Law," which has just closed a successful two weeks' run at B. S. Moss' Cameo theatre in New York City, and "The Broken Wing," which will open at the Rialto theatre in New York City on October 7.

Other Preferred pictures included in the deal are "April Showers," "The Virginian," "Maytime," "The Boomerang," "White Man," "The Triflers," "The Mansion of Aching Hearts," "Poisoned Paradise," "When A Woman Reaches Forty," "The Breath of Scandal," "The First Year," "Faint Perfume," and "My Lady's Lips."

Will Syndicate "Dream Pictures"

Branson De Cou Claims Distinct Novelty In Colored Feature Series

WHAT seems to be a solution of the difficult problem of novelties, different from the regular "musical act," and yet highly attractive to all types of audience, is found in Branson De Cou's Dream Pictures.

So great was the success of Branson De Cou and his Dream Pictures last season, that the De Cou management in New York City has made arrangements to syndicate this feature as a series this coming year. The first release date is October 15th and the series will extend over an eight months period.

Everywhere they were shown Dream Pictures are said to have scored a hit, and the comments of the house managers attest the high quality of the offering.

E. L. Perry, manager of the New Franklin theatre in Oakland, Cal., said, "As for the drawing power of this high class offering, we are sincere in telling you that it is our belief that you brought in many extra dollars at every performance."

S. N. Chambers, manager of the Miller theatre, Wichita, Kan., spoke of Dream Pictures as follows: "These slides are the most gorgeous screen pictures I have ever seen and are a joy to behold, and the music accompaniment enhances their beauty to a marked degree."

David Harding, manager of the Liberty theatre of Kansas City, Mo., stated that "Dream Pictures went further to please all classes of people than has any other presentation we have sponsored this season."

Dream Pictures are "still" views of America's Wonderlands projected on the screen in natural colors, appearing and dissolving in synchronization with the mood and rhythm of beautiful music.

Dream Pictures represent the gems of Mr. De Cou's photographic experience. They have been selected from thousands of photographs, taken by Mr. De Cou himself, and such men as Aschel Curtis, Kiser, Haynes, Standley, Putnam, Tibbetts and Willard. Many of Mr. De Cou's pictures have appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and other magazines and rotogravures.

The coloring is the work of artists, the pictures are, in effect, masterpieces of landscape painting. They possess that which all mechanical color processes lack—the idealization of nature which only the handwork of great artists can give. The views are colors with limitless patience by painters who have travelled extensively in the sections of the country where the pictures were taken.

German Film Firm Seeks American Writers

Following closely on the heels of the reported big success attending the New York premier of "Peter the Great," a Paramount production made in Germany, Sada Cowan who wrote the original and adaptation while in Berlin, has, together with Howard Higgin, who collaborates with her, received an offer from a German film concern to again come to that country and do a series of three pictures.

The proffer was made by cable and stipulated only that the stories be done in the German language. Miss Cowan is an expert linguist, having written "Peter the Great" in German, and done several transcriptions in French.

Filming Completed on "Eternal City"

FILMING of "The Eternal City," which George Fitzmaurice is producing for Samuel Goldwyn, will be completed this week in New York. The exteriors for this picture, which is to be a First National release, were made in Italy, the actual scene of the story, after a conference between Sir Hall Caine, author of the novel, George Fitzmaurice and Ouida Bergere, scenarist, in London.

Young Doug Busy With "Stephen Steps Out"

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has completed the Turkish episodes of his first starring picture, "Stephen Steps Out," and is now engaged in an important sequence of scenes with Theodore Roberts as the other principal.

"Stephen Steps Out" was adapted to the screen by Edfrid Bingam from Richard Harding Davis's story, "The Grand Cross of the Crescent." Joseph Henabery is directing the thirteen-year-old star and the featured cast, in addition to Theodore Roberts, includes Noah Beery, Harry Myers and Frank Currier.

Sada Cowan & Higgin Will Title "Pleasure Mad"

Having completed titling "The Wanters," a John M. Stahl production for Louis B. Mayer recently completed at the Mayer-Schulberg Studios, Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin have been engaged to title Reginald Barker's "Pleasure Mad" for the same producing company.

THE Montreal Herald, in connection with the Canadian premiere at the Allen theatre in that city of Mae Murray's latest Metro picture, "The French Doll," published a full length portrait of Miss Murray as she appears in one of her costumes in this picture. Miss Murray's striking portrait was set against a specially drawn background of blue peacocks strutting about in a golden field of flowers in all the beauty of their natural colors.

This full page was used by the Allen theatre in many ways. It not only served as a beautiful window display in many of Montreal's leading stores but at little expense the page was mailed out to hundreds of patrons and served many other purposes.

"The French Doll" is a Robert Z. Leonard presentation through Metro and is sponsored by Tiffany Production of which Mr. Leonard is director-general and M. H. Hoffman general manager.

Belasco's "Daddies" Under Way at Warners

Word comes from the Warner Brothers Studio on the west coast that the film version of David Belasco's play, "Daddies," is now well under way before the cameros, with work going on in both interiors and exteriors. Mae Marsh is starred in the production.

Claire Adams has been added to the cast. Monte Blue will be seen in the leading masculine role. Other important parts are in the hands of Harry Myers, Claude Gillingwater, Willard Louis, Boyce Comb, Otto Hoffman, Priscilla Dean Moran, Muriel Frances Dana, George Woodthorpe, the De Briac Twins and King Evers.

The direction of "Daddies" is being handled by William Seiter.

Scenic Splendor in "Man From Brodney's"

Those working in the production of "The Man From Brodney's," the coming David Smith production with J. Warren Kerrigan in the leading role, are enthusiastic over its scenic splendor. The scenes are laid in a fictitious principality created by George Barr McCutcheon, the author of this popular novel.

Hodkinson Exploits "Down to Sea"

Whaling Implements and Extensive Campaign Aid Picture in Chicago

FIFTEEN harpoons, thirteen lances, fourteen cutting spades, one mincing knife and one boarding knife, recently purchased by the Whaling Film Corporation from a returned whaler, were sent to Chicago to be used by the exhibitors in exploiting "Down to the Sea in Ships," distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. These articles, used exclusively in the olden days when the whaling industry was at its height, were secured from the returned whalers "Claudia" and "Athlete," and were immediately shipped to the branch office of the Hodkinson Corporation in Chicago for the exhibitor's use.

In order to see that every one of the 55 exhibitors showing "Down to the Sea in Ships" in Chicago should be accorded every opportunity to reap in big profits on this production, the Hodkinson Corporation has utilized every accessory and aid at its command to help the exhibitor. In this respect the Chicago branch office was augmented by W. F. Seymour, Eastern District Sales Manager, who stayed in Chicago during the showing to oversee every detail.

Jack Edwards, Director of Publicity for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was sent especially by the home office to Chicago to prepare a strong publicity and exploitation campaign, working in cooperation with the exhibitors. A representative from a leading New York advertising agency, handling the newspaper advertising campaign conducted for this showing, was sent to Chicago to check up on all advertising and see that the campaign went through with flying colors.

Los Angeles Praises "White Rose"

Showing at Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre Brings Critics' Commendation

"I FEEL that 'The White Rose' stands as the most important contribution D. W. Griffith has made to the screen since 'Way Down East'," said the critic for the Los Angeles Times when this United Artists release was shown at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, Los Angeles. "The scenes in which Mae Marsh appears go straight to the heart. Ivor Novello is the first matinee-idol type that has been seen in some moons, and there is always conviction to his acting."

"'The White Rose' is a triumph for Mae Marsh," wrote the reviewer for the Examiner. "She returns to the screen as a winsome and beautiful figure. Ivor Novello, too, is excellent."

"If 'The White Rose' is to be taken as a criterion, D. W. Griffith's genius for appealing directly to the heart is as potent as ever," said the review for the Evening Express. "Mae Marsh's return to the screen marks her as an actress of rare charm, and there is a new matinee idol, Ivor Novello, whose future work will bear watching. Long lines of theatre-goers stood, two abreast, waiting to gain admission to the Western premier of this Griffith attraction."

"'The White Rose' seems to me to be the finest achievement of D. W. Griffith's career," wrote Ted Taylor in the Los Angeles Record. "Mae Marsh is a revelation."

"We admit that we sat at times spellbound," said L. B. Fowler, in the Los Angeles Daily News. "Even our emotions were roused to the point where our eyes blurred."

Washington Praises "Scaramouche"

Reviewers Unanimous in Acclaiming Rex Ingram Production for Metro

AN avalanche of enthusiastic praise, the unanimous verdict of the whole corps of Washington newspaper reviewers, was the signal tribute accorded Rex Ingram, the director, the players, and Metro pictures Corporation, sponsors, for their achievement, "Scaramouche," at its first public showing in Washington last week at the Shubert Belasco theatre.

"'Scaramouche,'" wrote Harold Phillips of the Washington Times, "earns for Ingram the right to swagger into the holy domain of Griffith and Lubitsch and call for his pipe and slippers. 'Scaramouche' is as good a picture as has leaped from a projector in ages. 'Scaramouche' looks to us like the biggest thing Rex Ingram has done and the best."

"A marvellous production," wrote the critic of the Washington Star. "'Scaramouche' surpasses all expectations and hopes in the tremendous splendor of its production. Unbelievable perfection in settings, costumes and other infinite details of equipment amaze the beholder with every change of scene. A picture that will make history in itself."

"The photography takes on an exquisite pastel beauty," wrote the critic of the Washington Herald. "Ingram's handling of the massive mob scenes represents a triumph of mass-direction, brilliant enactments in the three centre roles are offered by Miss Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro and Lewis Stone."

"Rex Ingram has scored another triumph of artistic skill, greater in many respects than his 'Four Horsemen,'" wrote the critic of the Washington Post.

"Beautiful beyond words," wrote the critic of the Washington Daily News. "Ingram has put passion into it. His throngs are not 'extras' but mob'; there is a terrific exaltation in the marching peasants that cannot be resisted."

"Scaramouche" will be presented at the Forty-fourth Street theatre in New York, Sunday, September 30.

Cohan Music Score for "Meanest Man"

EXHIBITORS booking "The Meanest Man in World" will have the opportunity of obtaining a typical George M. Cohan musical score for the showing of this production. The picture lends itself to Cohan music and the score arrangers are compiling a very elaborate setting surrounded by the big hits of the Cohan pen covering the past ten years.

In addition to this score, a special "Meanest Man" song is being written and published by Jerome H. Remick Company. This song should be ready when the picture is released next month.

Principal Pictures Corporation produced "The Meanest Man in the World" and rereleasing will go via Associated First National.

"Scaramouche" to Have Photoplay Edition

In connection with the Rex Ingram production of "Scaramouche" which opens at the 44th Street theatre September 30th, Grosset and Dunlap, publishers of Rafael Sabatini's famous romance of the French Revolution from which Ingram adapted his film version, has issued a special photoplay edition of the novel, profusely illustrated with scenes from the photoplay.

The jacket of the book printed in several colors also contains several photoplay scenes showing Alice Terry, who plays the leading feminine role and Ramon Novarro, who plays the title role, as well as one of Ingram's great mob scenes.

"Scaramouche" is a Rex Ingram production for Metro by special arrangement with Charles L. Wagner. It was adapted by Willis Goldbeck and photographed by John F. Seitz.

Photoplay Edition For "Virginian"

Grosset and Dunlap will issue a special photoplay edition of "The Virginian," Owen Wister's famous novel which has been made into a picture by B. P. Schulberg, to be released by Preferred Pictures Corporation.

The book will contain eight stills from the picture, and the usual special jacket containing scenes and an advertisement of the production.

Kenneth Harlan, Florence Vidor, Russel Simpson, Pat O'Malley and Raymond Hatton are in the picture cast. It's a Tom Forman production.

Chester Will Edit "On Banks of Wabash"

George Randolph Chester, former editor-in-chief of Vitagraph, has been especially engaged to edit and title "On the Banks of the Wabash," the first J. Stuart Blackton production to be released by Vitagraph. Mr. Chester returned east from the Coast, where he had spent more than a year writing fiction stories.

"Drivin' Fool Clubs" Meet Success

MANY editors throughout the country have responded enthusiastically to the suggestion made by the exploitation department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for the incorporation of "The Drivin' Fool Clubs," as a regular daily department of their newspaper. This is the result of a nation-wide campaign against careless and reckless driving, inaugurated by the Hodkinson Corporation, as an exploitation idea for "The Drivin' Fool" with Wally Van, produced by the Regents Pictures Corporation for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The idea is intended to discourage reckless driving by giving prominent publicity in exceptionally small space to all persons convicted in court of reckless traffic offenses.

Different Role Promised For Virginia Valli

A remarkable departure from the sort of roles she has previously been identified with will be noted when Virginia Valli is seen in Goldwyn's "Wild Oranges."

Usually cast in dignified, appealing, "dressy" starring parts, Miss Valli shows her versatility in this production by enacting the part of a typical "hill-billy" mountain girl of the South, attired in ragged ginghams. And Director King Vidor predicts her interpretation will open the eyes of her admirers, accustomed to seeing her only in modern society dramas or costume plays such as was her recent Universal-Jewel starring vehicle, "A Lady of Quality."

"Marriage Market" Cast Is Completed

The completion of a cast is announced this week for the next Columbia picture from C. B. C., "The Marriage Market." The players have been lined up by Producer Harry Cohn.

Heading the cast is Jack Mulhall. His latest success was as the husband to Constance Talmadge's "Dulcy."

Alice Lake has an important role.

Pauline Garon is again cast as a glorified sub-deb.

A fine cast of character players supports these three. Heading them is Shannon Day. Others are Jean Debriac, Willard Louis, Vera Lewis, and Kate Lester.

The story is by Evelyn Campbell, adapted by her from her magazine story, "Prejudice." Edward J. Le Saint is directing.

Ohio Censors Approve "Pioneer Trails"

"Pioneer Trails," directed by David Smith and ready for release by Vitagraph, not only passed the Ohio Board of Censors without a single elimination, but members of the board were unanimous in their praise of this splendid feature, it is said.

Parlor Seats in Little Rock House

Club Room de Luxe For Women Latest Innovation For Comfort of Patrons

HENRY PEPIN, owner of the Palace theatre, Little Rock, Ark., has adopted something new for the comfort and convenience of his patrons, and at the same time has given a valuable bit of publicity to the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation. He has had built in the Palace theatre a new parlor room or club de luxe for women. It has a clear vision of the screen and has been named after the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Company.

It is the intention of Mr. Pepin that this room be used as a club room for various women's organizations in the mornings. During the screening of pictures, it will take care of the larger theatre parties, where the parties wish to have their seats reserved so that they may come in and be seated one at a time and still all be together. There is no charge for the use of this room by women's clubs during the morning, and any women's organization can obtain the free use of them by telephoning the management.

Mr. Pepin announced to the merchants of Little Rock that Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Company would supply the seats and furnishings for this room, which he was going to call the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Room. He bought the furniture from the local dealers. The room was furnished in karpen fibre and mahogany with coverings and draperies of the latest design. It was placed on display in the windows of the Gus Blass Company for several days before being installed in the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Room.

Through the courtesy of L. D. Remy, District Supervisor for Goldwyn Cosmopolitan, in Arkansas and Texas, autographed photos of the leading motion picture players, beautifully mounted, were placed in the new parlor. Each of the thirty seats in the room has a full and unobstructed view of the screen. The Arkansas Gazette ran a story on this room under a two-column head, and the other local newspapers also ran stories on it.

"Shock" Revived by Japan Disaster

Universal Reports Many Bookings for Melodrama Which Features Lon Chaney

Universal reports an extraordinary revival in interest in "The Shock," a stirring Lon Chaney melodrama of last season. Bookings on the Chaney picture have more than trebled during the last several weeks, and it is piling up records closely approximating those of a new release, according to Universal.

Two outstanding reasons are given for this sudden reawakening. One is the Japanese earthquake, and the other is Chaney's great publicity as a result of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame."

"The Shock" is the story of a man's regeneration through the love of a beautiful girl. The highlights of the picture are built around a great earthquake shock and the destruction of a big city.

The same shaking of buildings, toppling of walls, buckling of sidewalks, bursting street mains; huddled, praying victims, and stumbling, terror-stricken fugitives are shown in "The Shock."

The eyes of the world are turned towards Japan, and everyone is eager to see moving pictures of the fatal catastrophe.

Universal exchange managers lost no time in taking advantage of the situation. Prints of "The Shock" were carefully checked over and in some cases, additional prints ordered.

"The Shock" revival, however, is traceable also to Lon Chaney's great rise in popularity by reason of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." No film actor ever received greater praise than was accorded to him by newspaper critics, trade paper reviewers and the general public for his remarkable character delineation in the big Universal spectacle-drama.

Chaney's work in "The Shock" is of the same high quality. His interpretation of the crippled underworld character, regenerated through the love of a beautiful young woman, played by Virginia Valli, is a typical Chaney masterpiece.

First National Sells Six in Italy

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES, INC., has disposed of the rights of six productions to the Societe Anonima Stefano Pittaluga, of Torino, Italy, for the territory of Italy, Sardinia, Italian African Colonies, and the Italian African Protectorate. The productions included in the contract are "Circus Days," "Within the Law," "The Voice from the Minaret," "Yes or No," "The Isle of Lost Ships," and "The Bright Shawl."

Warner Brothers Make Song Tie-up

Another example of commercial co-operation in exploitation lines for the benefit of the exhibitor has been effected by the Warner Brothers in conjunction with their new production, "The Gold Diggers," the screen version of the David Belasco play.

By an arrangement with Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., music publishers, the Warners have made a tie-up with the popular song, "The Gold Digger" ("Dig a little deeper."). A special cover has been created for the song, which advertises the Warner picture. Extra covers will be provided all music dealers free in order to make window displays.

"Pioneer Trails" Is Winning Praise

"PIONEER TRAILS," the western picture to be released by Vitagraph as one of the six super-specials for 1923-4, is receiving high praise at all pre-review showings, which include the censorship boards of the various states.

The Ohio Board of Censors recently passed the picture without a single elimination, in spite of the fact that one of the chief thrills is a sensational Indian massacre of a wagon train on the prairie. Last week the State Board of Kansas also passed the film without elimination, and enthusiastically praised it as being one of the greatest screen plays about the West ever filmed.

The cast includes Cullen Landis, Alice Calhoun, Bertram Grassby, Otis Harlan, Dwight Crittenden, Virginia True Boardman, Aggie Herring, Nelson McDowell, W. J. Dyer and Joe Rickson.

Six Vitagraph Specials Ready for Exhibitors

With the completion last week of "On the Banks of the Wabash," a J. Stuart Blackton Production, and "The Leavenworth Case," a Whitman Bennett Production, the first six of the twenty-six specials announced by President Albert E. Smith of Vitagraph for release during the season 1923-24, have been made available to the exhibitors. The other four are "The Man Next Door," "The Midnight Alarm," "Loyal Lives" and "Pioneer Trails." "The Man from Brodney's" is now being produced at the Hollywood studios under the direction of David Smith.

President Smith will announce shortly the second production to be made by J. Stuart Blackton and a new super-feature which will be produced at Hollywood.

Dillon Stars Shooting "Drums of Jeopardy"

With the completion of the cast for "The Drums of Jeopardy," which includes beside the star, Elaine Hammerstein, such well-known players as Wallace Beery, Jack Mulhall and David Torrence, Director Edward Dillon is making fast progress in the shooting of the story. One of the biggest scenes in the picture, depicting a palace of the Romanoffs in Russia, has been finished. This will serve as a prologue to the story.

Equity Closes Deal On "Daring Years"

Advices received from Equity Pictures Corporation during the past week reveal the fact that Louis Baum, vice-president of that concern, now making a sales tour throughout the country, has closed "The Daring Years" in Pittsburgh.

The deal was made by Mr. Baum and Mr. J. A. Alexander, president of Columbia Film Service.

L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North are offering "Don't Marry for Money," from which these scenes were taken.

Offers Prizes for Best Reviews

"Ashes of Vengeance" Contest Will Stimulate First National Picture

WITH the announcement that First National Pictures is about to present Norma Talmadge's "Ashes of Vengeance" in the leading theatres throughout the country, it is also announced that Robert M. McBride, publisher of the book by H. B. Somerville, will conduct a public competition for the five best reviews of "Ashes of Vengeance."

The first prize will be $500; the second prize, $200; the third, fourth and fifth prizes, $100 each. For the twenty-five reviews which are considered next in order of merit to the prize winning reviews, the publishers will give complimentary copies of the book, autographed by the author and Miss Talmadge. The story is profusely illustrated with scenes from the photoplay.

Those who have consented to act as judges of the contributions are James Branch Cabell, author of "Jurgen," Thyra Sampter Winslow, author of "Picture Frames," H. B. Somerville, author of "Ashes of Vengeance," Norma Talmadge, star of the picture, and Robert M. McBride, publisher of the book.

The contest is open to everybody except members of the Talmadge organization, or those associated with the publisher. The reviews should not exceed 500 words in length, and may be descriptive of either the book or picture. The contest opens October 1st and closes December 31st. Awards will be made February 1st, 1923. All contributions should be sent to "Ashes of Vengeance" Prize Contest, care of Robert M. McBride & Company, 7 West 16th Street, New York City.

"Dulcy" Has Premiere in New York

Newspaper Critics Commend It as an Ideal Constance Talmadge Picture

"DULCY" made her bow to New York audiences from the screen of the Strand theatre on September 16th in the person of Constance Talmadge, First National star. It is an adaptation of the stage success of the same name.

New York critics call the production not only excellent comedy entertainment, but also a perfect vehicle for Miss Talmadge.

The Evening Telegram reported: "If you want a delightful screen comedy with a good farcical quality, run up to the Strand. . . . After so fine a characterization of the title role, there should be no hesitancy about accepting Miss Constance as the leading comedienne of the screen."

"A splendid picture has been made of the stage's 'Dulcy,'" wrote the New York Times reviewer, "Constance Talmadge, as has been said, is most adorable."

The Evening Mail wrote: "Miss Talmadge's interpretation is delightfully refreshing and is by far the finest acting she has done before the camera. It is worth while going to see her in this role."

The Evening World critic stated: "Constance Talmadge is giving a remarkable enjoyable screen performance of the difficult celluloid role at the Strand this week . . . we enjoyed it."

"Dulcy" as a stage play by Marc Connelly and George S. Kaufman enjoyed long runs in New York and throughout the country.

The picture has been preceeded by an extensive advertising campaign which has made the word "Dulcy" synonymous with "Dumbbell." Many newspapers throughout the country carried a cartoon strip headed "Dulcy, the Delightful Dumb-bell, by Constance Talmadge."

Greiver Purchases New C. B. C. Feature

Si Greiver, head of Greiver Productions of Chicago, has purchased C. B. C.'s newest feature, "The Barefoot Boy." Mr. Greiver recently made a blanket purchase of the entire product announced earlier in the season for release through C. B. C.

Actors Fight Coast Forest Fire

WORD has just been received at Goldwyn's home office that nearly every member of Director von Stroheim's company, now at the Big Dipper Mine in Northern California, making the mine scenes of "Greed" from Frank Norris' "McTeague," were pressed into service by the Fire Marshal to fight a forest fire fifteen miles in length, which has already destroyed the large mining plant at the Yankee Jim Mine and was then approaching the Big Dipper Canyon, in which the "Greed" company was working.

There are ninety-three men, including players, extras and men on the technical staff in the "Greed" company and they formed a big addition to the Fire Marshal's force of flame fighters.

The Big Dipper Mine sequences will finish the photography on "Greed."

"Forgive and Forget" Is Ready for Release

"Forgive and Forget," the new C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation feature, is ready for release, it is announced this week. The picture, which features Estelle Taylor, Pauline Garon, Wyndham Standing, Vernon Steele, Raymond McKee, Josef Swickard, Philo McCullough, William Scott and Lionel Belmore, arrived from the C. B. C. West Coast studio last week.

In accordance with the C. B. C. custom of subjecting all features to a system of "double editing," a special corps of editors and titlers were engaged and ready to begin work on the feature at once. With concentrated effort, the necessary changes were completed and the feature is now ready for franchise holders.

Writing Team Completes "Pleasure Mad"

Titling and editing of the John M. Stahl production, "Pleasure Mad," has been completed at the Mayer-Schulberg West Coast studios by Sada Cowan and Howard Higgin, noted scenario team.

The effort marked their second for this organization in the past few weeks, they having also titled "The Wanters," a Stahl production, in the record time of five days.

Miss Cowan is taking a short rest before she and Mr. Higgin start on the adaptation of an original story of theirs, purchased by one of the large concerns.

55 Chicago Houses Show "Down to Sea"

Following one of the most successful four-week engagements held at Balaban & Katz's Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, a far-reaching sales beat was made by the Chicago branch of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in signing 55 theatres to play simultaneously for one week "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"Bootlegging" in Equipment and Supplies

Imitation of Standard Projector Parts Being Sold by Many

Address before the American Projectionists Society by Herbert Griffin, Nichalas Powers Co.

THERE are in existence today a number of small concerns making substitute parts for projectors who depend upon the carelessness or thoughtlessness of the projectionist or manager to make sales. The part is usually wrapped up without inspection, the bill is paid and away goes Mr. Buyer with his purchase. When the projectionist gets ready to put the part in question on the machine he is sometimes able to do so, with the aid of a file and some emery paper. At last, however, it is in place and he thinks he is ready for the show, but on examination the projectionist finds that he is up against some difficulties. The film is out of line, the taper pinholes in the sprocket are slightly out of place, or the sprocket hub is not drilled quite large enough for the shaft. In some instances these troubles are overcome by the use of a hammer, but the man who can strike true with a hammer when the object is faced vertically is more than a mechanic—he is an artist. The result of work done in this way is, the projectionist finds he has a sprung shaft or a broken pin cross. Now why should this be? It would seem as though any first-class machinist should be able to turn out repair parts to fit perfectly. If he desires to remain in business he should be able to do this, but in most instances he has neither the experience nor the plant necessary to turn out first-class work.

Projectionists who would like to know something about the men, methods and materials which enter into the manufacture of a motion picture projector will see just how large a plant it takes to manufacture a standard professional projector. After such a visit I think any fair-minded man will readily agreed that it is a difficult matter for a small machine shop to properly and economically turn out parts for a motion picture projector.

It is true that parts can be made by hand in very small quantities by a good machinist, but in order to meet the exacting requirements of modern motion picture projection the cost of these parts would have to be very high if properly made. To keep down costs and keep up quality it is absolutely necessary to produce parts in large quantities, through the use of a full equipment of modern machinery which in many cases should also be automatic. We have hundreds of such machines in our factory which we are constantly changing and improving. Practically all of these are in regular use, and we need all of them with a force of experienced workmen to turn out the parts properly. Some of these men have been with us from ten to twenty years, and they are now more than mere makers of machine parts. They understand projection, and they know what projectionists must have. It is not my intention to say one work derogatory about machinists as such, but I do claim that the machinists we have in our employ know better how to turn out satisfactory parts for motion picture projectors than men who have been engaged in other lines of work.

As a projectionist I see all things in our business which concern projection from a viewpoint of the projectionist, and, with the help of Mr. Lester Bowen, our designing engineer, have been able to make our people realize that the projectionists must be the final judge of the machines turned out by the factory.

We have had representatives of some of the largest manufacturers of metal working machines and manufacturers of factory tools tell us that there are very few concerns who work as close as the manufacturer of the professional projector. Measurements of one-ten-thousandths, as a rule, as used only in the manufacture of fine scientific instruments. Every part marked "N. P. Co." has been made in our factory and is in effect a signed guarantee of quality and workmanship.

A Chicago concern has very extensively circularized the trade, advocating the changing of the well-known "Power's Intermittent Movement" to the Geneva movement. Now it is not my purpose to make comparisons between these two movements, but I do thoroughly condemn the efforts made by machinists without any practical knowledge of projection to introduce into our mechanism any movement other than Power's Intermittent Movement. We were naturally somewhat curious to find just what change was being advocated by this Chicago machine shop, and as the fairest and most practical method of securing this information we sent a mechanism through one of our friends in Chicago to have it fitted with this Geneva movement by the concern in question.

Several important parts of the machine were removed, and these are the parts which are absolutely essential if the projector is to properly function. As a result of the removal of these parts and the installation of the Chicago device in our machines, the projectionist who is unfortunate enough to have one of these changelings in his room will find when he attempts to frame up or down that the shutter has been thrown considerably out of time. So much so that a violent travel ghost develops which cannot possibly be corrected, and the picture will look as though it was being shown behind a picket fence. Before a satisfactory picture can be put on the screen it will be absolutely necessary to have the original movement put back, as the mechanism has been rendered utterly useless for the purpose for which it was built. The exhibitor has paid $38 to have a job done that could have been just as effectively accomplished by a boy with a hammer and for a lot less money. From this time on, until it goes into the scrap heap, it is going to cause trouble for us and for every projectionist and exhibitor. We will suffer in the loss of reputation and good will, which we make so many efforts to maintain. The projectionist may possibly lose some of his manager's good opinion and the manager may suffer in the loss of patronage.

The whole transaction will be a very expensive one for the exhibitor, and a disagreeable one for the projectionist. I, therefore, believe I am justified in saying that the makers of this so-called improvement are woefully

Unscrupulous Business Methods

UNSCRUPULOUS business methods exist in every field of business. It remains with those who take the welfare of their chosen field to heart to do all in their power to eliminate questionable business practices.

There are many questionable business practices carried on by a few renegades in the motion picture industry. The sale and manufacture of theatre equipment and supplies seems to offer a special attraction to these dishonorable "business men."

A practice that has its ill effects felt by all is the illegal manufacture and sale of patented parts for the standard projection machines. No one deserving benefits by this illegal practice. The exhibitor faces the probability of an interrupted show or a poorly projected picture plus a continuous investment in additional parts.

The projectionist has difficulty in adjusting (if that is possible) the "bootleg" parts to the projector.

While the legitimate manufacturer, thru whose efforts has been developed the design of the parts and who is endeavoring to uphold the reputation of his machine, suffers financially and also loses prestige with his customers.

The manufacturers of standard projection machines have taken every precaution to clearly mark parts made in their factories in such a manner to be easily identified by the careful purchaser. It remains with the exhibitor and projectionist to use discretion in the selection of projector parts.

The cooperation of the exhibitor, projectionist, supply dealer and manufacturer is needed to stamp out "bootlegging" in machine parts. This cooperation will benefit everyone involved.

The Wonderland theatre, which is claimed to be the highest theatre west of the Rocky Mountains, being 4800 feet above sea level, located at Blowing Rock, N. C. E. G. Fitzgerald, manager.

ignorant of the mechanical requirements for good projection. Manufacturers of substitute parts do not confine themselves to sprockets, but also manufacture gears and pinions. Better projection pays and, of course, the reverse is also true of poor projection. The projector is the tool with which the projectionist works, and, of course, it is impossible for him to get the best results if the tool is defective. The use of substitute or inferior parts is a serious menace to good projection, and we ask the entire motion picture industry to help us stamp out this abuse. The best way to do this is to see that genuine parts are used and by purchasing them from recognized manufacturers and reputable dealers.

Kansas City "Liberty" Reopens

The Liberty theatre, one of the largest down town houses in Kansas City, owned by Samuel and David Harding, opened its doors after three weeks of remodeling. The remodeling cost of the Liberty was $25,000. New drapes on the stage, redecoration, new loges and lobby furniture, as well as fountains on the mezzanine floor, are among the improvements, in addition to a thorough cleaning and dressing up of the exterior. New ventilating grills also were installed to provide a more pleasant atmosphere for the patrons.—True.

Jensen-VonHerberg Building in Seattle

Erection of a $200,000 motion picture theatre capable of seating 1,400 persons will be begun in Aberdeen, Wash., according to an announcement made in Seattle recently. The house will be built by the Jensen-VonHerberg circuit of Seattle, in conjunction with the Andrews & Wade Theatre Company in Aberdeen.

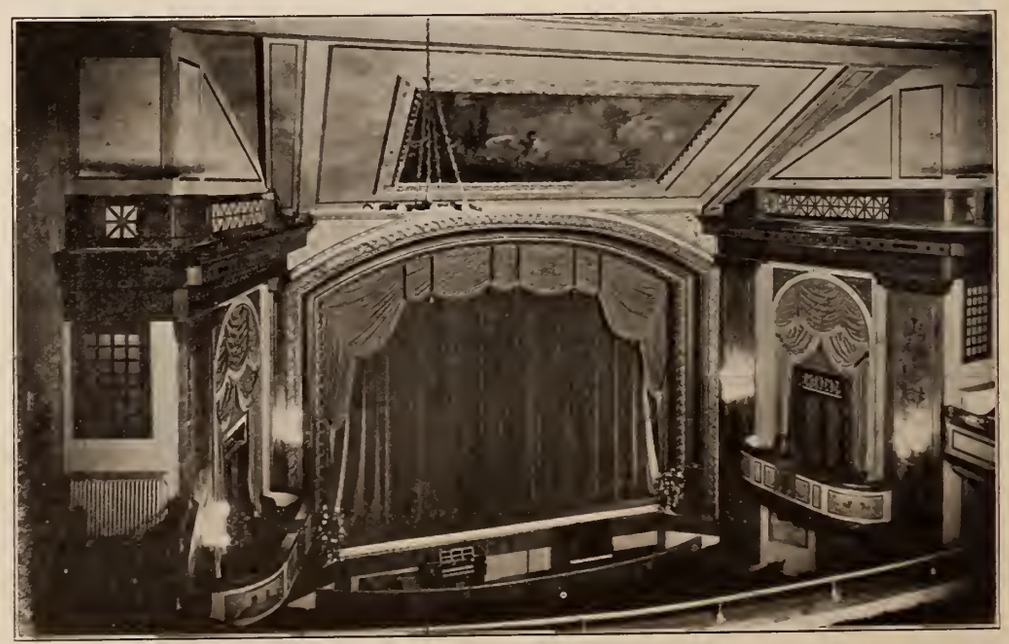
The theatre will be erected in the heart of Aberdeen's new business district, at the corner of Broadway and Wishkah Streets. It will be of concrete construction with a terra cotta exterior and will be entirely fireproof. Present plans include a large stage, which will be equipped to handle all types of theatrical productions. There will be stores on both street frontages in the new building, and some offices on the second floor.

Herbert Griffin, general sales manager of Nicholas Power, who delivered the talk before the A. P. S. presented on preceding page

Architects for the house will be H. Ryan of Seattle, in association with Dobell & Griffith of Aberdeen.

The new house in Aberdeen will form an important new link in the chain of thirty houses operated by Jensen-VonHerberg. The chain embraces leading theatres in many cities, including Great Falls and Butte, Mont.; Portland, Ore., and Wenatchee, Yakima, Seattle, Tacoma, Bremerton and other smaller towns in Washington.—Prager.

New Outdoor Set Lighting



Electrical men of the motion picture industry are strongly interested in the radical development of a new lighting system for gigantic outdoor sets, that has taken place during the filming of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" at Universal City. Harry D. Brown, chief engineer of the electrical department of Universal City for several years, is in charge of the biggest illumination project in the history of picture making.

Instead of having a few sun arcs boring down on the mass of darkness and dissolving it into light for the long shots and then moving every light on the set into different and closer position for the closeups, the lights used in the spectacular "Notre Dame" remain practically stationary. Only about one-third of them are moved for any one shot, even less on the average.

The reason for this is simple; the total power on the set, estimated in popular terms, is 160,000,000 candle power, or 200,000,000 watts. This is twice as much as is necessary. But the result is that with all this light turned on there is no need to change and concentrate the light for the closeups. The increased expense in lighting cost is only a fraction of the amount that is saved in time—with the overhead running from $1,000 to $1,500 an hour.

Simplified Electricity for Projectionists

Alternating Current Machinery

Lesson VII—Part IV

Transformers

IN order to give a clearer explanation of the working of the different forms of induction motors which were scheduled to follow the description of the synchronous motor an apparent divergence from the original outline is necessary.

Since the operation of an induction is quite similar to that of a transformer, the action of the latter device will be given as the next logical step leading up to a description of the induction motor.

Use of Transformer

The projectionist thinks of the transformer essentially as a device used in connection with an A. C. arc, to enable him to reduce the voltage of the line to a value proper for the operation of the arc. These transformers are variously known as inductors, compensators, economizers, etc. Practically all of them are provided with means to enable the projectionist to vary the voltage across the arc over a range great enough to obtain different currents.

Aside from reducing the voltage of line to that of the arc, for projection purposes, transformers serve a variety of other uses such as transmitting electric energy economically over great distances; starting induction motors; balancing three wire systems; providing power for low voltage apparatus; operating street lighting systems; etc.

These usages naturally give use to different types of transformers since one type could hardly be expected to serve all purposes. Thus we have:

AS TO TYPE

Constant Potential Transformers: step-up, step-down, no voltage transformation
Constant current transformers
Current transformers
Auto-transformers
Single phase transformers
Three phase transformers

AS TO METHOD OF COOLING

Self cooled transformers
Air cooled transformers
Water cooled transformers
Oil cooled transformers

AS TO USE

Power transformers
Lighting transformers
Street lighting transformers
Instrument transformers (for metering)
Starting transformers
Toy, bell-ringing, etc.

There are really innumerable uses to which this instrument may be put and the above is but at best an incomplete list. However, it will serve to indicate some of various types.

Construction

A transformer consists essentially of three parts; a primary coil; a secondary coil; and a closed magnetic path joining these two coils called the core. There are two principal ways in which this core can be employed and this gives rise to a further classification of transformers as to the kind of core used. Thus we have core type and shell type transformers. Fig. 116-A shows the three phase core type and Fig. 116-B shows the three phase shell type.

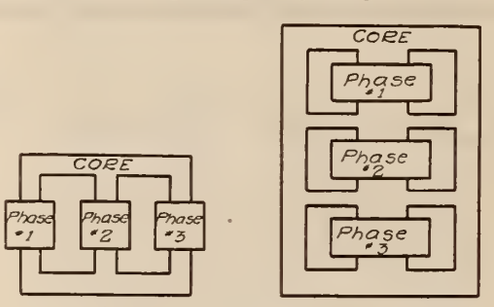

Figure 116

When a piece of soft iron comes under the influence of a coil of wire through which an alternating current is flowing an alternating flux will thread the iron and this, in turn, will cause currents to flow in the iron similar to those shown in Fig. 117-A. Now it is important that these "eddy" currents, as they are called, be kept as small as possible as they represent a needless waste of power and so decrease the efficiency of the transformer. The method commonly employed to do this is shown in Fig. 117-B. The core is built up of thin sheets of soft iron with some insulating material such as shellac, placed between them in order to place a high resistance in the path of the eddy currents. This method of construction does not entirely eliminate the eddy currents but considerably reduces them.

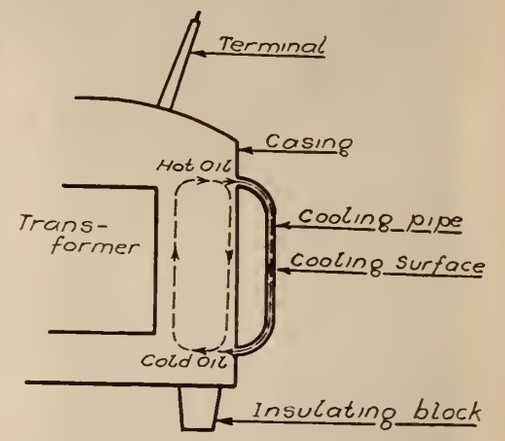

Figure 118

Cooling Transformers

Since transformers become heated up from the power lost in the windings and core some method must be used, in the case of large machines, to dissipate this heat as otherwise the insulation on the windings would soon lose its insulating properties.

Small transformers, several kilowatts capacity, do not require special cooling devices since the surface exposed is large compared with the volume. Now it is a fact that generally speaking the power losses in a transformer increase as the volume of the machine, whereas the radiating surface, which dissipates these losses in form of heat, increase only as the area exposed. Hence the losses increase faster than the radiating surface as the size of the transformer is increased so that large instruments require special cooling devices in order to carry off the surplus heat.

For transformers up to about 500 k.w. capacity, the coils and core are immersed in oil. The oil next to the windings will naturally heat first and this will rise and flow outward to the walls of casing where it is cooled. Cold oil will then take the place of heated oil next to the windings and thus a constant circulation of oil is maintained inside the casing as long as the load is connected.

In still larger machines a greater radiating surface must be provided and one way of accomplishing this is shown in Fig. 118. Pipes are built into the sides of the casing and the circulating currents of oil flow in at the top, are cooled in the pipe on the way down and then go out the bottom to repeat the cycle. Another method (not shown) makes use of iron flanges bolted to the sides of the casing similar to those used on the carbon holders of a high intensity arc and the increased surface thus provided keeps the transformer from heating up not more than

NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY, INC.

Cleveland, Ohio San Francisco, Cal.

The Capitol theatre, Jackson, Mich., offers a commendable illustration of artistic and efficient theatre design. This house is owned by the McLaren Amusement Co., Inc., W. S. McLaren, mbanaging director. The house costs $275,000 and has a seating capacity of 1,230

Theatre Included in Amusement Park

Marlow's Park Corporation has secured a franchise for twenty-five years from the city of Herrin, Ill., which will give them the privilege of operating an amusement park, which they intend to erect, every day in the week, including Sunday.

This park will be located three blocks from the heart of the city, including a theatre with a seating capacity of 3,000, showing vaudeville and pictures. There will be a modern swimming pool, 100x200, to be supplied with salt water from a well 1,200 feet deep. There will aso be a dance hall 75x120. There will be at least ten or fifteen different amusement concessions in this park

Work was begun recently and is intended to be ready for operation May 1, 1924, and as Marlow's Park.

Sold subject to approval by all dealers. Write today for illustrated folder.

"Capitol" Another Metropolitan House to Jackson's Theatre List

JACKSON will have in the Capitol a theatre as metropolitan and beautiful as the playhouses in any city of Michigan. No detail has been overlooked to make the new Capitol truly a theatre beautiful.

Lights at the entrance will be very brilliant and the effect will be further heightened by the new electric signs, the new theatre sign and the electric attraction sign over the marquee. Through the lobby and foyer the lights will grow gradually dimmer and in this way the sudden change from bright lights to the dark theatre interior will be done away with.

Lighting fixtures for the theatre will be developed in wrought iron in polychrome effect. A flower design is carried out in natural colors and crystal drops add to the charming effect.

The interior has been entirely decorated in an artistic color arrangement including Maxfield Parrish blue, Tudor pink and silver gray combined with antique gold.

Smaller lights on the side walls will also be done in wrought iron and lights in the boxes, foyer and lobby will be covered with soft silk shades. An unusual effect will be obtained with some small casement windows at the side of the theatre. These will be covered with silk hangings and lights placed at the top will shine through the silk covered glass.

The entrance is entirely finished in antique gold an done will enter the enclosure containing the ticket booth through French doors. Another set of French doors leads into the lobby with its gold mirrored doors on either side. The ticket office at the front, in which are installed the newest devices making for prompt and efficient service, will be for the use of motion picture patrons, while the ticket office at the rear of the lobby will be used for attractions requiring reserved seats.

The foyer and mezzanine floors will be made most attractive in their appointments. The floors and stairs will be heavily carpeted in blue floor coverings which will also be used in the theatre aisles and the boxes. Kaltex furniture in blue and gold will carry out the color arrangement and furnish a comfortable resting place for patrons. Beautiful mirrors with polychrome frames will also be hung here and pictures, copies of famous paintings and works of the best masters, will be placed on the walls. On the mezzanine floor several canary birds will add their note of cheerfulness.

Entrance to the orchestra and balcony of the Capitol theatre, Jackson, Mich.

Blue drapes will hang at the head of the aisles and in the loges, at the rear of the theatre, comfortable armchairs will be placed.

The ushers will wear smart gray uniforms, which are being made by Marshall Field & Company, Chicago.

55 degrees C above the room temperature.

A water cooled transformer is shown in Fig. 119. In this type the coils and core are immersed in oil and cooling pipes are placed in this oil. Water is then forced through the pipes which serves to keep the oil cool. The rate of flow of the water must be carefully gauged since if not enough is provided the transformer will heat up whereas if too much is provided the coils will become too cold and moisture is then likely to condense on them thus weakening the insulation.

There are still other methods of cooling transformers but the illustrations given will serve to indicate the method by which these machines are kept within a safe operating temperature.

$200,000 Theatre for Los Angeles

Construction on a new 1,000-seat theatre at the corner of Pasadena Avenue and Avenue 56, Los Angeles, Cal., will begin shortly according to announcement by West Coast Theatres, Inc., following the closing of contracts with the Messrs. S. E. Philpott and J. A. Lewis, owners of the property who will construct a block containing stores, apartments and the theatre on a lot 100 ft. x 151 ft.

The property will be cleared immediately so that foundation work can begin within a short time. Approximately $175,000 is the investment incurred, while West Coast Theatres, Inc. and C. L. Langley, Inc., who have leased the theatre for fifteen years, will equip it with every modern facility known in show business. It is planned to make the new house the most elaborate neighborhood theatre of its kind, and orders will be placed for 500 loge chairs and 500 leather cushion chairs, which will comprise the sitting capacity. A $25,000 pipe organ will be installed as well as modern ventilating and heating equipment. The stores will front on both Pasadena Avenue and Avenue 56.

As soon as the construction of the bare walls has been completed three shifts of decorators and painters will work on the interior of the theatre.

Newsettes from the West

The American theatre, Enid, Okla., opened its doors recently under the new management of H. G. Manning. It has been completely remodelled into a first class motion picture and vaudeville theatre, one of the finest in Enid. New booth equipment has been installed.

The Empress theatre, Enid, Okla., under the management of Mr. Davison, has recently been reopened after being remodelled into a first class picture theatre. A new organ has been installed to furnish music for the pictures.

Work has started on the new Criterion theatre, Enid, Okla., and will be ready to reopen by December 1. Power's machines and other late type equipment will be installed at an early date.

C. Dunn has recently sold the Electric theatre, Saint Frances, Kan., to E. W. Eggeston, of Atwood, Kan. Motion pictures will be the policy. J. Earl Hayes, recent manager of the Grand theatre, Moberly, Mo., has leased the Yale Theatre Building, Macon, Mo., and will open it as the Royal theatre at an early date. New equipment is being installed.

The Elks theatre, Port Arthur, Tex., has been very extensively repaired and will reopen with pictures as the present policy. Messrs. Goss and Williams are the new managers, both oldtimers in the theatrical game.

H. W. Hall has recently purchased the Mission theatre at Beeville, Tex., from A. F. Rees. Will be operated as a first class picture house.

J. J. Morgan, general manager of the Denver Theatre Supply Co., has just returned from his vacation. The Denver Theatre Supply Co., Denver, Colo., have recently moved in their new store at 2106 Broadway, one of the largest supply houses in the middle west states.—W. Trout.

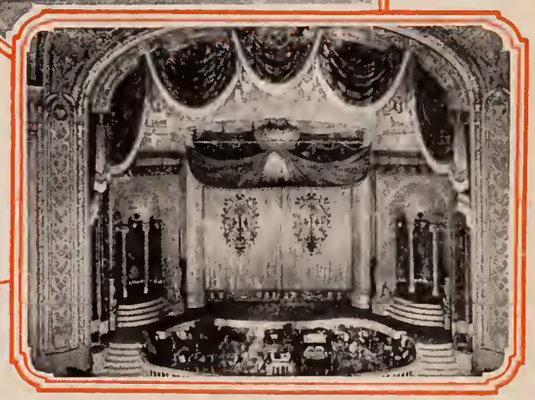
Gentlemen:



We feel that a note of appreciation is due you for the wonderful Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Organ that you installed for us.

The matter of selecting the proper instrument for this theatre was one of great concern to us and no time or money was spared in making our decision. That our judgment was correct in the selection of the Wurlitzer Hope-Jones Unit Organ is evidenced by the prolonged applause accorded our organist at every performance. We honestly believe something would be lacking in our theatre without this wonder instrument.

Very truly yours,
BALABAN & KATZ,
Per Samuel Katz

TIVOLI THEATRE CHICAGO
One of the world's finest

Despite the enviable reputation enjoyed by the WURLITZER HOPE-JONES UNIT ORGAN for its beautiful tone quality and enduring construction—it is available at prices and terms which place it within easy reach of the smallest theatres demanding the best in music. A WURLITZER ORGAN in your theatre places it in the same class with the nation's best.

In America's Finest Theatres

Here is the testimony of the world's greatest exhibitors of high-class motion pictures — Balaban & Katz — quoting their reasons for selecting the WURLITZER HOPE-JONES UNIT ORGAN for the correct musical interpretation of their feature photoplay presentations at the Tivoli. They realized that better music brings bigger attendance—and makes first-comers regular patrons. The WURLITZER UNIT ORGAN provides music in closest harmony with film pictures—soft and sweet in tone, or inspiring in fullness. A good organ is an investment which pays for itself in increased box office receipts in a short time. Before buying an Organ do yourself the justice to investigate the merits of the WURLITZER. It is so far superior to any other instrument of its kind, there can be no real basis for comparison. Write today for illustrated descriptive catalogue, advising the seating capacity of your house. You incur no obligation whatever.

PRINTS THAT LAST

THE condition of a print after it has been projected reflects the care with which it has been made in the laboratory. Photographic excellence, while the first essential, is not the only thing to look for in first class prints. Distributors and exhibitors have a right to expect durability as well. A poor print of a good picture does no one any good.

STANDARD PRINTS are not only better photographically. They stand up under hard usage. The scientific process by which they are made and the care taken in every phase of their creation give them longer life. Some of the industry's leading producers realize this and their work goes through STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES from camera to screen. They have found distributors and exhibitors better satisfied with STANDARD PRINTS.

"Bluebeard's 8th Wife"
Screen version by Sada Cowan
From Charlton Andrews' adaptation of Alfred Savoir's play

EVERYBODY reports big business with "Bluebeard's 8th Wife." Here are a couple of reports from Exhibitor's Herald:

"Packed my house for four big days. Pleased 100 per cent. It's a great entertainment, just the right length."—George Rea, Colonial Theatre, Washington, O.

"Gloria's best picture and a sure-fire box office attraction. Good story, well directed. Six reels of excellent entertainment."—Arthur Richardson, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

NOT one critic failed to praise this production. It has done big business everywhere. In Fort Madison, Wis., where the whole town voted as to what should be the opening attraction at the New Orpheum Theatre, more than half the votes were for "Hollywood."

Motion Picture News says: "This exceptional picture will create box office records everywhere. The whimsical story, the humor, the title, and the long list of stars and celebrities will stimulate deep interest in any community. Get it quick, boys!"

Adapted by Ouida Bergere
From the story by Hector Turnbull

POLA NEGRI'S first American picture in which she plays a sympathetic role with a happy ending, is an assured success.

Motion Picture News: "'The Cheat' marks the comeback of Pola Negri. One hundred per cent. better than 'Bella Donna' and the best acting the Polish actress has done since 'Passion.'"

Moving Picture World: "Pola Negri is marvelous. No overacting here, just histrionic perfection such as we are seldom given on the screen. As a production equally good from every standpoint, 'The Cheat' is hard to beat."

THREE in a row for Jim Cruze—"The Covered Wagon," "Hollywood," and "Ruggles of Red Gap."

"Ruggles of Red Gap?" says the News, "A delightful comedy gem, excellently directed and acted by artists who understand real entertainment values!" And Moving Picture World: "If your patrons enjoy good, spontaneous comedy that will make them laugh out loud, don't hesitate to give them this one. They will thank you for it."

And watch out for the next Cruze hit—"To the Ladies."

THOMAS MEIGHAN

"Woman-Proof"
by George Ade
Directed by Alfred E. Green

IT'S a known fact that no star has the surefire universal following of Tom Meighan. Rich or poor, highbrow or lowbrow, men and women—he brings 'em all out.

And when you can offer Meighan in "Woman-Proof"—Meighan in a love-comedy by the author of "Back Home and Broke" and with the same director and leading woman (Lila Lee)—you can expect the records to topple.

"Woman-Proof" is an ideal Meighan vehicle with an ideal title for exploiting. Grab it!

HARD-BOILED New York went crazy over "Zaza," and it had to be held over an extra week. Louella O. Parsons, of the N. Y. Telegraph, saw the picture on a Thursday afternoon and reports: "Every seat was filled and there were many people standing. Tell me when such a condition has prevailed in any of the Broadway theatres at an early afternoon performance."

Variety's showman-critic says: "A real bet. A good picture for the box office and the screen."

with
Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi, Lew Cody and Conrad Nagel.
Adapted by John Lynch from the play by Samuel Shipman

THIS picture is cleaning up all over the country. It is exactly the sort of box office fare the public wants.

Variety says: "Here is a whale of a picture for entertainment purposes. Sure-fire for any type of audience. Featuring of Hope Hampton, Nita Naldi, Lew Cody and Conrad Nagel gives more power at the box office." Harrison's Reports say: "100 per cent. satisfaction."

"THE COVERED WAGON" proved they like worthwhile "westerns" filmed in a big, striking way. So does "Salomy Jane."

Moving Picture World says of "Salomy Jane": "Admirers of Bret Harte fiction will find excellent entertainment in Paramount's presentation of one of his popular stories. The picture has the romantic and melo-dramatic character of the West of '49 well reproduced. It should bring desirable box office results everywhere."

Adapted by Doris Schroeder
Directed by Victor Fleming

AT last—a Zane Grey's story filmed as Zane Grey's hundreds of thousands of readers want to see it. The author himself declares in a signed statement that it is "the finest western picture I ever saw." Audiences everywhere are echoing this opinion.

Moving Picture World says: "What one might expect from Zane Grey's novel—a Western with a punch—has been produced by Paramount. It is a stirring example of this popular type of picture and should have a large following."

Now in production—Zane Grey's "Call of the Canyon" and "Heritage of the Desert."

THIS picture, marking the return of Madge Kennedy to the screen after two years' absence, has met with large, enthusiastic audiences everywhere. In New York the critics were especially appreciative. Here are some reviews:

N. Y. World: "The performance of Miss Kennedy is one of the bright bits of acting of the current season."

N. Y. News: "One of the loveliest actresses on the silver screen. You should see Madge Kennedy in her comeback."

"THE SILENT PARTNER"
with
Leatrice Joy
Owen Moore and Robert Edeson
Adapted by Sada Cowan from Maximilian Foster's Saturday Evening Post serial.

EXHIBITORS tell us they've never seen a picture that grips the women like "The Silent Partner." They eat it up. And, of course, that means sure success. It's a big, sincere drama about marriage handled in a startlingly frank way.

Arthur Richardson, Schroon Lake, N.Y., exhibitor, sums it up: "Good picture that holds the interest throughout. Both stars exceptionally good. An excellent box office attraction."

WILLIAM de Mille pictures are aristocrats of the screen. They bring out the highbrows as well as your regular audience and give your theatre prestige.

"The Marriage Maker," from the play in which William Faversham scored a big stage success, was hailed by the New York papers as the outstanding film novelty of the new season. It dares to be original about love and marriage and reaps the rewards of originality.

Now in production—William de Mille's "Everyday Love."

"WITH THE EXCEPTION

ONCE more the Universal delivers the goods while others are delivering promises.

With all the big publicity promises about "new sales plans" and "giving the exhibitor a new deal," it looks to me as though the only big hits the exhibitor can get while they're hot are the Universal's.

Did you read the editorial in the Moving Picture World, in which the editor published a letter he had received from "a small town exhibitor?" The exhibitor wrote:

"We fellows in the small towns have not been able to get the season started. I made a little jaunt to five of the neighboring towns recently and without exception THEY HAD NOT BOUGHT NOR WERE THEY ABLE TO BUY a single new picture of the so-called big features. Such is the case with us at the present time WITH THE EXCEPTION OF THE UNIVERSAL'S JEWELS."

I hope you will let that fact sink deep into the old bean. I hope you will read it carefully enough to get the full significance of it.

For one thing it means that nobody is keeping promises and living up to advertising EXCEPT THE UNIVERSAL.

For another thing it means that right now when the exhibitor needs the red hot hits while they are piping hot, he cannot get them EXCEPT FROM THE UNIVERSAL.

And for another thing it means that the exhibitors are sore at all prices EXCEPT THE UNIVERSAL'S.

Except Universal—always and forever except Universal! You hear it everywhere — throughout the United States and Canada and England and South America and the whole wide world. The Universal is always on the job, ready to do a clean-cut business with any and every clean-cut exhibitor.

This good will is the greatest stuff on earth. It is better than cash, because cash can dwindle away. It is better than stocks and bonds, because stocks and bonds are cold blooded things even though it is nice to have them. It is the thing that warms the cockles of the heart and makes the game worth playing.

Universal has less trouble with exhibitors than any concern in the business. It is the EXCEPTION. Exhibitors damn producers right and left but they always EXCEPT the Universal.

Thousands of exhibitors this very minute are just as glad as I am that Universal has the pictures. They take a personal pride in the fact. To my dying day I will glory in the knowledge that OUR CUSTOMERS ARE OUR FRIENDS.

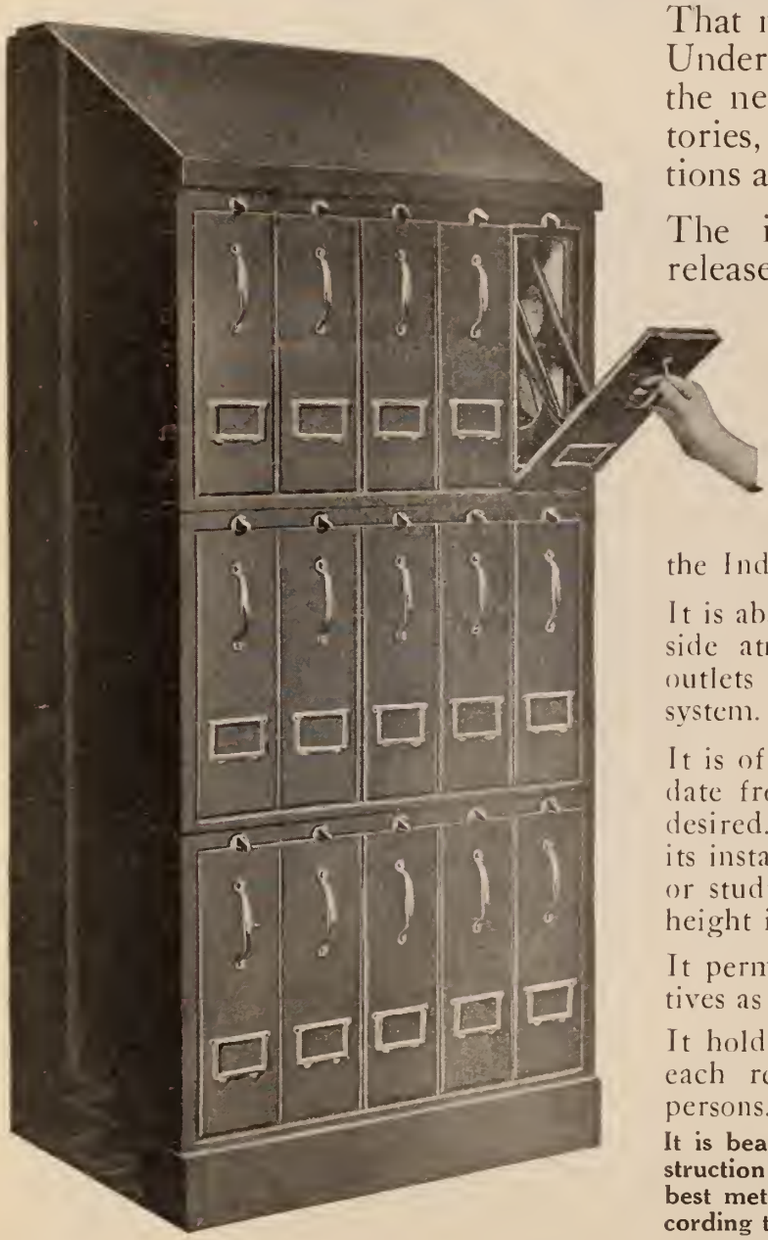
A Thrilling Moving Gripping Drama That Strikes Home



ANNOUNCEMENT

FOR years there has existed a need for a device perfectly adapted to the storage of films, secure from fire and theft, yet permitting easy access to them by authorized parties.

That was economical of storage space and as flexible in regard to expansion as a sectional book case.

That met all the requirements of the Fire Underwriting Boards and was able to fulfill the needs of producers, exhibitors, laboratories, projectionists, educational institutions and industrial concerns.

The increasing quantity and value of releases has constantly added to the need, but heretofore no one device has been ONE HUNDRED PER CENT efficient along ALL of the above requirements.

After years of test and research, the AMERICAN FILM-SAFE is now in production and at the service of the Industry at large.

It is absolutely fireproof and is vented to the outside atmosphere, by means of patented valved outlets which lead into a progressive ventilation system.

It is of sectional construction and will accommodate from five to five thousand reels, as may be desired. Its flexibility of arrangement will permit its installation in any projection room, laboratory or studio, irrespective of whether floor space or height is the limiting factor.

It permits of the classification of prints or negatives as if they were books or documents.

It holds film absolutely secure against theft, yet each reel is instantly accessible to authorized persons.

It is beautiful in appearance and the details of its construction compare favorably, and even excel, that of the best metal furniture; it may be finished in any color according to the wishes of the individual purchaser.

Installation plans and estimates of cost will be furnished free, upon receipt of a rough diagram of your projection room or storage space and information as to the number of films to be stored.

It costs nothing to investigate and it may save you hundreds or even thousands of dollars. Write today.

The Star

Mae Marsh returns to the screen in this big picture with all the artistry and charm that brought and kept her fan popularity. She is at her very best here—and that says a lot. She is dainty, fascinating, appealing; sure to please.

The Picture

The picture is as good as the star, and has everything for all classes of patrons. A beautiful love story and lots of action; tense drama interspersed with genuine comedy and real pathos, and a climax that is without equal.

"Salvos of Applause"

Audience Enjoys Singing Old Songs At Metropolitan

The overflow crowds that packed Crandall's Metropolitan theater yesterday had the time of their lives. They took part in the entertainment, so they know it was good. It was this way: Following hard on the heels of last week's "Beside a Babbling Brook" musical novelty, the Metropolitan this week presents for the first time in Washington a recl called "Close Harmony," which visualizes a group of old song hits as first release in a "Sing Them Again" series. The lyrics are flashed on the screen at intervals and the entire house joins in the songfest. Yesterday's audiences greeted this innovation with salvos of applause and, as implied, had the time of their lives. This, however, contrasted but one

Mr. Al Christie,
Sunset at Gower St.,
Los Angeles, California.

My dear Mr. Christie:

In looking over the various theatres in Los Angeles and watching the situation in general, here also, it seems to me that the Christie Comedy is an outstanding feature on all entertainments offered at the big theatres. To me this is not a surprising fact because, being an exhibitor, operating six theatres, I have learned the value of a comedy carrying the Christie Trade-mark.

I might inform you that Christie Comedies are booked in our theatres without being reviewed and that these are the only comedies that are booked in this manner. I can also let you know that our advertising efforts generally are concentrated on our feature picture, but whenever a Christie Comedy is on the program it is included in our advertising throughout.

Right in line with the high entertainment value of your product is Mr. G. C. Blumenthal in San Francisco, who is responsible for placing them in this territory. Between the Christie Trade-mark and Mr. Blumenthal, there is nothing left to be desired.

Thanking you again for your kindness to me during my visit to Los Angeles, and with very best wishes, I am

Sincerely,

Louis R. Greenfield

LIFE

Robert E. Sherwood, famous film critic, advises exhibitors to pass up a few of the so-called "box office hit" features and play some worth while short subjects of which he lists CHRISTIE'S "ROLL ALONG" AT THE HEAD OF THE COMEDIES.

Sherwood says: "Feature pictures are becoming so long these days that there is scarcely any room left on the average program for spice and snap. Seven, eight, and so on up to twelve reels is too much to devote to one subject, particularly when that subject is dull, hackneyed and stupid to start with. One of the million odd things the world needs is a little more variety.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: "Appealing heart interest and thrilling melodrama vie with each other to grip the interest in this one."

EXHIBITOR'S HERALD: "Good melodrama—well acted is always popular if it contains sentimental appeal and plenty of action. 'Her Reputation' moves along swiftly and holds attention for this reason."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Here is an Ince production the thrills of which will vibrate the spine of the most jaded patron. Into this film has been built not one but a half dozen big moments; any one of which would have been sufficient to put over an ordinary film. Any audience will find entertainment in this one."

PORTLAND OREGONIAN: "Thomas H. Ince has acquired his reputation for thrills honestly, the flood and the fire scenes in 'Her Reputation' are convincing and marked with a genuineness in their enactment seldom attained in similar screen efforts."

CHICAGO HERALD: "Good old-fashioned melodrama for a change. Flood, fire and automobile wreck give the visible thrills to those who get no kick out of mental anguish."

CHICAGO POST: "The events, although melodramatic, in 'Her Reputation' are set forth convincingly and the fine acting, especially that of May McAvoy, gives the play an atmosphere of realism rare in such an exciting feature."

departure for the star—who, because of his adaptability for the role of the courageous swordsman, succeeds in establishing himself firmly on the heights.

The Barthelmess of the simple, though rugged homespun drama is thoroughly at home in costume drama. Not since he reached stardom has he had such dramatic opportunities as are presented here. Director John Robertson has permitted him to get the utmost from every scene, dwelling long enough upon the romantic episodes to show a different Barthelmess.

This swashbuckling story holds one in a tight embrace because of its emotional sweep —to say nothing of the spectacular appeal so well established in the gorgeous sets—all of which have been faithfully reproduced by the art director, Everett Shinn. The sponsors have seemingly co-operated in perfect harmony to record accurately a story replete with clashing elements—a story rich in daring exploits, plot, intrigue, adventure and romance."

Specialization

J. D. WILLIAMS, one of those few who have always visioned the motion picture well into the future, makes an interesting prophecy.

Within a year, he states, there will be at least five hundred picture theatres in this country devoted wholly to "big" pictures and giving two regular and specified performances daily. They will charge a good admission price and guarantee that the picture shown will not be seen in other local theatres for a certain length of time.

We carried an editorial a few months ago calling attention to the new specialization in the making of pictures—as contrasted with the old rule of volume production.

And we added that specialization in distribution and exploitation must logically be used with these "specially" made pictures.

"You don't go far enough," says Mr. Williams. "Specialization in production in distribution, in exploitation—yes. But there must also be specialization in exhibition."

Hence—the 500 specialized theatres.

The public undoubtedly wants the "big" picture today. The public is in an a la carte and no longer a table d'hote mind.

And Mr. Williams undoubtedly is right. The special, "big" picture cannot be sold or advertised or presented as program pictures have been. It cannot be shackled by past policies.

The only fly we see in the ointment is the "bigness" of the pictures. Assuredly they must be big if all this special treatment is to be made to pay. And of all the various elements that make pictures big in the public eye there's one essential that stands biggest. That's—the story!

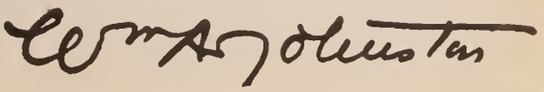
High Salaries

R. A. ROWLAND, just back from Hollywood, tackles the high cost of films in his usual blunt fashion.

It is principally due, he says, to the fact that production is centered in one small place; and in that small place there is a limited number of desirable players—headliners, you might style them; and everybody wants them at once.

Hence the high salaries.

Of course.



Three years ago in Hollywood everybody wanted leading men all at once. There were only a half dozen in demand and, naturally, salaries became scandalous. One man got $2200 a week so easily and from so many sources that he became quite bored over it all.

"Why," it was suggested to a few producers, "don't you jump east and get some good actors? You could pick up another half dozen at the Lambs Club any afternoon."

"Well," they said, "they were too busy; and they hadn't foreseen the situation."

And it is just the same today. About seventy "headliners" are in constant demand in Hollywood today. And there are seventy just as good people working in stock right now.

But everybody is too busy to go forth and find them.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WITH all due respect to our best directors, it has taken Chaplin to show them the way toward revolutionizing the technique of screen drama. His position in the industry is so high that he could afford to experiment where others were forced to bow to the conventions. We are not saying that Chaplin is a pioneer in his treatment of suggestion. What he has done is to go considerably further in that treatment. Others might have placed revolutionary twists in single episodes. He is revolutionary throughout. And because he is Chaplin he is certain to command attention.

A genius at pantomine, he has adapted his methods so that his players act with the same economy of effort. When he is acting one doesn't need boldly planted scenes to catch their meaning. He has always been understood with titles almost negligible. And so this master of pantomime has made a picture of pantomime—one which is thoroughly intelligible to a child—though a child may not comprehend the theme.

He doesn't employ the customary effects. No cloudbursts—no massive sets—no elaborate emotions. He portrays life as it is—in an even sing-song way—life which carries on evenly, taking what comes, accepting the worst with the best. If his hero commits suicide through unrequited love or because a selfish mother would not condone his mistake—the girl takes the tragedy with deep feeling, yet she has to live her life—and hers is not the suicide way. She goes to the country to live a placid existence. The wealthy roué shrugs his shoulders and disappears. It isn't his sin any more than it is the woman's. She has accepted the easiest way—and she doesn't pay the conventional price of sinking to the depths of forcing her lover to make amends. What a vital touch is that final scene when the roué and a companion are motoring along the country road. The friend inquires: "By the way what has ever become of Marie St. Clair?" The answer is a shrug of the shoulders. Meanwhile Marie, seated in a peasant's cart, passes them in their automobile—the vehicles going in opposite directions. Naturally they don't see each other.

These indirect touches saturate the picture from inception to conclusion. It is even suggested that she might eventually become a Parisian demi-monde since her father expels her and the artist's father refuses to give her shelter. When she does become a mistress she takes it as a matter of course—something unavoidable. Pangs of conscience do not trouble her—and yet she is not a bold, daring creature. She is just a pleasure-loving woman with a fondness for luxury. In other words, Chaplin carries out the old adage—not only with this character, but with all of them—"there's a little bit of good in the worst of us, and a little bit of bad in the best of us."

Such revolutionary treatment may offend many who have grown accustomed to seeing virtue and villainy sharply divided—with virtue represented in a sanctified hero and villainy exposed by a scoundrel with cloven hoofs. Drama doesn't need to carry a string always. It may be found in a placid, even existence. But it is being enacted everywhere and often—real often. It is not expressed in terms of "How dare you!" It is not always expressed with a wringing of hands and a tearing of hair. Sometimes quarrelsome couples laugh when their anger has abated. There is a slight tiff in the Chaplin picture. She scolds him a little. He takes it good-naturedly. And she says: "I never want to see you again." He replies: "Call me up sometime."

And so this story is told—not a big story we admit. Merely a little slice of life told in a very simple, human way. It is even familiar in its outline but oh!—the vast difference in treatment. The daring strokes, the clever satire, the simplicity of expression—the things which make up the everyday round of life—these are complete and accurate.

Charles Chaplin has started something. Perhaps it is too revolutionary to please the picture public long schooled in the conventions. What he has introduced will be adopted. Those who do not subscribe to Chaplin's ideas will live to enjoy them. Because it is certain that the technique employed here will be adopted far and wide. It is the only way if the screen is to progress.

Economy of effort. Economy of effort. That will be the slogan. With the public educated to absorb the simple, natural methods of suggestion no director would dare resort to the stereotyped standardization of films. "What's wrong with this picture?" may well be the war cry if the director has veered away from the Chaplin idea.

YALE UNIVERSITY has recorded history and Pathe should make history when "Columbus," the first of the "Chronicles of America," is presented next Sunday night at the Yale Club, New York. The Chronicles are the series of compact volumes published upon separate phases of American history by the Yale University Press. Screen patrons will be interested to know that the historians and dramatists who have executed the work have stuck to historical facts and records without distorting them with the conventional love interest, "punch incident," and other devices of the producer.

The Yale Press hasn't departed from truth and accuracy. Furthermore the sponsors haven't employed high salaried and over exploited stars to enact the historical figures of our country.

There is not a tinge of "highbrowism" about the Chronicles—which snap judgment might have indicated with some because they were conceived by historians and professors of Yale. The sponsors felt secure because they knew that the pictures would prove acceptable in every higher institute of learning, church and school. They also felt that if the public-at-large could view them they would create a wide demand and prove immensely popular.

The professional verdict upon these pictures is most praiseworthy. They carry sound dramatic interest made convincing because they are founded upon facts. There is evidence that they were a work of sincere enthusiasm because of the infinite care given to details. The story of Columbus is a tense drama—a drama of a daring explorer whose vision and courage carried him far over the seas—in a long, hard struggle to succeed.

The Yale Press is to be congratulated for adding its mark toward screen upliftment and Pathe deserves congratulations for realizing the entertainment values of these Chronicles by taking them for distribution.

GEORGE ARLISS will return to the United States upon the completion of the London run of his stage play, "The Green Goddess." He is scheduled to make another picture for Distinctive.

IT'S a well known fact in the thespian world that an actor given a role wherein he is allowed to appear in costume goes the limit in expressing emotion. The swank of the period he represents permits him to strut accordingly.

This may be the case with bad actors, but not with good actors. Take Lewis Stone for example. In "Scaramouche" he has an actor-proof role—one which gives him unlimited opportunities to play the dandy. He plays the dandy sure enough, but with no suggestion of making himself unduly important. We've never seen a more graceful figure in costume than Stone. He is not only in character, but his acting is also in good taste. He makes the pompous, lordly, lazy aristocrat completely fascinating. He puts a minimum of effort in his carriage, his gestures, his postures. A turn of the eyebrow or the finger speaks volumes. He frowns upon the republicans with the scorn of one accustomed to a superior station in life.

Though the picture carries romantic figures as well as such historical figures as Danton, it is this suave popinjay in silks and satins who compels the deepest interest. Whether his attention is paid toward a kiss on a pair of red lips or toward thrusting his sword in a masculine heart, Stone makes the character vital and appealing.

Watching him over a score of years we have yet to see him in a poor characterization. He always lends tone and dignity to his portrayals. And he is always what he pretends to represent.

While speaking of acting, "Scaramouche" is well interpreted throughout. Ramon Novarro in his biggest role emerges as a finished romantic actor, while George Siegmann is the most vivid Danton of them all—and we've had quite a few Dantons the past few years. His work here is limited to a bit of speech-making and leading the frenzied republicans, but so forceful is his sketch that it stands forth like a cameo.

Rex Ingram is a masterful guide toward correct interpretation. He always has his players in character and gets results by compelling them to use restraint. Another mark in his favor is his progressive way of building a story. And he can reveal that same story by developing his character. He never beats around the bush in reaching a climax.

COURSES in Photoplay Composition will be given at Columbia University during the winter and spring sessions, in which practical instruction in cinematic plot composition will receive special attention. There will also be a course of Motion Picture Production in which students will have experience with the functions of production by actually producing a picture. In addition pictures will be shown in the classroom to illustrate the technique and artistry used in production.

Five topics of study are also included in the course. These include the physics of production including a study of the nature and phenomena of light; the chemistry of production, especially the manufacture of raw stock, developing, printing, tinting and toning; the mechanics of production, with consideration of various types of motion picture cameras and their method of use; the functions of production, with analysis of the duties of scenario writer, production manager, director, actor, art director, cameraman, and editor; the factors of production including types of photography, as straight, trick, natural color, and microscopic, and the making of cartoons and technical drawings.

The instructor is Rowland Rogers, Ph.B., J. D., formerly editor of Paramount and Goldwyn Pictographs, and production manager of Bray Studios.

Because pictures are here to stay and because they affect the lives, habits, and culture of millions of people who see them mostly during their leisure hours each day, we predict that the screen and all it involves will be studied sooner or later in every college of the country.

Might better put the boys and girls studying the screen instead of thrusting the dead languages upon them. If they had any choice in the matter Greek and Latin would soon be in the discard.

NAT ROTHSTEIN was the recipient last week of a large silver flask, the gift of Thomas H. Ince. There is an inscription on it—an appreciation by Mr. Ince of Nat's services—and we may add—good fellowship. It reads as follows:

To Nat—"Hoping that you can keep this as full as you do the Front Pages!"

THOS. H. INCE.

The flask will come in handy on those cold October days when Nat swings through the fairway. Those afternoons when Nat is relieved of official duties and is not holing out in one, he is welcome to the News office to demonstrate the proper grip, stance, swing and follow-through.

MOTION pictures will show for the first time the growth of an American skyscraper, when the film, now being taken of the thirty-two story Straus Building, Michigan Avenue's highest office building, is released in December. When finished the pictures will have made it possible for theatre audiences to see within twenty minutes the growth of a skyscraper from the digging of the caissons to the completed building.

In order to carry this out, a special motion picture cage has been constructed in Grant Park, Chicago, where every morning for the next three months, a film operator will take twenty to thirty feet of film. Close-ups will also be taken of the placing of the tile arch flooring, the setting of the steel columns, the riveting gangs, and numerous human interest features.

When completed the pictures will be loaned to engineering schools for the purpose of illustrating building construction methods.

PICTURE COSTS AND

Leading Distributors Give

HAVE production costs risen to the danger point? Are exhibition values inflated? Is the "big picture" a menace or a blessing? What will be the effect on the industry, and the public's attitude toward the screen, of the rush of specials now being released and in prospect?

These questions, taken together, form a subject of vital interest to all branches of the industry. It concerns the relation of distributor and producer, but also is of first importance to the exhibitor.

The situation created by rising production costs and what have been termed "inflated" exhibition values is uppermost in the minds of producer, distributor and exhibitor alike. With a view to finding out how the distributor looks upon the matter, MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week sought the opinions of a number of leading figures in the business. What they have to say follows:

"We need more frankness and sincerity to-day—need it badly; and not merely between distributors and producers, but also between exhibitor, producer and distributor," declared Adolph Zukor, President of Famous Players-Lasky.

Adolph Zukor

"Would it not be a good idea," suggested the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, "to publish the exact gross figures of pictures in the trade papers?"

"Why, certainly," agreed Mr. Zukor. "Why not? It would be much better to print the truth than circulate rash figures by loose talking."

"But, let us think rightly and clearly," said Mr. Zukor, earnestly. "This is a year of great pictures. Why? Because the public demands them. And the box-office rules us all.

"Now the exhibitor wants these atractions. And he doesn't object to the high prices of these higher cost pictures. The costly picture to him is the one that doesn't measure up.

"I repeat: the exhibitor wants these greater box-office pictures. Suppose he didn't have them. Suppose he had to run on the pictures of two years ago. He would have to close his doors, and the whole industry would collapse.

"We are simply going ahead, that's all. That's the vital thing. We are meeting the public taste and the thing to do now is to spur up the rest of the machinery of the business so that it can take care of these new and greater pictures.

"We can do it.

Era of Exploitation

"I repeat to you what I said a short time ago and what you have advocated ably in your editorials that we are now in an era of exploitation.

"Exploitation—that's the big thing. Now that we've got these better pictures we must tell the public—all the public—all about them. They don't know. And it is up to us. I don't mean a wild orgy of advertising or overadvertising; but cleverly, insistently, judiciously telling just what the new and better motion picture is."

"Do you think that these big productions will cut into our annual gross rentals so that the smaller picture will be crowded out of its ordinary earnings?"

"Not in the least," Mr. Zukor readily answered. "Right now Broadway has an astonishing number of big, high admission pictures running successfully. When they opened up I was frankly afraid they would hurt the Rivoli and Rialto theatres. But they didn't at all. It is a fact that not only have they not hurt but that the Capitol, Strand, Rivoli, Rialto, Cameo are doing a better business than usual.

"The exhibitors are doing well all over the country. It is an exhibitors' year. They have no cause to worry about high rentals. Their problem is to get the people in to see the better picture. And assuredly we have better pictures from all sources—remarkably better pictures.

"These big successes are great stimulants. They stimulate the public and the box-office; they increase general attendance; they stimulate other producers to do better things. They vitalize the whole industry. We will have a greater box-office income this year and a greater rental income.

"We are going forward—that's the big thing to think about. High production costs can be helped by the producers getting together and discussing frankly their plan so that we may dovetail and thereby avoid wanting everything and everybody all at once. This excessive production activity and corresponding slump is all wrong and unnecessary."

"Can this producer co-operation be had?"

"Why, certainly."

"If," said Mr. Zukor in conclusion, "the question before us and regardless of any other consideration is to make big pictures or not I say: make big pictures.

"And then—exploit them as big as they deserve."

Public Wants Big Pictures

J. D. Williams was very positive in his statement to a MOTION PICTURE NEWS interviewer. "The big producers know very well what their pictures gross. They are not fooled one bit. They realize that in making their huge investments they are taking heavy chances; but they are perfectly willing to take the gamble. In fact, they won't take any other kind of a chance because they know that the public of today wants the kind of pictures they are making.

J. D. Williams

"You might as well call a spade a spade. The big stars and directors are the very fountain head of this business. Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Harold Lloyd, Rudolph Valentino, D. W. Griffith, Cecil DeMille, Marshall Neilan, Norma Talmadge, Thomas Meighan, Frank Lloyd, Ernst Lubitsch, Henry King (and a few others I could mention) are satisfied with present negative costs. They know they cannot be avoided. Do you think there is any doubt that they will get back the money they are now putting into pictures?

"Is there any doubt but that the public and the exhibitors want these pictures? It would certainly be disastrous if they didn't get them.

"These big attractions, of course, have got to be handled differently. Being specially made they must be specially distributed—so that profits can be fairly apportioned, specially shown and above all specially exploited so that he public money can be had as it should and must be had. This is highly important.

"The amusement business is a gamble, any way. It always has been and always will be. Don't you think that Charlie Chaplin is taking a big gamble with his 'Woman of Paris'; and don't you know that he knows he is?

"Look at the legitimate field. For years and years about 25 per cent each season succeed. The other 75 per cent go into the discard. No way has been found to change the situation. It's a gamble.

"We are better off. That is to say our big stars and directors don't make many failures. Not more than 10 per cent, any way. And that is 10 per cent against the 75 per cent failures in the legitimate field.

"The trouble right now is that we have only a dozen or so of these big producers. We should have and we will have fifty. We need them.

Survival of the Fittest

"One trouble today is this: Our rentals total from $120,000,000 to $130,000,000. The larger number of big productions this year is going to cut into this amount and the smaller productions will suffer accordingly. It is a case of the survival of the fittest. This business changes rapidly and you have to keep up with the procession.

"As a matter of fact, nothing is wrong today. On the contrary, the industry is in better shape than ever. The exhibitors of the country are making as much money now as they ever made. And they want these good pictures. We ought not to agitate against these big producers. We ought to encourage these mainstays of the business and encourage more to join them. Most of them own their pictures or are working on a percentage of gross rentals, so they suffer most for their mistakes anyway.

"Mark what I tell you: We are going in a few years to have fifty such stars and directors, as I have mentioned, and then we will have a much greater business than we have today."

"One of the big perplexing problems of distributors is to get producers to realize that every picture cannot be a million dollar picture, but at the same time to keep up the producer's enthusiasm during the course of production so that he will put into it every ounce of producing knowledge that he has. Every producer when he starts to make a picture believes that this one is going to break into the million dollar class," said Al Lichtman.

Al Lichtman

"The big thing is to impress on producers the fact that the mere expenditure of money doesn't make a picture of big box-office value. Production costs must be consistent with the advance estimate of the box-office value of each particular subject. One hundred thousand dollars is the danger line for the average good picture unless the subject matter or star has selling value justifying the high cost."

EXHIBITION VALUES

Views on Vital Questions

Elmer Pearson, of Pathe, said: "With normal film rentals at one hundred and thirty millions, wouldn't it be interesting to compare that amount with the aggregate expectancies and so-called exhibition values for a year?

Elmer Pearson

"Judging by the very few pictures that actually gross over half a million as compared to the great number that during production are confidently (?) expected to do so, the aggregate expectancy for all subjects must be several hundred million.

"Producers are not the type of men who would deliberately waste money nor would they knowingly plan to spend a quarter of a million dollars in the production of a picture unless according to available information they thought the picture could gross a half million or more.

Extravagant Claims

"We will probably always have with us distributors who as an inducement to secure desirable product make extravagant claims of efficiency and prowess as a sales organization and modestly (?) admit the probability that such a remarkable star or such a wonderful title would gross through their exchange upwards of seven hundred thousand.

"Let's be charitable and allow that they actually think so, but is a producer or star warranted in proceeding to invest moneys in his pictures based only on estimates and loquacious promises?

"Probably the most destructive factor the industry contains is the fellow from several of our reputable (?) distributors and some outside, who go about spreading discontent, bull and fabulous offers to producers and stars whom they know are under such contract obligations that acceptance of their ridiculous offers are impossible.

"He talks debonairly of the grosses their such and such pictures have done and are going to do (mostly going to do) and no matter how much the producer or star exaggerates the returns he is receiving from his present distributor, it is waved aside as mere pin money and usually departs with the solemn (?) admonition 'when next ready to contract, go to all the rest and get the best propositions you can, then come to us and we will give you much more.'

"Naturally, the star and producer doesn't believe all he hears, much as he would like to, yet he sees various of these men's names in the trade journals and associated with what appear to everybody as reputable concerns and his statements must be given some credence, and since he hears so much chatter of the same sort, even if he discounts the sum total by 50 per cent, his conclusions would still be considerably higher than possibility.

"Then, again, the actual difference between probability and possibility is in more instances than we think, 33⅓ per cent. or more.

Probabilities vs. Possibilities

"If one bases investment on possibility instead of probability he will frequently find himself money out of pocket.

"No producer or star wants to distribute through a calamity howler or pessimist, and no one but an optimist could succeed as a distributor (or producer either), but it seems that there should be a place where the word 'optimist' leaves off and 'damphul' begins.

"The exhibitor has occasion to congratulate himself so long as he is the beneficiary by securing for a hundred and thirty million, product that to be profitable should bring two hundred million.

"On the other hand, if only half as many pictures were made all could be better, and each would gross more at lower rentals, because of securing double the present average distribution.

"Many less pictures would be made if all film executives had the moral and business courage to tell present and prospective producers the unvarnished truth."

"We are taught in school and by our experiences in life that every effect has a cause. The motion picture industry is generally discussing the effects of a lot of mistakes it has been making for some time past and since one executive has been courageous enough to come out with some pertinent statements as to what is wrong many others are agreeing with his conclusions," declares W. W. Hodkinson.

W. W. Hodkinson

"What else can they do but agree? It is obvious that costs are too high; that the public cannot be made to pay, through the exhibitor, for all the waste and extravagance of production. But, after all, are the causes for this condition going to be considered and a remedy applied or is it just so much conversation and no constructive moves made, depending on the elimination of enough factors in the 'crash' that is so freely predicted to permit conditions to right themselves?

"Let me do some small part to help clarify the situation with a discussion of causes as I see them, and a suggestion as I see it as to what the present situation requires.

Hodkinson Gives Views

"The prime reason for the widely predicted chaos ahead in this industry is lack of confidence. To what degree it is justified it is not for me to attempt to say—but no one has any confidence in anyone else.

"A preliminary step to the restoration of confidence should be a gathering of all the heads of important producing and distributing interests to see if plans can be formulated for stopping the unreasoning competition among themselves. Such a meeting will be fruitless unless each is adjusted to standing absolutely on the merits of his efforts and not going in with the old desire to 'put something over.'

"If it is possible for producers and distributors to reconcile their conflicting viewpoints and establish mutual confidence it is then time to consider what steps can be taken to treat with responsible exhibitors singly or in groups to bring about further confidence. So far I have been unable to see any solution to this problem except the final concentration of various producers' product through some channel not controlled by either producer or exhibitor, but the success of which depended upon establishing such a balance between these two opposing viewpoints that confidence could be established.

"I am still unable to see any practical solution except this, but it is possible that some other method of marketing motion pictures is sufficiently detached to establish confidence between the different competing producers on one hand and the exhibitor on the other.

"I believe that if the industry as a whole does not more successfully co-operate and succeed in establishing more confidence on the part of the public it is bound to gravitate into a non-theatrical condition on one hand and a limited number of big theatrical productions on the other.

"I believe that the establishment of the percentage basis for bookings, the abolishment of the system requiring arbitrary lengths of pictures and the classification of houses and pictures is needed to restore and keep public confidence. These things cannot be done without co-operation and teamwork on the production side of the business. Only through neutral channels can I see such progress for the industry made possible and truly neutral channels would insure confidence in all parts of the industry."

Rowland Sounds Warning

Without equivocation, without attempting to cover the true state of affairs with a cloak of flimsy optimism, Richard A. Rowland, of First National, sounds a warning that it is high time for producers to stop kidding themselves with phony gross figures.

Richard A. Rowland

"I gathered from my recent visit on the coast that there was an erroneous opinion amongst directors and producers about the gross business their pictures do. They will tell you sums of money that I know from a practical standpoint are impossible, and whether they are kidding themselves on these figures or really believe them, I am firmly of the opinion that these figures they have in mind—which are never done—have a tendency to materially increase the costs of pictures, because in laying out production costs they have these bogus figures of gross in their minds.

"Unless the distributors of motion pictures sit down and discuss with the directors and producers the real truth as to what the possibility of gross on pictures is, sooner or later directors, producers and distributors are apt to be sitting down with the sheriff trying to figure out what has happened. Intelligent enlightenment on this subject is very essential.

"Mythical Grosses"

"The trouble is that a few big pictures have gone to the heads of producers and directors and blinded them to the sober facts of the balance sheet. They are planning and working in terms of mythical grosses when the actual figures are about one-half. Where are they going to get a return on this money?

"Here is the situation," continued Mr. Rowland. "Motion picture men have talked big figures until they have come to be accepted as facts, when in reality most of them are fiction. As a result pictures are being made at an excessive and unreasonable negative cost. The production bubble is going to be pricked by the bookkeeper's pen.

Kansas Session Pleases Exhibitors

Semi-Annual Convention Largest and Most Satisfactory Ever Conducted

WITH a straight face the exhibitor who attended the convention in Wichita, Kansas, September 24 and 25 will say that never has the semi-annual meeting of the Kansas organization produced such exceptional results. More than ever before was attempted and as much completed.

Of the many important steps taken the following were of the most progressive sort:

It was voted to set aside October 9 as a day when the gross receipts of Kansas theatres would be devoted to the central seed wheat pool. The money taken in on this day will be loaned the stricken wheat producers in the southwestern part of Kansas to buy seed and in return a fifth of the wheat crop will be taken.

Approximately 250 of the leading theatres of the state are involved in the program and it is expected that at least $15,000 will result from the action of the organization.

When this subject was broached before the representatives few were there who did not readily voice instant approval. Immediately they foresaw the result of such action: that not only the farmer's friendship would be gained but that the theatre owner himself would benefit materially.

On October 9, the theatres entered into the scheme will have a banner strung across their front reading: "Seed Wheat Day." Those shows which do not usually carry programs on Tuesday will secure pictures without cost and widespread publicity will be given the showings. In fact, many of the exhibitors will feature extra big pictures on that day.

Former Governor Henry Allen, in speaking before the organization, complimented the body upon its move.

The executive board endorsed the proposed plan of reciprocal insurance and pledged its support to bring it about. It was figured that fifteen to forty per cent. could be saved by this method.

At Tuesday's session the ten per cent. "war tax" was discussed and finally a plan was hit upon whereupon petitions signed will be forwarded to Congressmen not only in the Kansas district but in other states as well. This petition will request the repeal of the law requiring the tax. Personal letters also will be written to Congressmen.

In an attempt to secure faster mail service the parcel post in place of express will be used if possible. A request will be made to the Postmaster General in Washington that a central shipping office be established for the exchanges in Kansas City. Such a move would expedite delivery threefold for, whereas an exhibitor now, in securing a feature, a comedy and a news film, must deal with three deliveries with a centralized shipping point the three deliveries would be cut down to only one.

A code of ethics was adopted as another step toward the new era. At a preliminary meeting on Sunday it was voted to retain C. E. "Doc" Cook for another year as business manager of the organization. R. G. "Dick" Liggett, of course, is held as president.

The various committees chosen:

Resolutions—M. B. Shanberg, chairman; Charles Bull, Edward Frazier, Roy Burford and A. Jackett.

Investigation—Stanley Chambers, chairman; Gus Rubaugh and Robert Holmes.

Ways and Means—A. F. Baker, chairman; Edward Frazier, M. B. Shanberg, Harry McClure.

Taxation and Insurance—R. R. Biechele, chairman; Gus Rubaugh, C. L. Hooper, W. H. Weber, Raymond Gear, James Hirshman, R. R. Hansen, Roy Burford, Stanley Chambers and R. G. Liggett.

Promotion—R. R. Biechele, chairman; C. L. Hooper, R. G. Liggett, Charles Baron, C. L. Geese, Stanley Chambers and Tom Brown.

Transportation—M. B. Shanberg, chairman; C. E. Cook and R. G. Liggett.

Special Committee—Charles Smith, chairman; A. H. Cole and Charles Baron.

Cleveland Music Strike Is Terminated

CLEVELAND motion picture theatres resumed their musical policies on Sunday, Sept. 30, following the settlement of the musicians' wage scale for the coming year. Musicians settled for a 12½% increase over last year.

The fight between exhibitors and musicians has been going on since July 1, when last year's scale expired. Ever since then, neighborhood houses have been without music. The exhibitors demanded that the new agreement shall cover a period of two years. Another important section of the agreement provides that there shall be an arbitration board consisting of exhibitors and musicians, to adjust all differences arising henceforth between them.

New York Charters Granted Many Companies

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York State during the past week showed the following directors and capitalization: S. R. T. Pictures, Inc., $500, C. H. MacGowan, C. R. Jones, Mary Kaufman, New York; Washburn Productions, Inc., $20,000, George W. Washburn, North Asbury Park, N. J.; D. E. Hardy, Amherst, Mass.; Wallace Wilson, New York City; Calderone Lynbrook Theatre Corporation, Hempstead, $20,000, Leonardo Calderone, Roosevelt, N. Y.; W. R. Jones, Hempstead; H. L. Maxson, Freeport; Calvert, Inc., $20,000, Samuel W. Rose, Louis and Abraham C. Cohen, New York City; Ernest Mattsson, Inc., $100,000, Ernest Mattsson, H. G. Kosch, A. Thompson, New York City; Standard Cinema Corporation, $500, L. J. Darmour, Joseph W. Schleiff, Mark Hyman, New York City; Morris County Theatre Co., Inc., $6,000, Maurice Sutta, Nathan Frankel, Dorothy Cohen, New York; Finis Fox, Inc., $20,000, Finis Fox, Los Angeles, Calif.; Pearl Cohen, Isabel Kaplan, New York City.

Detroit Invites Industry To Golf Tourney

Detroit filmdom is planning a big golf tournament for a date late this month still to be determined, and to which everyone in the industry is invited. The competition will be held on the Redford Country Club course, the courtesies of that club having been extended by Maurice Caplan.

National Press Club Sees Talking Pictures

THE National Press Club was entertained at Washington, D. C., last Saturday with the first local showing of the 1923 model of talking pictures.

On the program were a humorous talk by Irvin S. Cobb, a tenor solo by Earnest Davis of the Metropolitan Opera Company, addresses by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Walter Damrosch and D. W. Griffith.

Virginia Issues State Dry Enforcement Film

Superintendent David Hepburn recently told his associates in the Virginia Anti-Saloon League that their state was the first to film bootlegging and prohibition enforcement activities. Actual scenes of the every-day experiences of the state dry agents are covered, along with the actual operation of some of the largest stills ever operated by illicit distillers.

Filthy conditions surrounding the manufacture of bootleg beverages are shown, such as dirty vats and stills and unclean and unsanitary modes of concealment. In one instance a still was concealed in a pig pen, and in another case in a horse stable, he said. The dangers, risk of life and inconvenience to both enforcement agents and their quarry, the contraband liquor makers and venders is shown in the picture, which is to be known as "The Last Raid." Director of Prohibition for Virginia Harry B. Smith and his immediate superior, Attorney General John N. Saunders, were filmed for the picture by the film company making the production. Release to colleges, churches and schools of the Old Dominion will be made about October 1.

Knickerbocker Cases Up in October Session

Three cases involving the defunct Knickerbocker Theatre Company's liability for loss of life, and for injuries sustained, in the collapse of the theatre's roof, on the night of January 28, 1922, come up for trial at the October term of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The theatre corporation's liability for the deaths of two of the victims of the tragedy and its responsibility for the proximate cause of injury to the third plaintiff are almost the first cases to be passed on by a jury of the court. The cases to be determined name only the theatre concern and are not covered by the special appeal recently allowed in several of the suits, charging the contractors, builders and the District Commissioners with responsibility on the score of faulty inspection.

Robbers Make Rounds of Des Moines Theatres

Robbers have been making the rounds of the Des Moines theatres the last week and succeeded in making away with $500 from the Royal theatre safe. The Majestic theatre, just around the corner from the Royal theatre, was also visited and the lock was blown off the safe but due to the caution of Omar Kenyon, manager of the Majestic, in banking the money from his Saturday and Sunday shows on Sunday evening, the safe was emptied before the thieves arrived.

The Rialto theatre which is within half a block of these theatres was also visited but the thieves were apparently scared away.

Screen Is Best as Visual Educator

Used in Industry, Schools, Church

THAT the value of the screen is being more and more appreciated for educational purposes is evidenced by statements from leaders in industry, schools, colleges and churches published in the magazine, "Visual Education," under the heading "Why We Use the Movies." In the September issue two pages are devoted to these statements, excerpts from which follow:

Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture:

"As the phonograph has brought good music into more American homes than ever knew it in the past, and as a consequence has greatly stimulated attendance at operas and concerts, so scenic films bring the lure of the great outdoors to the movie audience and stimulate patriotism and travel-hunger in many stay-at-home souls."

United States Department of Commerce:

"Trade follows the motion pictures. Wealthy citizens of Buenos Aires who have been in the habit of purchasing their clothes in Paris go to see an American film. With pleased surprise Señor Gonzales notes the perfectly fitting attire of the hero. He had always imagined that Americans were less well dressed than Europeans.

Influence on Women

"Turning to his wife to express these views, Señor Gonzales finds her in equally rapt contemplation of the leading woman's gowns. She, too, has made an illuminating discovery. And the result of the matter is that two prosperous residents of Buenos Aires now purchase their clothes in New York instead of Paris."

Rev. C. H. Cleaves, pastor Congregational Church, Pocatello, Idaho:

"When our Sunday school began at 10 we had a large number of pupils who would come in late, some as late as 10:15. Now that we have a motion picture reel every Sunday,

Nat G. Rothstein, F.B.O. Advertising and Publicity chief with the cups he won in the recent golf tourney which begins at 9:45, the room is full by 10 o'clock, and when our song service begins it is really worth while."

American Museum of Natural History, New York City:

"We have recently begun a series of experiments in teaching nature study to children through the use of the motion picture as the medium for displaying primitive life in all its aspects. . . .

"The response of the children was instant. They came in great numbers, two or three showings of every film being necessary."

Dr. A. C. Watson, head of department of psychology, Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio:

"Before a product or an idea can be sold to a prospect it is necessary first to attract attention and then to create interest. The same psychological principle holds good in the classroom. Therefore we are using educational films in all those departments to which the plan is adapted in order to attract attention and hold the interest of the students to the course that is being given."

Teaching Science

E. R. Chapman, head of science department, high school, Traverse City, Mich.:

"For the first time in the history of our city schools moving pictures are being used for classroom instruction. To date we have shown reels describing the manufacture and use of the X-ray machine, films on physics and chemistry and others dealing with general science. The experiment is proving highly satisfactory. The movie presentation of an intricate subject holds the student's attention closely and provides the class with accurate visualizations that are impossible in the regular course of instruction."

Visual and Vocational Departments, Los Angeles Public Schools:

"Motion Pictures will be used in the Los Angeles schools as an aid in helping young people to choose their life-work. Films will show in detail the requirements and the kind of work in each of the industries, trades and professions. In other words, if a young man wishes to be a mechanic he will see graphically, by way of the screen, just what sort of work he will be required to perform."

So. Enterprises Officials Start Exodus to N. Y.

The exodus of Southern Enterprises officials from the former head offices in Atlanta to New York city will begin early in October. Although the home offices will be transferred to the head offices of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to be in closer touch with Harold Franklin and the other heads of departments, it is announced that district offices will be maintained in Atlanta and will also be established in Charlotte, Jacksonville, Memphis, Dallas, Oklahoma City and San Antonio, in order to extend the executive activities of the organization throughout the South.

Dan Michalove, director of all Southern theatres, will be one of the first officials to move to New York. Others who will leave about the same time will include F. D. Metzler, secretary and treasurer, and M. C. Talley, assistant to Mr. Metzler.

Income Tax Bureau Gives Foreign Item Data

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has just issued the following:

"Article 1079 of Regulations 62 as amended by Treasury Decision 3497 requires returns of information on Forms 1096 and 1099 in all cases where income of $1,000 or more consisting of foreign items is paid in any taxable year. The term 'foreign item' means any dividend payment upon the stock of a non-resident foreign corporation or any item of interest upon bonds of foreign countries or non-resident foreign corporations, whether or not such dividend or interest is paid in the United States or by check drawn on a domestic bank."

Motion Picture Engineers in Ottawa Session

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers swung into its annual fall convention at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Ontario, on Monday, October 1, with a programme arranged for four days. One of the outstanding figures at the conference was C. Francis Jenkins of Washington, D. C., a noted inventor and the father of the society.

Mr. Jenkins brought with him tangible evidence of the progress which he is making in the transmission of still photographs by radio, a number of actually transmitted pictures being exhibited as an indication of the work that has also been accomplished.

Announcement was also made that Mr. Jenkins has been at work for a considerable period on the plan of transmitting moving pictures by wireless. The broadcasting of moving pictures can be accomplished, in the opinion of this inventor.

Double Bills Are Killed in Rhode Island

A CO-OPERATIVE organization of Rhode Island managers has not only furnished the solution of the double and treble bill problem, but has incidentally resulted in an organized increase of admission. According to information received this week from Providence, R. I., theatres in that city have abandoned the double bill program and in its stead have substituted a single feature, thus cutting down the overhead, but augmenting the receipts by increasing the admission from 35 cents to 40 cents top.

Co-operative advertising in local newspapers had "sold" the public. The Providence solution marks the first "break" from the double bill policy that has menaced exhibition in New England for the past three years.

Palmer Announces Releasing Plans

"Judgment of Storm" First of Series To Be Distributed Through F. B. O.

THE Palmer Photoplay Corporation of Hollywood has entered the list of producers with what it characterizes as "pictures of the people, for the people, by the people," the basic idea being that the screen needs new stories and that these stories have to be originals.

Film Booking Offices of America has been selected to handle the company's product.

The contract for distribution was signed this week by Roy L. Manker, president of the company and F. B. O., with J. I. Schnitzer and Harry Berman acting for the latter.

Three productions are ready for release, according to an announcement from F. B. O. "Judgment of the Storm" is to be the first, being listed for December 1. The other two will follow at fixed intervals.

The three pictures are original stories, the works of writers trained by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, which has conducted an educational institution for new writers for more than five years. The productions were made at the Thos. H. Ince studios under the supervision of the Ince directorial and technical staffs; Del Andrews being the actual director of "Judgment of the Storm."

"Judgment of the Storm" and other Palmer plays are to have sensational advertising and exploitation support, according to pledges of Mr. Manker and Mr. Schnitzer. A campaign in 21 large nationally circulated magazines is already in full swing. This will be backed by big newspaper space, to be paid for by the producer to be used concurrently with the first runs.

Mr. Schnitzer said, discussing the Palmer plays:

"Entry of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation into the production branch of motion pictures is probably the most significant development of the picture year, because the Palmer company has been one factor in the industry that has sought consistently to develop a distinctive literature for the screen. Through its efforts and accomplishments an astonishing number of men and women have been interested in screen technique; and this vast number will be curious to see the first production by the company as well as others to follow."

Roy L. Manker, after concluding negotiations with F. B. O., said:

"Exhibitors of the country have been howling for new and better stories, their complaints being the reflection of audience and newspaper views. Adaptation of published stories and stage plays has not met with the cordial reception and profitable returns producers and distributors expected; a fact proved at the International Motion Picture Congress, which recently went on record in advocacy of a distinctive screen literature. Authors, producers and directors were virtually unanimous in agreeing that the motion picture has a technique all its own and that authors must master this technique before the screen can hope to progress commercially and artistically.

"This feeling extends to the paying public. The box-office support is growing tired of a diet of second-hand story material. Its cry is for fresh stories—stories 'of the people, by the people and for the people,' as Lincoln might have phrased it.

Roy L. Manker, president of Palmer Photoplay Corporation.

Legal Tangle Threatened with "Why Worry"

LEGAL entanglements threaten "Why Worry" if a threatened suit by Owen Davis, author of the stage play "The Nervous Wreck" are carried out. It is alleged by Davis that the Lloyd picture is a plagiarism on the stage play, which it is said was produced on the coast before the picture was written.

At a recent conference in the office of Sam Harris, theatrical producer it is said that John C. Ragland, Eastern representative of Harold Lloyd, Owen Davis and Hal Roach were present. At that session Owen Davis declared "Why Worry" an infringement on "The Nervous Wreck," and demanded the withdrawal of the picture. The manuscript of the play is said to have been turned over to Mr. Ragland for perusal.

The Lloyd interests contend there is no plagiarism and that the basic principle of the picture is built about a subject that is not new. Meanwhile, it is said—attorneys O'Brien, Malevinsky and Driscoll for Owen Davis are preparing to institute suit for an accounting of the earnings of "Why Worry" and against Harold Lloyd.

Paramount Opens Exchange in Gautemala

Headquarters for the distribution of Paramount pictures in the five Central American republics have been opened at Guatemala City, Guatemala, according to an announcement made by E. E. Shauer, director of the Foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This new office, which will be under the jurisdiction of Famous Players-Lasky S. A., of Mexico City, will be in charge of C. C. Margon, who has been in Guatemala for several weeks making arrangements for the opening of the new exchange. This will be the thirty-sixth exchange operated by Famous Players in foreign countries.

Holubar to Film "Human Mill" in Tennessee

Allen Holubar, who will shortly begin active production on "The Human Mill," the picturization for Metro of John Trotwood Moore's novel, "The Bishop of Cottontown," is now completing arrangements to film many of the scenes in Tennessee, where Mr. Moore's story is laid.

Eve Unsell is writing the adaptation for Mr. Holubar.

Charles Henderson Added to "Big Brother" Cast

Charles Henderson, who recently closed a New York stage engagement with "Icebound," has been added to the cast of Allan Dwan's latest Paramount picture, "Big Brother," by Rex Beach, which is now in production at the Long Island studio. He will have the role of Father Dan.

Equipment Dealers Attend Chicago Dinner

Active and associated members of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America, attended the dinner given by the Chicago local group at the Morrison hotel on last Friday night. It was the first of the "get-together" dinners which will be held once a month, and brought out a representative gathering of both classes of members.

Secretary Barth, who had just returned from an organization tour which took him to a number of eastern cities, made a report of his trip at the dinner, which was most encouraging, as it showed that the East is becoming strongly organized.

A. C. Roebuck, of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, made an interesting talk on the necessity of closer co-operation between dealers and manufacturers, and also attacked the "bootleg" part of the industry, showing where it worked to the disadvantage of both sellers and makers of equipment, as well as to the exhibitors who purchase spurious parts for replacements on projectors and other mechanical devices used in theatres.

It was announced that a central west zone meeting will be held at Omaha on October 15, at which dealers from Chicago, Cincinnati, Detroit, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines and many other cities will be present.

Whittaker Will Select Sawyer Pictures

Arthur H. Sawyer has engaged Charles E. Whittaker in an editorial capacity to give his expert opinion on the suitability of any or all of the stories submitted to Associated Pictures Corp. for production, with Barbara La Marr as the star.

Whittaker is responsible for "The White Sister" starring Lillian Gish.

Claire Windsor in New Carewe Picture

Announcement has been made in Los Angeles that Claire Windsor will have the leading feminine role in the production which Edwin Carews will film in Algiers for release by Associated First National.

Picture Costs and Exhibition Values

past year how many productions have actually grossed over $500,000? A few, but not many. Most assuredly they are the exception, not the rule. And it will be the same this season.

"We may divide pictures into three general classes, eliminating the big stars. There is the lowest grade, including productions that vary from poor to fair and may gross from $75,000 to $100,000; next the high-class average photoplay which comprises the great bulk of the yearly supply for the leading theatres and may be expected to gross from $300,000 to $400,000 top; and finally the unusual super-production which may pass the million mark.

"It is not difficult to foresee what will happen when producers with pictures that belong in the first or second class permit a negative cost warranted only by inclusion in the third class."

"Elements in our business are worth what they bring at the box-office. Those with pre-established values are naturally most in demand. That is what causes rising costs, and is the reason why these costs cannot be controlled or limited," declared Arthur S. Kane, President of Associated Exhibitors.

Arthur S. Kane

"No sound producer of experience would start capitalizing elements of absolutely unknown values into tremendous cost pictures, but some producers, when dealing with factors of pre-established values, seem to cast discretion to the winds instead of reading the charts on the past performances of these elements.

Costs and Grosses

"Stars, directors, players and famous stories are the usual pre-established high cost elements. Now, with the exception of the stories, these all have commercial histories. It is comparatively easy to find out what these commercial histories are. With regard to the relative popularity of the vehicles, that can be judged also in their own fields. Therefore, it should be possible for any producer to judge rather accurately the minimum grossing with a well-made picture containing these elements. Of course nobody can judge accurately in advance the maximum, but the minimum is what most concerns the producer as a factor of safety.

"Take the case of a star, for instance. Higher cost productions are justified only by increasing grosses on past pictures—not what one hopes more expensive pictures will do. If there is an increasing gross from picture to picture, then more expensive productions are safe. In such a case the table is easily read.

"The distributor has influenced the high cost pictures by showing or quoting figures on certain pictures, and the producer has jumped to the conclusion that if this could be done on one thing it could be done on another.

"Both producer and distributor realize, of course, that ours is a business of progress—that what was good enough yesterday will not do to-day, and to-morrow's must be better still. The rising costs, therefore, are absolutely logical. What is illogical is the capitalizing, out of all proportion in comparison to their past histories, of elements which go into pictures.

"If an element is big the public will tell it quickly enough. If the public has told you so in one or more pictures then you can believe it. But until the public has had its say it is not safe for the producer or the distributor to count on it.

"In this market the very low cost picture and the very high cost picture are the big gambles. To put this into dollars and cents, the picture which costs much below $100,000, or that on which much more than $200,000 is spent seems to me to be the greatest risk. It is true there are certain stars and directors who safely can be capitalized for more than $200,000, but they are few and they are exceptions. Just because William Fox made 'Over The Hill' at a low cost and grossed big money with it is no reason why another producer should argue that he can make a picture of like cost and do the same amount of money. Conversely, if he is starting to spend more than $200,000 to $250,000, merely because other pictures which have cost that or more have done big business, he is on unsafe ground, unless he has the same elements—star, director, players, equally famous story, etc.—in his picture that were in one of those.

Distributor Sells "Price"

"The distributor is a salesman. Salesmen are optimistic. Distributors, therefore, with their faith in their distributing machines, are prone to visualize and forecast big grosses for a production which strikes their fancy. But let no one be deceived. Distributors do not sell pictures; they only sell price. That is the condition to-day. The producer himself sells his picture when he is making it, or rather, when he decides what elements are going into it. He himself determines whether it will be a wide seller or not. Unless he chooses elements that will make his picture in demand and puts them together in such a way that they give satisfaction or even make a 'hit' picture, the distributor cannot sell it to a big gross.

"The producer has done his work well only when he has made a picture which the public and the exhibitors demand. The distributor has done his well when he has sold price on such a picture.

"The producer's protection, and his only protection is the past histories of the elements which he molds into a production. Those are his guides as to safety and cost."

President W. C. J. Doolittle, of Selznick Distributing Corporation, gave his views as follows:

"It seems to me that one principal difficulty in the past has been that we have been expending more money to market our product to our ultimate consumer, the public, than its actual selling cost will merit. In other words, we are spending let us say, 30 or 35 cents to manufacture, distribute and eventually sell a commodity which can only be retailed for 25 cents.

"This can mean but one thing; production costs have been excessive and distribution costs equally so. Possibly the final cost of exhibition has come the nearest to keeping within economic limits.

"There is no feasible way to fix on a standard production cost for motion pictures, but it is quite possible to limit the negative and distribution costs of any given production to a figure which will admit of its being leased to exhibitors at a gross revenue sufficient to meet all costs plus a fair margin of profit to producer, distributor and exhibitor alike.

"I am firmly of the belief that the budget plan is the only safe procedure for producers, exactly as it is the only safe procedure in every big business. This is the day of the efficiency man, and the first principle of efficiency is to know exactly what will be the manufacturing cost of a commodity and also what the expenditure will have to be for successful merchandising.

"Roughly speaking, there are five grades of pictures in the feature length; these grades being gauged by their gross revenue possibilities. The lowest grade will gross anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000, the next best from $100,000 to $200,000, the third from $200,000 to $300,000, the fourth from $300,000 up to $500,000 and the fifth, the so-styled "super picture," anywhere from $500,000 up to and above the million-dollar mark.

"A producer planning a production today must decide to make a picture which will classify itself in some of these grades, and it is almost bromidic for me to say that the man who plans a picture destined to rank in the first-mentioned class commits financial suicide if he runs up a production cost justifiable only in productions of the higher classes.

"If motion picture producers would keep in closer touch with distributors and would consult with them in advance of production they would find that in all properly functioning distribution organizations the sales department could in every instance estimate in advance of production the probable gross on any given type of picture, basing this judgment on the proposed story, direct, cast, personnel and general production plans.

"It is a business of distributors in every line to know at what gross revenue they can market their wares, and it is just as reasonable to suppose that it is possible to estimate the marketing value of motion pictures as it is to figure out in advance the ultimate revenue on any other type of creative product.

No Standardized Ratio

"Do not misunderstand this to mean that there is an absolute standardized ratio between negative cost and gross revenue obtainable, because this is anything but the fact, as productions of relatively small negative cost have been sold for a national gross all out of proportion to their cost. This, however, is the exception to the rule, but it effectually eliminates any possibility of a fixed relation between production and selling costs.

"The crux of the whole matter seems to me to resolve itself into this: The negative cost on any production must align itself within the class to which it is assigned by the experienced vision of the selling organization through which it is to be marketed and, while there is always the possibility of errors in judgment on the part of sales departments, I believe that in most cases it will be found that efficiently functioning sales organizations, while not infallible, are ninety per cent dependable.

"The day is speedily passing when a producer with a finished product can say to a distributor: 'Here is my picture. Get me $350,000 gross. I must have that, as my negative cost was $175,000.' The routine of the future—the very near future—will be: 'My plans for my production including the following factors: What gross can your sales department secure for me and what safe negative cost I assume?'"

"U" Offers Five October Releases

One Jewel Production and Four Features Included in Schedule for Month

UNIVERSAL has marshaled an unusual list of pictures for release during the month of October, the current release schedule of that corporation shows. It includes one Jewel production and four features.

Leading the list is "Drifting," Priscilla Dean's melodramatic adaptation of the stage play of that name, and which has been made as a Universal Jewel production by Tod Browning. "Drifting" was shown pre-release in New York City at the Capitol theatre recently.

It boasts a cast including Wallace Beery, Matt Moore, J. Farrell McDonald and Anna Mae Wong.

"Drifting" is one of the Big Ten, Universal's half-year schedule of Jewel releases. Its release is dated October 1.

The week following the release of "Drifting," Universal will release "The Six-Fifty." It was adapted from a story by Kate McLaren and directed by Nat Ross. The principal players include Renee Adoree, Orville Caldwell, Catherine MacDonald, Niles Welch, Bert Woodruff and Gertrude Astor.

The third October release is "The Ramblin' Kid," a Hoot Gibson Special Production. Edward Sedgwick directed it from a story by Earl Wayland Bowman. Laura LaPlante is the leading woman in this picture. "The Ramblin' Kid" is scheduled for release October 15.

"The Wild Party," the October 22nd release, is a new Gladys Walton picture, adapted from a story by Marion Orth and directed by Herbert Blache. The cast includes Robert Ellis, Kate Lester, Joseph W. Girard, Esther Ralston, Freeman Wood, Sydney De Grey, Lewis Sargent, Sidney Brace, Dorothy Valerga and William Robert Daly. The story is laid in the editorial rooms of a great city newspaper.

The last picture scheduled for release in October is "Men in the Raw," a Jack Hoxie production. It was directed by George Marshall from a story by W. Bert Foster, and the cast supporting Hoxie includes Marguerite Clayton, Sid Jordan, Tex Parker, Tom Kerrick, J. Morris Foster, William A. Lowery and Art Manning.

Lasky Selects Cast for "Flaming Barriers"

Jesse L. Lasky has announced that the featured players in George Melford's Paramount production, "Flaming Barriers," will be Jacqueline Logan, Antonio Moreno, Walter Hiers, and Charles Ogle.

The cast will also include Robert McKim, Luke Cosgrave and Warren Rogers. The scenario was prepared for the screen by Harvey Thew from the original screen story written by Byron Morgan.

Charles G. Clarke, who photographed "The Light That Failed" for Melford, will do the same for "Flaming Barriers." Fred Robinson, who has acted as assistant director during the filming of the last three Melford productions for Paramount, will also act in the same capacity for the current picture.

Denmark Tragedian Sees First U. S. Studio

Adam Poulsen, Denmark's foremost tragedian, paid his first visit to an American motion picture studio this week when he saw the making of scenes for "Yolanda," Marion Davies next big picture, at the Cosmopolitan studio.

He evinced particular enthusiasm in the work of Miss Davies, Lyn Harding, Holbrook Blinn and other members of the cast and stated American pictures are becoming more popular in Denmark every year.

"Scaramouche" Openings in Many Cities

REX INGRAM'S production for Metro, "Scaramouche," opened at the Shubert-Academy in Baltimore last week for an indefinite run. The house is now sold out for many weeks ahead, it is reported.

"Scaramouche" opened for indefinite runs last Sunday in three cities: at the Al Woods theatre in Chicago, at Cox's theatre in Cincinnati and in New York at the Forty-fourth Street theatre.

Two weeks ago it opened in Washington at the Shubert-Belasco theatre.

The picture will open in several other large cities within a few days, and within a short time it is set to play in every large key city in the country.

"Beau Brummel" Filming Started by Warners

Filming is under way for the Warner feature, "Beau Brummel," starring John Barrymore. Harry Beaumont, handling the direction, is using every bit of available space at the huge Warner studio for the production.

Mary Astor is to play the leading feminine role opposite the star; Irene Rich will appear as the Duchess of York; Williard Louis, as the Prince of Wales; Carmel Myers as Lady Hester Stanhope; Andre de Beranger, as Lord Myron; William Humphrey, as Lord Alvanley; Michael Dark, as Lord Manley; Templar Saxe, as Desmond; Clarissa Selwyn as Mrs. Wertham; Rowland Rushton, as Mr. Abrahams; Alec Francis, as Mortimer; and Richard Tucker, in an important role.

Charles Christie Back from Trip Abroad

Charles Christie has arrived in Los Angeles from his trip to Europe. He was accompanied to the Coast by John H. Taylor, managing director of Christie Film Sales, of London, and John Maxwell, a Scottish theatre owner.

Jackie Coogan is shown in a number of scenes from the Metro production, "Long Live the King," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. The picture was produced under the supervision of Jack Coogan, Sr.

F.B.O. Announces Schedule of Release Dates

THE FILM BOOKING OFFICES this week announce the following schedule for pictures to be released between now and January 20th. This schedule was decided on following the recent sales meeting held in New York and attended by eastern exchange managers:

"Breaking Into Society," October 14; "Lights Out," October 21; "Dancer of the Nile," October 28; "Mickey," (re-edited), October 28; "Lullaby," November 11; "Silent Accuser," November 18; "Blow Your Own Horn," November 25; "The Mail Man," December 9; "The Worm," December 16; "Alimony," December 23; "Judgment of the Storm," January 6, 1924; "Phantom Justice," January 13; "Born of the Cyclone," January 20.

May McAvoy, Barthelmess' New Leading Woman

May McAvoy has signed a contract with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and will appear opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Enchanted Cottage," by Sir Arthur Pinero. Inspiration also has taken an option on Miss McAvoy's services for subsequent productions. While she will be not co-starred with Barthelmess, she will be featured.

John Robertson, who will direct "The Enchanted Cottage," is familiar with the talents of Miss McAvoy, having directed her in "Sentimental Tommy," which he produced for Famous Players.

Fox's "Monna Vanna" Gets Good Chicago Sendoff

"Monna Vanna," a picturization of Maeterlinck's story, opened at the Harris theatre, Chicago, on Monday night for a four-week run. A representative first-night audience filled the theatre. Exchange Manager Meyers and Manager Greenman, of the Monroe, who is also looking after the run of the Fox Specials at the Harris, represented Fox Film Corporation at the opening.

Fox Arranges More Release Dates

Distribution Planned for Eight of Second Series of Season's Specials

RELEASE dates have been arranged for the second series of specials announced in Fox Film Corporation's 72-page book for the season of 1923-24. These pictures, eight in number, follow the first eleven releases and include "Six Cylinder Love," "The Temple of Venus," "North of Hudson Bay," "The Shepherd King," "The Net," "You Can't Get Away With It," "Hoodman Blind" and "Gentle Julia."

"Six Cylinder Love" is the William Anthony McGuire stage play, which ran for two years in New York and Chicago, with Ernest Truex featured. The screen version was directed by Elmer Clifton. The cast includes three members of the original stage company, Ernest Truex, Donald Meek and Ralph Sipperly. Florence Eldridge has the part opposite Mr. Truex.

"The Temple of Venus" was written by Katherine Carr and directed by Henry Otto. The leading players are Phyllis Haver, Mary Philbin, David Butler and Leon Barry.

"North of Hudson Bay" is a John Ford production with Tom Mix. The story was written by Jules Furthman.

"The Shepherd King" is a J. Gordon Edwards production, made in the land depicted in the story. Originally a stage play by Wright Lorimer and Arnold Reeves, it had a long and successful career behind the footlights. When William Fox decided to put it on the screen he sent Mr. Edwards and staff to Egypt and the Holy Land with instructions to make the screen version a historical drama worthy its theme.

"The Net" is a J. Gordon Edwards production. It is founded on the stage play written by Maravene Thompson. The cast is headed by Barbara Castleton and Albert Roscoe. Raymond Bloomer has one of the leading roles.

"You Can't Get Away With It" is a Rowland V. Lee production. Its author is Gouverneur Morris. It is the story of three sisters, played by Betty Bouton, Barbara Tennant and Grace Morse. Percy Marmont has one of the leading male roles.

"Hoodman Blind" is a melodrama, written by Henry Arthur Jones and Wilson Barrett, that was popular on the stage in this country and in England when produced a generation ago. The screen version is a John Ford production. Charles Kenyon made the scenario. The cast contains David Butler, Gladys Hulette, Frank Campeau, Marc McDermott and Trilby Clark.

"Gentle Julia," by Booth Tarkington, has been put into scenario form by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. It is a Rowland V. Lee production, and the title role is played by Bessie Love.

Pola Negri Cast Is Named by Paramount

Pola Negri, in her fourth American starring picture, "My Man," now being produced in Hollywood for Paramount by Herbert Brenon, will be supported by Charles de Roche and Huntly Gordon in featured roles, and the cast will include also Adolphe Menjou, Garth Hughes, Vera Reynolds, Rose Dione, Rosita Marstini, Edward Kipling, Robert Cannon, Frank Nelson and George O'Brien.

"My Man" is from the French play, "Mon Homme," by Andre Picard. It was adapted for the American stage by Fred Jackson. The scenario was written by Eve Unsell. It will be photographed by Bert Baldridge.

New Players Are Added to "Living Past" Cast

In addition to Enid Bennett, Harrison Ford and Mary Alden, whose selection was announced last week, Metro has engaged several other well-known players to enact roles in "The Living Past," the picturization of William J. Locke's novel. "The Tale of Triona," which is now in production at the Metro Hollywood studios under the direction of Harold Shaw. The new members of the cast include Alec Francis, Arline Pretty, Harry Northrup, Lorimer Johnston and D. R. O. Hatswell.

Paramount Laboratory in Operation

New Plant on West Coast Will Handle Over Million Feet of Film Weekly

PARAMOUNT'S new film laboratory at Hollywood, said to be the largest and most complete in the western capital of motion pictures, has just been put into operation following a construction period of nearly sixteen months.

The new plant is now handling 30,000 feet of film per day, but when operating at full blast a few weeks hence more than a million feet of film a week will pass through the laboratory. This will be a greater production than any other film laboratory in the world, it is claimed.

Frank Garbutt, who designed and supervised construction, will be in full charge. Harry Ensign, formerly head of the Realart studio laboratory, has been appointed assistant superintendent under Mr. Garbutt. According to Mr. Garbutt, the building of this huge plant for the handling of film proves the permanency of Los Angeles and Hollywood as a motion picture capital.

The work of directors and actors, scenery men and writers, which is the raw material from which photoplays are made, will pass through the tiny eye of the camera and thence to this great manufacturing plant, where, with the aid of developer, life will be written upon the blank film.

The old laboratory was built in 1915 and will be used for storage, the old equipment being disposed of. New machinery, especially designed by Mr. Garbutt, has been installed in every department of the new building. In the four projection rooms of the new plant, directors will sit in judgment on their own pictures surrounded by all the atmosphere of a public theatre. Each room seats seventy-five persons and is beautifully decorated and equipped with electrical devices to bring the lights on and off slowly as in a real theatre. By creating a true theatre atmosphere, it is claimed that directors and others will be better able to judge the effect of productions when released in commercial theatres.

In the new laboratory practically every West Coast studio production will be made into reels ready to be sent to exhibitors all over the world. Fourteen comfortable vaults have been provided for the use of directors in cutting and assembling their product. These vaults absolutely insure the protection of film against the elements.

With such ingenuity has the building been designed that every unnecessary step has been saved. The film travels on conveyors in the many processes of development, cutting and assembling. Softly tinted walls, indirect lighting and prism glass windows add to the comfort of employees.

The very air in this model workshop passes through a filtration plant before being pumped into the ventilating system. More than 100,000 cubic feet of air per minute is heated and washed. In rooms where the film is touched by hand the air is kept very dry, thus avoiding perspiration on the hands marking the film. All important equipment is in duplicate, just one of the safeguards against interruption of production.

To avoid the possibility of fire all wood fittings have been metal covered. The foundations have been made firm enough to permit the erection of an additional story, should it be needed later.

Wife Recognizes Brother in Pathe Quake View

COMMOTION was caused in the Woodlawn theatre, Chicago, this week when Mrs. A. W. Ruff, of Marquette Road, recognized her brother, A. A. Earle, in the Pathe News picture showing the Japanese earthquake scenes. She had not heard from him in ten years.

Mr. Earle is a Pathe cameraman and was promptly on the job during and after the earthquake and appeared for a few minutes in one of the pictures. Through local Pathe officials Mrs. Ruff was able to get his address and has taken steps to communicate with him.

Montreal Producers Sign Andree Lafayette

Announcement has been made at Montreal, Quebec, that Andree Lafayette, the French actress, who was recently selected as the most beautiful woman in France by Richard Walton Tully, had been secured for the leading role in "The Vital Question," a feature to be produced by Laval Photoplays, Limited, a producing company of Montreal, whose president and general manager is L. Ernest Ouimet. Mr. Ouimet was formerly head of the Pathe distributing organization in Canada with headquarters at Montreal and he was probably the first exchange proprietor in the Dominion.

Andree Lafayette made a decisive impression in Montreal on the recent occasion of the presentation of "Trilby" at the Capitol theatre when the picture was shown with both English and French titles. Paul Cazeneuve, Orpha Alba and Jack Perrin are other players who have been engaged for the picture which is to be made in California.

Paramount Announces Cast for "Everyday Love"

The cast of William de Mille's new production, "Everyday Love," is announced by Jesse L. Lasky. Those featured in this Paramount production are Agnes Ayers, Jack Holt, Nita Naldi, Robert Edeson, and Theodore Kosloff. Others are Julia Faye and George Calliga.

Production of the picture has just commenced. It was adapted by Clara Beranger from the book, "Rita Coventry" by Julian Street.

Kirkwood and Lila Lee Signed by Ince

James Kirkwood and Lila Lee have been signed by Thomas H. Ince to play the leading roles in a special production entitled "The Painted Woman," according to advices from Hollywood this week.

Wallace Beery and Matt Moore will also be in the cast. Production work is to start very soon.

John Gilbert Starts Work on Fox Feature

John Gilbert has started on a new picture at the William Fox West Coast studios. It is called "The Beast," and was written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. Edmund Mortimer is the director. Norma Shearer is playing the feminine lead opposite the star.

Action stills from the William Fox production, "North of Hudson Bay"

Fox Will Make "Warrens of Virginia"

"The Warrens of Virginia," the famous stage play produced by David Belasco and written by William C. deMille, is to be produced in motion picture form by William Fox. Martha Mansfield has been engaged for the role of Agatha, the feminine lead. Work has been commenced on the production at the Eastern studios, with Elmer Clifton, handling the megaphone.

Others in the cast are: Robert Andrews, Arthur; Harlan Knight, Blake; James Turfler, Medium; and Helen Ray Kyle, "We'uns."

Belasco presented the stage play at the old Belasco theatre (now the Republic) in New York, August 31, 1907, fifteen years ago, and a perusal of the program reveals the names of persons who are now prominently identified with the motion picture world.

Frank Keenan played General Warren; Mary Pickford appeared as Betty, his granddaughter and Cecil deMille, brother of the author and himself a noted director, played the part of her father; Emma Dunn appeared as Mrs. Warren.

Shellabarger Advertising Chief of Associated

Announcement was made this week of the promotion of Frank L. Shellabarger to be advertising and publicity manager of Associated Exhibitors. He has been with this organization since March, 1922. Arthur S. Kane, Jr. and Mark W. Vance recently joined Associated's publicity department and it has been strengthened further by the addition of Miss Louise Raleigh, well known as a writer, who will specialize in fan paper work.

Lincoln, Sheridan, Custer in Bill Hart Cast

Three important players have been added to the cast of William S. Hart's production, "Wild Bill Hickok," which he is making for Paramount release.

Omar Whitehead has been cast for the role of Abraham Lincoln, Charles Dudley in the role of ill-fated General Custer and William De Vaull as doughty General Sheridan.

First of Yale University Pictures Previewed

"Columbus," the first of the "Chronicles of America" series of motion pictures being produced by the Yale University Press for release by Pathe, was previewed Thursday evening of this week in the lounge room of the Yale Club by an audience of distinguished guests, including representatives from the newspaper and magazine fields and members of the Yale University faculty. This production, which is in four reels, has been set for general release by Pathe on October 7.

It is the first of a series of thirty-three screen dramas visualizing the highlights of 400 years of America's history. These pictures will be distributed by Pathe to the theatres throughout the country, beginning with the first issue on next Sunday and continuing thereafter at about four-week intervals.

French Technical Advisor for "Humming Bird"

Sidney Olcott has engaged Jacques d'Auray of Nice, France, to act as a technical advisor for "The Humming Bird," starring Gloria Swanson. The story of "The Humming Bird" deals with life in Paris from 1914 to 1918 during the war period and it is most necessary that all the details of the picture be correct. Mr. d'Auray was in the French army and knows the military angle as well as the civilian life of the French capital. He has been working in pictures on the Coast since 1919. This will be Olcott's first picture for Paramount.

"Miss New Haven" Joins Paramount Cast

Helen Haddock, who was "Miss New Haven" at the recent Atlantic City beauty pageant, is making her debut in motion pictures at the Paramount Long Island studio, where she is playing one of the high school girls in "West of the Water Tower," Glenn Hunter's first picture for Paramount. Miss Haddock is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Haddock of New Haven, Conn.

Charles Brabin Selected to Direct "Ben Hur"

CHARLES BRABIN, one of the oldest directors in the business, whose most recent productions are "Six Days" and "Driven," has been chosen by Goldwyn to direct the film version of "Ben Hur." He will work in close association with Miss June Mathis, who will assume editorial directorship of the production.

Announcement of the selection of Mr. Brabin was made by President F. J. Godsol, of Goldwyn, and A. L. Erlanger.

Edward Bowes, Goldwyn vice president, and Mr. Brabin sailed for Europe Sept. 29 on the Leviathan. They will be followed shortly by Miss Mathis and a complete technical staff from the Goldwyn studios in Los Angeles.

The entire production will be filmed abroad. It is estimated the construction of sets and actual photography on "Ben Hur" will last about a year. Mr. Erlanger will personally supervise the filming of the chariot race and the seafight.

The cast has not been finally decided upon. Principal players will not be called by Mr. Brabin until December. Meanwhile film tests are being made daily at the Goldwyn studios.

"On the Banks of the Wabash" is a J. Stuart Blackton production for Vitagraph. These scenes are from the production

Anderson Forms New Organization

Anderson Pictures, Ltd., Will Handle Distribution Through United Kingdom

CARL ANDERSON, president of Anderson Pictures Corporation, announced this week the formation of Anderson Pictures, Ltd., with offices at 89-91 Wardour Street, London, and branch offices at 28 Dean's Gate, Manchester; Greek Street, Leeds; West Gate Road, Newcastle; Dunlop Street, Glasgow; 16 Charles Street, Cardiff; Fleet Street, Torquay, and Halloway Head, Birmingham.

Thus is completed the organization of Mr. Anderson's distributing system on an international basis and his parent company, Anderson Pictures Corporation, now ranks among the few American distributing organizations which maintain their own offices in the foreign field.

Negotiations which have been under way for some time were consummated last Saturday. Samuel Berney is named as managing director of the newly formed unit with Frank T. Thompson as treasurer. Anderson Pictures, Ltd., will actively distribute throughout the United Kingdom the product of Anderson Pictures Corporation and that of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation. It will also handle the foreign sales of both organizations for Continental Europe and all of the British Empire with the exception of Canada.

In a statement from his offices, Mr. Anderson says: "The announcement of the formation of Anderson Pictures, Ltd., is an indication of the scope and importance of our distribution plans. We control a majority of the stock of our foreign organization and it will be power for exhibitor service in Great Britain.

"Although conditions and methods of operation are naturally different from those in this country, the fundamental policies of equity, fair dealing and mutual interest with the theatre owners are the same. Anderson Pictures, Ltd., will operate on these same broad principles. The same opportunities to be derived therefrom will be offered to the British exhibitors and at all times the thought and attention of Anderson Pictures, Ltd., will be directed toward their welfare.

"We are particularly gratified to have Mr. Berney and Mr. Thompson in charge of our new organization, because of their high standing with the trade in England and their proven ability as successful distributors of film. They are heartily in support of our plan, as it reacts to the benefit of the exhibitors, and we are confident they will make Anderson Pictures, Ltd., a constructive power for economic good throughout the world."

Final arrangements of the agreement creating Anderson Pictures, Ltd., were consummated by Messrs. Berney and Thompson with Mr. Anderson, Mr. Sydney S. Cohen and Mr. William A. True. The two former officials sailed last Wednesday to begin active work.

Warners Make Changes in "Daddies" Cast

Changes have been made in the cast of Warner's "Daddies," starring Mae Marsh in a filmization of the David Belasco stage play. Harry Myers replaces Monte Blue in the leading masculine role, while Willard Louis will appear in the part that was originally assigned to Myers. This change came about suddenly when Monte Blue was given the leading masculine role in the Ernst Lubitsch production, "The Marriage Circle," replacing Warner Baxter.

Others in the cast are Claire Adams, Crauford Kent, Claude Gillingwater, Georgie Lathrope, Boyce Combe, Otto Hoffman, Milly Davenport, Murial Frances Dana, Priscilla Dean Moran, the DeBriac Twins and King Evers.

Anthony Will Do "Jealous Husband" Titles

M. C. Levee has engaged Walter Anthony, Pacific Coast dramatic critic and film writer to collaborate with Maurice Tourneur on the titling of "Jealous Husbands," shooting on which has just been completed at the United studios.

Titling of the new Levee-Tourneur film is now well under way and the production will be completed for early First National release within the next week.

Production Abroad Wanes—Laemmle

Universal Chief Finds American Pictures Making Great Strides on Continent

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, just back from a three months' tour of Europe, brings word that picture production is on the wane on the Continent and that American films are making gigantic strides as the generally accepted standard of film entertainment.

Mr. Laemmle's comments are based on extensive study of film conditions in France, Germany and Italy, heretofore the bulwarks of the foreign film industry. He not only studied the situation in the production centers, but investigated the business in outlying districts—in the smaller theatres and among the average motion picture fans.

He found Italian production activity sloughing off and almost at a stand-still, except for some production in that country by American companies.

He found French production greatly slowed up. He found German production crippled by exchange.

Living conditions in Germany to-day are about 2000 per cent. worse than they were a year ago, Mr. Laemmle found. He paid particular attention to conditions in that country because he had been commissioned by William Randolph Hearst, a close friend and associate, to investigate and write a series of articles on Germany's outlook, for the Hearst newspapers. These articles have been appearing in the New York American and other papers during the past six weeks.

Two great factors have contributed to the slow up in foreign production, the film president points out. One is the unsettled political condition in Europe, accompanied by the present exchange rates which are almost prohibitive to foreign commerce. The other is the seeming inability of European producers to make pictures which are commercially valuable in America. This combines with the first factor to limit European producers to a small European market—a market which does not support ambitious production plans.

On the other hand, asserts Mr. Laemmle, American pictures are to be seen everywhere. This is especially to be noted in France where American pictures have had an uphill fight. To-day, American pictures are to be seen on all boulevards and seem to constitute more than fifty per cent. of the pictures shown in that country.

Mr. Laemmle's tour took him to Paris, Stuttgart, Frankfort, Lucerne, Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome and London. He also spent several weeks in his boyhood home, Laupheim, Bavaria.

In the Laemmle party, which arrived in New York aboard the Aquitania last Friday, were his children, Miss Rosabelle and Julius, his secretary, Harry Zehner, Mr. and Mrs. Abe Stern, and Miss Estelle Cohen, a friend of Miss Laemmle.

The first to greet Mr. Laemmle upon his return was E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal, who went down on the Revenue cutter and boarded the Aquitania at Quarantine. A party of Universal employees motored down to Quarantine by motor boat and waved a noisy welcome to Laemmle.

When the Aquitania docked, Mr. Laemmle found all of the Universal executives and many other Universalites waiting to welcome him home. Prominent among them were R. H. Cochrane, P. D. Cochrane, E. J. Smith, Joseph Friedman, N. L. Manheim, J. V. Bryson, Paul Gulick, George Brown, R. V. Cavanagh, W. C. Herrmann, and Harry Bernstein, Sam Sedran, F. A. Flader and others.

Film Engineers Elect New Officers

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—L. A. Jones, of Rochester, N. Y., was elected president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at the convention held at Ottawa, this week. Other officers chosen were: vice-president, E. Kendal Gillett, New York; secretary, P. M. Abbott, New York. The following were elected to the executive committee: J. C. Kroiser, Ottawa, and Alfred B. Hitchins, Binghamton, N. Y.

F. B. O. Exchange Managers Meet in Chicago

H. M. Berman, general sales manager of Film Booking Offices of America, presided at a conference of F. B. O. divisional and exchange managers, which brought together executives from as far east as Cleveland and as far west at Dallas and Denver.

At the meeting, which was held at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, on Sunday and Monday, the revised releasing schedule was announced and a sales campaign for the coming six months was outlined, including extensive exploitation and advertising aids, which F. B. O. is prepared to extend to exhibitors.

Messrs. Berman and Rothstein are returning to New York this week and later will go to the Coast, where the third of the sectional managers' meetings will be held, the first meeting having been in New York City, preceding the Chicago gathering.

Those in attendance at the Chicago meeting included, besides Mr. Berman and Director of Advertising and Exploitation Nat Rothstein, of New York; Division Sales Managers E. C. Jenson and C. E. Penrod; Exchange Managers E. M. Booth, Cincinnati; L. Geiger, Cleveland; L. L. Harrington, Dallas; S. D. Weisbaum, Denver; F. W. Young, Des Moines; A. P. Elliott, Detroit; H. H. Hull, Indianapolis; E. E. Churchill, Kansas City; J. F. Franconi, Little Rock; Harry Hart, Milwaukee; M. J. Weisfelt, Minneapolis; Sam Benjimen, Oklahoma City; I. Schlank, Omaha; T. H. McKean, St. Louis; S. W. Fitch, Sioux Falls; J. J. Sampson, Chicago, and I. Gettleson and Ed Johnson of Chicago.

Edith Roberts in Leading "Big Brother" Role

Edith Roberts will have the leading feminine role in Allan Dwan's new production, "Big Brother," in place of Winifred Allen, who has retired from the cast. Other principals in the picture which Paul Sloane adapted from Rex Beach's recent magazine story include Tom Moore, Raymond Hatton, Joe King, and Mickey Bennett.

Scenes from "The Way Men Love," which will be distributed by Grand-Asher

Clara Bow in "Poisoned Paradise" Role

Clara Bow, the little Brooklyn high school girl, will play the colorful French street gamin in the screen production of Robert W. Service's story, "Poisoned Paradise." In order to permit her to play the part it has been necessary to readjust "shooting schedules" for this picture, which Gasnier will produce for Preferred Pictures. She is now engaged as the piquant flapper in Frank Lloyd's production of "Black Oxen." She was loaned for the part through an arrangement with B. F. Schulberg, who produces Preferred Pictures.

Mr. Schulberg announced last week that Gaston Glass would have the leading masculine role in this Gasnier production.

Anna Q. Nilsson Signed for C. B. C. Feature

Harry Cohn has wired the New York office that he has signed Anna Q. Nilsson to play the lead in "Innocence," one of C. B. C.'s six features.

Mr. Cohn and Director Edward J. LeSaint are now seeking the best people available to include in the cast that will support Miss Nilsson.

Fox Changes Title on Tom Mix Feature

The title of the Tom Mix picture, "The Flyin' Fool," adapted from Max Brand's story, "The Gun Gentleman," has been changed to "Mile-a-Minute Romeo." This is the latest William Fox production in which Betty Jewel has been cast. Lambert Hillyer directed it.

Lou Tellegen Is Signed by Vitagraph

Vitagraph announced this week that it had signed Lou Tellegen to play the leading role in J. Stuart Blackton's production, "Let No Man Put Asunder," the Basil King story on the divorce evil.

Name Motion Picture Day Committees

M. P. T. O. State Divisions Hold Meetings and Formulate Plans for Participation

STATE divisions of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America are calling special meetings for the purpose of appointing working committees and to formulate definite plans of participation in National Motion Picture Day—November 19.

On October 2, Connecticut lined up behind the project at a special meeting of the state organization at Hartford and endorsed the plans laid out by Joseph W. Wash, president of the M. P. T. O. of Connecticut, C. M. Maxfield, national executive committee member, W. A. True, national board of directors, and the various officers of the M. P. T. O. of that state.

On the day previous Fred J. Dolle of Louisville, Kentucky, who is chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee for Kentucky, called a meeting of theatre owners in conjunction with L. J. Ditmar, president of the M. P. T. O. of that state at which plans were formulated and endorsed by the attending theatre owners.

On September 28th, the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, met and passed the following resolution.: "Resolved: That the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware endorse National Motion Picture Day and do all things in our power to help bring about its success."

Fred Seegert, chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee for Wisconsin, has announced the following committee in charge of the activities in that state. E. Langemack, E. W. Van Norman, S. Bauer, George Fischer, Max Krofta, William Jacobs, J. H. Silliman, M. Rise of Milwaukee; F. J. McWilliams, A. P. Desormeaux of Madison; Joseph Rhode of Kenosha; Tom Foster of Stanley; J. August Tax Returns Show Better Business

THE amusement business is showing improvement according to tax figures reported from Washington, D. C. During the month of August taxes from admission to theatres, concerts, etc., aggregated $5,560,748, as against $5,140,506 in July and $4,710,470 in August of last year. This is an increase of $850,000 over last August and $420,000 over July.

Seating tax collections on amusements during August this year amounted to $420,344, as against $389,145 last year.

K. C. Unions Demand Union Piano Player

The latest demand that the unions are making against the Kansas City exhibitors has aroused the ire of the suburban owners since it is against them that the move is made.

A demand was made last week of the Murray theatre, that a union piano player be hired at a salary of $30 a week and it was accompanied by the threat that the musicians' union would ask the operators' local to pull out the operators in sympathy with their demand.

Jay Means, owner of the Murray theatre, refused to accede and his theatre is being "picketed."

Outside Arbiter to Settle Brooklyn Wage Tilt

The T. O. C. C. and Brooklyn Operators' Union, Local No. 306, will submit their wage differences to an outside arbiter to be selected by the conflicting parties. A former independent union is now a part of No. 306.

While the wage scale in Brooklyn is lower than in New York, the T. O. C. C. has submitted to increases of from 7 per cent to 15 per cent. The union is asking from 17 per cent to 33 per cent increases.

Picture Advocating Union Labor Is Approved

IN 1921 "Contrast," a film advocating union labor, was turned down by the Kansas State Board of Review but last week that body reversed its decision, although it tempered its approvement by cutting out several parts.

Fire Prevention Week in District of Columbia

Charles W. Darr, chairman of the District of Columbia fire prevention committee presided over the first meeting of the committee in the Washington Chamber of Commerce rooms last week. Fire Marshal L. V. Seib was named a committee of one to look after the preparation of slides and distribute them to movie houses for display during that week.

Last year Sidney Lust of the Leader got busy with Harry Crandall, Larry Beattus, Tom Moore, and other theatre men and got the fire-prevention films, trailers, etc., shown in practically every film and vaudeville theatre in the city. Later a meeting will be held at which reports on the preliminaries and success of the campaign will be made, on call of Chairman Darr.

Denies Indiana Indorsed T. O. D. C.

Denial that the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana have indorsed the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation was received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS this week from Nathaniel N. Bernstein, a member of the board.

The board of directors at no time took up the matter, Mr. Bernstein wrote. "We have removed politics from our work," continued Mr. Bernstein. "Our purpose is simply for the betterment of the exhibitors and the industry in general in our part of the country, without interfering with or hurting anybody else or any organization, which attitude has the approval of the various units concerned."

Assessed Valuation of N. Y. Houses Shows Increase

The leading motion picture houses in New York City show a slight increase in assessed valuation in 1924 over 1923, according to figures just issued. The Capitol theatre shows $2,560,000 as against $2,550,000 for 1923.

Loew's State assessed valuation has increased from $4,075,000 to $4,100,000. The Strand has increased from $2,950,000 to $2,970,000. The Rialto and Rivoli remain the same as last year, the former at $2,070,000 and the latter at $1.370,00.

First National Subsidiary Changes Name

Delaware recently sanctioned the following name amendment of a First National subsidiary unit: Associated First National Theatres, Inc., was permitted to use the name "First National Productions, Inc.," in future.

A Delaware charter was recently issued to United States Educational Film & Slide Company, Inc., for the making of motion pictures. $100,000.

WHAT SHOWMEN THINK OF CURRENT RELEASES

Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Ruggles of Red Gap—
Delightful picture and a money getter. (East.)

This one was just fair. It didn't go with the ladies at all. To be sure it had bad weather to buck. (Middle West.)

Exceptionally good picture all the way through. Every critic praised it. Business was pretty good, considering a sudden spurt of warm weather. (Middle West.)

Bluebeard's Eighth Wife—
A good picture, with fair business. (Middle West.)

To the Last Man—
Good picture; business fair. (Middle West.)

The Cheat—
Held up well for two weeks, and third was very dull. Good motion picture material. (East.)

Picture previously reported. Did splendidly on second week. (East.)

Pola Negri's old vivacity still fails to come out under American direction. Picture well produced. Bsiness fair for week. (East.)

Previously reported. Held up very well in third and last week. (East.)

Salomy Jane—
Only average picture. Business poor. (Middle West.)

The Marriage Maker—
Did only a fair business, but last three days were bolstered up by adding Jap earthquake pictures. Considered a weak picture. (East.)

What you would call an interesting show. Patrons thought so, too. Not big business, but all patrons were satisfied. (Middle West.)

Neat two-column ad for "Youthful Cheaters" (Hodkinson) by the Winter Garden theatre, Seattle

One of the worst. Away down in pulling power. Poor business. (East.)

As an artistic picture this cannot be beaten, but the story is ridiculous and requires more use of the imagination than audiences care to exert. William De Mille shouldn't have done this one. It doesn't seem like him. Poor weather had some effect on box office—but it was mostly the picture. (Middle West.)

Somewhat disappointing. Some expected too much of it. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Zaza—
Always a good attendance for Gloria Swanson here. (Middle West.)

Some regarded it as Swanson's best for some time past; others didn't like it. Did fair business. (Middle West.)

The Covered Wagon—
Goes into third week. Patrons and critics loud in praise. Capacity. (Middle West.)

Glimpses of the Moon—
Bebe Daniels' local popularity drew them in to satisfactory business. Picture fair. (East.)

Sixty Cents An Hour—
Failed to excite much interest. Box office receipts below average. (East.)

The Silent Partner—
Proved satisfactory attraction and did nice business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Brass Bottle—
A very good picture. Different in idea and treatment from general run. Business bad. (East.)

Potash and Perlmutter—
Amusing on the screen as it was on the stage. A real audience picture. Did fine business. (Middle West.)

Children of Dust—
Did only a fair business and was looked upon as an ordinary picture by the audiences. (East.)

Just fair. It was a rainy week, anyway. (Middle West.)

A fair picture, but nothing big. Business fair. (East.)

Trilby—
A fine picture. Artistic and out of the ordinary. Business just fair. (East.)

Somewhat lacking in action but gave general satisfaction. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Six Days—
Took well with the lighter-minded. (East.)

Played to wonderful business. Has a strong appeal to both sexes. (Middle West.)

Three Wise Fools—
A splendidly played comedy drama which went over to big business. (Middle West.)

An excellent picture that attracted capacity business. Given much valuable word-of-mouth advertising. (East.)

METRO

Rouged Lips—
A mediocre picture. Did only mediocre business. (East.)

The Eternal Struggle—
Should go well anywhere. Did very well with it. (Middle West.)

The picture went well, although the weather was against us. (Middle West.)

Strangers of the Night—
Very good picturization of a popular play. Good show and fair business. (Middle West.)

The French Doll—
Good picture material for those who like Mae Murray. Not much otherwise, and finish bad. Did big business all week, largely because of combination bill. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Abysmal Brute—
A fine dramatic production that didn't do so well in a transient house. It's a picture for the houses who cater to regular patronage. (Middle West.)

Drifting—
Drew a good crowd for the week. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Why Worry?—
On first showing house was jammed. He always takes. (Middle West.)

Did well on the second week. (East.)

WARNER BROS.

The Gold Diggers—
A big picture with a strong appeal. (East.)

A regular Belasco performance, elaborate as to detail and interesting from every angle. It did well during a week's engagement. (Middle West.)

Where the North Begins—
Started off well, but latter part of week very poor. Patrons very pleased with picture, but lost some of its novelty through prior performances of the dog. (East.)

Just a mediocre picture, but surprised everybody by its drawing power. (East.)

Main Street—

FOX

The Silent Command—
A sure-fire winner (East.)

Boston Blackie—
Business was below average, and picture not especially liked. Only fair material. (East.)

The Gun Fighter—
Fair. (Middle West.)

The Lone Star Ranger—
The best of this kind of picture. Good business, that held up consistently. (Middle West.)

Soft Boiled—
The Tony fans liked it very much. Mix and his horse always draw well. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The White Rose—
Did an excellent business for second week. (Middle West.)

F. B. O.

Human Wreckage—
A very good drawing card. (Middle West.)

The Fox-Liberty theatre, St. Louis, used this art ad on "The Silent Command" (Fox)

Rex Ingram, who was an actor before he became a director, stopped long enough to pose for the cameraman before sailing for Europe, where he will vacation for a short time.

When the Acquitania discharged its load of returning Americans the other day, one of the first to rush down the gangplank was Carl Laemmle. A close-up of the familiar "Laemmle smile" is presented here through the courtesy of International News.

WITH LENS AND PENCIL

COMINGS and goings are quite numerous this week. Ben P. Schulberg arrived in town from the Coast to confer with Al Lichtman and J. G. Bachmann, of Preferred Pictures. He was accompanied by Sam Jaffe, general manager of the Schulberg studios, and George Yohalem, assistant director to Gasnier.

ERNEST W. FREDMAN, editor of the Film Renter and Moving Picture News, of London, is coming to America for a tour of the principal cities, "Not to criticize but to report progress to the people of my country so that they can take advantage of any forward movement in filmdom since my last trip three years ago." Harry Reichenbach is gathering a committee to arrange a Welcome-to-America Luncheon in Fredman's honor.

LOUIS O. MACLOON has resigned from Cosmopolitan to go into legitimate production. His first show will be an American comedy by Edith Ellis.

A RECENT arrival from the Coast is Emile Offeman, general manager of the Pat Powers R-C Hollywood studios, in New York to confer with F. B. O. executives about coming productions.

AND from Dallas has arrived Claude Ezell, special sales executive for Selznick. He conferred with David R. Blyth, Selznick distribution chief.

S. J. VOGEL, Western Division Manager for Hodkinson, is spending a few days in New York. Mr. Vogel reports the picture business in the Far West as "wonderful." He completed arrangements with the home office for the opening of new branch exchanges in Portland, Ore., and Butte, Mont.

JIMMY GRAINGER, Goldwyn sales chief, is back from a swing around the Mid-West circuit of cities and exchanges.

S. F. SEADLER, Assistant Advertising Manager for Goldwyn, able lieutenant to Howard Dietz, has returned to the home office after a month on the Coast, where he spent considerable time at the Goldwyn studios.

H. M. BERMAN, General Sales Manager of F. B. O., and Director of Advertising and Exploitation Nat Rothstein are back from Chicago, where a sectional exchange managers' meeting was held Sunday and Monday at the Blackstone Hotel. Messrs. Berman and Rothstein will later go to the Coast, where the third meeting will be held, the first having been staged in New York City, preceding the Chicago gathering.

CARL LAEMMLE, who returned last week from a three months' tour of Europe, will leave shortly for his Fall inspection trip to the Coast. Mr. Laemmle went to Philadelphia this week to witness the Quaker City premiere of "The Hunchback." He was accompanied by E. H. Goldstein and E. J. Smith, of the Universal forces.

AND speaking of premieres, Marcus Loew, Metro big chief, was in Chicago this week to see "Scaramouche" started safely on its way in the Windy City.

THE WRITERS CLUB of Hollywood will soon have a new member in the person of M. C. Levee, president of the United Studios and associated with Maurice Tourneur in the production of First National pictures.

For some time it was understood around the United lot that Mr. Tourneur was author of "Jealous Fools," his newest production, but when the director found this belief in print he immediately took steps to uncover the modesty of "M. C."

"Jealous Fools" marks Mr. Levee's first effort as an author.

This picture of Charlie Chaplin looks as though it had been shot in a "Lunnon fog," but C. C. was so busy rehearsing the presentation of "A Woman of Paris" that the cameraman had to "shoot" him where he could, and the light was, to use the quaint expression of the craft, "lousy."

This is a "Preferred" picture of B. P. Schulberg, snapped between moments of the production conference which brought him to New York.

NEWS AND VIEWS OF THE SHORT-LENGTH PRODUCTION

Short Subjects and Serials

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

Pathe Program for October Varied

Ruth Roland, "Snub" Pollard, Will Rogers, Ben Turpin and Others Included in List

PATHE'S schedule of releases for October 14 includes Ruth Roland's new western serial, "Ruth of the Range," and the first of the Hal Roach comedy series starring Will Rogers, which is titled "Jus' Passin' Through."

"The Last Shot," which is the initial episode of "Ruth of the Range," introduces Miss Roland as the daughter of a famous scientist, who has invented a cheap but highly efficient substitute for coal, known as "fuelite." A powerful coal corporation, fearing disastrous competition from the new fuel compound, conspire to keep it off the market by gaining possession of the formula and the mountainous country wherein the ingredients of the new fuel are secreted. In "The Last Shot" the heroine meets her father's enemies for the first time and in the initial affray of courage and wits proves herself an opponent of daring and resourcefulness. This episode also introduces such well-known players as Bruce Gordon, Pat Harmon, Ernest Warde and Lorrimer Johnston.

"Jus' Passin' Through" presents Will Rogers in a type of comedy vehicle adapted to his genius for quaint, subtle humor. Rogers plays the part of Jubilo, a hobo whose success at dodging work is equalled only by his inability to acquire a square meal. Pathe predicts that the new Hal Roach two-reel series will add materially to Rogers' already tremendous following throughout the country.

Other comedy offerings on the October 14 schedule are "Asleep at the Switch," which stars Ben Turpin, and "It's A Gift," with "Snub" Pollard in the featured role. In his latest two-reel comedy vehicle for Pathe, Turpin gets in some exceedingly funny gags as a station agent. The supporting cast includes such talented players as Kewpie Morgan, Madeleine Hurlock, Billy Armstrong and the clever Mack Sennett canine star, Teddy. "It's A Gift" marks the return of "Snub" Pollard in one-reelers in response to a widespread and insistent demand that he again be featured in the compact, laugh-a-second single-reel vehicle in which he first attained his present tremendous popularity.

The final episode of "Her Dangerous Path," starring Edna Murphy, is also set for current release. The issue of the tenth episode finds this serial still booking in all sections, the novel character of the short-story episodes having met with distinct favor. "Aesop's Film Fables" is represented by the highly amusing cartoon comedy, "High Fliers."

Among the features of Pathe Review No. 41 are "The Spring Push," a tale of the lumber jacks in old Maine; an interesting study of lightning titled "The Why and Wherefore of Lightning" and a Pathecolor presentation of the Pyrenees country on the Franco-Spanish border.

Just an idea of what "Fashion Follies" look like. This is an October Century Comedy release, featuring the Century Girls. Universal is distributing.

Group of scenes from the new William Fox comedy of the Imperial brand, titled "The Two Johns."

Stern Buys Ten Vehicles for Century Comedies

When Abe Stern, vice president of Century Comedies, returned from Europe last week he brought nine short stories and one play with him, which will be made into two-reelers when he returns to the Coast. The stories as well as the play, which was produced with marked success during the last part of 1922 in Berlin, will be woven into two-reel pictures for Stern Brothers' organization by scenario and gag writers.

The titles of the stories are: "Come With Me," "The Old Butcher," "The Chimney Climber," "Herr Pep," "One Cold Night," "Three Sneers," "Welcome Ladies," "We Want Women" and "Don't Say No." The play, written by Hans Henry Sneider, is entitled "The Shins of Society," and will be made into a special Century Follies Girls' production, after it has been whipped into proper form.

"Ship Ahoy" New Title for Herman Comedy

Al Herman's latest Pal the dog Century Comedy has been given its definite title. The first title was "Any Old Port," but investigation proved that "Ship Ahoy" would prove more convincing. Roscoe Karns plays the leading male role.

Baby Peggy Comedies Setting Mark

Loew's Metropolitan Circuit, Ed Fay and Other Big Exhibitors Booking Series

FIRST-RUN bookings on the Baby Peggy-Century Comedy, "Little Miss Hollywood," are piling up, according to announcement made this week by its distributing organization, Universal. The entire Loew circuit in New York has booked the picture. This is the third Baby Peggy series played by that circuit. The other two were "Carmen, Jr.," and "Nobody's Darling."

From the New York offices of Century this week came news to the effect that Edward Fay's theatres in Rochester, N. Y., and Providence, R. I., have contracted to run eight Peggy comedies for one-week runs each. Loew's State theatre in Cleveland has booked the first Baby Peggy fairy tale picture, "Hansel and Gretel."

That the popularity of Baby Peggy is increasing in meteoric fashion throughout the country is the substance of reports received in New York from exhibitors, who are plugging Baby Peggy pictures. The Baby Peggy dolls are playing an important part in this exploitation campaign. The Atlantic City Press Union in an effort to boost circulation is putting over a campaign giving away 144 dolls to those obtaining the greatest number of new subscribers for that publication for the next three months.

The Realart theatre of De Ridder, La., has turned to the doll to help swell box office receipts, the management having ordered a dozen dolls to be given out to patrons during the runs of Baby Peggy's two-reelers.

Another interesting piece of news concerning the Baby Peggy pictures comes in the form of an announcement telling of the engagement of Buddy Messinger from the next comedy, "The Right to Love." Buddy was working on his next release, but, through the courtesy of Julius and Abe Stern, production on that picture was stopped to enable the youngster to appear with Baby Peggy.

The arrangement to take the Century boy star from comedies for an indefinite period came after much trouble was experienced in finding the proper boy type the story called for. Mr. Jess Robbins, the director, asked the co-operation of Stern Brothers and the "loaning" of Buddy followed.

Meanwhile the stories purchased and written for Messinger will be whipped into proper form pending his return to the Century studio.

Hal Roach Is Honored by Cleveland Exhibitors

Hal Roach, the Pathe comedy producer, and W. B. Frank, Pathe's feature sales manager, were guests of honor of Cleveland exhibitors at a luncheon during the week. The gathering was in the nature of a get-together between the theatre-owners and the producer so that the latter might learn the exhibitors' opinions on just what the picture-going public wanted in the way of screen entertainment. Among the prominent exhibitors present were: Paul Gusdanovic, who controls an important suburban circuit; Martin Printz of the Circle theatre; H. C. Horater of the Temple, Toledo; and Al Friedman, manager of Loew's Ohio theatres.

Cliff Bowes and Ruth Hiatt are starred in "Simple Sadie," an Educational-Cameo comedy, scenes from which are shown above.

Paramount Quake Pictures Rushed Abroad

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION announced this week that its Japanese earthquake pictures, shown for the first time at Broadway theatres last Thursday, have been rushed to the foreign territory for exhibition. These pictures, obtained by Tom D. Cochrane and R. E. McIntyre, representatives of Paramount in Tokyo, have been incorporated into a two reeler. E. E. Shauer, director of Famous Players' foreign department, despatched prints of the pictures to London, Rio de Janeiro, Mexico City, Paris and other foreign centers Saturday. It is expected that the pictures will be shown in London on Oct. 5 or Oct. 6.

Civic Heads View Pathe "Columbus" Feature

"Columbus," the first of Pathe's "Chronicles of America" series being produced by the Yale University Press, was previewed on Tuesday, Sept. 25th, by the Committee on Public Relations of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The committee is comprised of representatives of national patriotic, civic, and welfare organizations; and as their reports are published in the official organs of the various associations, the committee's preview is expected to open up another important channel of valuable publicity in behalf of "Columbus" which has been set by Pathe for general release on Oct. 7th.

"Our Gang" Issue Used as Business Puller

The idea of an "Our Gang Club" among the juvenile element of the town's population was successfully tried out by the Apollo theatre, Peoria, Ill., during a recent engagement of one of the Hal Roach kid comedies at this house. With the assistance of Pathe's Chicago exchange, the theatre management of the Apollo secured the co-operation of the local newspaper office, which agreed to carry a story of the organization of the "Our Gang Club" and to distribute 500 "Our Gang" hats to qualified candidates applying at the newspaper establishment. The stunt resulted in much valuable newspaper publicity.

Al Santell Directs F. B. O. "Fighting Blood"

Al Santell has taken over the direction of the H. C. Witwer "Fighting Blood" series for F. B. O. at the Pat Powers studios in Hollywood. Henry Lehrman, who supervised the first eight of the second series of twelve episodes of two reels each, has been assigned to another unit now in preparation.

Santell recently completed his first feature for Film Booking Offices, the Mann Page-Paul Dickey comedy drama "Lights Out."

Housewarming Held By Commonwealth Corp.

Twelve hundred exhibitors and other film folk attended the housewarming of Commonwealth Film Corporation held September 28 in the new offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. More than three hundred luncheons were served and handsome leather wallets were given as souvenirs.

President Sam Zierler and other Commonwealth officials received many compliments on the new quarters.

Standard Cinema Will Issue Short Subjects

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the formation of an organization incorporated at Albany, under the laws of New York State, to be known as the Standard Cinema Corporation, which will specialize in the distribution of short subjects.

Officers of the company have been disclosed as; L. P. Darmour, president, J. W. Schleiff, vice-president, James Dent, vice-president, J. L. Tilton, treasurer and H. J. Muller, secretary.

An announcement as to the releasing organization that will handle distribution and sales for the new company will be made at a very early date.

Issues 'Quake Pictures as Regular Release

AS part of its regular semi-weekly issue, Kinograms, Educational's news reel, shipped from New York on Friday, September 29, contained the story of the Japanese earthquake and fire. Kinograms is supplying this reel to its subscribers as part of their weekly service without additional cost.

The scenes included in the reel were the pick of thousands of feet of film taken in Tokio and Kobe and show the destruction wrought by the quake and fire. The ruined city of Tokio with the still smoking ruins and the dead in the river and the effects of the quake in the surrounding country are shown in detail.

In addition to the scenes of destruction and death the reel shows the hordes of refugees fleeing from the stricken city by the highways and by rail in passenger and freight trains. Thousands are shown crowded in Uyeno Park, where the second quake and consequent panic took such a heavy toll of lives. Temporary shelters under fallen buildings, in huge steel sewer conduits and hastily erected tents, where the Orientals face famine and pestilence among the still smoking ruins while soldiers pursue rescue work and long lines of injured await medical attention, are also shown.

The refugee ships en route to Kobe and the fortunate survivors disembarking at this port are also shown in detail.

"We believe our subscribers are entitled to this service without extra cost," stated Captain G. McL. Baynes, head of the Kinogram Publishing Company. "Our regular subscribers should be provided with this service just as a newspaper furnishes the news of any disaster to its subscribers and readers—without extra cost. And Kinograms subscribers have a story of the Japanese disaster that is absolutely authentic, without one foot of library film."

These pictures, which were taken off a Canadian ship at Vancouver quarantine by seaplane, which carried them to Seattle, and then rushed across the country by airplane, were shown by courtesy of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

WHILE feature productions occupy a stellar place on the program of McVicker's theatre in Chicago, it is a fact that short subjects give the producing director there the greatest aid in the artistic presentations for which that house is famous. Here is one house that overlooks no opportunity to broadcast electrically via its many signs a good entertaining short subject.

Scenes from Round Six of "Wages of Cinema," from the "Fighting Blood" series F. B. O. is releasing.

Educational Completes October List

Four Comedies Head Releases for Current Month—Diversified Program of One-Reelers

FOUR two-reel comedies of widely varying nature will form the backbone of the releasing schedule of the Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., program for October. These comedies will represent four different series of two-reel subjects released by Educational. During the first week of the month, "Poodles" Hannaford will make his debut in "Handy Andy," a Tuxedo Comedy. This will be the initial appearance of this well-known clown in motion pictures.

The following week, Jimmie Adams will be seen in his first Educational-Christie Comedy of the 1923-24 series, "Done In Oil," a comedy taken in the extensive oil fields around Signal Hill, Cal. Adams will be supported by Charlotte Merriam.

"Three Cheers," the second of the new Juvenile Comedies, will make its appearance the third week of the month. This picture, as did "Yankee Spirit," the first of the series, will present big cast of well-known juvenile actors, including Ernest Butterworth, Tom Hicks, Roger Keene and Peggy Cartwright.

Jack White's second Mermaid Comedy of the new series, "Running Wild," will be released the last week of the month. "Running Wild," it is claimed by White, is the best of the Mermaid Comedies so far produced. It will present Lige Conley and Lillian Hackett in a Jack White production. White is dressing his comedies in society clothes this year and "Running Wild" will have as a background an exclusive polo club near Los Angeles.

The single reel releases will be no less diversified. "Golden Gems," the third of the "Sing Them Again" series, will be released the first week of the month, followed by the Cameo Comedy, "Simple Sadie," on the second week. Ruth Hiatt, Lloyd Hamilton's leading lady, will appear in "Simple Sadie," with Cliff Bowes.

A Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tale, "Discontent," will be the single reel release of the third week. This is a story of the Oregon wilderness, with a state fish hatchery as the background.

Two single reel subjects will make their appearance on the program in the last week, the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, "Speedville," and another Cameo Comedy, "Heads Up."

Kinograms, Educational's news reels, will be issued twice a week.

Metro Two-Reeler Set for Big Exposition

AMONG the film features to be presented at the Fire Prevention Exposition to be held at the 71st Regiment Armory, New York, beginning October 8, will be "The Keystone," the picture made under the supervision of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, and a specially photographed film made at the Metro Pictures Corporation Coast studios. The latter shows in detail the complete arrangement for fire prevention employed at a big motion picture studio. "The Keystone," through an arrangement made with W. E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro, and the National Board of Fire Underwriters, will be distributed throughout the country by the Metro exchanges. During fire prevention week, October 8 to 13, it will be shown in theatres everywhere at the special request of fire chiefs. Metro is handling the physical distribution of "The Keystone" as their contribution toward reducing the fire hazard in the United States.

Organize "Our Gang Club" as Business Builder

The Apollo theatre of Peoria, Ill., recently cashed in on a cheap but effective exploitation stunt for one of Pathe's "Our Gang" comedy offerings. By judicious outlay of advertising space in the local newspaper its co-operation was secured, and at the same time Pathe's Chicago exchange stepped in to yield some timely assistance.

Taking advantage of the kid atmosphere in these Hal Roach laugh-provokers, a movement was started by the Apollo for the organization of an "Our Gang Club" among the juvenile population of Peoria. Negotiations were carried on with the local newspaper office, the result of which was that the newspaper carried a story of the organization of the club and distributed 500 "Our Gang" hats to all qualified candidates, making application at the newspaper office. In addition to winning considerable mouth-to-mouth advertising, the stunt resulted in a liberal measure of valuable newspaper publicity for the Apollo and its program.

Webster Campbell to Direct "Chronicle" Release

Webster Campbell, veteran actor and director, has been engaged to direct a number in the "Chronicles of America" series, which is being produced by Yale University Press for distribution by Pathe.

"Bluebeard's 8th Wife" Displays

Fashion Angle Is Strongly Stressed in Campaigns by Showmen on Picture

THE lavish angle, with fashion shows, striking lobby displays, special shadow-boxes, and such material, has been the outstanding feature of exhibitors' campaigns on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

An unusual display was prepared in the lobby of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., by Manager F. J. Miller, consisting of a circular shadow-box built in the center of the lobby and decorated with bright colors. In this circular shadow-box were seven panels, each one covered with a very thin material. Cut-out figures of women hanging by their hair, one to each panel, or compartment, were placed behind the transparent cloth. A very bright light placed behind these figures brought them out into bold relief.

Leading up to this display were seven steps. And on the top one was a cut-out of Gloria Swanson, from the three-sheet.

This display was strictly original with Mr. Miller and was the occasion of unusual attention and comments.

The mailing list was used, 500 rotos and 2,000 small heralds being mailed, while 1,000 heralds were distributed in autos and stores.

Fashion Show Is Held

In all his advertising on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," Manager H. B. Clarke of the Garing theatre, Greenville, S. C., made a special appeal to the ladies through an announcement to the effect that in this picture Gloria Swanson wears the most gorgeous gowns ever; the latest designs from Paris. Carrying out this idea, a tie-up was effected with a fashionable department store of Greenville, who gave a display of the latest arrivals and displayed cards tying up with the picture and the theatre.

In the inside lobby a shadow bow arrangement attracted lots of attention. This was a transparency scene of Gloria Swanson announcing the date.

One of the most elaborate campaigns was that put over by Harold Horne at Loew's Palace theatre, Memphis, Tenn.

Interest was aroused in advance by the use of teasers, first featuring the title, second the name of star and, third, the beautiful gowns. For two weeks in advance these ideas were hammered over, supplemented by the distribution of rotogravure sheets and a handsome display of gowns in the Palace lobby.

The roto sheets were distributed by the ushers at safety zones along car lines, where they were given to people boarding cars. They were also given out in the theatre at the close of each performance, and the ushers would line up and say in unison, as they handed out the sheets, "See Gloria Swanson in 'Bluebeard's 8th wife' next week."

Swanson Gowns Are Displayed

The gowns worn by star were put on display all week in lobby, set on dummies, with rich black velveteen drapes and coverings against brown background. Illuminated by rose spot set about 12 feet away and white flood light placed on landing about 25 feet away. Floral decorations borrowed from local flower shop gave whole dazzling effect. This was the talk of the town, and since people could not see without buying a ticket to the theatre, it proved an actual business-getter—one of the biggest ever used at this theatre. This was acknowledged as an opportunity to get over some advance work on Zaza, and two huge frames containing stills of Gloria Swanson in her forthcoming production were set up.

A row of lights under the screen, spelling out the title flashed on simultaneously with trailer and remained all through. This has been found a very effective means of impressing the title of the "next attraction."

WINDOW DISPLAY ON "THE SPOILERS" OBTAINED THROUGH SODA FOUNTAIN

The Circle theatre, Indianapolis, arranged with local soda shops to feature an Alaskan Sundae, as shown here, during the run of "The Spoilers." (Goldwyn)

"HOMEWARD BOUND" TRAFFIC TIE-UP

Putting cards on the traffic signs was one of the stunts put over by Herschel Stuart, managing director, Missouri theatre, St. Louis, on "Homeward Bound" (Paramount)

Railroad Company Ties Up to "Hollywood" Showing

An unusual tie-up on "Hollywood" was obtained by Manager J. B. Carroll of the Victory theatre, Tampa, Fla.

The Seaboard Railroad and the Atlantic Coast Line co-operated to the extent that in every station within a radius of forty miles special half-sheet circulars were displayed. These were made locally. They were sent to each station in lots of six, with a letter from the District Passenger Agent authorizing them to post same in waiting rooms and also in prominent locations throughout the town. The Seaboard went so far as to send out 100 window cards, with instructions to their agents to place these cards in store windows, in addition to the half-sheet circulars.

On Friday before opening the Walk-Over Shoe Co. gave a window display on Hollywood Sandals. This was an unusually attractive window and in addition to a display of the sandals, cards and stills on "Hollywood." They also ran a quarter page ad in the afternoon paper on the day of the display. This window was also the occasion of two newspaper stories. The shoe store was furnished with 50 passes to "Hollywood," which were given away to purchasers of the sandals.

The entire lobby was worked up in Railroad Station effect, using equipment furnished by the Seaboard.

Appeals to Scottish Clan for "Mighty Lak' a Rose"

Manager R. McDonald showed something new when he used the Scottish Clans of St. John, N. B., to exploit First National's "Mighty Lak' A Rose." A thousand paper roses, with cards attached reading "Mighty Lak' A Rose" were distributed. These were handed out to youngsters attending a matinee performance.

The cards were sent to every member of every Scotch clan in the city, the name having been obtained by a personal call to the secretary in each case.

Strong Publicity Campaign for "Human Wreckage"

An excellent campaign of publicity and exploitation was put over for "Human Wreckage" by Archie McCullom, resident manager of Fay's theatre, Rochester, N. Y., assisted by T. C. Leonard, F. B. O. exploitation man.

Three weeks before the showing, special stories on Mrs. Reid's campaign against "dope" were planted in the Rochester papers. The Herald carried a big Sunday feature under the personal signature of Mrs. Reid, which called upon the women for their co-operation. Two weeks before stories quoting the federal and city officials on the local situation were planted and Mr. Leonard personally called upon several of the officials, doctors, ministers and the heads of the various organizations of women.

A special screening was arranged at 11 o'clock at night and the newspapers carried small announcements of this event and on the following day gave generous space to the event, quoting some of the prominent people and printing a list of names of those present.

During the week previous to the showing a special prologue was staged with the assistance of a vaudeville actress. The stage and house were thrown into absolute darkness. Then from between black curtains the actress, also garbed in black, appeared. The only light was upon her face and arms, which came from a baby spotlight in the foots. In an impressive manner she addressed the audience, stating that she had a personal message for them from Mrs. Wallace Reid and telling of the campaign and picture, ending with a plea for each one to do their share. This proved very effective and created a lot of comment.

Airplane Used to Exploit "The Spoilers" Showing

The airplane stunt used to exploit the showing of "The Spoilers" at Finkelstein & Rubin's Garrick theatre, in Minneapolis, was one of the best in which this method of exploitation has been used. An arrangement was made with the Curtiss Aeroplane Co. which has a flying field between the Twin Cities, adjacent to the fair grounds, for the exclusive use of a Curtiss Oriole plane, for four consecutive days. On the lower wings of the plane was a huge sign, occupying the entire wing-spread, measuring thirty-eight feet in width. The letters of the sign were six feet high, and were painted in black. On the first flight, Pilot Ed. Ballough flew over the Twin Cities at a low altitude dropping 20,000 stiff cardboard heralds. The first flight lasted fifty minutes. This was the first time an airplane stunt has been used in Minneapolis and it made a big hit. The aviator flew low enough so that the sign could be plainly read by everyone on the street.

On Monday, the day after the opening, the aviator, accompanied by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan's Exploitation man, Walter D. Nealand, flew over the fair grounds, which had an attendance that day of 141,000, on a thirty minute flight which was a real thriller. Between the races, they flew directly over the grandstand at an altitude of forty feet and circled the race track six times. On the turns the pilot banked his plane so that the lower surface with "The Spoilers" in big black letters stood out in vivid contrast with the yellow background. On the body of the machine was another sign reading "Garrick Theatre, Now." When they circled around the race track and the grandstand 15,000 circulars were dropped. Before returning to the aviation field the pilot criss-crossed the grounds.

CIRCUSSING "CIRCUS DAYS" SHOWING

Real elephants were used as a street ballyhoo on "Circus Days" (First National) by Joseph Hopp, managing director of the Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island, Ill.

Flowers Given to Sick in "White Rose" Campaign

Manager G. E. Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., who until recently handled the publicity and advertising for the Consolidated Enterprises, Inc., of Memphis, when he found he was to play "The White Rose" decided that one of his Memphis stunts would work out to a "T" with this production. So he tied up with C. T. Pettus, a local florist for city wide distribution of white roses.

Brown first went to the morning newspaper and sold it the idea of giving lots of free space to the idea of distributing white roses to the sick people of Charlotte. The idea sounded good and the result was a series of stories that started every one in Charlotte talking.

The paper asked the names of the sick ones who could not see "The White Rose" and told of Mae Marsh indicating to the Imperial management that she wanted flowers distributed to those who could not enjoy her newest picture.

Names came into the Imperial by mail, over the phone and in person. The result was that the florist and the theatre, along with several volunteers with automobiles, were kept busy for three days delivering white roses to the sick.

All the roses were contributed by the florist, each bouquet carried a special card with Miss Marsh's compliments.

Bakery Tie-up Pulls for "Enemies of Women"

The bakery tie-up which has been used with "Enemies of Women" in Kansas City, St. Louis and other large towns makes an effective exploitation stunt for small towns. This was proved by William Knoedler, manager of the Mattoon theatre at Mattoon, Ill. The Mattoon Bakery in that town used 2,000 of the "Hot ovens are 'Enemies of Women'" tie-ups, the circulars being enclosed in loaves of bread with cakes and pies.

One thousand yard cards were stuck in the lawns of the homes throughout the town. Post cards were mailed to farmers in the vicinity.

LOBBY PANELS SUPPORTED FORM CROSSBEAMS USED IN "VOICE FROM THE MINARET" LOBBY

Manager H. M. Cutshaw of the Gay theatre, Newport, Tenn., believes in a liberal use of display material, as shown here in the "Voice from the Minaret" (First National) lobby display, with attractive panels suspended from crossbeams

Stunts Used to Aid "Red Lights"

Title Suggests Colorful Ideas to Exhibitors Playing This Photoplay

SPECIAL stunt exploitation, suggested by the title, has been used in the early campaigns on "Red Lights." Several ideas culled from these first campaigns are presented here.

Public interest in the showing at the Capitol theatre, New York City, was stimulated by a novel stunt put across on the opening night by Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

This consisted of an airplane, showing flares of red lights, plying up and down above Broadway and encircling the Capitol theatre while the theatres were emptying their tens of thousands of patrons into the street. It was the intention to have used this stunt on Saturday night at the same hour, but rain prevented the aviator from flying.

On Sunday night, however, he took to the air and from 10:30 until 11:30 flew above the city, in the "white light" district, with the red lights of his airplane gleaming all over Manhattan. The police stations and the newspaper offices were called up by hundreds of persons eager to know what the unusual sight meant.

The flaring red lights of the airplane attracted the attention of everyone on the street Sunday night, and great crowds collected to watch it.

The front of the Capitol theatre was flooded with red lights for this showing. Large red floodlights played upon the marquee and all of the lobby and theatre front lights were red.

Los Angeles Campaign

An invasion of the sky and the Ambassador and Alexandria hotels—the two most exclusive hostelries in Los Angeles—supplemented the usual advertising campaign in putting over "Red Lights" at the California theatre.

A tie-up was effected with the exclusive Ambassador Hotel, a "Red Lights" night being arranged in the Cocoanut Grove, nationally known dining room. A cup was provided by the theatre, to be presented by June Mathis, head of the Goldwyn editorial staff, to the prize dancers of the evening, and Miss Ina Anson, who dances in the picture, was secured for a special dance number.

The hotel provided 1,500 printed place cards announcing the special event, which were put at the plate of each guest at the Ambassador for a week in advance. Pastel paintings of the stars of the picture, with announcements of the night, were used in the lobbies of the two hotels.

An aviator was engaged to fly over Los Angeles. The first flight was made on the Wednesday preceding the Sunday opening, red flares being burned on the wing tips.

Changes Marquee Lights

Manager George Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., got results with a very simple and inexpensive stunt.

Taking his cue from the title, the color of the marquee lights was changed from white to red and the illuminated title, "Red Lights," stood out like a house afire. It was noticeable blocks away, and was conspicuous in contrast to all other street lights, which were white.

Other decorative lighting effects were also used in the lobby.

Navy Bulletin Boards Aid "Masters of Men" Run

Through the co-operation of the U. S. Naval Recruiting office in Memphis, Tenn., Manager A. B. Morrison of the Strand theatre had placed at his disposal all of their bulletin boards, thirty in number.

They also supplied to the theatre 75 of the Navy one-sheets, which were built up in stands together with the regular paper on "Masters of Men."

PLAYING UP THE PLAYERS IN LOBBY DISPLAY ON "THE SPOILERS"
When "The Spoilers" (Goldwyn) played Ascher's Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, the lobby display played up the members of the cast with special art portraits, poster style

"DAUGHTERS OF THE RICH" WINDOW
When "Daughters of the Rich" (Preferred) played at the Capitol theatre, New York City, a book store gave this display of stills, cards and the novel

Stunt Builds Interest in "Enemies of Women" Run

Manager G. E. Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., recently during the showing of "Enemies of Women" had all the bachelors and women of Charlotte grabbing the morning paper each day to learn the latest news on why bachelors are women haters.

Brown tied up with the Charlotte Observer for a newspaper stunt which ran for a week and resulted in reams of free space in which the women of the city wrote freely on the good and bad qualities of bachelors. The newspaper publicity opened with a double column on Sunday and ran through the week, ending with a double column, more than a full column in length, carrying the best letters received on the good and bad points of North Carolina's unmarried men.

Some of the letters received by the papers were humorous and they made good reading matter for the public. The paper was liberal in its space and one spread, carrying brief excerpts of the letters, was over four columns.

Imprinted Bills Aid "Don't Marry for Money"

Following an extensive teaser newspaper advertising campaign on "Don't Marry For Money," Ben Apple, manager of the American theatre, Troy, N. Y., used a street stunt to good effect.

He obtained a quantity of Austrian kronen and had them imprinted: "Yes, this is real money—but it can't buy happiness. See 'Don't Marry For Money' with House Peters at the American, week starting Monday, September 30." These were distributed by a man whose only distinctive garb was an old-fashioned opera hat—one of the accordion type. On his back was a banner reading: "Don't Marry For Money! I Give It Away!" And so he did—the imprinted Austrian kronen. The supposedly worthless money proved of great value, however, as all of Troy was talking about it. And they saved them, too, as souvenirs.

Citywide Campaign Used on Run of "Hollywood"

Manager Howard Price Kingsmore of the Howard theatre, Atlanta, started his work on "Hollywood" far in advance of opening.

The biggest tie-up in connection with the playing of this production was that arranged with the Southern Railway. They gladly grasped the opportunity to co-operate and furnished all advertising matter, such as fans, heralds and semaphores, as well as an oil painting for display. They ran teaser ads in the newspapers several days prior to showing, tying up the Southern Railway, "Hollywood" and the Howard theatre.

Cross Arms were placed above both entrances to the down-town office, reading "Look out for the cars . . . Watch for Hollywood." These were furnished by the railroad.

The railway company placed newspaper ads featuring excursion rates to Hollywood, and tying up with the showing of "Hollywood" at the Howard.

Time Tables carried the imprint: "See 'Hollywood' at the Howard theatre week of Sept. 3d. Twenty real stars . . . thirty screen celebrities . . . undoubtedly the greatest picture of the season." These were distributed by ushers.

A large oil painting of the Piedmont Special was given to the theatre for use during the week. The Southern Railway had the picture painted over and the lettering painted on announcing the playing of "Hollywood."

Adjoining the Howard theatre, just at the entrance to the offices of the Southern Enterprises, Inc. (directly above the Howard), the rear end of an observation car was built. This was in a sense a sort of information bureau, where the various heralds, time tables, fans and a special Railroad ticket to Hollywood were distributed by an usher, from a seat on the back of the Observation Car . . . the "Hollywood Special." A semaphore placed just opposite read . . . "Look out for the Howard Express."

COMBINING 6-SHEET AND 24-SHEET IN "PENROD AND SAM" FRONT
F. J. Miller, managing the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., made use of the six-sheet and also of cut-out heads from the twenty-four-sheet, combined, to make up this attention winning lobby display on "Penrod and Sam" (First National)

Putting "If Winter Comes" Over

Story of Campaign Used in New York in Exploiting Picturization of Book

SINCE it is a generally accepted fact that New York audiences are the most sophisticated and blase in the world, those charged with the exploitation of "If Winter Comes" at the Times Square theatre, New York City, faced not only an exceedingly difficult task, but one peculiar to the metropolis. To being with, A. S. M. Hutchinson's novel, from which the picture was taken, is essentially a philosophical study. It follows that the picture is what is known as a class production, appealing obviously to the more intelligent theatregoers. But in New York the problem of e ploitation was more complicated than this phase would indicate. The play, previously produced by Cyril Maude and presented almost around the corner, was a failure. Thus, the picture had to brave the New York mind which has nothing but scorn for what Broadway calls a "flop."

Here was a situation which perhaps no other city in the world will parallel. Early in the campaign it became apparent that to sell a picture with the class appeal which marked "If Winter Comes," it would be necessary to concentrate upon the receptive type of theatregoer who would respond logically to such an unusual production. The theory was that the blase, "hard-boiled" masses would follow the class element. Accordingly, they centered up on the clergy as being the most practical and effective channel through which to reach the greatest number of propective patrons in the least time.

Ministers Are Invited

A complete list of the ministerial profession, including Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths, was obtained and to these men was sent a cordial invitation to view the picture. The New York clergy responded to the extent of about thirty-five per cent. Of these, five per cent. sent in voluntary letters of approval with offers to mention the picture from the pulpit and elsewhere.

The result of a letter was a flood of replies from ministers, many of which contained remarkably clever "catch lines," some of them promising to canvass their congregations, others announcing the intention of the writers to discuss "If Winter Comes" from their pulpits.

A second step in the exploitation campaign brought in the educators. Special rates were offered to teachers in the public and parochial schools, with the result that hundreds of English classes heard interesting discourses on the book and the picture, after the instructors had attended a showing.

USING THE CLOWN BAND AS A STREET BALLYHOO TO BOOST "CIRCUS DAYS"
N. I. Miller and Robert Knevels of Pantages theatre, Toronto, together with Clare Appel of the First National Exchange, were responsible for this ballyhoo on "Circus Days" (First National)

Appraisals For Territorial Buyers

"Supreme Tests"

MacDonald—5000 Feet

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$75,000.

Producer—Cosmosart Productions, Inc.

Theme—Dwells on the adventures of a former world war veteran, who in a determination to get work, unknowingly falls into the clutches of a "buddie" whose life he had saved, but who was wanted by the police for robbery and murder.

Cast—Good cast, although only name with which exhibitors can be sold is Johnny Harron, brother of the late Bobby Harron, who has been appearing in many recent pictures, including Constance Talmadge's "Dulcy." Gloria Gray is co-starred with Harron.

Classification—Crook melodrama.

As a Whole—This is distinctly a crook picture of the stereotyped calibre. Several new twists were attempted, but apparently forgotten, for the stunts are old in development and consummation. However, the fight scenes wherein the villain and hero figure give the picture a melodramatic atmosphere that will satisfy those inclined toward the sensationalism.

Shortcomings—The introduction of superfluous incident and characters lost because of tendencies of author trying to reach a melodramatic climax.

Settings—Acceptable. Interiors are well laid out and furnished, the contrast between the luxurious home of the city and the domicile of the country is markedly distinct.

Photography—Acceptable.

Direction—Acceptable.

Exploitation—Invites expenditure of money for those seeking maximum returns.

Exploitation Possibilities—The world war veterans' presence suggests many civic tieups, that encourage talk on the soldiers' bonus and hookups with newspapers that are not adverse to listening to some angle for editorials. The title suggests window tieups and the co-operative advertising page stunt.

Producer Advertising—Not ascertained.

Advertising Accessories—Regular line of paper, stills, lobby, herald and slides.

The Cast

Johnny Miller ..... Johnny Harron
May Blake ..... Gloria Gray
Phil Condon ..... Eugene Beaudine
Dolores ..... Dorothy Revere

Story by J. E. Bowen and Walter M. McNamara
Director, Not announced.

SYNOPSIS—Johnny Miller, a country boy, leaves his home in search of fame and fortune, leaving behind May Blake, a blind girl, his boyhood sweetheart. The world war calls him. While at the front he risks his life to save Phil Condon, a New York crook. After the war, Johnny finds himself penniless, homeless and unemployed. He finally obtains employment as a gardener. Condon has returned to his old crowd and sweetheart, Dolores, who threatens to desert him unless he gets some money. In desperation Condon decides on a break on the home wherein Johnny is employed. A "squeal" puts cops on Condon's tracks. Phil "frames" Johnny to whom he represents himself as a detective, forcing Miller to leave town. Later in another break Phil murders an officer and, escaping to the Blake home, forces Miller to shelter him and, in desperation, demands that Johnny steal money belonging to May Blake, and her mother. Johnny refuses, whereupon Phil undertakes the "job" himself, but is caught by Miller who thrashes him soundly. With his back turned to the crook, Miller is saved from being killed by Phil by the timely arrival of a headquarters man. Condon is arrested and Johnny and Mary, who has by this time regained her sight, left to enjoy life together everlastingly.

UNDER the above heading productions are reviewed for state rights buyers only and opinions rendered are on the basis of distribution.

As soon as a picture is available for theatres, a second review covering the production from the exhibitor's angle will be published.

"Danger Ahead"

Phil Goldstone—4800 Feet

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$30,000.

Producer—Phil Goldstone.

Theme—A case of double identity with the hero figuring in a number of highly illogical developments.

Cast—Richard Talmadge's talents are wasted in this production. Helen Rosson makes a good leading woman and stands out as the most successful player in the picture. The action is upheld also by J. P. Lockney and David Kirby.

Classification—Mystery drama of the more sensational type.

As a Whole—Plenty of action, but it is exaggerated to a degree and not logical. This one gives the star a chance to demonstrate his daring, but not to the extent that he did in previous releases.

Shortcomings—Suggestive titles in the sequence when the man poses as the girl's wife.

Settings—Hold up well and are well selected.

Photography—Satisfactory and one of the best things about the picture.

Direction—The care with which this picture was produced is to its credit, but the director was apparently handicapped with a story that took illogic by leaps and bounds.

Exploitation—Just what the producer will do is not known. What exploitation aids have been prepared has not been given out.

Exploitation Possibilities—The mystery atmosphere and title suggest many tieups. The star is well known in the neighborhood houses by his past performances, but the exhibitor will have to do a little spending if this picture is booked for any length of time. The title is one that brings to mind many stunts that should attract attention. Signs placed along streets leading to your theatre, reading "Danger Ahead," with arrows pointing in the direction of your theatre, will incite curiosity. A "Danger Ahead" tieup with newspapers covering co-operative advertising, a teaser campaign on the billboards and in the papers and a hookup with local "Safety First" clubs can be effected on this picture.

Producer Advertising—Trade papers.

Advertising Accessories—Paper, lobbies, cuts, mats, slides and press book.

The hero ..... Richard Talmadge
The woman ..... Helen Rosson
The gang ..... J. P. Lockney, Victor Mazetti, David Kirby

Story by Keane Thompson. Director, William K. Howard. Photography by Reggie Lyons.

SYNOPSIS—Talmadge is the intended victim of a gang of crooks who force him to a corner where while under the spell of aphasia he comes in contact with the man who is impersonating him. How he outwits the bands and brings them to justice after a hot chase brings about developments that permanently establish the happiness of the hero and heroine.

"The Knock on the Door"

Walker-Polo—5000 Feet

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$60,000.

Producer—Johnny Walker.

Theme—Centered about a dream in which the hero is introduced to the girl and after a series of adventures paves the way for the realization of what he thought was an impossibility of slumberland.

Cast—The picture is well cast throughout, with Eddie Polo, of serial note, starred. He is particularly active in this feature and gets the chance to display his athletic and acrobatic prowess to advantage. He shines especially in the fight scenes which are realistically acted. Kathleen Myers, who has been Eddie Polo's leading woman for many years, plays opposite him in this one, but for a principal she has very little to do, most of the burden resting on the shoulders of Polo. However, she is satisfactory as are also Glen White and Mathilde Brundage.

Classification—Stunt melodrama.

As a Whole—A rapid moving melodrama with value for those whose exchanges are patronized by neighborhood, second run or combination theatres. However, this picture carries a strong appeal, and this fact will probably make it a good bet for houses making a bid for women patronage. Insofar as action is concerned, there is plenty of it. The production as a whole is good, with most of the credit going to Polo.

Shortcomings—Inconsistencies in story, but these are quickly forgotten because of good work of players.

Settings—Good. Exterior locations were particularly good.

Photography—Acceptable.

Direction—Very effective, although there is every evidence that Polo did most of the dictating, for he is very seldom out of sight.

Exploitation—Extent of exploitation depends entirely upon rentals asked by exchangemen, length of run and house in which picture is booked. Eddie Polo has his following in the neighborhoods, but this writer would not suggest any splash.

Exploitation Possibilities—The best possibilities are in the title, which suggests exploitation of the teaser type. In this connection one may take up the suggestion of effecting commercial tieups dwelling on the fact that "opportunity knocks but once," and hitching up the store's wares with run of the picture.

Producer Advertising—None so far, and future plans unknown.

Advertising Accessories—Regular line of paper, lobby, press book, cuts, mats and novelties.

The Cast

The man ..... Eddie Polo
The girl ..... Kathleen Myers

Story by Melville Brown. Director, William Hughes Curran. Photography by Phillip Tannura.

SYNOPSIS—The hero dreams of the girl of his heart, whom he saves time and again. He awakes to the fact that it was all impossible, but in his heart there is a longing for his "dream girl." But Fate enters and to his surprise he meets the girl and what follows is not unlike what he had dreamed. But in the end everything is righted and "the dream girl" is certain of a promenade to the altar.

Around Town With the Independents

By ROGER FERRI

HARRY LANDE of Lande Film Corporation of Pittsburgh visited New York late last week, as did also Gene Marcus of Twentieth Century Film Corporation and Lou Burman of Independent Film Corporation, both of Philadelphia.

ARTHUR BROMBERG, C. C. Ezell and Diaz Callahan are named directors of the newly formed Progress Pictures, Inc., of Dallas, Texas.

S. J. BAKER, formerly of the Omaha (Neb.) Associated Exhibitors' Exchange, has taken charge of the Film Classics, Inc., office in that city.

Ben Alexander in a snow scene for "Jealous Fools" taken at the United Studios with the thermometer at 96.

OMAHA, NEB., has another independent exchange. It is known as the Independent Film Exchange. Its owners, J. L. and M. L. Stern, were in New York this week.

AL FISHER is now in charge of the State Rights pictures department of Bob Lynch's Metro exchange which is being operated independent of the latter organization. Metro's exchange in Philadelphia is one of the best in the country.

FRANK SELTZER is now with Tony Luchese and Oscar Neufeld of De Luxe Film Exchange, Philadelphia, as exploitation director, succeeding Bill Haggerty.

BUFFALO exchanges are accepting independent pictures for upper New York State distribution on the percentage plan.

SAM GRAND, of Grand-Ascher Corporation, headed a company of three stars, appearing in that firm's pictures, which arrived in New York Wednesday morning on the Twentieth Century. The stars were Elliott Dexter, Bryant Washburn and Mabel Forrest. They will remain in the East for several weeks.

WESLEY BARRY, the Warner star, is expected in New York within two weeks, or as soon as he has completed work on "George Washington, Jr."

"INDEPENDENT MONTH" in Missouri proved a huge success, business for independent exchanges in that territory showing an increase of more than 100 per cent over the same period last year.

MOST of the independent exchanges throughout the country already have communicated with Sydney S. Cohen, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, expressing their willingness to co-operate with exhibitors in successfully observing "National Motion Picture Day" next month.

AL FEINMAN, who went to England as the exploitation representative for Warner Brothers, will return to this country as soon as he has recovered from an illness that has confined him to his bed at the Savoy Hotel, London, for the past three weeks.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, 2nd, publicity and advertising director for Arrow Film Corporation, has returned to New York from a trip to several Middle-Western cities, where he co-operated in the exploitation of first-run showings of Arrow productions.

PHIL H. PIERCE COMPANY, Inc., of Dallas, Texas, believes in being frank. Mr. Pierce has written national independent distributors to the effect that he is "overstocked" and will be unable to add to his lineup for several months.

ACCORDING to J. W. Williams, of Independent Film Distributing Corporation of Dallas, Texas, business in that territory, insofar as State Right pictures are concerned, is booming.

BENNY ZEIDMAN is planning on two feature productions for the independent market this season. He is working on one now at the Doug Fairbanks studios.

FRANK ZAMBRENO, of Progress Pictures Exchanges of Chicago and Indianapolis, finds business in those territories so progressive he has augmented his sales staffs in both office.

FROM the hospital where he has been confined for the past two weeks, Abe Warner sends word to the effect that he will probably be forced to stay away from his office for at least three more weeks.

DENVER, COL., and Salt Lake City exchanges are considering a proposition involving centralized distribution for their territory. That district has been hard hit because of a lack of proper transportation facilities and co-operation in the delivery of prints among the exchanges is believed by film men there to be the only solution to the problem.

THREE independent productions will be shown at Broadway theaters within the next six weeks. They are all Warner pictures.

THERE is a possibility that the Jimmy Aubrey comedies that I. K. Chadwick is making may not be released on the independent market after all, for two national distributing organizations were this week dickering for that series.

TONY LUCHESE, of De Luxe Film Exchange, of Philadelphia, spent several days in New York this week looking at pictures open for his territory.

INDEPENDENT FILMS, INC., S. & S. FILM EXCHANGE of Pittsburgh and Boston this week purchased rights for their respective territories on Arrow's Broadway Comedies, starring Billy West.

DENIAL was made this week that Export & Import Film Corporation had acquired the foreign rights to Victor Fisher's "Enemies of Children," as was announced last week in this column.

ENTERPRISE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION of Atlanta, Ga., has the largest outdoor advertising display ever used by an independent exchange to announce coming attractions. This display consists of 24-sheets and eight-sheet stands in various sections of Atlanta. Enterprise has eight exchanges serving 18 States and is the largest independent distributing organization in this country.

FOR the first time in months not a single eastern studio is being utilized by independent producers, who have apparently adopted a policy of watchful waiting for the reception accorded to super specials now being exploited in key cities on a road show basis.

THE organized campaign among exhibitors in New England to break the double feature bill policy is being watched with interest by Boston and New Haven independents inasmuch as the re-establishment of the single feature bill is expected to curtail materially the demand for independent pictures.

SOL LESSER, who is now in Europe, is expected to return to this country several weeks earlier than he had planned. His publicity representative, Harry Wilson, is now making his headquarters in New York and will remain in the East until the arrival of his boss.

WILL NIGH, who has been producing for Weber & North for the past year, has been signed by E. L. Smith, formerly production manager for Inspiration, to make a series of pictures that will be released in the independent market.

HARRY RAPF, a Warner Brothers producer, is expected in New York late this month. Rapf is making the Coast his permanent home and is so well satisfied with California he never expects to settle in the East again.

HARRY ASCHER and Sam Grand of Grand-Ascher have completed arrangements for the opening of six exchanges in Canada. The cities wherein the exchanges will be located are Montreal, St. John's, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver and Calgary.

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, President of Independent Pictures Corporation, left this week for Los Angeles, where he will personally supervise the production of his series of two-reelers. On his trip West he will make stops at all exchange centers east of Kansas City from which city he will go direct to the Coast.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Running Wild"
(Educational—Two Reels)

"RUNNING WILD" is a merry Mermaid Comedy, produced by Jack White and featuring Lige Conley. The action is swift throughout with ample thrills and more comedy. It is one of the cleverest comedies of its type viewed by the writer. The story revolves around the substitution of Conley for the star player at a polo match. The fun starts on board of a de luxe train where a barber inflicts some laugh-provoking hardships on his patrons, due to the lurching of the car in which the shop is located. The polo match, too, bubbles over with fun and thrilling moments. Lillian Hackett contributes to the thrills found in this two-reeler. She drives a touring car at top speed, spinning at sharp turns. Another hair-raising stunt involves Conley in making a jump from the train to the speedy car. While daringly bold stunts these provoke much laughter. But in Conley's burlesquing the picture finds its greatest appeal as a first class comedy. "Running Wild" is a knockout as a laugh winner, possessing all the factors that make for universal audience appeal.—ROGER FERRI.

"Down to the Sea in Shoes"
(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

THIS is novel two-reel comedy inspired apparently by the feature dwelling on the adventures of the whaling colony of southern Massachusetts. It concerns the adventures ot a group of comedians whose "water shoes" enable them to walk on water. The comedy possibilities seem without limit, though at times there is a tendency to repeat stunts monotonously. But these two or three moments are easily forgotten by the heavy current of fun that dominates the picture. The fishing bits give the comedy a finis that registers forcibly, for they are original. One stunt in particular brings battleships and airplanes into play. But this is only one of the innumerable stunts that space forbids describing. It is a very good Mack Sennett comedy.—ROGER FERRI.

"Asleep at the Switch"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

BEN TURPIN does a lot of funny things in this one. It is a series of gags with the cross-eyed comic doing some of the cleverest work he has ever done on the silver sheet. There is no story. No pretence is made that there is one. But there are gags that procure laughs galore. Turpin is splendidly assisted by Kewpie Morgan, Madeleine Hurlock, Billy Armstrong, and the clever Mack Sennett canine, Teddy. The latter is responsible for much comedy and rescue stuff that keeps everybody running at a merry pace.—ROGER FERRI.

"Jus' Passin' Thru"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

"JUS' PASSIN' THRU" is the first release of the Will Rogers series that Hal Roach is making for Pathe release. Rogers plays the role of Jubilo, a hobo whose success at dodging work is equalled only by his inability to procure food on a lonely Thanksgiving Day. While there is light comedy of the quaint and subtle sort so characteristic of this artist, throughout the story there is pathos that grips "Jus' Passin' Thru" could have been strengthened a trifle in the humor quarter, however. Will Rogers' titles could well be substituted for those now on the film.—ROGER FERRI.

"The Covered Schooner"
(Grand-Ascher—Two Reels)

Monty Banks aided and abetted by a "gorilla" effectively furnish food for laughter in this two-reeler that is very cleverly directed. Monty is in love with a certain damsel whose hand is sought by a sea captain. Poor Monty is shanghaied, but, once on board, he strikes up an acquaintance with the fake gorilla to the extent that the two "team up" and undo the cap'n and his wild crew. But cap is an elusive bird and flies to a waiting bride, chuckling the while that defeat is not yet. Ah, but his goofus had not figured on the Lochinvarian tendencies of our hero, who ups and steals the bride; thanks to the "gorilla."—ROGER FERRI.

"The Sleepwalker"
(Grand-Ascher—Two Reels)

This one deals with the adventures of a messenger boy somnambulist, who mends his way to the edge of the roof of a skyscraper, doing a marathon back and forth on the gutter of the edge of that roof with a regiment of bluecoats and others giving chase. And all because our hero is kind-hearted. The hero happens to be clever Joe Rock and he isn't found wanting one single moment. Some of the roof stunts are by no means new, but they provoke laughter and that's what Joe is paid to provoke, so you can not lose out on this one.—ROGER FERRI.

"Bringing Up Buddy"
(Universal—Two Reels)

Buddy Messenger is starred in this century comedy, dealing with the mischievous son of newly-rich who are vainly trying to break into society. The types are not unlike those identified with the "Bringing Up Father" cartoons. Anyway, Buddy blunders too much to suit his parents who send him off to a military school, where his behavior is so unbearable that he is driven back home. Buddy works hard. It's a comedy that will appeal to kiddies.—ROGER FERRI.

"Heavy Seas"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is a release from the series of Hal Roach's Spat Family comedy, in which three people furnish the action, and in this case it is action, action, action all the time. The story deals with the adventures of the trio, which comes into possession of a yacht, the English member's antics forcing laugh upon laugh. This is one of the funniest two-reelers viewed by the writer in a long time. The comedy never lets up once.—ROGER FERRI.

"No Pets"
(Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL PARROTT is starred in this Hal Roach comedy concerned chiefly with a boarder who inherits a mule. The latter's arrival at the hotel not only breaks up a seance, but incidently brings about the complete destruction of the hostelry.—ROGER FERRI.

"Hard Luck Jack"
(Universal—Two Reels)

PETE MORRISON is featured in this subject. To the customary horsemanship and fisticuffs of the western is added a liberal measure of light comedy touches. The usual types are present—the gang of rustlers, the hard-riding cowboys out to bag the bandits, the much misunderstood hero, and a heroine who proves she can be a good looker as well as strict ranch boss. While Jack Martin, played by Morrison, is in swimming, Fresno Bud, rustler, steals his clothes, thus leaving Jack helpless to pursue. After stealing a pair of trousers from a nearby ranch Jack sets out after the bandits and is discovered in their company when the cowboys attack them. The ranchmen, of course, consider Jack to be one of the "bad men" and are planning to "string him up" when another penalty is suggested—namely, to marry him off to their lady boss, who does not stand so high with the boys because of her methods in running the ranch. In this way the cowpunchers hope to establish a man as their ranch boss. Jack demurs at first until he sees how really attractive his proposed wife is after she dolls up. The close brings an attack on the ranch by the bandits, which culminates in their defeat and the customary happy ending to the romance. An entertaining two-reel western.—E. F. SUPPLE.

"Own a Home"
(Universal—One Reel)

Tommy Gray's titles constitute the best bet in this Neely Edwards starring vehicle. The "plot" dwells on the complications encountered by newlyweds who have purchased a home that is not finished on schedule. They lose their old apartment and are forced to turn to the open spaces for domestic peace.—ROGER FERRI.

"It's a Gift"
(Pathe—One Reel)

"IT'S A GIFT" marks the return of "Snub" Pollard to the one-reel comedy field. This is a peppy reel with "Snub" responsible for most everything that happens. Consistent titles help along, too, in this one. Exhibitors will be glad to see "Snub" Pollard back in the single-reelers, for he is as good as ever.—ROGER FERRI.

The Outlook
(International-Universal—500 Feet)

THE release of this subject was apparently inspired by the Japanese catastrophe and recalls the San Francisco earthquake. The views show the Golden Gate city during the earthquake in 1906 and in 1923, a new, reconstructed, modern metropolis.—ROGER FERRI.

Pathe Review No. 40

AMONG the features in this release of this series are "False Alarm," a study in shadows; an inisght into "The Nitrate Desert of Chile," the life history of a crustacean under the title of "Why Is An Oyster" and a Pathecolor review of the ruins of ancient Syracuse and Sicily.—ROGER FERRI.

REVIEWS OF EARTHQUAKE PICTURES

International News No. 80—"Earthquake Specials"
(Universal—500 Feet)

THESE International News views of the Japanese earthquake are a sensation. Superlatives fail to do them justice. To be fully appreciated they must be seen. No exhibitor who books this News Weekly will have cause to worry. No exhibitor can do without such a subject. The earthquake across the Pacific furnished news cameramen with the opportunity of a lifetime and the International man did not fail. His views of the quake and subsequent fire and tidal waves constitute a historic record that will live for ages. The cameraman risked his life time and again to furnish the outside world with correct views of what transpired during that trying period. His "shots" were timely and taken during the actual earthquake. One sees flaming buildings, toppling skyscrapers, streets strewn with ruins and the dead. The "closeups" give one a very intimate study of how terrible the catastrophe really was. These are pictures that are marvelous and you can not afford to be without them, Mr. Exhibitor. International News is bringing to the screen what the powerful newspapers of the world with their limitless resources could not bring to civilization. International News has accomplished wonders like the other News weeklies, but this Japanese picture is an achievement of rare excellence, a tribute to that organization and a gold mine for exhibitors.—Roger Ferri.

Pathe Earthquake
(Pathe News—One Reel)

THE Japanese earthquake pictures that Cameraman Ralph Earle took in the Orient are incorporated in the 79th release of the current issue of Pathe News Weekly. The reel is entertainingly put together and well edited; it is diversifying throughout and the whys and wherefores of the earthquake vividly described cinematographically. Most of the pictures were taken from an automobile in which the camera was concealed. This had to be done because of the severity of martial law, making it necessary to hide the camera in bedding and bundles. Most all of the views are closeups. Photos of the devastated region before and after the disaster are shown. Pathe has procured an excellent reel that is truly a tribute to the organization getting out its News Weekly.—ROGER FERRI.

International News No. 81—"Burning of Tokio"
(Universal—500 Feet)

THIS is another corking good picture dwelling on the Japanese earthquake, showing Tokio aflame. Every foot is genuine, taken under perilous circumstances. No finer pictures of a huge blaze have been shown. One is taken about the flaming city with its streets crowded with fleeing residents. There are intimate views of the dead and injured with their loved ones about them mourning or extending first aid. There is the burning of the Imperial Theatre, a fine animated photograph, and numerous other views that limited space prevents mentioning. "The Burning of Tokio" is a gem.—Roger Ferri.

Jack Earle and Billy Engle, the "freak" Century comedy team.

"Earthquake"
(Paramount—Two Reels)

THESE pictures on the Japanese earthquake were the first shown on Broadway. While interest in the catastrophe was such that all the houses showing the pictures were literally jammed, the film itself was edited and cut so hurriedly that at times it became tedious. It begins in interesting fashion with the animated map explanatory of the situation at the time the pictures were taken. This leads the spectator to expect the remarkable. The pictures are excellent, but not remarkable. They carry the onlooker over the devastated territory without explanation as to the location of the various scenes. Titles would have helped the entertainment value. Duplication of scenes did not help. However, allowances must be made owing to the record time in which the films were received in this country, transported to New York by planes and hurriedly shown on the main stem. As the pictures stood when the writer viewed them they were altogether too long, not enough titles and the frequent panoramas had a tendency of tiring the optics. Yet, they brought to Broadway a living picture of the trials and tribulations to which the Japs submitted, the ruins wrought by the quake and the arrival of help. Paramount's Japanese representatives did themselves credit. — Roger Ferri.

"The Trail of the Wolf"
(Universal—Two Reels)

An unusually entertaining western is this two-reeler starring Jay Morley in a role that is interesting. Jay is a secret service man who with the aid of his wife, who is hired out as a waitress, and a boy, brings to bay a much-sought crook. There is plenty of fighting with just enough real acting to satisfy the most fastidious. As far as westerns of the shorter length go "The Trail of The Wolf" is an exceptionally good one.—ROGER FERRI.

Pathe Review No. 41

AMONG the features in this well-balanced magazine program are: "The Spring Push," a tale of the Maine lumberjacks; a study of lightning and a Pathecolor presentation of the Pyrenees country on the Franco-Spanish border.—ROGER FERRI.

"Japan in Ruins"
(Fox News Weekly, Vol. 4)

IN the current Fox News Weekly the Japanese earthquake disaster is treated strictly as a news item and no pretence is made to monopolize the reel with views of the catastrophe. In fact, the Fox account of the quake is more along the lines of the narrative rather than totally descriptive. The events leading up to the disaster are picturized in simple fashion with the editor apparently stressing on his effort to intensify interest as the reel was unrolled, working up to a climax that is dramatically entertaining and at the same time educationally interesting. This reel starts with statistical data concerning the damage wrought by the earthquake, taking the spectator over a territory reported to cover 1,300 square miles, within which region tens of thousands were reported killed and 5,000,000 made homeless. A map is then introduced showing the extent of damage done in the various sections. From this the reel shifts to a view of Tokyo prior to the earthquake. At that point the picture takes up the quake proper, showing buildings in flames, ruins, starving and homeless Japs, etc., concluding with editorial reference to the plans being made to rebuild the devastated territory.

The rest of the Weekly is devoted to items of news interest, namely, a view of the Greek King and Queen leading the simple life; abandonment of resistance to France by Germans; review of the Mexican army by War Secretary Serrano at Mexico City; return of the dreadnaught River Dakota and arrival in Havana harbor, and visit of British timber experts to the forests of British Columbia.—ROGER FERRI.

"Earthquake Special"
(Kinograms-Educational—850 Feet)

INCORPORATED in the issue No. 2289 of Kinograms News Weekly are the earthquake pictures taken in Tokyo, Yokohama and Kobe, Japan, shortly after the terrible disaster. Approximately 650 feet of this reel is consumed by the quake views. The latter constitute choice shots from the 2,200 feet brought to this country by foreign representatives of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, through whose courtesy and co-operation Kinograms is able to exhibit the pictures. The quake section of the Weekly is handled in expert fashion, with the titles maximizing and attentively commanding interest. However, the pictures are not at all unlike those shown at Paramount's Broadway houses. Neither is the reel as long; in fact, the views brought back to this country were carefully selected and put together interestingly, for virtually all of the drawn out panoramas have been eliminated. There is no waste or duplication of any sort.

Filling out the remaining 200 feet of the Weekly are pictures showing the arrival of Will Hays and American Ambassador Harvey in England, with the president of the M. P. P. D. A. meeting a committee representative of the British cinema world and American government officials stationed in London. Several other subjects of strictly metropolitan interest complete the reel.—ROGER FERRI.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Wild Party
(Universal—5034 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a queer little concoction. It dashes off at the start with plenty of spirit suggesting farcical treatment, but one isn't sure that it belongs to farce-comedy until the concluding reel when various couples engage in a merry mix-up in the hero's cabin. Consequently we have to accept its earlier sequences seriously. The idea is very slight and revolves around an ambitious girl reporter who has aspirations to create some real imaginative writing.

Gladys Walton makes the character colorful enough, but in recalling her past efforts she is capable of more substantial material. She is given an assignment to cover some society steppers who engage in wild parties. She is not a good reporter because she never gets her facts right. In other words she jumps at conclusions and picks the wrong man as responsible for intriguing the wife of another. The fellow who is wrongly picked is not sharply defined. Because he travels under a nom de plume she fails to get his correct name.

The director with such scant material is forced to play up a bit of divertissement in the shape of a bathing party and some society high jinks. There is very weak comedy relief furnished by a copy boy (who follows the girl reporter to the ball in hokum clothes) and a smuggling bootlegger of the slapstick school. This figure has altogether too much footage for his importance in the story, and the story, itself, should have been condensed. All he does is carry two demijohns back and forth from a barn to the cabin and hide in a compartment divan while the revenuers are searching the place.

The finale ushers in the aforementioned farcical touch with four or five couples (some in pajamas, others in raincoats) using exits and entrances with much rapidity of movement. When the place is raided they are lugged off to jail where the minister marries the leading romancers—the reporter and the novelist. There isn't much head nor tail to it.

THEME. Farce comedy of domestic complications showing a young novelist being embarrassed because his real identity is not known to the girl reporter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The speed of the action. The climax when couples get involved in domestic trouble and encounter the long arm of the law. The easy performances of Miss Walton and Robert Ellis.

DIRECTION. Keeps it lively. Has scant material and fails to keep interest until the climax. Puts in too much hokum with comedy relief. Starts off story fairly straight and turns it into hokum farce-comedy.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The star is your best bet. Play up stills and tell of how she has advanced the past year. Title will attract youthful patrons. Bill it as picture of youth, love and adventure.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses. Run with strong two-reel subject.

SUMMARY. An inconsequential farce-comedy which starts off on a legitimate tack and finishes with a farcical flourish. No opportunity for star to display any talent. Best scene is in climax. Scant material to arouse much interest.

SYNOPSIS—Ambitious girl reporter has aspirations to create imaginative writing. City editor assigns her to cover society people who engage in wild parties. She meets youthful novelist who hides identity with nom de plume. She gets him embarrassed by writing him up as home-wrecker. Eventually she learns her mistake, falls in love with him and they are united.

If Winter Comes
(Fox—11,200 Feet)
(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN we first looked over this picture several months ago during its premiere at Springfield, Mass., it had not been sufficiently edited with the result that we had to excuse its faults—knowing that the eventual New York showing would find it trimmed of all excess footage. Seeing it again in its new shape compels us to state—and we are speaking enthusiastically over it—that it stands revealed a perfect adaptation of a highly interesting novel—one directed with infinite taste for its collection of highlights. It is now compact and forceful, strong in story interest, rich in character appeal, and moving with dramatic action—action which is tempered with subtle strokes of comedy.

We had confidence that Harry Millarde, the director, would not go wrong. He took his company to England—to the exact locality of the author's background, and there he collected a rich and eloquent array of atmospheric settings. With these correct exteriors, Mr. Millarde was confronted with the task of selecting the salient episodes of the novel and moulding them together so that the spirit of the tale would be sharply emphasized.

He shows accurately and vividly the idealistic Mark Sabre buffeted by the tides of fate. This sensitive figure is one of the most appealing which ever was sketched in a piece of fiction. And he is revealed on the screen just as Hutchinson wrote him. We follow his conflict with his unappreciative wife—his quaint humor in his moments with the servants, High Jinks and Low Jinks—his effort to enlist for the war—his romance with Nona—and finally his persecution by the law. Three women of widely different temperaments enter his life—and the most child-like and trusting of these—Effie—is the innocent cause of bringing dishonor upon him. Millarde takes the biggest dramatic moment—the trial of Sabre—and makes it compelling.

The acting is inspired as presented by Percy Marmont who plays the leading role with simplicity and whimsical humor—with here and there a touch of pathetic honesty. A fine picture—one with a soul.

THEME. Domestic drama in which is interwoven a character study of sensitive figure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exceptionally appealing backgrounds—caught in English country settings. The fine atmosphere. The perfect performance by Percy Marmont. The trial of Sabre. The quaint humor. The good titles.

DIRECTION. Has brought out all the flavor of book-using the salient episodes and making them forceful and compelling. Handles leading players well. Given it a fine production. Builds up his characters evenly.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You have the fame of the author and the fact that the book has gone into several editions—being one of the biggest sellers ever recorded. Play up title, atmosphere, players, etc. Use dignified copy and prologue.

DRAWING POWER. For high class houses.

SUMMARY. A most praiseworthy effort to put a big best seller on the screen. Faithful adaptation. Finely executed and staged accurately. Has rich character study and good story interest. Exceptionally acted by Percy Marmont.

THE CAST

Mark Sabre ..... Percy Marmont
Nona ..... Ann Forrest
Lord Tybar ..... Raymond Bloomer
Rev. Sebastian Fortune ..... Riley Hatch
Effie Bright ..... Gladys Leslie
Twyning ..... Sidney Herbert
Mabel Sabre ..... Margaret Fielding
Old Bright ..... George Pelzer
High Jinks ..... Dorothy Allen
Low Jinks ..... Eleanor Woodward

By A. S. M. Hutchinson. Adapted by Paul Sloane. Directed by Harry Millarde.

SYNOPSIS. Sabre, a simple believer in the goodness of the world, idealizes everything with which he comes in contact. His house topples to pieces and he is caught in the embrace of three distinct romances. He finds peace and happiness eventually with a woman who understands him.

A Woman of Paris

(Chaplin-United Artists—7600 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WE have long awaited Chaplin's production, the first one conceived, written and directed by him in which he has not appeared. We have heard eloquent tributes paid him during the making of this picture for his effort to create a subject which would revolutionize the technique of screen drama. We will say that he has earned them because he has dared to be original and unconventional. For sheer realism and simplicity—for sheer resourcefulness and ingenuity this photoplay stands in a class by itself—one destined to influence every director to emulate him in achieving naturalness of treatment.

Chaplin is bold and daring here—and yet he has effected his strokes and touches surely and easily. It is a story of suggestion—one devoid of a single theatric device.

Chaplin has relied upon the patron's intelligence to grasp this simple little tale told with keen satirical thrusts as de Maupassant would record them and yet wonderfully simple and human after the manner of O. Henry. The story is not so important as the exceptionally deft treatment of it. There is not a single scene of wasted footage—not an expression wasted and the subtitles are negligible. What are written are in the vernacular of the man and woman of everyday life.

The acting is unmarked by any exaggerated postures and gestures. Indeed it is a drama of Paris—a drama of a wealthy roue, his paramour and a struggling artist. The roue is not painted in gross colors of the typical screen villain. On the other hand the artist is not a sanctified hero. And the frailties of human life are exposed convincingly and charmingly. It truly carries conviction in every department. We follow the separation of the artist and the girl at the country railroad station—a separation effected by a trick of fate. And Chaplin's suggestive technique is introduced when the train approaches. No headlights—no rushing train—just a reflection of the lighted coaches against the station wall. He uses a light rain effect instead of showing the usual typhoon. He shows a magic box of new tricks and touches. So the girl goes to Paris and is maintained by the roue and in the course of time the artist is established there. He kills himself when they part again. And the girl, through with Parisian atmosphere, finds sanctuary in the country.

A vigorous, vital, imaginative picture—which appeals to the intelligence—a picture which puts to rout the standardization of the film as we recognize it. It is perfectly acted by players who make the keen satire and simple humanity of the tale thoroughly intelligible. Chaplin, the Pied Piper, the magician, the guide, has taken us out of the wilderness.

THEME. Triangle drama of modern Paris involving a roue, a paramour and a struggling artist.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent staging. The charm and satire of restaurant scenes. The intimate scenes rich with humor between roue and mistress. The artist's suicide. The clever titles. The flawless acting. The human touches.

DIRECTION. Inspired all the way. A picture of suggestion. Relies upon repression and simplicity. Finely treated. Shows keen insight into human life with all its frailties.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Chaplin's first serious attempt—his effort to create a picture of suggestion—one appealing to the imagination. Put on prologue suggestive of Latin Quartier. Exploit it far in advance.

DRAWING POWER. Will appeal to intelligent audiences everywhere.

SUMMARY. A masterpiece of simplicity and naturalness. Finely treated, perfectly acted. Always appeals to imagination. Should revolutionize screen technique.

He kills himself and the girl finds peace and quiet in the country.

Scaramouche

(Ingram—Metro—14 Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE parade of big pictures across the screen has been augmented by Rex Ingram's artistic production, "Scaramouche," which because of its engrossing visualization of the early part of the French Revolution, showing the pomp and power of the aristocracy in conflict with the common people, is destined to create a new high mark for the genius of the director. Ingram, as usual, gets results from employing repression because he never sacrifices accuracy of outline to achieve some bombastic touch.

The French Revolution is so colossal in its dramatic sweep—so vital and picturesque that it never fails to appeal to the imagination. Ingram has humanized the historical and fictional figures of Sabatini's powerful novel. He builds his story deftly to a climax fraught with suspense. Some may say that he sacrifices contrast. We see more of the pompous court life—of the silk and satin atmosphere than we do of the dirty hovels from which started the fires of the Revolution. In that respect the picture does not carry the melodramatic punch of "Orphans of the Storm."

But in the main the director is faithful to the author. He advances his story by developing his characters. He paints them in all their moods and fancies, thus effecting real dramatic conflicts. Even with the approach of the Revolution they are not subordinated to create gigantic scenes of color and movement. The atmosphere is impressive. The palatial homes of the aristocracy—the rich costumes which adorn them give the picture tone and quality.

The Revolution may have suggested the Reign of Terror to better effect in other efforts, but as a picture showing what fired the people of France to found a republic it has not been matched—not even approached. Ingram shows us a lordly aristocrat finely portrayed by Lewis Stone who is as sure in his grace and poise as if he had stepped out of the period. Ramon Novarro as the young republican who later became Scaramouche and the terror of the aristocrats gives a neatly balanced performance, and Alice Terry, as the heroine buffeted between the romantic advances of these bitter rivals, is always charming and sincere. George Siegmann's Danton is highly picturesque and Willard Lee Hall as the King's Lieutenant plays with rich abandon.

The settings are excellent—the best of them featuring the hall of deputies and the interior of the theatre. The frenzied mob scenes with the republicans advancing upon the palaces of the aristocrats are well executed—but they could have carried more melodramatic suspense. The details are eloquent and the titles well written.

THEME. Romantic drama of French Revolution.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The splendid atmosphere and settings. The theatre shots. The various duels. The performances of Lewis Stone (particularly fine), Ramon Novarro, Alice Terry and George Siegmann. The details.

DIRECTION. Builds story well, keeping interest ever on alert. Advances romance and establishes the cause of Revolution. Handles players admirably.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Ingram's name and cast. Author and fact that novel is best seller. Feature the French Revolution. Use stills and atmosphere for lobby, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Should appeal everywhere.

SUMMARY. A big picture directed with admirable repression by Ingram. First part better than last because Revolutionary uprisings are not sweeping in action. Appealing romance and deft character studies. Finely acted.

THE CAST

Andre-Louis Moreau ..... Ramon Novarro
Aline de Kercadiou ..... Alice Terry

Madame Binet ..... Lydia Yeamans Titus
Maxamilien Robespierre ..... De Garcia Fuerburg
Louis XVI ..... Edwin Argus
The King's Lieutenant ..... Willard Lee Hall
A Lieutenant of Artillery ..... Napoleon Bonaparte

By Rafael Sabatini. Scenario by Willis Goldbeck. Directed by Rex Ingram. Photographed by John F. Seitz.

SYNOPSIS—Young student is determined to avenge friend's death at hands of pampered aristocrat. Enlists with republicans of France even though it means a sacrifice of girl's love. Escapes by joining a troupe of actors and becomes one of the leaders of the republicans. The aristocracy is overthrown and he effects the escape of sweetheart from hands of frenzied mob.

Desire

(Metro—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A HEAVY and labored drama, artificial in design and carrying weak motivation is "Desire," which features two stories running parallel. Carrying a theme which points that real love must not he confused with desire but is based upon true sacrifice it fails to develop any sympathy for its characters because they lack human qualities. The idea behind it is vague which is probahly due to the attempt of the sponsors to pack it with melodramatic punches.

The story offers two pair of lovers. We discover a couple separating at the altar—with mutual consent—and each one finding a true mate in more humble circumstances. The plot isn't consistent because while realism is acceptable in one romance it is tacked on too heavily in the other.

The figures are a rich girl who falls in love with the family chauffeur while the man she was engaged to is enamored with an old musician's daughter. He is attracted to her hecause she is unlike the girls of his own station in life. Her unsophisticated manner is her charm. The rich heroine on the other hand is disinherited by her parents for marrying heneath her social circle. She discovers that his people have no hackground. Conflict enters and in a mad frenzy she poisons herself and the sorrow-stricken chauffeur follows her in death hy taking a plunge in his car.

The extermination of this couple destroys any audience appeal. It fails to answer any argument why they should have become married in the first place. Too much footage devoted to their suicides makes the scene unduly realistic. The picture is adequately mounted—the outdoor wedding shot heing the hest. The theme is not cheerful and the moral is not well estahlished. It is too sharply divided in tones—too much bright side and too much dark—and the latter dominates.

THEME. Treats two melodramatic romances revolving around love and sacrifice and desire. Draws comparison between two pairs of lovers.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The outdoor wedding scene. The mutual consent to separation between engaged couple. The lighting effects. The pleasing exteriors and interiors.

DIRECTION. Hampered by far-fetched story. On a technical side has not erred. Forces the punch of the tragedies which makes scene unpleasant. Does not get best results from players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Best angle is title which will stimulate curiosity. Play up four leading players and make copy of social equality in marriage. Make a play to feature mismated marriages, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses. Best suited for adults.

SUMMARY. A clumsy story of an attempt to find social equality in marriage. The uneven tale with its two parallel plots destroys interest. Tragic denouement of one plot destroys sympathy. Not much audience appeal.

THE CAST

Story and scenario by John B. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Photography by George Barnes.

SYNOPSIS—Young couple decide to separate at altar and not go through with marriage ceremony. The girl falls in love with family chauffeur and the youth is infatuated with musician's daughter. The youth's erstwhile fiancee marries the chauffeur and becomes disowned. She realizes the social barrier and commits suicide and her husband plunges to his death. The rich youth who had fallen in love with the musician's daughter marries her.

The Eternal Three

(Goldwyn—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

MARSHALL NEILAN is so utterly unconventional in his treatment of a story that it is hard to determine whether he is kidding it or the public. Here he mixes up a serious tale of a surgeon's devotion to his duty and profession with a large and generous slice of hokum—so that it takes on the form of a hodge-podge, though it is interesting in most of its scenes and often amusing.

We won't say that the story is unreal. Indeed, what transpires could reasonably happen if the scapegrace adopted son of the surgeon would appear more subdued. Raymond Griffith makes the figure a "jumping Jack" and while you call him a despicable cad you are willing to enjoy his utter lack of moral fihre in the manner which he entertains the ladies. He dishonors his foster father's secretary and when the surgeon brings home a youthful bride he succeeds in winning her affection—the reason being her husband's denial of love because of his duty to humanity.

The best spots of the picture are the daring studio parties and the risque suggestions. Neilan is bold in several intimate scenes and gets away with them. His story revolves around the theme of a surgeon's duty. When the young adopted bounder is placed on the operating table with a fractured skull, the surgeon easily has him in his power. A familiar situation in a story of this kind. And the knife doesn't slip. The chickens come home to roost on the gay young blade's doorstep when the brother and the fiance of the ruined girl would force him to make amends. He is severely beaten hy the brother and the foster-father finishes the punishment with a horse-whip. The youth, conscience-stricken for the first time, promises to go away and never return. Meanwhile the surgeon and his wife have effected a reconciliation in an elevator which has caught between the floors.

Neilan allows Griffith to go the limit in making the character breezy. He is never quiet from the moment he is introduced. Hobart Bosworth is forceful as the surgeon and others who contribute interesting figures are Alec Francis, Bessie Love, Helen Lynch, Claire Windsor, George Cooper and Tom Gallery. It is neatly photographed.

THEME. Domestic triangle treating of surgeon's duty towards humanity which loses him affection of his wife—the latter being ensnared by husband's adopted son.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The daring touches, typical of Neilan. The novel jazz party scenes. The moment when young blackguard is caught and punished. The comedy moments which Raymond Griffith offers in his characterization. The intimate scenes in the home.

DIRECTION. Has concocted a hodge-podge story and manages to make it semi-humorous. Had he played straight, he might have created a big effort. Over-stressed the character of the adopted son. It is best in his intimate scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the theme of a surgeon's devotion to his duty and profession. Play up the cast and bill it as a novelty directed in a typical Neilan manner. Use title for a teaser campaign.

DRAWING POWER. Best suited for sophisticated audiences.

SUMMARY. A curious concoction somewhat daring in treatment. Mixes up sound theme with hokum and the reaction is mostly humorous. Well played. Plot gets theatrical toward finish. Neatly staged and photographed.

By Marshall Neilan. Directed by Marshall Neilan and Frank Urson.

SYNOPSIS—Surgeon has adopted son who is a blackguard of the first order. The youth dishonors his foster-father's secretary and wins the love of the surgeon's young bride. A time comes when the foster-father has the gay bounder in his power—the boy having suffered a fractured skull. His devotion to his duty and humanity keeps him from avenging himself. In the end the youth is punished and admits his worthlessness. He promises to leave and never return.

Regional News From Correspondents

Buffalo

BASIL BRADY, for five years a member of the Pathe sales staff, has been promoted to branch manager of the office in the new Beyer film building. Mr. Brady is one of the real pioneers of the exchange business in western New York and is known to every exhibitor in this end of the state. He got his start way back in the General Film days and later was employed by International when "Perils of Pauline" was that company's big feature. Mr. Brady is receiving congratulations from both exchangemen and exhibitors who predict real success for him in his new executive position, which comes as a reward for long, loyal and efficient service with the Pathe organization.

Basil Bradley

Exhibitors in this neck of the woods are shocked to learn of the resignation of E. J. Hayes as manager of the First National office in Buffalo. Mr. Hayes had been with the company for about five years, starting in as a salesman and rising to branch manager, in which position he succeeded this year in signing up more business than had ever been recorded in the history of the local office. "Eddie" has a host of friends in the exchange and exhibitor field in the state and he has a reputation for square dealing. It is to be hoped that he will soon connect up with another company in Buffalo for Film Row would be glad to keep E. J. on its roster. R. H. Clark, district manager for First National, has been in Buffalo for several days. He has appointed Sam Berger as sales manager out of the local exchange and Bill Leiter is temporarily in charge of the office.

The new Strand in Elmira, N. Y., had an auspicious opening Monday evening, September 24. The old Mozart has been completely remodeled and redecorated and presents a splendid appearance. Benny Bernstein, son of the owner, is the manager of the house. Every Buffalo exchange was represented at the opening and after the show Mr. Bernstein gave a banquet at the Elks' club for the visitors. The banquet was enjoyed by all. Mr. Bernstein, senior, also controls the Majestic and Lyceum in the Southern Tier city.

Hal Roach was in Buffalo Tuesday, September 25, when he was the guest of honor at a banquet in the new Hotel Statler, attended by some 20 of the leading local exhibitors. It was Mr. Roach's desire to find from the exhibitors themselves the produce that was their best seller and to keep them supplied with such pictures from his Hollywood studios. W. A. V. Mack of Pathe, presided at the dinner.

The New Hi-Art theatre in Lockport, N. Y., opened its doors to the public last Monday evening and broke all attendance records in the history of the Lock City. Nearly 3,000 persons attended the opening and judging from the words of praise and congratulation extended to J. J. Lanigan, the owner, and Robert Kane, the manager, it certainly is a theatre of which the people of Lockport should feel proud. Mr. Lanigan, during an intermission, spoke briefly, thanking the people of Lockport for their support of the old Hi-Art. He said it was their co-operation which made it an incentive for him to build the new house. "Robin Hood" was the opening attraction. Lady ushers, an innovation at the Hi-Art, made their appearance. The new theatre is located in the big stone and steel addition erected north and west of the former theatre. The addition is 170 feet in length and 75 feet wide. The new house has a seating capacity of 2,000. The stage setting is an attractive one, purple silk curtains trimmed in black and gold completely covering the stage and under the amber and red lights the effect caused much favorable comment. John R. Skene is conductor of the augmented orchestra.

That old Jonah, the Criterion, has failed again to attract business with its newest policy and has closed again for a few weeks. But Manager Harry Abbott is not discouraged and is now making arrangements to reopen the house on Monday, October 15, with dramatic stock and with no less a personage than our old friend Lillian Walker as one of the stars of the company, which will include Clark Silvernail and Don Burroughs. Miss Walker has many friends in Buffalo who will be glad to hear of her coming appearances. Miss Walker is also a close personal friend of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Albert of the Albert theatre, Lancaster, N. Y., where she often visits.

The Strand theatre in Binghamton this week is co-operating with the Sisson Brothers' store in putting on a fall fashion promenade featuring all the newest modes on living models. The picture feature is "Daughters of the Rich."

Satisfactory progress is being made on the new Lock City theatre in Lockport, N. Y. The house is being built on the site of the old Murphy Brothers' lumber yard, East avenue and Elm street.

Albert Hay Malotte, accompanied by his bride, Mary Jane Malotte, returned to Buffalo this week. Mr. Malotte received a warm reception from audiences in Shea's Hippodrome where he presides at the console of the Wurlitzer. Manager Vincent McFaul announces that "Merry Go Round" will be shown the week of October 21. During his absence Mr. Malotte made a series of photos of airplane trips. These photos are being made into slides which will be used in an organ novelty at the "Hipp" soon. This week the "Hipp" is also putting on one of the first of the novelties being sent out from New York by Harold B. Franklin, head of the Paramount theatre department. It consists of an Out of the Inkwell cartoon in which a real clown is used in a dance number.

Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y., put down a powerful publicity barrage on "Human Wreckage," his attraction this week. He persuaded the mayor to issue a proclamation declaring an "Anti-Narcotic Week." He got an indorsement from "Billy" Sunday, who is in town. He gave a private screening for the city officials, clergy, school authorities, etc., and for a week in advance had a young lady dress like Mrs. Reid and read the latter's speech from the stage of the Bellevue. In addition he took much newspaper space and plastered the town with paper.

As a result of the efforts of Ned Kornblite, David Cohen and H. M. Addison, arrangements were made for the showing of the Fox Jap earthquake pictures at the sacred concert and entertainment at the Binghamton theatre last Sunday for the benefit of the sufferers in the Island Empire. The show was put on by the Kiwanis club of which the above three exhibitors are members.

Western New York radio fans are enjoying some wonderful music these days. It is being broadcast from the Eastman theatre in Rochester each afternoon and evening.

Gene Markens, former First National salesman, is now a member of the local Pathe forces, succeeding Basil Brady who has become Pathe branch manager. Bill Wittneben, Rochester representative for Pathe, suffered a sprained ankle and other minor injuries when his new Hudson coach was tipped over in a collision with a Ford in the Flower City one day last week.

Max Rowley, formerly with United Artists, is now peddling films for the Buffalo Hodkinson exchange. Pete Dana, office manager, is spending his spare time inveigling film men into punching a board in which are numbers. When you punch a number you come through with shekels for the new Elks' home. We fooled Pete. We punched one that won a prize.

Earl Brink, former Paramount booker, has returned from his honeymoon and is now "on the road." Ought to make good as they all know Earl.

Clarence Snyder, Bond Photoplays Corporation salesman, has purchased a new home in Kenmore. Of course that's out in the wilds, but even out there they don't give houses away.

The Oneida Development Company will build a new $300,000 theatre in Oneida, N. Y. The house will be combined with a hotel in the same building. It will be known as the Harding theatre.

Union operators at the Strand and Crescent theatres in Ithaca failed to obey a strike order issued by their international organization and are still on the job. The Strand stagehands are on strike. The musicians are out because their wage demands have been refused.

Shea's Opera House and the Palace in Jamestown have settled their differences with stagehands and musicians who have been on strike.

News and Notes of Detroit Film Circles

A NEW exploiteer of the Paramount offices has arrived recently and therefore, Paramount's patrons in the exhibitor line may expect expert advice as to the "hows" of putting over pictures in the most effective manner. William Exton comes from the circus field, having previously been connected with the Sells & Floto Circus and other publicity lines for the past seventeen years.

T. L. Erwin, former cashier, has been promoted to the position of chief accountant at the Paramount exchange, Columbus, Ohio. His position in Detroit will be filled by Norman Lane, formerly cashier with Fox and Hodkinson.

The local force of the Paramount offices extend their congratulations to Tom Eland, representative, who has been transferred to his home city, Toronto. Mr. Eland's position will be taken over by C. J. Bell who has been on special work.

In honor of Mary Philbin, who is playing the leading feminine role in the Merry-Go-Round, now at the Adams theatre and who won the Elks beauty prize in Chicago a short time ago, the local Elks and their families had a special Elk night last Wednesday at the theatre.

Chicago

LESTER W. MURRAY is making his headquarters in Chicago during the run of "Scaramouche," at the Woods Theatre, having been placed in charge of this big feature for its run here.

Gladys Walton and her husband, H. H. Herbel, assistant general sales-manager for Universal, at Cleveland, stopped off in Chicago last week on their honeymoon trip, which will include a visit to Cleveland. It is Miss Walton's first trip east in several years but it is necessarily brief as she has just renewed her contract with Universal and will return to the coast and start on a series of six or eight pictures a year.

E. F. Tarbell is now connected with Associated Exhibitors' Chicago exchange handling features. Mr. Tarbell is well known in Chicago film circles. He was at one time with Vitagraph as district manager and later with the Fox Film Corporation.

General Sales Manager Henry Ginsberg, of Preferred Pictures, was in the city last week for a conference with Manager Paul Bush. He has returned to New York.

Carl Fulton, of the Fulco Sales Company, has been visiting the St. Louis branch store and reports that the accessory business in St. Louis is showing a marked improvement, as it has been doing in Chicago for some time past.

Dan Barton and Sales Manager Kurtz, of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, are in the north woods of Wisconsin for their annual fall shooting season. They both expect to be back on the job the early part of next week.

W. H. Tracy has joined Manager Rozelle's staff of salesmen and is covering Wisconsin territory for Metro Pictures. He is one of the most popular and well known salesmen in the Chicago district, having worked for several important exchanges during the last few years. John Ploner, who has been covering northern Wisconsin territory for Fox, for many years, has resigned and will, hereafter, travel the same territory for Metro.

The many friends of Jack Howland will be glad to learn that he is recovering from the illness which has confined him to the Washington Boulevard Hospital for some time past, and expects to be able to leave the hospital within the next ten days or two weeks.

Manager Eddie Silverman, of the Warner Brothers Chicago exchange, is now operating with a full sales staff and informs us that he has assigned his "go-get-hers" as follows: Lee Woodyatt, country sales-manager; William Kahl and D. O. Rees, Illinois country territory; H. A. Washburn, Horace Conway and E. P. Pickler, Indiana territory, and A. J. Gallas and R. T. Smith, Chicago. The exploitation department is in charge of Walter Nealand, who has just resigned from Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan to accept the new job.

An important event of the week was the opening of "Scaramouche," Metro's elaborate spectacle of the French Revolution, at the Woods Theatre. The large audience included many of the leaders in Chicago film circles and men prominent in official and social life of Chicago. Marcus Loew was on hand at the Chicago premier of "Scaramouche," and was pleased at the reception given the picture by the big crowd.

"Local-Lafs" has been booked into two hundred Chicago theatres by Max Levy of Exclusive Film Service, and aided by the tie-up with the Chicago American prize contest, they are going strong. The principal circuits, including Ascher Brothers and the L & T houses are running the Lafs, as well as many independent theatres. Charles Warner, formerly a Paramount salesman at Cincinnati, is now selling film for Exclusive.

William Brumberg, country sales-manager of First National, made a trip through central Illinois territory last week and put on a special exhibitors showing of "Ashes of Vengeance," at the Palace Theatre, Peoria, which was attended by exhibitors from many nearby towns and villages. Miss La Verne Hanney has been brought from the Kansas City office of First National to become assistant to T. R. Gilliam, head of the recently created contract department. Miss Hanney has the reputation of being the most efficient of the First National staff engaged in this character of work.

District Manager Shirley, of Metro, has returned from a trip which took him to the Canadian cities included in his territory.

W. M. Beadell, until recently with the Capitol Theatre, Whiting, Indiana, reports that arrangements have been perfected which will take him to Fischer's La Salle Theatre at La Salle, Illinois.

The Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange is decorated with signs attesting to the popularity of Jimmy Grainger, and District Manager Hickey and Exchange Manager Hollander are laying plans for breaking all sales records in the territory for the week of November 24th to December 2nd, which has been designated as "Jimmy Grainger Week." The territory under the jurisdiction of Mr. Hickey has been extended to include the Indianapolis office and Mr. Hickey made his first visit to Indianapolis last week and reports the business outlook for the Indiana district excellent.

Ben Garetson, who has been handling the publicity for the Monroe and Harris, during the run of "If Winter Comes," at the latter theatre, has resigned to start work on the exploitation for the Food Show, which will open shortly at the Chicago Coliseum.

Manager Roy Alexander, of Universal's Kansas City branch, made a brief visit to Chicago last week and received a hearty welcome along film row.

Jimmy Costan and associates have purchased the Regent theatre from Abe Fader.

News From San Francisco Photoplay Circles

RECENTLY there was a "Motion Picture Day" at Pacific City Beach. Anna Q. Nilsson, Mitchell Lewis, Raymond Hatton, Wm. P. Carlton, George McQuarrie, Rosa Gore, little Frankie Darrow and "Cameo," the trained motion picture dog, all of whom are now working in the Graf production "Half-a-Dollar Bill" at the San Mateo Studio, spent both Sunday afternoon and evening at the popular resort as the guests of its new manager, J. D. Lesperance. At 1 o'clock in the afternoon, motion picture camera tests were taken of the bathing girls; at 2 o'clock "Cameo," famed for his performance in "Penrod and Sam," performed stunts for the kiddies. Motion pictures of the throng were taken during the day and shown later at the Casino theatre in San Francisco. At 6:30 the guests were served with supper on the picnic grounds and a general reception took place in the evening. Ben Black's band furnished the music.

M. H. Newman, former associate of Homer Lee, personal adviser to Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and officer of the Chinese Revolutionary Army and at present general manager of theatres for the Universal Pictures Corporation on the West Coast, is here to sponsor the opening of the new Cameo theatre on Market street. This house, before reconstruction, was the Frolic. The date set for the opening of the beautiful theatre is scheduled for Saturday, September 22d and many of the Universal picture stars will appear in person at the opening, according to Newman.

Pacific Coast authorities are conducting a careful search for a forger reported to be cashing checks forged with the name of Rupert Hughes, prominent author and motion picture director. Five checks for amounts varying from $50 to $250 have been cashed in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Jose and Seattle since June 26th, according to police.

Complete amalgamation of the amusement interests in Northern California was affected with the consolidation of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Northern California with the Allied Amusement Industries of California. By invitation of Irving Ackerman, chairman of the Allied Amusement Industries, the members of the M. P. T. O. joined the allied organization in a body. Thomas D. Van Osten, for three years manager of the M. P. T. O., became general manager and secretary of the Allied Amusement Industries, with offices at 100 Golden Gate avenue. Among the interests now represented in the consolidated organization are the motion picture, vaudeville and dramatic theatres, film exchanges, accessory and supply firms, including almost every industry affiliated with amusements.

"HEART RAIDER" DISPLAY MATERIAL
Manager Hugo Plath of the Palace theatre, Fort Smith, Ark., prepared this on "The Heart Raider" (Paramount). The shadow box in the center is particularly interesting

An addition to the executive staff of the Herbert L. Rothchild theatres in the appointment of C. A. Niggemeyer as technical art director, is announced. Niggemeyer, who hails from Chicago, has had a 20-year career as designer and producer of theatrical performances, being one of the founders of the moving picture prologue in collaboration with Partington. He will be in charge of all designing, lighting, construction and planning of stage scenes for the California, Granada and Imperial. His work will also include the selection and rehearsing of all performers who take part in the various dancing and novelty fantasies of the Rothchild theatres. Niggemeyer was recently art director for McVicker's theatre, Chicago.

St. Louis

ST. LOUIS filmdom was hard hit by safe-blowers the week of September 23.

To start the ball rolling, three cracksmen invaded William Goldman's Kings theatre, Kingshighway near Delmar boulevard, early Monday morning, captured the janitor and negro scrubwoman and blew open the safe, securing $700 in cash, $700 in negotiable interest coupons and $3,000 in cancelled checks.

However, in their haste to get to the cash the burglars put in too much nitro and the force of the explosion jammed the door of an extra compartment of the same which contained $9,000, the greater part of the receipts for Saturday and Sunday. The loss was fully covered by burglary insurance, Goldman said.

On Thursday night burglars broke into the National Film Publicity studios, 311 South Sarah street, and blew the office safe. They secured $350 in cash but left behind $10,000 worth of cameras and lenses and $40,000 in motion picture negatives.

The camera lenses, said to be worth $3,000, were in a small box in one of the compartments of the safe. This box was found on the floor the next morning. The cameras and film negatives were in a fire-proof vault. A small safe in the private office of E. W. Howe, president and general manager, was untouched.

On Friday night the combination of the safe of the Cinderella theatre, 2735 Cherokee street, was knocked off and $60 taken from the strongbox. The same robbers then crossed the theatre roof and entered the Missouri Business College, 2743 Cherokee street, breaking off the combination of the office safe, but failed to get into it.

Skouras Brothers' St. Louis Film exchange has been awarded the contract to distribute "The Spirit of St. Louis," the historical motion picture which tells the story of the City of St. Louis. The picture will also be given its first public showing at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theatres, owned by Skouras Brothers, the week of October 20. Skouras Brothers are said to have put up a record price for a St. Louis first run in order to get the picture.

Announcements have been received in St. Louis of the marriage of Frida A. Bohnn, St. Louis girl, to Robert J. Horner, Hollywood film director, at Tia Juana, Mexico, with Eva Novak and George Cresebro as witnesses. Following their honeymoon the couple will be at home to their friends in Hollywood, Cal. Miss Bohnn is the daughter of Mrs. Anna C. Bohnn, 9406 South Broadway, St. Louis.

Odessa, Mo., is to have a modern picture house. It will be built by J. D. Block of Grain Valley. Block has purchased the site for the theatre and will start construction shortly.

The New Washington theatre, Nineteenth and E streets, Granite City, Ill., was opened on October 1. Louis Landau is the owner-manager of the new house, which cost $250,000. It will show both pictures and vaudeville.

P. B. Croft of New York was a recent St. Louis visitor.

St. Louis film circles were grieved to learn of the death of L. C. Howard, owner of the Alamo theatre, Lebanon, Ill. He was ill but a short time. Mrs. Howard will continue to operate the theatre.

E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution for First National, visited the local exchange during the week.

St. Louis friends of F. G. Sliter were pleased to learn of his promotion to field representative for First National. He was formerly special comedy representative. At present he is working on the Coast.

Dominic Frisina, owner of a string of theatres in Southern Illinois, has had plans drawn for a new theatre for Taylorville, Ill. If the construction is not too prohibitive the building may get under way this Fall.

Spyros Skouras had a flying trip to Indianapolis, Ind., during the week. He was back to his desk in twenty-four hours. Some speed to him.

Harry Weiss, of First National manager, spent the latter part of the week out in the territory.

Charley Werner, St. Louis Metro boss, is back from a tour of the Arkansas, Kentucky and Tennessee territory. He reports that the outlook for the South is wonderful, with the prospects for cotton rarely better. He brought back some nice contracts.

Phil Cohen showed pictures of the Dempsey-Gibbons battle at Shelby, Mont., at his Lyric theatre, East St. Louis, Ill., September 29, and then transferred them to his Avenue theatre for a four-day run, opening on Sunday.

R. J. McManus, former St. Louis manager for Paramount, but now in charge of the Buffalo, N. Y., branch, is spending his vacation in St. Louis. He expects to be here for about a week or ten days.

James M. Fidler, personal representative of William C. de Mille, was a caller at the local Paramount office. He is visiting the several Paramount exchanges in the interest of de Mille's pictures.

Callers of the week included the following out-of-town exhibitors: Charley Barber of Cairo, Ill.; C. E. Brady, Broadway theatre, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; J. Barnes, Coulterville, Ill.; Charles Holmes, Opera House, Nakomis, Ill.; Tom Reed, Duquoin, Ill.; J. R. Reese of Wellsville, Mo.; Harry Miller, Idle Hour, Festus, Mo.; Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; C. W. Schuckert, Opera House, Chester, Ill.

J. R. Reese, of Wellsville, Mo., plans to reopen the Gem theatre in Bowling Green, Mo. He was getting prices on opera chairs and other equipment during the past week.

The son of Leo Keighley, manager of the Grand theatre, Benton, Ill., was painfully burned with a blow torch while doing some work in the manual training department of the Benton High School.

Tom McKean, of F. B. O., is back from a tour of the territory. He visited Quincy, Memphis, Paducah and Cairo while away. He departed Sunday for Chicago to attend a sales conference of F. B. O. exchange managers.

R. H. Kline, Fox booker, is sporting a new Ford sedan. Billy Collins, for several years shipping clerk for Fox, has been promoted to booker. Floyd Lewis, district manager for Associated Exhibitors, was in town for a few days.

Portland, Ore.,

JOHN C. STILLE, who has been actively engaged in the picture business in Portland for the past 10 years, recently was appointed manager of the Liberty theatre. Stille was selected for the new position by C. S. Jensen, senior member of the firm of Jensen & Von Herberg, who control the Liberty, People's, Rivoli and Majestic theatres in Portland, in addition to extensive interests in Seattle and other Northwest cities. Under Gus A. Metzger, managing director of the Rivoli theatre, Stille has served as manager. Before joining the staff of the Rivoli theatre, Stille was travelling manager for the Universal Picture corporation on the Pacific coast. He was appointed traveling manager for the Universal corporation after several years' experience in Portland moving picture theatres. During 1913 and 1914 he was manager of the Columbia theatre and for the next four years manager of the People's theatre, when it was operated by the People's Amusement Company. The vacancy left by the change has been filled by the appointment of A. S. Wieder, former assistant in the advertising department of The Oregon Journal, to the staff of the Rivoli theatre as assistant to Gus A. Metzger, managing director.

M. H. Newman, manager of the Columbia theatre, returned last week from San Francisco, where he assisted in opening the new Cameo theatre. Newman is director of all Universal theatres on the Coast.

Manager M. H. Newman of the Columbia theatre has started again the popular "discovery concerts," which were discontinued during the summer months. Newman devised the novel entertainment which has pleased the Portland public. Each week local talent is given an opportunity to try out before the audience, after first attending a selective rehearsal. While in San Francisco, Newman made arrangements to book a number of well known musical artists over the Universal circuit on the Coast, which will give Portland the benefit of better musical entertainment in the Columbia theatre. The "discovery concerts," will be augmented from time to time by the musicians booked over this new circuit.

First of the musicians to be booked over the Universal circuit, E. John Vale, known as the "California McCormick," began his engagement at the Columbia theatre Saturday.

Local theatrical managers have come to the conclusion that the public here likes singers who come heralded and proclaimed. Two theatres, the Columbia with E. John Vale and the Liberty with E. Harold Dana, are offering special musical concerts.

Exclusive pictures of the Pendleton Round-Up were taken by Jess Sill, cameraman for The Journal Liberty news reel, the Webfoot Weekly. The reel is being shown this week at the Liberty theatre. Sill spent four days in Pendleton during the famous western show, making pictures of the bucking horses, cowpunchers roping and bulldogging steers, stage races, relay races, and Indian stunts.

All paper to the Hippodrome theatre will be taxed in the future. Manager W. W. Ely announced recently he would start a fund for charity by placing a small tax on all passes to his theatre.

The Hippodrome theatre is being renovated by Manager W. W. Ely. New carpets, extensive changes back stage to accommodate new features, new furnishing throughout the building and paint where paint is needed are some of the improvements.

On the opening day of "A Chapter in Her Life," the Columbia theatre was managed by the Portland Telegram. Admission to the theatre was a can of Oregon-produced food. The cans were piled in front of the theatre. All of the food collected was shipped to Japan.

Albany

ONE of the finest theatres in the southern part of New York state was opened during the past week by William Berinstein, of Albany and New York, head of a rapidly growing circuit of houses, and one of the best known exhibitors in the Empire State. The opening of the new house was the event of the week in Elmira. The new house will be known as The Strand. The theatre, which will be managed by Mr. Berinstein's son, Benjamin, is equipped with a $20,000 Wurlitzer organ, and is most modern in every respect. On the night of the opening, Mr. Berinstein played the part of host to 200 or more men and women at a dinner at the Elks' Club. Many were present from Albany and New York. Mr. Berinstein now owns three theatres in Elmira, two in Albany, one in Troy, another in Newburgh, and is planning to erect a house in the near future in Little Falls.

Wm. Berinstein

Elmer Griffin, a well known exhibitor of Kinderhook, was a welcomed visitor along Film Row the past week.

Say police dog to "Al" Elliott, a well known exhibitor in Hudson, and you're booked for two days. Mr. Elliott owns some of the finest police dogs in all New York state.

The Barcli, in Schenectady, is going after business in a big way these days. "Why Worry" has been booked for a first run and Frank Braymire, manager of the house, is planning on much exploitation during the weeks to come.

Contrary to an earlier report, pictures are still running at the Albany theatre, in Schenectady. This house was included in the recent combine, and it was understood that vaudeville would supplant pictures.

If Joe Braff can make a go of his house in Watervliet, which opened this week, he will be little short of a miracle man. But Braff has already demonstrated himself as an able showman, and plans to give Watervliet, even at ten cents, the best the market affords.

Alec Herman, manager of the First National exchange at Albany, has a new green hammer. It was presented him recently by Lee Langdon, the booker, on behalf of the office employees. Not that Mr. Herman indulges in the hammering process to any extent, but merely as a gavel to call each Monday's general sales meetings to order.

Soloists will return to the Mark Strand in Albany and the Troy, in Troy, next week. This feature at the two houses was cut out last May, as a means of reducing overhead.

Walter Hays, one of the heads of the Strand circuit. was in Albany the past week, stopping over on his way from New York to Buffalo.

Earl Cramer, of Buffalo, now with Universal, but at one time with F.B.O., was a caller in town the past week.

Mrs. Walton, who runs the Happy Hour, at Lake Placid, was a guest of friends in Schenectady for a couple of days last week.

Potsdam is to have a new picture theatre. The deal is being engineered by William A. Buckley, who visited Potsdam last week with Harold Remington, of New York, the latter representing a motion picture corporation with a number of houses in various parts of the country.

Manager Edick, of the Liberty Hall, in West Winfield, arrived in the city last week, and proceeded to line up much of the First National's product for the fall and winter.

Charley Charles, who was with Vitagraph for several years here, and now engaged in sampling theatres of this state with drinking cups, was in town during the week.

After spending two or three days here, Sidney Katz, of the New York office of F.B.O., returned Friday to the metropolis.

Abe Stone, of the Rialto, and Morris Silverman, of the Happy Hour and Pearl in Schenectady, were along Film Row last week, making the trip in Stone's car. A nice idea of Bill Smalley's in placing a basket of ferns in his theatre in Sidney. The lobby now looks 100 per cent.

Dave Seymour, who runs the Theatre Beautiful at Saranac Lake, played the part of host to Irene Franklin, a short time ago. The well known resort catches many notables and Mr. Seymour is generally on the job as an entertainer.

Charles Pettijohn, right-hand man to Will Hays, was the guest of the Albany film exchange at a luncheon at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Tuesday afternoon.

Vic Bendell, the snappy salesman for the Selznick Distributing Corporation, is on a two weeks' trip through northern New York.

Among the exhibitors in town the past week, were Samuel Goldstein, of Springfield; Dr. Ray Thompson, of Old Forge, and L. L. Connors, of Cambridge.

G. A. Woodward, manager of the Fox exchange here, is spending four weeks in the mountains. Ira Cohen, special home office representative, is here handling the office in Mr. Woodard's absence.

A new theatre in Lake Placid, seating 1,000, and costing $60,000, will open in the early spring. At Tupper Lake stock is being sold to the public for another house. Bob Landry, of Ogdensburg, who is now booking for the Clinton, at Plattsburg, as well as Malone and other places, takes his recreation by going coon hunting. He had already been out two or three times this fall.

Harry De Vere, a salesman for Pathe, back in town for the week-end, told of making an excellent suggestion to some of the theatre owners in northern New York, by running a Babe Ruth matinee during the coming World Series.

Frank Bruner, manager of the Pathe exchange here, is wearing out a pair of shoes a week, as he walks from place to place. In the meantime, mechanics are working nights in the hopes of repairing Mr. Bruner's car, which was badly damaged in a recent automobile accident.

Herman Vineburgh, manager of the Mark Strand, in Albany, went without his luncheon one day this week, but as a result the newspapers of the city, carried front page stories on the Japanese earthquake pictures at the theatre. The pictures drew heavily. Mr. Vineburgh received many congratulations for his enterprise.

Since the Palace, in Troy, dropped to a ten cent admission, business has more than doubled, and gives every evidence of holding up throughout the winter. The Astor, in Troy, handled by Jack Deiches, will reopen within a week or so, and specialize in Italian features.

"Al" Bothmer, manager of the Capitol, in Troy, put on a mind reading act recently along with pictures, and found that it was a big business getter. He changed pictures daily.

In order to sound out the public's desires, the Colonial in Troy, is trying out a three piece orchestra on Sunday nights. The house is a ten-cent one, using a piano and organ during the week.

The Strand, at Troy, a ten-cent house, has started in booking big pictures for second runs, and plans to increase admission for such to 25 cents flat.

"Ed" Crawford, former manager of the Lincoln, in Troy, and later the assistant manager of the new Troy, is now doing a vaudeville act with his sister, according to news which filtered through.

Edward Urschel, formerly booking for F.B.O. in this city, is now associated with the Selznick Distributing Corporation here, and as a salesman, will cover five counties in Vermont.

There has been no change in the situation existing between the theatre owners of Albany and the operators, the difficulties over wages still being under discussion.

Canada

"THE Prodigal Son," the English film special, is to be presented as a road show attraction at the Russell theatre, Ottawa, during the third week in October. The manager of this house, which is the one legitimate theatre in Ottawa, is J. T. Moxley, former manager of the Regent theatre.

Capt. Frank Goodale, manager of Loew's theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, aroused considerable excitement in the Canadian Capital during the week of September 24 by a teaser campaign for "Three Ages", the Buster Keaton comedy, which was the attraction at the theatre for the week of October 1. Cards appeared on the street cars and elsewhere bearing the letters "K-K-K" and "K-K-K is Coming." After several days, advertisements were published which revealed the meaning of the letters, this being "Keaton's Kolossal Komedy." A special screening of the comedy feature was held Saturday morning, September 29, to which the members of the Kiwanis Club of Ottawa were specially invited.

The Ottawa Journal devoted columns of space in its issue of September 29 to biographical sketches of the principal exhibitors of the Canadian Capital under the heading of "Live Men Who Direct a City's Amusements." Those who were described in the interesting "story" included Harry Brouse, owner and manager of the Imperial theatre; Oral D. Cloakey, manager of the Regent; J. M. Franklin, manager of the Franklin theatre; Capt. Frank Goodale, manager of the Loew theatres; Albert Donaghy, manager of the Francais, and James T. Moxley, manager of the Russell theatre. It was pointed out in this article that the attendance at local theatres during a year was in excess of the 4,000,000 mark.

Various cities in Eastern Canada got rid of their daylight saving bugaboo at the end of September, the last to go back to normal time being Ottawa and Montreal. In Ottawa, the City Council turned the clocks back a week before the reversion to standard time was scheduled to take place, this being done because it was the concensus of opinion that daylight saving had outlined its usefulness. In Montreal, the business houses which had insisted on daylight saving on their own account, got back into step with the rest of the country on September 30.

The Kitsilano theatre, a handsome picture house in the southeastern section of Vancouver, B. C., has been remodelled by R. E. Berry, and it now accommodates 1,000 persons. In appearance, it is also now one of the brightest amusement houses in Vancouver. The Berry chain of houses includes theatres in Kamloops, Kelowna, Vernon and Penticton.

An interesting policy has been adopted for the Heights theatre in the Burnaby section of Vancouver, B. C., by C. Culley, owner and manager of the house which is now just one year old. The Heights is now open four days of the week, being dark on Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Cleveland

NORMAN MORAY, Pathe exchange manager, is back on the job again after a two weeks' vacation following the open roads.

T. B. Alexander of Put-In-Bay has a real job. He's mayor of Put-In-Bay. He operates the two hotels in the place. And in the winter, when Put-In-Bay is shut off from the rest of the world by the frozen lake, he utilizes the Town Hall for picture shows. Alexander was in town last week looking over the picture output for the winter, and lining up a hot program for the cold season.

Lou Geiger, manager of the local F. B. O. office, is attending the F. B. O. convention in Chicago.

Bill Skirboll,—he's the one who distributes Gold Seal productions in these parts,—has been out shopping. He bought "Broken Hearts of Broadway," an Irving Cummings production, for release throughout Ohio. He bought it from E. Mandelbaum, who was so impressed with the picture when he saw it recently in New York, that he couldn't resist buying it.

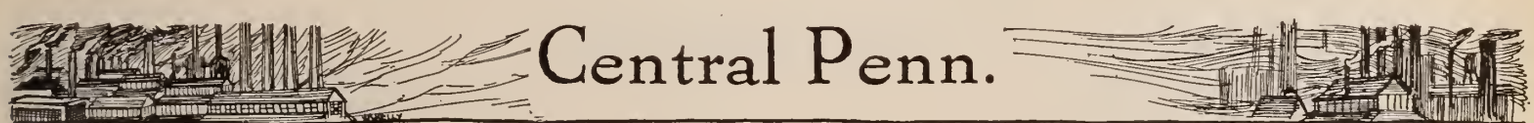
The Joint Board of Arbitration is meeting regularly every Monday afternoon and functioning so successfully that you seldom hear a good argument around the Film Exchange Bldg. any more. In fact, the records show that complaints of exchanges against exhibitors, and of exhibitors against exchanges, have fallen off more than 75 per cent. since the board has been in operation. The Joint Arbitration Board has established a spirit of confidence between the two opposing branches of the industry. And for the first time in the history of the industry, there is harmony between exhibitors and exchanges.

C. H. Brown, the man who selects the picture programs for the patrons of Weller's Opera House in Zanesville, spent Thursday and Friday of last week in Cleveland, and most of the time was consumed around the film exchanges. Unfortunately, Brown came away from Zanesville without his fountain pen, and so was incapacitated from signing any contracts.

A. G. Constant isn't a jeweller, so he doesn't believe in the chains popularly known as Add-A Pearl. But he is a theatre owner, and he is telling the world that the only chains he likes are theatre chains. So, every little while he adds another to the list. He began with the Strand in Steubenville. Then came the Olympic, also in Steubenville. The American in East Liverpool was next added to the chain, and last week Constant acquired from John Craig the Strand theatre of East Liverpool. It's a high class house, of approximately 1,000 seats, with up-to-the-minute equipment from start to finish. Only high class productions will be shown.

The Victoia theatre, Steubenville, passed into the hands of George Shafer of Wheeling, West Va. last week, when Shafer took over the expired lease of the building which houses the theatre. James Tallman was former manager of the Victoria. Hereafter it will be under the personal management of William Shafer, brother of George Shafer. William Shafer is not a stranger in Steubenville. He managed the Herald Square theatre there until it burned down last spring. George Shafer operates the Victoria and Cort theatres in Wheeling, in addition to this one in Steubenville.

Ray Wallace, manager of the Ohio theatre, Alliance, was in town long enough last week to sign up with Maurice Lebensberger for all the Lichtmann Preferred Pictures; and all the Standard Film Service product. And, in addition, he stopped in the Film Classics office, and closed for the entire Warner output. So, now that that's done, Wallace can settle himself down to a period of rest.



Local exhibitors report that last week was an off week in the business. Except in a few cases, where unusually fine productions were exhibited, managers say that their receipts were considerably smaller than they have been for several months. The slump was attributed to a sudden spurt of warm weather.

John Romwebber, of the State theatre, Akron, treated J. S. Jossey, president of Progress Pictures very cordially on Jossey's recent trip to Akron. He gave him a contract for the entire Edmund Cobb series, which he will begin releasing at once.

Ed Paul, manager the Cedar theatre, East 76th street and Cedar avenue. That's his regular job. But he works much harder over his radio than he does over the theatre. Paul has a radio that he made himself—everything about it he constructed. And he can get messages from all parts of the United States. More than that, he has established connections with incoming ocean liners. Of course, he broadcasts in the theatre and gives his patrons the benefits of the news items and concerts that he picks up. No wonder the Cedar theatre is always crowded. So is Paul's office, for it has grown to be the popular gathering place for film men.

Carl B. Moore has taken unto himself the Rex Theatre at Marysville. He also operates the Strand at Marysville and the Opera House at Richwood.

C. R. N. Morris, a veteran in the film business in Ohio, both as exhibitor and salesman, is very ill at his home in Cleveland. Sincere sympathy for him is expressed on all sides, with the hope for his speedy recovery.

Central Penn.

KLINE HENDERSON, of Philadelphia, has just been appointed as house manager for the New Regent theatre, Harrisburg, by Peter Megaro, owner and director. Mr. Henderson has had fifteen years' exeperience in the picture theatre business. He has managed theatres in York, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Coatesville, and more recently was an attache of the Bennethum Circuit offices, at 1307 Vine street, Philadelphia.

Walter Vincent, member of the firm of Wilmer & Vincent, of New York City, which controls a chain of several score picture and other theatres in Pennsylvania and other Eastern states, was a visitor in Harrisburg on September 28, and conferred with C. Floyd Hopkins, Harrisburg representative for Wilmer & Vincent. It was stated their conference had to do with purely routine matters. Wilmer & Vincent, in Harrisburg, control the Orpheum, Majestic, Colonial, Victoria, Grand and several smaller neighborhood theatres.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Marcus, of 2340 North Third street, Harrisburg, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Goldie F. Marcus, to Walter D. Goldberg, of New York City. Mr. Marcus is one of Harrisburg's earliest exhibitors, and is now successfully operating the Royal, at 1205 North Third street, and the National, at 1816 North Sixth street. Miss Marcus is a graduate of the Harrisburg Central High school, and of the Wharton Extension school of the University of Pennsylvania, class of '22. She herself at times has assisted her father in conducting the business of his theatres. Mr. Goldberg is vice president of the Great Pennsylvania Oil Company, with headquarters in Harrisburg. The date for the wedding has not yet been announced.

C. Floyd Hopkins, head of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, who is chairman of the committee of arrangements for the annual "Goodfellowship Cruise" of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, has announced that no more reservations will be made for members of the Chamber desiring to take the trip as the limit of 250 has been reached. This makes it certain that the "cruise" will be the largest ever undertaken by Harrisburg's representative business men. The party will visit York, Baltimore, Norfolk, Newport News and Washington, and will be absent on October 9, 10 and 11. While in Washington, Chairman Hopkins has announced the delegation will be greeted at the White House by President Coolidge.

An increase from 25 to 30 cents in admission prices has been announced for the Hippodrome in York. The theatre is operated by the Nathan Appell interests.

A change of policy has been adopted by the Opera House, Easton, by which in the future it will be devoted exclusively to pictures, discontinuing vaudeville.

The Opera House, Pottstown, has reopened after having been closed for the summer. It is devoted to vaudeville and motion pictures. For the present the theatre will be operated only on Saturdays.

N. E. Comerford, president of the Comerford Amusement Company, with a big chain of picture theatres in Pennsylvania, is reported to be looking for a site for a new picture house in the city of Northumberland, and is believed to have several under consideration. It has been reported that he was negotiating for the site of the old Palace theatre, owned by Samuel Rosen, of Philadelphia, but that these negotiations are now off.

Following the adjustments of the wage controversy between the anthracite miners and operators, theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania generally report marked improvement in their business.

A contract has been awarded by the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, for the erection of a new theatre, to be known as the American. in Pittston, the award having been made to Breig Brothers, builders, of Scranton. The seating capacity will be 2,250, and this will be the largest theatre in the Comerford circuit. It is reported the amount of the contract is $250,000. The theatre will occupy a plot 190 by 115 feet on the site of the old Eagle hotel. The whole cost of the theatre will be $400,000.

The Chestnut street theatre, Sunbury, has been reopened after having undergone extensive improvements. P. A. Maggazzu is manager and owner.

Manager Oscar Althoff, of the Family theatre, Mahanoy City, has appointed James Burns, of Jacksons, as organist for the theatre.

H. J. Schad, of Carr & Schad Inc., who operated a big chain of Reading theatres, was chairman of the picture committee appointed for the celebration of the 175th anniversary of the city of Reading, held from September 30 to October 6. Carr & Schad took films of the various parades and pageants held during the festivities, which will be used with Carr & Schad's own local news reel, "Community Events."

News reels made by Carr & Schad, Inc., in Reading, during the recent state convention of the American Legion in that city are to be exhibited in various theatres throughout Pennsylvania.

Washington

HARRY CRANDALL was the recipient of 47 huge baskets of flowers and some 160 congratulatory telegrams the night he opened his new theatre, the Ambassador. Friday morning the blooms were distributed to the charity wards of local hospitals.

Arthur Flagel, concert organist at the Ambassador theatre, recently returned from a summer spent in London, England.

The complete musical program on last week's Metropolitan theatre bill, directed by Daniel Breeskin was broadcasted over the radio by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company from its W. C. A. P. station, Washington. It was heard, according to reports, by points as far west as Kansas City.

Nelson B. Bell forsook his duties at the head of Crandall's publicity organization last Friday, to week-end at Atlantic City with his mother, who has been awaiting him the past three weeks.

Mrs. Harry M. Crandall last week underwent a severe operation on her throat from which she is recovering speedily without setback.

R. T. Hamner, lessee of the Academy of Music at Lynchburg, Va., secured a successful verdict from the jury in Lynchburg circuit court. "Unlawful Detainer" proceedings instituted by Hamner, resulted from the extended litigation with the Lynchburg Academy of Music, Inc., owners of the building leased to Hamner. The effect of this verdict is to give Hammer full and complete legal possession of the theatre, until the expiration of the lease in July, 1924.

The mysterious "B—— H——" ads run in the Hagerstown papers alongside of the Colonial film program have been finally explained. It was part of a guessing contest intended to stir up local pride and boost attendance at the photoplay house. The successful contestant, N. F. Small, who offered "Boost Hagerstown," as his solution got six free tickets to the Colonial.

Delaware City has resumed standard time, and in the belief of exhibitors the "jazz-time" amendment will never be adopted in future.

E. J. Smith, recently appointed general manager of the Universal Film Exchange, was a Washington visitor at the office of H. S. Brown, accompanied by Mr. Keitnick. This is Mr. Smith's second visit to the city, since his return from Europe, and the first since his recent promotion to be a sales executive in the Laemmle concern.

E. B. Ross was in town again on his periodical trip here from the film fastness of Virginia.

Mrs. Thorpe and her general manager, Walter Colter, were in town most of last week in the interests of the Richmond and Petersburg Blue Bird theatres.

Messrs. Marchon and Fraine, joint owners of the Dumbarton theatre, in Georgetown, D. C., have been busy since the house closed in June, renovating and altering the theatre, at a cost estimated as $15,000. A new lobby, ceiling, heating plant and an up-to-the-minute ventilation and fan-air cooling system have been placed in.

Del Ray, Va., has blossomed forth with a new film theatre. Extensive changes and improvements have been made in the Colonial theatre, Norfolk, Va., according to the Virginia Industrial Review.

Harry Lewy of the Lewy Studios, producing industrial motion pictures in Baltimore, was a caller at the office of Assistant Manager Payette, of Crandall enterprises, Washington, last week in connection with the Washington showing of his film "The Atlantic City Pageant of 1923." Mr. Lewy has had an interest in the Wizard theatre, Baltimore, for several years.

Al Garner is resuming, on October 1, the role of film salesman covering this territory for Manager George Lenehan of Universal.

Paul Henderson of Paramount has severed his exchange connections, and in association with Everett Lewis of Milford and Middletown, Delaware, has re-opened the long dark Crisfield, Md., opera house as a first-class home of the silver screen. The Delaware county commissioner and the ex-Paramounter are also to open shortly the new theatre on picturesque and historic Chincoteague Island, Va., home of the Wild Pony round-ups.

Gates, another staff man at Paramount, has severed his connection, presumably to enter upon the practice of his profession, civil engineering. He is a Cornell graduate and for some time was a valued employee of the Hodkinson exchange here, entering the Lasky organization last spring.

Miss Harriet Shobert is now contract department clerk and stenographer in the office of F.B.O. Washington branch, succeeding Mrs. Taylor, formerly Frances Mahoney.

The American Red Cross recently put out a film "Shepherds of Tatra," on the new Polish Carpathian sheep country. Distribution is through the Navy Film Exchanges.

The United States Navy has recently released a two-reeler "Our Navy in Action," obtained through the Navy Film Exchanges.

Three pictures have recently been issued by the Department of Agriculture, the scenarios being "Co-Operative Berry Growing in the Northwest"; "The Home Demonstration Agent" distributed through Homestead Pictures, Chicago; and "Anchored Acres," produced in co-operation with the University of Nebraska, showing soil-erosion damage and approved engineering practice for its prevention.

Cincinnati

ONE of the most extensive changes in film theatres in this territory is being made by I. Libson, head of a chain of theatres taking in the following towns: Cincinnati, eight houses; Dayton, three houses; Columbus, two houses; and Louisville, one house. In the past Mr. Libson ran all of his houses from his main office in the Palace Theatre Bldg. in Cincinnati. At each house he had a superintendent who looked after the theatre. It was his duty to see that the place was kept clean, that the other employees were on the job and that the house was opened at the right time. Under the new system, it is understood that the superintendents are to be done away with entirely. In their place Mr. Libson is engaging managers whose duty it will be to run the house and take a great many burdens and worries off Mr. Libson's shoulders. The managers will have full authority in their respective theatres and tend to all details for their welfare with the exception perhaps of buying and booking of pictures which will still be done from the home office by Mr. Libson.

One of the first men Mr. Libson appointed to manager, was Phil Honeyman, who will have charge of the Walnut Street theatre, Cincinnati. Mr. Honeyman was formerly connected with McMahan and Jackson when that firm controlled the Lyric and Gifts theatres, Cincinnati. At that time Honeyman was manager of the two theatres.

H. Snowden, formerly exploitation director for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan in the Cincinnati office, has joined forces with the Libson interests as special press representative and exploiteer for the firm's theatres, in Louisville, Ky., Dayton and Columbus.

The Star theatre in Dayton, Ohio, opened last week under the management of I. Libson. Mr. Libson intends to run only the higher class of pictures at this theatre. It is the second theatre that he controls in Dayton, the other being the Strand, which formerly housed Keith vaudeville.

The Stage and Screen Scribes of America held their monthly meeting at the Hotel Metropole last week. Arthur Ward doing the advance work for "Scaramouche;" Albert P. Kaufman, publicity man for the local Metro office; Paul Hilmann, Shubert theatre manager, and Jules Frankel of the Frankel theatres were admitted to membership. The Scribes also launched a campaign for a midnight frolic to be given at one of the hotels early in November. It is the intention to use all of the artists appearing at the different theatres that week in the giving of the frolic. The money derived will be used for the extension of the organization and part of the proceeds will be donated to the Actors' Fund and the N.V.A. N. Schechter is chairman of the committee having the affair in charge.

J. S. MacLeod, assistant manager for Metro Pictures Corp., was in Cincinnati last week making a general inspection of the exchange. A new department known as the "Department of Exchange Maintenance" has been inaugurated and MacLeod will have complete charge. He is making a tour of all Metro exchange inaugurating the new department.

Danny McNutt, exploiteer for the Standard Film exchange, put over a clever exploitation stunt for "Mothers-in-Law," prior to the opening of the picture at the Columbia theatre, Dayton, O. Letters and editorials appeared in the Dayton Daily News every day for a week, advocating a day for mothers-in-law.

R. P. MacLeod, assistant purchasing agent for Metro, arrived in town last week to make some changes in the new Fall product. He as well as Harry Franklin and wife of the Metro forces who came in at the same time will stay over for the premiere of "Scaramouche" at the Cox theatre.

N. G. Shafer, of the local Vitagraph office, left for New York, to attend a sales convention of the firm.

E. M. Booth, local manager for F.B.O., is in Chicago attending a sales conference of exchange managers called by Harry Berman, general sales manager for the company.

Harry Hedges, well known in burlesque circles, has joined the sales forces of the local Selznick office. Hedges's friends will be glad to hear that he has fully recovered from his recent ailments and looks as healthy as ever. That he likes his new work is evident by the way Harry is going about it and by the number of contracts he brought in after his first trip on the road as a film salesman.

Albert P. Kaufman, publicity director, for the Cincinnati Metro office, was in Columbus last week and arranged a campaign for Mae Murray in "The French Doll" which will be shown at the Grand theatre starting Sunday.

Dominick Prino, owner of the Lorado theatre, Lorado, W. Va., spent two days in town last week, buying his supply of pictures for the first half of the season.

Salt Lake City

CHARLIE CHAPLIN was a Salt Lake City visitor for a few moments when he viewed what was possible of our fair city from the Union station platform. Chaplin was on his way from Los Angeles to New York City.

H. W. Braly, manager of the local Famous Players-Lasky Corporation exchange, has gone to Montana where he will visit the key centers in the interest of the coming season's productions. He is expected to return to Salt Lake City in a week.

J. D. Solomon, resident manager of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange, has also gone to Montana, to look over prospective business on the new product.

W. E. "Doc" Banford, Western Division Manager for Goldwyn,Cosmopolitan, arrived in Salt Lake City last week, and is busy completing the work he has before him in this territory, before returning to Denver by way of Wyoming and intermediate points. He will depart in about a week. "Doc" says that things are running mighty fine for the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan productions.

R. S. Stackhouse, the newly appointed manager of the local Vitagraph exchange, who assumed his duties last week, is a mighty busy man these days, getting acquainted with the details and pushing over some good work on the Vitagraph stellar productions which are on the 1923-24 season program. He is enthused over the local outlook.

Manager Stackhouse has appointed a new salesman on the Vitagraph force working out of Salt Lake City in the person of A. H. Weber, who succeeds W. F. Shurtliff. Mr. Weber will cover the Utah territory.

H. Bradley Fish, Division Manager, who has been superintending the local Vitagraph affairs for the past several weeks, has left for San Francisco. From there he will make an extended business trip to the Northwest including Portland and Seattle.

The Orpheum theatre over on West Second South Street, acquired last winter from the Orpheum circuit by the Ackerman and Harris interests, will open within the next two weeks for business. This house has been dark since last spring. The manager, Weir Cassidy, will show the best first-run productions exclusively.

Barney Rose, salesman on the Universal staff, working the Idaho territory was in Salt Lake City for two days last week, conferring with B. A. Gurnette, local manager. He returned to his territory.

Joe Solomon and R. H. Campbell, Universal salesmen covering the Southern Utah territory, are keeping the local Universal office busy getting out and inspecting contracts on the new features produced by this company.

Eddie Armstrong, Assistant General Salesmanager of the Universal Film Company, left last Thursday for San Francisco after a prolonged conference with Manager Gurnette. The new Universal theatre in San Francisco, the Cameo theatre, was opened Friday and Mr. Armstrong left for this event.

Jack W. Rue, manager of the Universal interests in Butte, Montana, was in this city during Mr. Armstrong's visit, conferring on the policies and business of the company's new productions.

W. E. Gehring, manager of the local Fox Film exchange, is in Idaho this week, going over the territory with James Shea, Fox salesman in that part of the country. He will be gone about a week. C. L. Walker, booker, has charge of the affairs of the local Fox exchange during Mr. Gehring's absence.

G. L. Cloward, who manages the destinies of the local Metro exchange, leaves for Montana territory tonight on a ten days' business trip, lining up business on the new pictures announced on the 1923-24 program.

Joe Koehler has joined the local Metro sales force working out of Salt Lake City, making his initial trip into his new territory, Idaho and part of Montana, this week. Mr. Koehler is well acquainted with the film game having devoted the greater part of his life to it, being connected with a motion picture house in Colorado Springs, Col., just prior to making his new connection with Metro. Before this he was selling out of Denver.

C. J. Duer, who works the greater part of the Montana teritory for the local Metro exchange, is keeping the local office force plugging in keeping up with the steady string of contracts that he shoots in. Mr. Duer's record for this year far exceeds the one made by him last year in the same territory.

Another Metro salesman who is doing things is C. A. Dillerd, who sells the local territory, being forced to more business by the expansion of the bounds of his territory, which is considerably over last year. The representation of new contracts sold by Mr. Dillerd, is over three hundred per cent over the same of the previous year, according to Mr. Cloward.

The State theatre on East Broadway between Main and State Streets, closed its doors a week ago last Sunday evening. The closing is temporary for remodeling and renovating purposes, and Dave Schayer, manager, who leased the theatre last spring, will reopen with the policy of showing the best of the first run productions and a splendid orchestra.

Barney Gurnette, local Universal manager, has won the enviable reputation of being best tripper of the light fantastic among the large assembly of film men in the city. And this is saying something as the picture "boys" are some steppers on the waxed floors. The reason for Barney's elevation to this exalted position is the "modus operandi" with which he handled his nimble feet at a recent dance-fest at the American theatre dansant, according to a contemporary film manager, who said that Barney was "stepping some, and knocking them all for a row of spinach crates."

And while championships are the subject of conversation it is well to mention the honors won on the local golf courses by none other than our old friend, "Doc" Banford, of Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan fame.

Seattle

DONALD BROTHERS has recently joined Manager J. A. Gage's Educational Film Company sales staff, and at present is working in the Montana and Eastern Washington territory. He was formerly connected with Hodkinson, Warner Brothers and the Pathe offices here. After spending several weeks in the local offices, Bradley Fish, Western district manager for Vitagraph, left recently for the Salt Lake City exchange. H. A. Black, manager of the Seattle exchange, also departed on a short trip to Portland and the Oregon territory, leaving the office under the direction of W. K. Beckwith.

Seth D. Perkins, manager of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange, is at present away on a trip to Missoula, Spokane and other points in Montana and Eastern Washington, working on bookings for his product for the season.

A new record for speedy news service was set by the International News, through Manager L. J. Schlaifer's local Universal exchange. recently on the ocasion of the wrecking of seven United States warships off the California coast at Santa Barbara. Forty-eight hours after the wreck occurred Manager Hal Daigler at the Columbia theatre was showing the pictures of the acident on his screen. He was the only Oregon cities, preparatory to selling his new product in that territory.

H. B. Wright, formerly manager of the Strand Seattle manager to have pictures of the event in his news reel that week.

L. K. Brin, manager of the Kwality Film exchange handling the Warner Brothers product, left recently on a trip to Salt Lake Sity. He returned only a short time ago from a combined business and vacation trip to Alaska. The first of the new Warner Brothers pictures are arriving regularly at the office here, and are rapidly being booked by exhibitors of the terrritory. On October 1 the Warner Brothers exchange here was scheduled to move from their present location at 2006 Third Avenue to new and larger quarters at 2013 Third Avenue, between the Hodkinson and Famous Players exchanges.

Paul Aust, manager of the Select exchange, and E. A. Lamb, salesman, are both out of the city on sales trips. Mr. Aust left recently for an extended tour into Montana, and Mr. Lamb has been working for some time in the Eastern Washington territory.

Scene from "The Drivin' Fool," a Hodkinson release.

Carl Stearn, manager of the Metro exchange, left recently for a tour to Portland and other theatre, recently severed his connections with the Jensen-VonHerberg organization and has left this city for Los Angeles. In the South he will become house manager of the New Criterion theatre, formerly the Kinema, which was scheduled to open in October under the direction of the West Coast Theatres Company. Mr. Wright has been in charge of the Strand for almost three years, having come to this city from British Columbia for Jensen-VonHerberg in 1921. Definite announcements regarding his successor have not yet been made.

The Majestic theatre at Dallas, Oregon, the only amusement house in that city, was sold recently by J. C. Uglow, owner and manager, according to information received in this city. George W. Gould, until recently superintendent of schools at Meridian, Idaho, was the purchaser. Mr. Gould at one time owned the Sunnyside theatre in Portland. He plans to continue the same motion picture policy at the Majestic.

The Liberty theatre at Pullman, Washington, was sold recently by J. W. Allender, head of the Alexander circuit of motion picture houses, to P. W. Strubbler. Mr. Strubbler, owner and manager of the Grand theatre, by buying the Liberty acquires control of the entire motion picture field in Pullman, as the Liberty and Grand are the only two theatres in the town.

Southeast

THE Lyric theatre, Atlanta, Ga., was robbed Tuesday night of last week, the burglars netting $3,500 for their raid, no arrests so far having been made. The yeggs evidently had a long and noisy job, although the watchman heard nothing of it. The soda and cigar stand in the Lyric were also robbed of cash and cigars. Manager John Crovo lost $150 personally in the burglary.

The Fairfax theatre, Miami, Florida, reopens October 8th with vaudeville three days and picture three days. The Victory, Tampa, Fla., will open on October 1st with the same policy. The Plaza, St. Petersburg, Florida, will open on October 4th with only one day a week but will open on November 30th with full seven days a week of pictures. The Hippodrome, Miami, which has been closed during the summer will be reopened September 30th and the Paramount will then close for remodeling. These are all Southern Enterprises houses and in the winter tourist section of Florida.

Loew's Grand, Atlanta, opened last week with its new full week policy, after having been completely redecorated and refurnished, and the banner crowds all week showed the wiseness of this change on the part of the Marcus Loew management. In Birmingham, New Orleans and Memphis, the change will go into effect October 1st, and all other southern Loew theatres will have it installed within the month. Manager T. H. James, of the Grand, is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the new season.

A. Vollmer, one of the most noted mural and interior decorators in America, is rapidly completing the decoration of the new National theatrebeing built by Pryor Brothers in Richmond, Va., and the theatre is due to open about November 1st. It will be Richmond's finest theatre and one of the finest in the South and will be devoted exclusively to first run pictures. Pryor Brothers' Broadway theatre in Richmond, will possibly go to vaudeville, although this is simply a supposition, brought about by the talk that Loew vaudeville is soon to open in Richmond.

The Odeon and Lucas theatres, Savannah, Georgia, have recently been completely redecorated and refurnished in readiness for the Fall season. The work was supervised by A. Vollmer, who decorated the Capitol theatre, New York City. He goes to Raleigh next to decorate the interior of the new State theatre there.

Byron D. Bailey, coming from Bangor, Maine, has been added to the staff of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, Wilmington, N. C. and has been appointed manager of the Royal theatre, a first run picture house. Mr. Bailey is a showman of twenty years' experience and is putting in some new policies at the H-W house which are meeting with the approval of patrons. The Victoria theatre has also opened with pictures, playing the largest super-specials on three day runs. George W. Bailey will manage that house.

With the exception of Harry Hardy, who was busy getting the Imperial theatre, Anderson, South Carolina, reopened, all Southern Enterprises managers in the Carolinas were present at the recent conference held with district supervisor Ford Anderson, in Charlotte recently. The morning session was devoted to business at which Mr. Anderson gave them the principals back of Greater Movie Season which is to open the first week in October in the Carolinas. P. L. Metzler, secretary and treasurer of Southern Enterprises, and Montgomery Hill, of the booking department, also attended. For the Greater Movie Season in Charlotte advance advertising is seen on every billboard, and was started with a teaser display of the initials "G. M. S." with other copy to arouse the curiosity of everyone. The entire town was guessing before the idea was sprung in detail and then things quieted down a bit but the advertising had gone over big.

The Grand, Brunswick, Georgia, will reopen in October with J. B. Ashley as manager. It has been closed for several months but has recently been redecorated. It will play road shows and pictures.

Enricho Leide, director of the Howard Theatre Orchestra, and chief promoter of the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra, made up of musicians from the different Atlanta theatres, announces that their first public concert will be given on Sunday, October 7, at the Howard theatre. Much interest has been manifested by Atlantans in the ambitious plans of Mr. Leide and his co-workers to give Atlanta will be given annually, one in the fall and one in the spring.

The death of Stephen S. Lynch, father of S. A. Lynch, in Asheville, several weeks ago, has been heard with regret all over the South. The elder Mr. Lynch was 81 years of age at the time of his death, and had lost a leg in the Confederate army. S. A. Lynch was in New York, on the verge of sailing for an extended trip abroad, when the news of his father's last illness reached him, necessitating the abandonment of the trip. He finally sailed, and was on his return voyage only a few hours out of New York harbor when the news of his father's death was flshed to him by wireless. Mrs. Lynch met him at the pier and they left immediately for Asheville.

The Community theatre, for many years operated by the International Cotton Mills, La Grange, Ga., has closed permanently.

The Alpha theatre, Manchester, Ga., has closed permanently and been convertedinto a store, leaving the Globe, a community house, without opposition.

Martin F. Schnibben, of Florence, South Carolina, has again been awarded a lease on the Opera House of that city by the City of Florence, to whom the theatre belongs. While the City Council called for competitive bids on the theatre's lease, it was awarded to Mr. Schnibben on a much lower bid than one submitted by J. M. O'Dowd of the O'Dowd theatre, the mayor explaining the action by stating that it was thought that a monopoly of the amusement enterprises of the City of Florence would be undesirable. Immediately upon being awarded the lease Mr. Schnibben made plans for the complete renovation and improvement of the theatre and his many friends in the city are supporting the action of City Council in awarding him the lease.

Raymond B. Jones, formerly of the National Theatre Corporation, Topeka, Kansas, has joined the staff of the Howard theatre, Atlanta. Mr. Jones has been connected with the exploitation department of the Orpheum, Topeka, Kansas, for four years and will assist Manager Howard Kingsmore in his exploitation work. One of his first acts upon joining with the Howard was an effective tieup with the Southern Railway on exploiting "Hollywood" advertising special excursion rates to Hollywood, California.

R. D. Craver, the Charlotte movie magnate and First National franchise holder, recently entertained Charlotte's film colony at a picnic at his Midas Springs mineral water concern out in the country from Charlotte. A ball game ended up the day's festivities, various members of the exchanges holding down the positions with a score of 27 to 6.

Kansas City

A SUNDAY night audience at the Highland theatre, a suburban house, forgot the development of the picture, and executed a hasty exit. A peculiar odor, which suddenly pervaded the theatre, was found to have resulted from "stink banmbs" placed at vantage points by fifteen-year-old Dean Snyder. Young Dean remonstrated that his act was perpetuated in a spirit of fun but W. O. Burkey, manager of the theatre, refused to be lenient, contending that he had been caused financial loss.

That ever-present desire of the modern miss to see herself in pictures was a point taken by the committee of the annual Fall Festival now in progress in Kansas City. Every girl desirous of the opportunity to enter the movies was asked to mail a picture of herself to Frank L. Newman, manager of the Newman theatre, this week. Twenty-eight pictures will be selected by the moving picture committee and trials will be given each of the girls. A complete studio equipment will be installed on the Newman stage for the purpose of the tests. The one girl who shows the most ability and screens best will be sent to Hollywood with all expenses paid.

USING MARQUEE TO ADVANTAGE
The Strand theatre, Seattle, put the automobile given to a couple married on the stage during the run of "Temporary Marriage" (Principal) on the marquee, as shown

So much interest was evinced in the showing of the film, "Love Will Find a Way," produced by the Jones Store Company in an improvised theaterette last week, that it was shown again this week. The picture concerns the building of a new home by a couple.

Purchase of the Roanoke theatre property by Joseph H. Williams, real estate dealer, for Mrs. Bridget Spillan, was announced this week. The theatre building had a seating capacity of about six hundred and is situated in a strong suburban section.

Cho-Cho, the health clown, is in Kansas City and delivering his lectures to school children at several of the motion picture theatre houses.

H. E. Schiller, Kansas City branch manager for the Preferred Pictures Corporation, has tendered his resignation. No appointment has been made but Edward Grossman, district manager, will be in charge of the office.

"Enemies of Children" Sales Completed

Victor B. Fisher, General Manager of the Mammoth Pictures Corporation, is highly gratified over the fine results he is obtaining in his sales campaign on "Enemies of Children."

In a surprisingly short period he has disposed of the Philadelphia territory to Gene Marcus of the Twentieth Century exchange, and last week saw the purchase of Greater New York and northern New Jersey by Herman Gluckman of the Capital exchange.

The sale of New York State is the latest deal made by Mr. Fisher. B. H. Mills of First Graphic exchange of Buffalo, signed for all of New York State, excluding New York City.

Fox Announces Releases for October

The releases listed for the week of October 7 by William Fox are headed by the special feature, "Does It Pay?" Others are "Times Have Changed," "Up in the Air" and "Dance or Die."

"Does It Pay?" is a Charles Horan production featuring Hope Hampton. Robert T. Haines has the leading male role.

"Times Have Changed" is a William Russell picture. The star has Mabel Julienne Scott playing opposite him. The director is James Flood.

"Up in the Air" is an Imperial Comedy. "Dance or Die" is a Sunshine Comedy.

Lavish Sets Planned for "Turmoil"

Will Be Companion Picture to "Merry Go Round," Say Universal Officials

"THE TURMOIL," Booth Tarkington's novel of American life, will call for settings as lavish and as gigantic as any foreign spectacle or costume photo-drama, according to Universal.

Hobart Henley is going to direct the screen transcription as a Universal-super-Jewel production. It will be a companion picture to "Merry-Go-Round," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Acquittal" and "A Lady of Quality," and also to Tarkington's "The Flirt," which Henley produced a year or so ago.

A street in an American city, a street with several homes on it but conspicuously three homes of wealthy people, will be constructed, among other sets of note.

Elmer Sheely, art director at Universal City, who scouted Southern California for cobblestone paving for the Court of Miracles sets of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is hard at work now on the specifications of two thousand square yards of asphalt paving, just one of the details of the big set of "The Turmoil." The buildings themselves will be satisfying to the most technical critics, as have sets in "Merry - Go - Round," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and other featured offerings of Universal, it is claimed.

Edward T. Lowe, continuity writer of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" and other big pictures produced by the Universal Pictures Corporation, is responsible for the scenario of "The Turmoil." He is frequently on the set and collaborates with Mr. Henley in minor adaptations of scenes, the necessity for which arises as the production proceeds.

George Hackathorne and Eleanor Boardman have the leading roles of "The Turmoil," while Emmett Corrigan, the New York stage star, has the dominating role of Sheridan, Sa. Eileen Percy, Bert Roach, Pauline Garon, Edward Hearn, Theodore Von Eltz and other players are to be seen in other prominent roles cast so far.

"Scaramouche" Given N. Y. Premiere

Rex Ingram Production Viewed by Brilliant Audience at Forty - fourth St. Theatre

REX INGRAM'S "Scaramouche" was given its metropolitan premiere in New York at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, Sunday evening, September 30, before a brilliant audience, which included film and society notables, critics and prominent folk generally.

The theatre was crowded to the limit, every seat having been disposed of in advance of the opening.

As the principals came upon the screen they were greeted with applause. There were more than thirty of these, headed by Ramon Novarro, Alice Terry and Lewis Stone. George Siegman, who portrays the role of Danton, attracted great interest, as did the mob scenes in which many thosand "extras" appeared.

The lobby of the theatre was beautifully decorated with the original paintings of the posters which Metro has prepared for "Scaramouche." A symphony orchestra, under the direction of Ernest Luz, musical director of the Metro-Loew organizations, rendered the musical accompaniment.

Among the notables present were: Richard Barthelmess, Marion Davies, Dagmar Godowsky, Earl Carroll, Montagu Love, Robert E. Sherwood, Edmund Lowe, Daniel Frohman, Lee Shubert, A. H. Woods, Samuel Goldwyn, Edmund Goulding, Martha Mansfield, Betty Blythe, Paul Scardon, Mae Busch, Daniel Carson Goodman, Alma Rubens, George Beban, George Le Guere, Lew Cody, Frank Keenan, Jack Hazzard and many others.

Mammoth Exchanges to Map Campaign

During the coming week the executives of the exchanges covering more than twenty-five per cent of the territory on "Enemies of Children," will meet at the headquarters of the Mammoth Pictures Corporation in New York to formulate plans for the exploitation of the picture.

Victor B. Fisher, head of the Mammoth organization, will preside, Gene Marcus of the Twentieth Century of Philadelphia, Herman Gluckman of the Capital, New York, and B. H. Mills of the First Graphic of Buffalo, will exchange notes with the idea of arriving at some arrangements whereby these eastern offices can co-operate to mutual advantage in putting "Enemies of Children" over.

Thousand Horsemen For Griffith's "America"

Riding with a thousand horsemen along the hills and through the valleys of Putnam county, New York, D. W. Griffith has begun the big outdoor scenes for his forthcoming Revolutionary War picture for which "America" has been chosen as the title.

Secretary of War Weeks has instructed the War Department to lend every reasonable assistance to the production of this patriotic film which was undertaken at the suggestion of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

At the little town of Somers Mr. Griffith has established an encampment for several thousand players and soldiers, with complete water supply, commissary, electric and sanitation installment. Three farms have been surrendered by their owners as a site for the encampment which covers a hillside for the space of a mile.

Holubar Soon to Start "Human Mill"

Allen Holubar has about completed preparation before beginning actual production of "The Human Mill"—the picturization of John Trotwood Moore's novel, "The Bishop of Cottontown," which forms one of the big units of the Metro 1923-1924 program.

Mr. Holubar is now supervising the designing of the various costumes which the players will wear and also the construction of several important sets. The story of Mr. Holubar's production is laid in the South during the turbulent days of the reconstruction period.

Eve Unsell is preparing the screen adaptation for Mr. Holubar.

Preferred Features Are Praised

TWO of the new Preferred Pictures were shown successive weeks by Phil Gleichman at the Detroit Broadway-Strand. They were "The Broken Wing" and "April Showers." Both did exceptional business, and the critics were highly enthusiastic. Of "The Broken Wing" the Detroit News said:

"It is a serio-comedy, with more comedy than drama. The producers have accomplished splendid results with this story. Interest is sustained throughout."

The Free Press said:

"Has qualities that distinguish it from the usual film offering. A wise selection was made in filming this play, as it is packed full of excitement, humor, love, romance and atmosphere."

Of "April Showers" the Free Press said:

"Radically different from the usual run of screen stories. Though the love theme is the important thing, it does not overbalance the story and the adventure."

"Shifting Sands" Laid in Actual Settings

"Made where the story is laid," is the descriptive slogan used to emphasize the realism in the artistic desert life and society atmosphere picture, "Shifting Sands," produced by Luxor Pictures Corporation under Fred Leroy Granville's direction for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. "Shifting Sands" is a filmization of H. G. Wells' novel of the same name, the action of which is laid in England, North Africa, and on the Libyan Desert of Tripoli.

The desert scenes were actually photographed on the Libyan desert. The picturesque English countryside shots were made in the beautiful suburbs near London. Every detail has been filmed as it actually is, it is claimed.

Production Is Completed on "Twenty-One"

Production on "Twenty-One," the Inspiration Picture starring Richard Barthelmess, and to be distributed by First National Pictures, ends this week at Fort Lee, N. J.

It is a story of a rich man's son, a poor man's daughter, petting parties, joy rides and other typical incidents in the lives of 1923 boys and girls.

Dorothy Mackaill plays opposite Barthelmess and in the cast are Elsie Lawson, Joe King, Ivan Simpson, Dorothy Cumming, Bradley Barker, Nellie Parker Spaulding and Helen Tracy.

Chaplin Picture Scores on Coast

Critics Highly Praise "Woman of Paris" Following Los Angeles Showing

"ALTOGETHER, Charles Chaplin's 'A Woman of Paris' is going to prove one of the big events of the year," said a critic for the Los Angeles Times in reviewing Mr. Chaplin's first serious dramatic production written and directed by himself at its West Coast premiere at the Criterion theatre, Los Angeles. "It is the sophisticated film drama of the year. It is so full of novelty and subtlety that it will perhaps open a new epoch for photoplay technicians, and intrigue and perhaps delight the taste jaded by too much routine. The really tremendous thing about Chaplin's picture—for it has a tremendousness—is its simplicity and directness. These spare the subtitles and carry new meanings to the observer at every turn. Edna Purviance brings distinction to her role."

"'A Woman of Paris' will present Charles Chaplin to his admirers in a new light, and promises to register with enormous effect," said the critic for the Examiner. "Mr. Chaplin's success in eliminating from the screen many of the old-time aggravations is undoubted."

Said the review in the Record, "In his picture Chaplin displays all his ingenuity, all his humanness. Premier pantomimic, he divides his gifts among the actors he directs. Then a gesture speaks subtitles. The plot often turns on a gesture. Humor itself is not of the gag type that might be expected of Chaplin. It is the laughter, often explosive laughter, that accompanies recognition of inherently human, essentially weak actions."

"'A Woman of Paris' will have a tremendous vogue," said the reviewer for the Evening Herald. "First, it is a most worthy photo-drama, a veritable typhoon of artistry, and second, because it represents the genius of the screen's greatest comedian, and I might add, artist."

Critics Like "Drivin' Fool" Speed

Trade Paper Reviewers Approve Hodkinson Release Featuring Wally Van

TRADE paper critics have approved the Regents Picture Corporation's "The Drivin' Fool," distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The Exhibitors Herald states: "Here is a snappy little picture that will adorn any screen to satisfaction. A story of a cross-country drive by automoilbe, which might readily have proved tiresome under less capable direction, the entire journey here is most delightfully pictured."

The Moving Picture World said: "Auto racing fans will be most pleased with this. Wally Van returns after a long absence from the screen in a speed picture of more than usual interest. The thrills, action and comedy should get any audience. Wally Van is an extremely likeable actor and perfectly suited to this part."

"Wally Van is admirably suited," says Motion Picture News, "once he hops into the car and makes his wild flight across the continent to deliver a certified check to the Wall Street sharks. There is a reason for the mad dash—the trains are not running. The plot is well put together and kicks up plenty of dust and should prove enjoyable everywhere."

Film Daily says that "'The Drivin' Fool' is a lively entertainment that goes along at a great pace in cross-country auto trip; a sure fire number that has pep and good humor. It's there several different ways. Everyone will like it. It has action, thrills, comedy, romance—in fact everything that makes for sure fire entertainment. There is considerable novelty in the idea in picturing the course of the cross-country trip and it has been splendidly done."

The officials of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation are gratified at the reception accorded this production by the critical staff of the trade papers, as it carries out their contention that "The Drivin' Fool" is a clean, wholesome and amusing film entertainment of the highest order.

Pathe Quake Distribution Method Approved

The method of distribution pursued by Pathe News in the circulation of its views of the Japanese catastrophe has won the approval of exhibitors in all parts of the country.

When a cable was received at the Pathe News headquarters in New York announcing the arrival on American shores of the negative from the devastated areas, two laboratory centers were established—one in San Francisco and the other in Chicago—in addition to that in Bound Brook, New Jersey. Upon the arrival of the negative at the Golden Gate on Monday, Sept. 24, the San Francisco plant prepared its quota of prints and rushed them to all key centers throughout the West and Pacific Coast. Meanwhile the negative was speeding East via airplane to Chicago, where it arrived on the 27th. Here, again, with everything in readiness prints were rushed at top speed and sent on their way to all the key cities throughout the Middle West. Upon the arrival of the plane in New York on the morning of the 28th, the negative was placed in the hands of the Bound Brook force, who smashed all time records in preparing and forwarding the disaster pictures to the screens of the Eastern and Atlantic Coast cities.

"Banks of Wabash" for Memorial Showing

Arrangements are making for a pre-release showing of "On the Banks of the Wabash," the super-feature inspired by Paul Dresser's famous song classic and produced for Vitagraph by J. Stuart Blackton, of Indianapolis, the capital of Paul Dresser's native state.

Mr. Blackton is in correspondence with the committee in charge of the Paul Dresser Memorial Association, Inc., and with Governor Warren T. McCray concerning this showing, which has the support of members of the Indiana Society of New York.

The picture was produced at Vitagraph through arrangement with Edgar Selden, who had the project under way for some months, having procured all rights to the use of Dresser's famous song, which he made over to Vitagraph.

Carlos Brings Prints of New Productions

When A. Carlos, president of Carlos Productions, Inc., producing for Truart Film Corporation, arrived in New York this week, he brought with him the first prints of "The Unknown Purple" and the initial Richard Talmadge production filmed under the working title, "Fast Freight."

Henry B. Walthall does probably the best work of his long career; Alice Lake, Stuart Holmes, Ethel Grey Terry, Johnny Arthur, Richard Wayne, Brinsley Shaw, Helen Ferguson, each live in a character which fits actually into the big, human, virile drama.

Shown before a selected audience of film officials early in the week, "The Unknown Purple" created a sensation.

News Photographer for Metro Special

AN announcement that holds particular interest to exhibitors and photoplay editors is that issued in connection with Jackie Coogan's second picture for Metro, "A Boy of Flanders," a picturization of Ouida's famous novel, "A Dog of Flanders," upon which Jackie will start work within the next several weeks.

The announcement declares that an expert newspaper photographer will be added to the camera staff. His duties will be the photographing and the preparing of stills that hold a direct news appeal which will be readily accepted by newspaper editors.

Teaser Letter Stunt For "Maytime"

A novel accessory is being issued by Preferred Pictures Corporation for "Maytime," Rida Johnson Young's dramatic love story which has just been filmed by Gasnier under the personal supervision of B. P. Schulberg. This is in the form of a teaser letter.

A plain white envelope addressed in a femine handwriting encloses a small sheet of note paper and an imitation diamond ring. The first page of the letter inscribed in the same feminine hand reads:

"I am returning your ring and we must never see each other again.

"My eyes are filled with tears and I am trying so hard to tell you why it is best that we part forever—but can't. The word's won't come.

"All I can say is that you will understand all if you will just"

Here the first page ends and the explanation does not come until it is turned to the following page reading:

"see that wonderful picture, 'Maytime.'

"It tells, oh so well, just what is in my heart. The love story of Harrison Ford, Ethel Shannon and Clara Bow is just like my own.

"It is a wonderful picture. See it and you will understand why, though my heart is breaking, I am still your Sweetheart."

Orchestrations Made For "Puritan Passions"

A complete set of orchestration parts and additional piano scores have been made of Frederick S. Converse's symphony score, written especially for the Film Guild production of Percy MacKaye's stage play, "The Scarecrow," which will be distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation under the title of "Puritan Passions." These orchestrations have been made as an accessory for the exhibitor who desires to use this special score.

"Scaramouche" Wins N. Y. Critics

Rex Ingram's Artistry Is Praised After Showing of Metro Feature

THE critics of the New York papers gave "Scaramouche" glowing reviews, following its opening at the Forty-fourth Street theatre.

"With Mr. Ingram's deft, artistic touch and a most competent cast, 'Scaramouche' is an engrossing and charming film. The scenic effects are most splendid. It is a stronger and more plausible narrative than 'The Orphans of the Storm,' and is another feather in Ingram's well-decorated cap." Thus wrote the critic of the New York Times.

"Really, 'Scaramouche' is the finest thing in French Revolutions ever brought to the screen," wrote Quinn Martin in the New York World. "Indeed it is one of the most deftly made historical screen romances we have ever seen."

"Ingram's pictured version of Rafael Sabatini's 'Scaramouche' is the most authoritative and most artistic photoplay of that stirring time we have ever seen," wrote the critic of the New York Mail.

"Ingram's 'Scaramouche' reveals about as many thrills to the foot of film as any spectacle offered since the advent of the silver screen," wrote the critic of the New York Telegram. "It is even more pretentious than 'The Four Horsemen,' which Ingram once liked to list as his masterpiece."

"Ingram has done a marvelous job," wrote the critic of the New York Sun and Globe.

"It may be," wrote the critic of the Evening World, "that when the history of the beginning of motion pictures is written, 1923 will be set down as the year of wonderful happenings. We saw 'Scaramouche' last night. This filming of one of the best selling novels is one of the best we have seen in any season. It 'stands out' in a dozen ways."

"'Scaramouche' is a thriller," wrote the reviewer of the New York Journal.

"'Scaramouche,'" wrote "Irene" in the Daily News, "is the screen's pageant of beauty. Our witnessing it was merely a final assurance for our own benefit of the picture's bigness and splendor."

"Rafael Sabatini, the author, owes Rex Ingram a great debt for the picture 'Scaramouche,'" wrote Louella O. Parsons in the Morning Telegraph. "It is the sort of picture no one should miss."

"We sat spellbound," wrote Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune. "'Scaramouche' is undoubtedly Rex Ingram's greatest picture. We cannot think of any other actor who would play the title role so well as Ramon Novarro. Lewis Stone is perfect. And Alice Terry is both perfect and beautiful."

Crowd Thrilled by N. Y. Fire Scene

Silver Jubilee Sequence So Realistic It Will Be Woven Into Feature

WHAT is said to be the greatest fire scene ever filmed is one which was "shot" this week at the Cosmopolitan studios, as a sequence in New York City's big Silver Jubilee picture and which, because of its striking realism, will, it is said, be woven into "Cain and Mabel," a picturization of an H. C. Witwer story, which the Cosmopolitan Corporation now has in production.

During the filming of the scene, thousands of spectators looked on and saw some of the most thrilling rescues in the history of the fire department. Several hundred men, women and children, with flames and smoke pouring from windows at their backs, piled out on fire escapes at the second and third floors of the studio building. They clawed at each other to reach the ladders as an engine company, a hook and ladder company and a rescue squad raced up the block. Streams of water were shot on the building and ladders put up. The scene was so realistic that twenty or more actresses dropped unconscious to landings and were attended by ambulance physicians who also appeared in the scene. One of the big thrills came when four of the actors made flying leaps from third story windows into fire nets.

The chief purpose of the film was for the big Silver Jubilee picture, depicting the work of the various municipal departments of New York. Fire Commissioner Drennan sanctioned use of the fire apparatus on the approval of Grover Whalen. The actors who appeared included Oscar Shaw and T. Roy Barnes and several hundred "extras," the services of whom the Cosmopolitan Corporation gave gratis to the city.

The scene was directed by E. Mason Hopper, who is directing "Cain and Mabel." The director declared the scene was so realistic he would make an attempt to weave it in as an episode in the picture which is now being filmed and which features Anita Stewart, T. Roy Barnes and Oscar Shaw.

Chicago Critics Praise "Alice Adams"

When "Alice Adams," the Associated Exhibitors' feature from Booth Tarkington's Pulitzer prize novel, played the State-Lake theatre in Chicago, last week, the critics were more outspoken in its praise than is usually their custom.

Mae Tinee of the Chicago Tribune, Ashton Stevens of the Chicago Herald and Examiner, and Rob Reel of the Chicago Evening American were particularly enthusiastic over the fidelity of the picturization to the novel.

Mr. Stevens said in part: "I spent a fascinated hour with 'Alice Adams' at the State-Lake yesterday. The characters came to life vividly and quickly. The shabby little story of the girl who lost out in the social mill because all the fathers but hers had become rich was told dramatically and pitilessly."

"Thief of Bagdad" Near Climax

FILMING the climax of "The Thief of Bagdad" is announced as one of the next chief events on the production calendar in Hollywood.

Preparations are under way for the major sequence in Douglas Fairbanks' huge Arabian Nights spectacle, and when this work is at its height it is expected that 4,000 persons, probably one of the biggest crowds ever assembled in a picture, will pass before the camera.

The episodes that will be photographed in the very near future include the love scenes, the Oriental feast and festival, the triumphant entry of the principal character into the City of Bagdad, the enormous spectacle of the Chinese army capturing the city, and, finally, the culmination—showing the regenerated thief and the Princess, whose love he finally wins, sailing over Bagdad's glistening minarets on the magic rug.

Stockholm Praises Metro Animal Picture

An indication of the popularity with which the Metro picture, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson's "Trailing African Wild Animals" has been received abroad are the following critical comments of various Stockholm, Sweden, newspapers:

"It is one of the good films from Nature," wrote the Svenska Dagbladet. "The photographic work has been executed with real danger and courage and endurance. It is highly recommended."

"All the dreams of my boyhood years of adventure and dangers in the wilds grew up and filled my soul with rapture at the sight of this picture," wrote the critic of the Stockholm Dagblad.

"Certainly an exceptionally interesting and thrilling picture," wrote the critic of Dagens Nyheter.

"Extremely interesting," wrote the reviewer of the Nya Dagligh Allehanda.

"Slave Of Desire" Print Arrives in N. Y.

A print of "Slave of Desire," the Gilbert E. Gable production, based upon Balzac's novel, "The Magic Skin," which was produced at the Goldwyn studios, for distribution by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan, has been received at the home office, where it has aroused a great deal of enthusiasm.

The adaptation was made by Charles Whittaker, who has to his credit some of the biggest screen successes. His adaptation is said to be remarkably faithful to Balzac's great story, although it has been modernized to the extent of introducing automobiles into the picture.

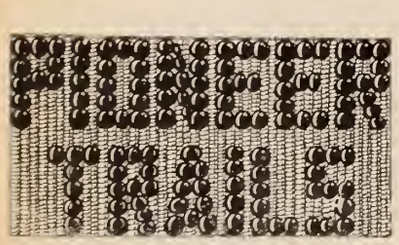
Hodkinson Has Novel Lobby Display

IN order to extend to exhibitors every help possible the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is having prepared as an accessory for "Puritan Passions" a Film Guild production starring Glenn Hunter, an artistic life size design representing the Mirror of Truth with the scarecrow made entirely out of papier mache.



The Mirror of Truth, which reflects man as he really is, forms one of the most dramatic, as well as unusual situations, in this production. It was therefore used as the foundation for a unique lobby display. This accessory will stand about six feet high, arch shaped with a large cut-out of the Devil looking over the back of the Mirror. In the center stands a scarecrow with a brimstone pipe in his mouth, while perched on a stand close by is a large black crow with blinker lights in his eyes. Descriptive lettering and a beautifully drawn background add to the ability of this lobby display to catch the eye.

"Down to Sea" Acclaimed Among Best

"Down to the Sea in Ships" has been acclaimed one of the two best features of the season, according to the views of 54 newspaper critics and authors, the opinions of which have been solicited by the Hays organization and published recently in Film Daily.

According to this report, Mr. Hays, in his communication to the writers and critics impressed upon them that their views would be held confidential, so no names are therefore mentioned.

The report, under the heading of "The Best Feature," says, regarding this Whaling Film Corporation's production distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, "It is interesting to note that 'Down to the Sea in Ships' and 'Only 38' are equal favorites as the best features selected from the 54 critics who offered opinions."

"Extra Girl" Scores in Premiere

Critics Approve Mabel Normand's First for Associated Exhibitors Release

"THE Extra Girl," Mabel Normand's first feature for Associated Exhibitors release produced by Mack Sennett and directed by F. Richard Jones had its world premiere at the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, last week and from all accounts was enthusiastically received.

Edwin Schalert said in the course of a long review in the Los Angeles Times:

"And now we have 'The Extra Girl.' That makes three in a row, telling the story of studio life. And each seems better when you see it than the last. At the formal premiere last night there were lots of laughs, no end of chuckles and giggles, and a warm hand-clapping for the principals in the film as they appeared on the screen. Altogether 'The Extra Girl' had a reception that belonged."

Florence Lawrence in the Examiner said of the picture:

"You'll find Mabel Normand at her old time best in 'The Extra Girl.' In this newest Mack Sennett production this notable little comedienne devotes herself almost entirely to making you laugh. The whole play is built for entertainment, and it's made up of comedy episodes and those tender little touches which show the vibrant Mabel in her most rib-tickling mood, as Sennett only has ever been able to present her on the silver sheet.

"The story is romance with thrills and laughter intermixed, the latter quality predominating, and it's done without burlesque and with but little obvious melodrama. Miss Normand's experiences as 'The Extra Girl' will move both professionals and laymen to mirth, and the entire cast offers excellent support to the star."

Boston Lauds "If Winter Comes"

Newspaper Reviewers Set Seal of Approval on William Fox Production

BOSTON has set the seal of approval on the William Fox screen version of "If Winter Comes." The A. S. M. Hutchinson story opened at the Fenway, Monday, September 24, and the writers of the daily press were as one in the lavish praise they bestowed upon the picture.

The critic of the Boston Evening Transcript said:

"Endeavoring to transpose bodily into pantomime a novel which more than half a million souls have read is a ticklish task. To accomplish it as spiritedly as Harry Millarde has done in his adaptation of 'If Winter Comes,' which reached Boston and the screen at the Fenway theatre yesterday, is good cause for elation.

"Seldom has a novel passed through the hands of scenario-writer, casting man, director, designer, location man, sub-titler, cutting editor, and all the rest of the movie hierarchy to emerge with scarcely a single objectionable deviation from its original spirit. Just this has come to pass in Mr. Hutchinson's case, however. In fact, almost the sole defect—and that a slight one in the script is due to a too literal application of the letter of the story."

Boston Daily Advertiser: . . . "The film should make cinema history, just like the original storycreated a new mark in literature. The outstanding feature of this well directed, well played and well photographed film is Percey Marmont."

Boston Post: "'If Winter Comes,' William Fox's celluloid version of the A. S. M. Hutchinson best seller, is a noteworthy achievement, in that it follows the book closely and can be easily recognized by the author as a photoplay adaptation of his own work. . . . It belongs on the 'better pictures' program and is a credit to Harry Millarde, the director, and William Fox, the producer."

Boston Herald: . . . "There are humor, sentiment and tragedy in this film adaptation, and the producers are to be congratulated for an intelligent and artistic piece of work."

Exploitation Campaign For "Lullaby"

A powerful exploitation campaign is being arranged by F. B. O. for "The Lullaby," Chester Bennett's most recent production soon to be released by Film Booking offices. Jane Novak is the star.

An outstanding situation in the story, from the pen of Lillian Ducey, deals with the birth of a child in a penitentiary and the keeping of the child by its mother. Producer Bennett has developed some strong situations along these lines, it is reported, and F. B. O.'s campaign will be aimed to start widespread discussion throughout the country.

Endorsements of the film from many prominent social workers, educators and statesmen also will form an important feature of the campaign.

To Rush "Steadfast Heart" Book

CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND'S romantic story, "The Steadfast Heart," which ran serially in Collier's, and which has been made into a feature production by Distinctive Pictures Corporation, will be rushed for book publication in January by Harper & Brothers. The book was originally scheduled for issue late in 1924, but such has been the demand for the story that Harpers have decided to put it out earlier.

Little Joey Depew, Miriam Battistia, Sherry Tansey, Jerry Devine, Marguerite Courtot, Joseph Striker and Mary Alden have leading roles.

Sheridan Hall directed the picture from a script by Philip Lonergan. It is scheduled for release on October 7 through Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Noted Travellers Visit Doug at Studio

Bearing a letter of introduction from Willy Pogany, famous artist and illustrator, three noted globe-trotters dropped in at the Pickford-Fairbanks studios in Hollywood recently to pay their respects to Douglas Fairbanks before continuing their trip around the world, during which they will make an exhaustive study of the folk-ways of nations, and do their bit to cement international friendships.

The visitors included Miss Mildred Taylor, well known writer and student of the problems among women and children; also her brother, J. L. Taylor, radio engineer, and Blanding Sloan, artist and etcher. Their immediate objective is the Orient where they will make a close study of social conditions before going on their further way around the world. At least two years will be taken up with the trip.

C.B.C. Announces Sale in Salt Lake City

Quite an unusual contract was closed this week between Superior Screen Service of Salt Lake City and the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, considering the fact that Mr. C. W. Hawxhurst did not screen a single picture before closing the contract for the entire output of C. B. C.

The entire deal was closed by telegraphic correspondence between Mr. Brandt and Mr. Hawxhurst.

Mr. Hawxhurst's territory includes Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and the southern part of Idaho.

Frank Lloyd Buys "The Sea Hawk"

Will Start Production for First National on Completion of "Black Oxen"

WHAT is regarded among the big screen purchases was completed this week when, through negotiations with Richard A. Rowland, general manager for Associated First National Pictures, Frank Lloyd, independent producer-director, announced the purchase of film rights to "The Sea Hawk" by Rafael Sabatini, author of "Scaramouche," "The Snare," "Captain Blood; His Odessy" and others.

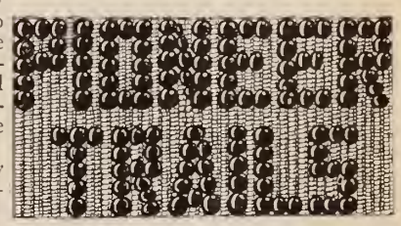
"The Sea Hawk" is said to possess more dramatic value, more diversity of theme and more richness of setting than any of the famous Italian-English author's widely read narratives and Mr. Lloyd is planning on giving it a picturization which will require many months to complete.

Dealing with the romance and adventures of Sir Oliver Tressilian, "The Sea Hawk," relates how his suit for the hand of Rosamund Godolphin is suddenly ended by the murder of Rosamund's brother Peter and the report that Oliver had committed the crime. It unfolds the story of how Oliver is kidnapped, put on a pirate ship which is later sunk in a naval battle, establishes himself on a desert province, under an assumed name and later returns to England to acquaint Rosamund with the facts and to deal with his cowardly half brother who actually participated in the murder.

Meanwhile Mr. Lloyd continues with production of "Black Oxen" with Corinne Griffith and Conway Tearle playing the principal parts and flapperish Clara Bow prominent in a cast which comprises Kate Lester, Thomas Ricketts, Tom Guise, Harry Mestayer, Claire MacDowell and many others.

Complete Cast Selected for Metro Feature

Jane Novak, Percy Marmont, Eva Novak, Cullen Landis, Robert Bosworth, Lydia Knott, Gertrude Short, Lincoln Steadman, Andre de Beranger and William Humphrey complete the cast of the new Metro Premier Feature production, "The Man Whom Life Passed By," written by Victor Schertzinger and Winifred Dunn, and now being directed by Victor Schertzinger at the Metro west coast studios.



Jane Novak has been loaned by Chester Bennett for this production.

Carlos in Conference With Truart

Following the delivery of the first units of two Carlos Productions series, Abraham Carlos, head of that producing organization is in New York conferring with officials of Truart Film Corporation regarding future production plans.

With the one unit, the first production of which was the picturization of Roland West's sensational stage-play, "The Unknown Purple," Carlos plans to make three productions of similar calibre during the 1923-24 season. Each of these pictures wil be adapted from an eminently successful stage play.

The Richard Talmadge series, which is also being produced by Carlos for Truart distribution, will consist of three productions during the present year. The first of these made under the working title, "Fast Freight," has already been delivered to Truart.

Ruth Roland Serial Is Approved

Trade Paper Reviewers Commend Daring Shown in First Three Episodes

THE trade paper critics, following their preview of Ruth Roland's new western serial, "Ruth of the Range," agree without a dissenting voice that Miss Roland in her latest thriller for Pathe release sustains her reputation for daring and breath-taking acting and that her new chapter-production, as evidenced in the first three episodes, meets, to a highly satisfactory degree, the exacting serial standard of thrilling situations and hair-raising incidents.

"Ruth Roland is once more the venturesome heroine in a Pathe serial of many thrills, judging from the first three episodes," writes the Moving Picture World reviewer. "It is good entertainment for all serial fans. The continuity has provided for continuous action, hazardous stunts, and enough suspense to keep the spectator in a heat of excitement."

Motion Picture News also pays high tribute to the star's daring and to the excellent work of the supporting cast in the following:

"Miss Roland is her usual daring self in the first three episodes shown by Pathe this week. She performs daringly hair-raising stunts with such ease that one marvels at her every move. There is seemingly no feat, no matter how dangerous, this lady is incapable of performing satisfactorily and successfully. But while herself an athletic wonder, Miss Roland, like any other serial star, must necessarily depend in no small degree on the work of the supporting cast. And in this particular, the supporting cast lives up to every expectation of even the most careful star."

The Trade Review says: "There are plenty of fights and breath-taking stunts. Judging from the first three chapters, 'Ruth of the Range' will delight serial fans."

Film Daily writes in the same vein: "At times the action is extremely tense. The star exhibits all her usual courage and daring and some of the stunts employed will keep them on the edge of their seats."

C. B. C. Closes Huge British Deal

R. K. Bartlett Company, Inc., Acquires Rights for Entire Output of Season

ALMOST on the eve of the departure of Jack Cohn on board the Aquitania for London, a deal was closed in New York City whereby the R. K. Bartlett Company, Inc., acquired the rights for all of the C. B. C. pictures for this season, including "Yesterday's Wife," "Forgive and Forget," "The Marriage Market," "The Barefoot Boy," "Innocence," "Discontented Husbands," "Traffic in Hearts" and "Pal o' Mine."

Mr. Bartlett is well known in Europe. He was one of the pioneers in exploiting pictures abroad and was responsible for the success of "Civilization" abroad. He was very closely connected with Thos. H. Ince in all of his foreign productions and in addition has had a remarkable career in the newspaper field in England.

Mr. Bartlett sailed for England on the Aquitania and has taken with him prints of "The Marriage Market," "Forgive and Forget," "Yesterday's Wife," "The Barefoot Boy." He has in mind a unique distribution plan for these pictures abroad and in commenting upon the acquisition of the C. B. C. product stated that of all the pictures he had seen in America he felt that every one of the C. B. C. pictures had more exploitation angles than any pictures he had screened.

Mr. Bartlett attributes the success of "Civilization" to the intensified exploitation campaign which he conducted on that picture. Immediately upon his arrival in England he will start the machinery going that will launch a big exploitation campaign for each one of the C. B. C. pictures.

Long "Safety Last" Run in Chicago

FIGURES of gigantic values have been the rule at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, during its engagement of Harold Lloyd's thrill-comedy, "Safety Last," which is being distributed by Pathe.

The full engagement of the production has run eighteen weeks, going through what have been concededly the hottest weeks of the year. Despite this tremendous handicap over 300,000 Chicagoans have seen "Safety Last" during its run at Orchestra Hall.

To satisfy the insistent demands of the host of Harold Lloyd's admirers twelve hundred and sixty performances had to be staged during the engagement.

"Marriage Circle" Half Completed

More than half of the scenes for "The Marriage Circle," the first production which Ernst Lubitsch is making for the Warner Brothers, have been completed at the Warners' studio in Hollywood. This production is being made under the first contract signed by the famous foreign director with the Warners.

Portraying the leading feminine roles are Florence Vidor and Marie Prevost, and the masculine parts are in the hands of Creighton Hale, Monte Blue, Harry Myers and Adolphe Menjou.

Bennison Aids Bennett Titling "Lullaby"

Jane Novak's next starring vehicle, "Lullaby," produced by Chester Bennett at the Pat Powers Hollywood studio for F. B. O., has been completed, save for the final touches of editing and titling. These important details are in the hands of James Wilkinson, Powers film editor at the Hollywood plant, and Andrew Bennison, titler.

Bennison was responsible for many of the laugh titles in the H. C. Witwer "Fighting Blood" series which also were produced at the Powers stronghold.

Author Will Assist "Barbara Worth"

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT, the famous author, is in Hollywood at the studio of Principal Pictures Corporation lending assistance to the director and scenario writers who are getting his story, "The Winning of Barbara Worth," ready for the screen.

This picture, to be released by First National, is to be made in Imperial Valley, Calif., the true locale of the story. Wright will go on location with the company to collaborate in its production.

Florence Vidor is to play Barbara Worth. Edward F. Cline will direct it. Other members of the all-star cast are now being chosen.

Truart Launches Semon Sales Campaign

Concurrently with the starting of the first Larry Semon productions on the Coast, the New York sales officials of Truart Film Corporation have inaugurated the sales campaign which embraced the four Larry Semon productions to be made by Truart during the 1923-24 season.

The first release will be an adaptation of A. H. Woods' success, "The Girl in the Limousine," written by Wilson Collison and Avery Hopwood. This will be followed by picturizations of three more stage comedies of national reputation.

The first step in the sales campaign, under which the entire series will be sold direct to exhibitor by producer was the insertion of a four-page advertisement in all trade journals stating briefly and concisely the policy of Truart with reference to the Larry Semon comedies. A copy of this insert with a personal letter setting forth the reasons for the revolutionary sales policy Truart has adopted on this series was also sent to the selected first-run exhibitors of the country. It is planned to have the sales officials of Truart personally cover the country in conjunction with this plan of distribution.

Long Beach Aids "Her Temporary Husband"

First National's "Her Temporary Husband" company moved bag and baggage to Long Beach this week, in which city the exterior scenes of the picture are to be made. More than three weeks will be occupied in camera work before the company returns to the studios to complete the comedy.

Through the interest of the local chamber of commerce the various societies and associations in the beach resort have volunteered to help production by appearing in some of the big scenes.

"Her Temporary Husband" is being directed by John McDermott. Its cast includes Owen Moore, Sidney Chaplin, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Chuck Reisner and Charles Gerrard.

"Going Up" Approved in Pittsburgh

Douglas MacLean's Feature Comedy Wins Praise of Newspaper Reviewers

DOUGLAS MacLEAN in his first feature comedy for Associated Exhibitors "Going Up," opened at the Grand Theatre in Pittsburgh last week. The house was crowded at every performance, and the audiences considered the picture a laughing triumph, judging from the amount of laughter and applause that greeted Mr. MacLean's every action.

The critics of all the Pittsburgh papers were agreed that the picture is an assured success. All were very outspoken in praise of the star and the production.

The Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph says: "How eager Pittsburgh film fans are to enjoy screen comedy founded on a widely known stage success, was proven yesterday at the Grand where Douglas MacLean's photo version of 'Going Up' was presented."

The Pittsburgh Press says: "This play was frankly made solely for laughing purposes. It is funny from beginning to end and there is not a moment's cessation. There are some remarkable flying scenes in the picture, the kind that drag the audience to the edges of its seats and then permits it to sink back with a loud laugh when a close-up of MacLean reveals that he has escaped danger and is still battling heroically to subdue his wildly careening aeroplane."

The Pittsburgh Sun says: "'Going Up' is a succession of laughs. It is one of the best filmed comedies produced in many moons and judging from the mirth of last night's audience it will draw heavily while here."

The Pittsburgh Gazette Times says: "Douglas MacLean in 'Going Up,' which heads the bill at the Grand this week, has another one of those roles where he gets into all kinds of funny situations because he is posing as something which he is not—an aviator."

Five Preferred Features Finished

Schulberg in N. Y. for Conference Brings Final Print of "The Virginian"

WITH five pictures of the Preferred Fifteen completed—the season's program one-third finished, though the season is hardly started — Preferred Pictures Corporation is in an excellent position to prove to exhibitors the quality of its product for the coming year, according to Al Lichtman, president of Preferred Pictures Corporation.

His production plans well set for the remainder of the year, B. P. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures, arrived in New York Monday to confer with his partners, Mr. Lichtman and J. G. Bachmann regarding production plans for 1924.

Mr. Schulberg brought with him the final O. K'd print of "The Virginian," Tom Forman's production of the famous Owen Wister story, in which Kenneth Harlan, Florence Vidor, Russell Simpson, Pat O'Malley and Raymond Hatton play the leading parts.

The entire Preferred organization is enthusiastic over "The Virginian." Mr. Schulberg promises another fine picture in "Maytime" which Gasnier is now cutting and titling and which will arrive in New York in a few days. Harrison Ford, Ethel Shannon, Clara Bow and William Norris are in the cast of "Maytime" which is an elaborate screen version of the Rida Johnson Young play which ran more than a year in New York and for five years toured the United States.

The other three completed pictures are "Mothers-in-Law," which just finished a two weeks run at the Cameo Theatre in New York City; "The Broken Wing," with Kenneth Harlan and Miriam Cooper, which opens at the Rialto in New York on October 7th; and "April Showers," starring Colleen Moore and Kenneth Harlan.

"April Showers" is an October release and "Maytime" will be released in November of this year.

"We are now able to show exhibitors one-third of our entire year's product," said Mr. Lichtman. "They do not have to guess as to what they are buying. Prints of 'The Virginian' will be in exchanges in a few days and the 'Maytime' prints will follow soon after."

Mr. Schulberg will return to his Los Angeles studio in a few days to start work on George Agnew Chamberlain's novel "White Man," which will be directed by Tom Forman with Kenneth Harlan starring. Gasnier will begin shooting soon on "Poisoned Paradise," Robert W. Service's novel of Paris and Monte Carlo.

New Roles For "Merry Go Round" Players

Three members of the cast of "Merry-Go-Round" are finding new and bigger opportunities at Universal City, where "Merry-Go-Round" was made.

Mary Philbin, the heroine, is working in her first Universal-Jewel starring vehicle under the direction of Irving Cummings. It is "Morality," adapted from "My Mamie Rose," Owen Kildare's old novel of 1895.

Norman Kerrry, leading man, just recently completed the leading masculine characterization in "The Acquittal," a mystery drama directed by Clarence L. Brown, which has been previewed successfully with fine criticism. He is now awaiting another featured role in a new special.

George Hackathorne, the pathetic hunchback character of "Merry-Go-Round," has doffed the makeup artifices of character and is playing a role that has great character in it but is not dependent on any devices of makeup. It is Bibbs Sheridan, of Booth Tarkington's "The Turmoil," which is being filmed as a Hobart Henley production.

Foreign Paramounts Win Awards

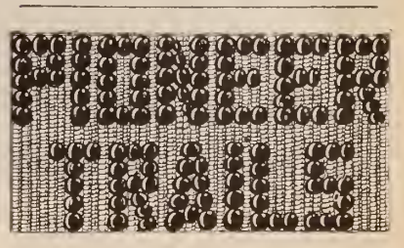
E. E. SHAUER, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has just received word that pictures produced by Paramount's German subsidiary, E. F. A.-Paramount Film Vertrieb, have been awarded the three highest prizes given at the International Cinematograph Exposition at Turin, Italy.

First prize was awarded to "Peter the Great," which was declared by American critics to be one of the great pictures of the year. Second prize was awarded to "Montmartre" and third to "In the Ante-room of Matrimony." The latter two pictures have not been exhibited in this country yet.

Radio Projects Scene From "Mail Man"

Emory Johnson's production "The Mail Man," dramatizing the U. S. Postal workers and soon to be released by F. B. O., has the distinction of being the first motion picture ever to be projected through the air by radio.

This exploitation stunt was put over by F. B. O. in connection with the powerful broadcasting station KHJ of the Los Angeles Times.



Under the direction of Emory Johnson, an "Unseen Scene" was put on in the radio studio of the Times. Ralph Lewis, as the veteran letter carrier, pleaded with Governor Simpson to save his boy, who had been condemned to death. The lights, scenery and all other studio paraphernalia were used, just as it was when "The Mail Man" was being filmed at the Powers studio in Hollywood.

Following the scene, Mr. Johnson told his unseen audience all about "The Mail Man" and then Mr. Lewis recited a poem.

Exploitation Material For "Gold Diggers"

A wealth of advertising material for the exhibitor has been created by the Warner Brothers publicity and exploitation staff which will be invaluable in exploiting the screen version of David Belasco's successful play "The Gold Diggers." Every possible display for the lobby has been designed, as well as unusual throw-aways, posters, novelties, advertising copy and layouts, special cuts, syndicate material and special stories for the newspapers.

Twelve different framed oil paintings done in striking colors have been supplied for theatre lobbies, and an unique gold lobby display of cards 22 x 28 in attractive colors is another eye-catcher.

Ambassador Theatre Compares with Best

Crandall's Washington, D. C., House Among Most Beautiful in Country

ONE of the most beautiful theatres in America was added to Washington's list of amusement places when Crandall's new Ambassador theatre at Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road, Northwest, opened to the public on September 20. The promenade lounge and auditorium proper of this magnificent structure will be found to present a symphony of restful tones executed in satins, silks and marble with three-color lighting systems and decorative fixtures the like of which never have been seen in the National Capital.

Careful Attention to Engineering Features

The Ambassador is built upon the cantilever system of steel construction with no interdependence between the steel framing and the walls. The steel structure is reared from cement footings imbedded deep in the earth and is not at any place wall-bearing. In designing the Ambassador there has been the closest co-operation of the District building department, Thomas W. Lamb, the architect, the structural engineers and the consulting engineers. One of the most important departures from usual practice is the distribution of the weight of the building over the earth at the rate of three tons per square foot instead of four tons. The design for the steel was made in Mr. Lamb's own office by his engineering force, composed of experts of long experience in the construction of this type of monumental structure.

The exterior of the Ambassador is of limestone in straight lintel construction surmounted on the upper portion of the building by a stuccoed wall with little, delicate pilasters projecting therefrom in a highly ornamental and very light cornice. The marquee extending over the main entrance on Eighteenth Street to the curb line is low and rich in design, affording both weather protection and beauty.

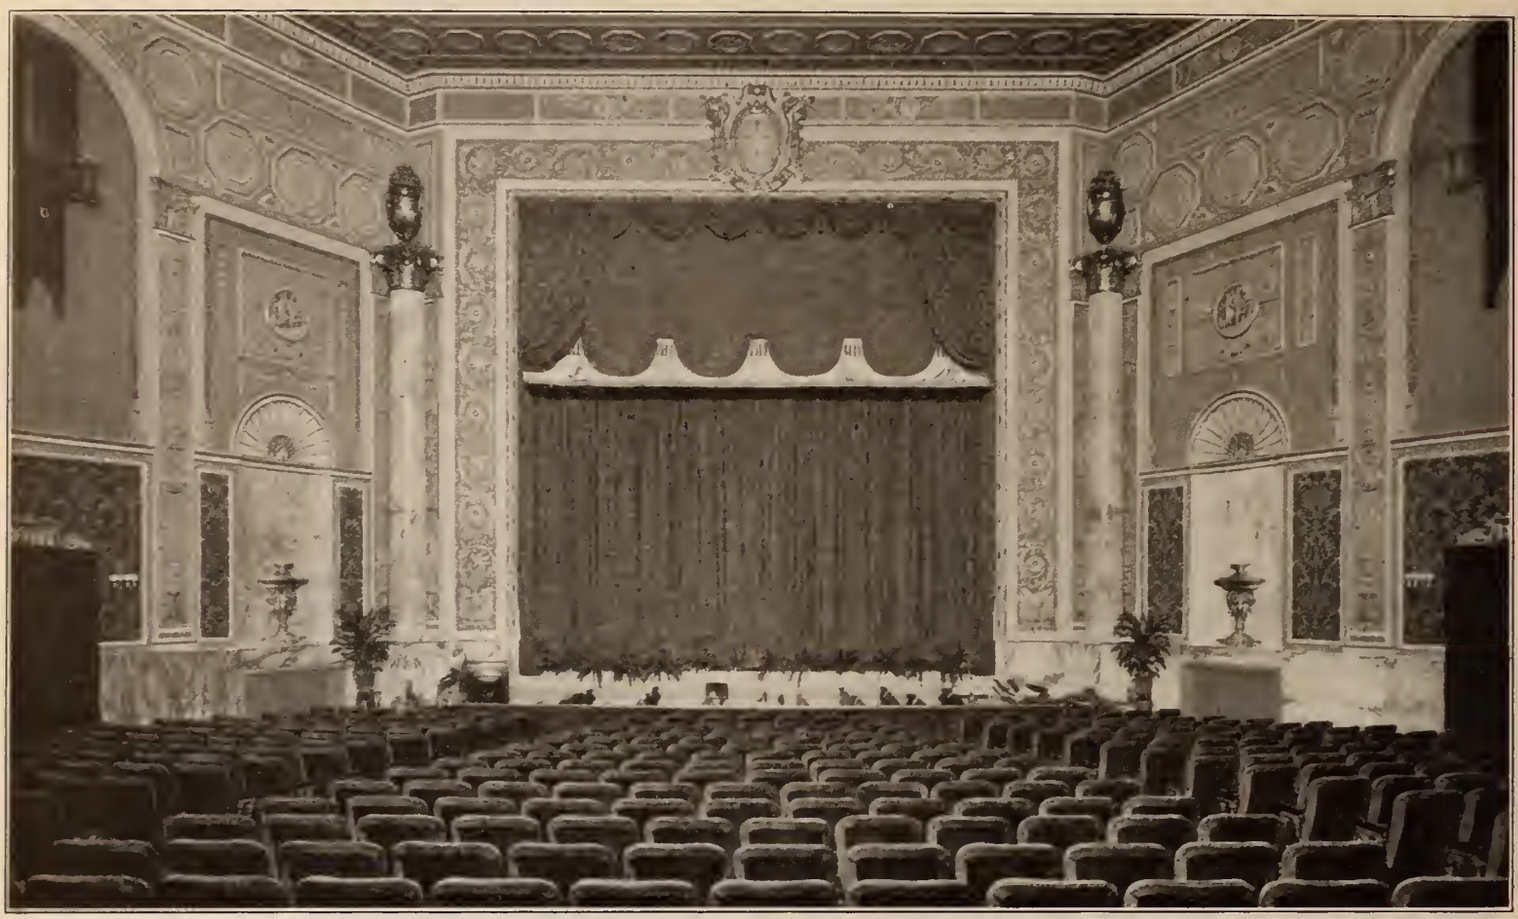
The main entrance lobby is finished in marble with handsome pendant lighting fixtures and decorative poster frames in which ample display of current and coming attractions can be made. There is only one marble staircase leading to the balcony, rising from the Columbia Road end of the foyer and leading directly into the promenade lounge, where comfortable chairs and divans will always be at the disposal of patrons. The balcony is broad and low and extends only a short distance over the rear of the orchestra floor, is domed at the back and distinctive in the character and beauty of its lighting fixtures.

Auditorium Done in Italian Renaissance

The auditorium is an Italian Renaissance design with soft blue gray and buff tints set off with gold leaf and black to produce an effect that is almost Oriental in its dignified beauty. The soft draperies are of gold and dahlia purple, lending the house a warmth and richness of incomparable effectiveness. The seats are leather with backs of an embossed velvet of old gold, which, with the black and gold carpet, heavily padded and with an exceptionally deep pile, will lend the auditorium a quality of appeal that is possessed by no other theatre in the District.

Main Ceiling Lighting Fixture Unique Design

One especially beautiful feature of the new house is the unique main ceiling lighting fixture. The entire center of this huge dome is of leaded work with draped crystal trimming and amber glass, susceptible of polychrome effects by reason of the three-color lighting system with its series of dimmers and blenders. This fixture, although it appears of the lightest and most fragile construction, has an entire inner frame of structural steel upon which a man may stand to relamp the fixture or for any other necessary purpose.



There will be matinees at the Ambassador on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays only, with night performances seven days a week There will be four changes of bill a week, with the necessary one-day showing on Saturday.

The scale of prices will be extremely low when consideration is given to the beauty,

The two views on this page present very strikingly the exquisite design employed in the auditorium of Harry M. Crandall's new Ambassador theatre, Washington, D. C. Special attention is called to the effect of the decoration used around the proscenium and side walls in the above view. (Photos by Tenschert & Flack)

This view looking toward the rear of the auditorium permits a study of the arrangement of the balcony and entrances to the seating. The sight lines are so designed that no acute angle results either to the observer or from the projection room. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1800 and represents an investment of about $500,000. (Photos by Tenschert & Flack)

A Man's Appearance Counts

in the business world of today. He is judged immediately by the prospective client or buyer the moment he enters his office. So with the theatre. Its interior dress brings either compliments and praise or dissatisfaction from the patron. Comfort, beauty, ventilation, clear view of the stage and various other attractions—these are the things by which the modern theatre is judged.

Because of the length of programs, comfort is very essential and should have first consideration when planning new theatres. Proper seating is a big aid to comfort as well as beauty. Years of experience have qualified us in making theatre chairs, endorsed by America's Foremost Theatre Owners and Builders. Wherever they are installed, satisfaction is certain—comfort is paramount.

Our Theatre Engineering Seating Department offers its efficient service in rendering information relative to installations or reseating projects.

A complete compilation of valuable information and interesting illustrations of Theatre, Auditorium and Assembly seating has just been completed. This book will be sent on request if made on your business or official stationery.

SIMPLIFIED ELECTRICITY for PROJECTIONISTS

Alternating Current Machinery

Lesson VII—Part V

Transformers

A TRANSFORMER can be briefly described as consisting of two electric circuits connected by one magnetic circuit. One of the electric circuits is called the primary and the other the secondary. The primary circuit receives energy from the line while the secondary delivers energy. The main function of a transformer is to change either voltage or current from a high value to a lower value, or vice versa. If a change in voltage is the main consideration it is called a constant potential transformer, and if a change in current is desired it is referred to as a current transformer.

Operation

If a hollow square of soft iron (the core) has two coils of wire wound around two sides and current is passed through one coil it will be found that a potential difference (voltage) exists between the terminals of the other coil. These two coils of wire can be placed anywhere on the core, and their location does not matter as long as the flux through the core threads both coils. Fig. 120 shows a simple transformer with the primary and secondary coils and cores marked.

The voltage applied across the primary is called E_p, and this voltage sends a current I_p through the primary coil, which in turn causes a magnetic flux to flow through the closed magnetic path formed by the core. The flux through the core threads (passes through) both primary and secondary coils and induces a voltage in each. The induced votlage in the primary is called E_{pb} and is called the back voltage, similar to the back votlage induced in armature coils of motors. On the other hand, the voltage induced in the secondary is called E_s, the secondary terminal voltage. The magnitude, or size, of these two induced voltages, E_{pb} and E_s, depends directly upon the number of turns of wire in the two coils. Thus, if the primary coil has twice the number of turns of wire as the secondary, the voltage induced in the primary will be twice that in the secondary, and vice versa.

Now, according to Lenz's Law (described in earlier lessons on magnetism), the back voltage E_{pb} opposes the applied voltage and is less than it by an amount necessary to drive the current through the primary to set up the magnetic flux. In other words, if 110 volts is applied across the primary and 2 volts are required to send a current through the primary in order to set up the flux through the core, then the back voltage E_{pb} would be equal to 108 volts, and this voltage would oppose, or buck, the applied voltage.

The current which sets up the flux is called the exciting current, and in well designed transformers the voltage required for this current is so small, compared with that applied, that it can be and is neglected, so we say that E_{pb} is equal and opposite to E_p.

Now the secondary voltage, E_s, sends a current I_s through the secondary in such a direction as to oppose the change in flux which produces it. This current must then necessarily oppose I_p, since this produces the flux. However, the magnetizing effect of I_p is always greater than the demagnetizing effect of I_s by the amount of the exciting current before mentioned. The resistance of the primary is practically negligible, so it can be said that the flux is constant for all loads (the resistance governs the IR drop, which in turn governs E_{pb}). Therefore, the primary ampere-turns, N_p I_p, and the secondary ampere-turns, N_s I_s, are always equal to some quantity, N_p I_o, which sets up the constant flux.

If the secondary is opened so that no current flows in it, the exciting current, I_o, can be measured by placing an ammeter in the primary circuit, and since the turns on the primary N_p can be determined, the value of N_p I_o can also be found.

It was said once before that since E_{pb} and E_s are produced by the same flux they are proportional to the number of turns on primary and secondary coils. Also that for all practical purposes, the back voltage E_{pb} and the applied voltage E_p are equal. Then the primary voltage E_p E_p divided by the secondary voltage E_s is equal to the primary turns divided by the secondary turns, or

$$\frac{E_p}{E_s} = \frac{N_p}{N_s} \text{ also } E_pN_s = E_sN_p$$

This is called the transformation ratio.

It was just said that I_o, the exciting current, is so small that it can be neglected so that the primary ampere-turns were equal to the secondary ampere-turns. Hence

$$N_p\ I_p = N_sI_s$$

$$\frac{N_p}{N_s} = \frac{I_s}{I_p} = \frac{E_p}{E_s}$$

$$\frac{E_p}{E_s} = \frac{N_p}{N_s}$$

Since $\frac{E_p}{E_s} = \frac{N_p}{N_s}$ also

$E_pI_p = E_sI_s$

The last formula simply states that the power in the primary ($E_pI_p = P_p$) is equal to the power in the secondary ($E_sI_s = P_s$).

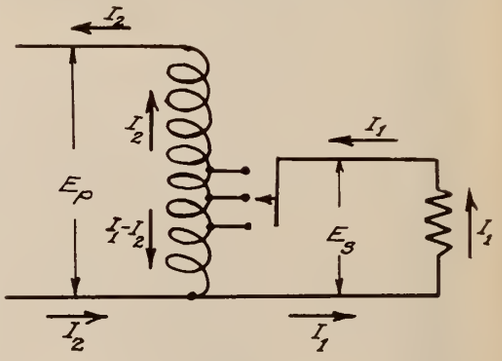

Figure 122

Neglecting, of course, the slight losses in the core and coils. That these losses are slight is evident from the fact that the efficiency of transformers ranges from 90% for very small ones to 98 or 99% for large ones. For this reason, the power factor in the secondary is the same as that in the primary.

To sum up what has already been said:

1. Primary ampere-turns = Secondary ampere-turns
2. $\frac{\text{Ep (primary voltage)}}{\text{Es (secondary voltage)}} = \frac{\text{Np (primary turns)}}{\text{Ns (secondary turns)}}$
3. Power in primary = power in secondary
4. Primary power factor = secondary power factor

Primary Connections

The primary of a constant potential transformer is connected across the supply lines since the voltage is to undergo some definite change in value. The secondary is then connected to the apparatus requiring the change in voltage. The proper connections are shown in Fig. 121-A.

Now a current transformer changes current from a higher to a lower value, or vice versa, and in order to do this the current in the line must flow through the primary of the transformer. Hence the primary is connected in series with the line while the secondary leads are connected to such devices as ammeters (for measurement purposes), spot welders, induction furnaces, etc. In fact, to any device requiring an exceptionally high current or where a high current is to be changed to a low one.

Auto-Transformers

An auto-transformer consists essentially of a single coil of wire, which serves both as primary and secondary, wrapped around a closed iron core. Taps are brought out of the coil to give a variable voltage supply. Such a transformer is illustrated in Fig. 121. In this type of machine the currents in section Ab and Ac flow in opposite directions, and, hence, opposc each other. Hence, the current in section Ab is equal to I_1—I_2. This type of transformer is used principally for small ratios of transformations such as would be required for starting Ac motors.

There are still other transformers which depend upon special connections for their usefulness such as the Booster and Scott-connected types.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To protect the exhibitor against screening, unknowingly, film of inferior photographic quality we make Eastman Positive Film identifiable. The words "Eastman" "Kodak" are stenciled in black letters in the transparent film margin. Look for this positive proof that you are projecting the "film that carries quality through to the screen."

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base, is now available in thousand foot lengths.

Special Course of Instruction for Projectionists in the Navy

THE following outline of a special course of instruction for the purpose of training motion picture projectionists in the Navy has been received. This course which is very comprehensive as may be seen from the following outline, covers a period of two months. As a result of this training the Navy has a very capable staff of projectionists on their Naval Stations and battleships.

First Week—Outline of Course, duties of students, fire bills; What Moving Pictures Really Are; How Moving Pictures Are Taken, Speed, the Camera, the Film; How Pictures are printed, titles made, cut and made up; Difference between black and white film, tinted film, Prizma film; Cost of Film; Use of leaders, trailers and bands; Practical work on film, inspection and repair, numbering; Use of containers. Color, Contents.

Second Week—Programs, Cost of, Making up, Changing of contents, Distribution of; Sources of Light; Arc, Incandescent, Other Types; the Arc, A.C., D.C., Cause of, How controlled; Optical Axis, Screens, types, color combinations, size, cleaning.

Third Week—Ghost, cause and remedy; Keystone effect, cause remedy and demonstration; Units of a Projector, stand Lamphouse, head, magazines, motor and speed control, rheostats, threading of Powers and Simplex, Speed of Projection, Projecting with Powers Machine.

Fourth Week — Elementary Electricity, switches, insulation and controlling devices; Grounds and Short Circuits, causes and remedies; Lamphouse in detail, carbon arms, carbons, insulation of, control handles, care of; Testing for Electrical Defects; Film jumping, cause and remedy; Flickering, picture, cause and remedy, Run-offs, torn sprocket holes and breaks in film while running, cause and remedy: Projection on Simplex Machine.

Fifth Week—Instruction and projection on Graphoscope, Jr.; Motion Picture Circuits, two wire circuit, with one machine; two wire circuit with two machines, three wire circuit with two machines; alternating current circuits, rheostats, single, in series, in multiple; Methods of Changing A.C. to D.C., Settings of Carbons, and reasons for, Sizes of carbons and reasons for; Shutters, use of, setting of, two blade, three blade; review of the course thus far.

Sixth Week—Fire in machine; cause, what to do, cleaning after; Lenses, Objective, taking apart, cleaning; stereopticon, assembling, focusing, wide angle, long focal; Condenser, matching up, back focal; Focal length, equivalent focal; Abberration, spherical and chromatic: Intermittent movements, Powers, Simplex, Graphoscope; Revolving parts of mechanism.

Seventh Week—Alternating Current Projection; fire prevention devices, Dis-assembly and assembly of machines complete, including head stand, speed control and lamp houses of Powers, Simplex and Graphoscope. Reports, Receipt of programs, transfers, programs on hand, operators reports, entertainment value.

Eighth Week—Running of programs, submitting reports, general review of courses. Scope of Examinations, Film, Optical Projection, Machine in General, Running Continuous Show, Film Reports.—Finis.—Knappen.

Sturtevant Co. Opens Western Plant

Owing to the increasing business and the desire to be of still greater service to its customers, the B. F. Sturtevant Company has long felt the need of a manufacturing plant in the middle west.

As almost every installation calls for specific engineering which has been found difficult and expensive at times to give full attention to westward business from Hyde Park, Mass., the Sturtevant Company has purchased the plant of the Wisconsin Engineering Co., makers of Corliss Pumping Engines at Corliss, Wisc. This new acquisition covers nearly 10 acres and the buildings have approximately 150,000 feet of floor space.

A full manufacturing and engineering staff will be maintained at this plant. Harry W. Page has been selected as general manager and will be in entire charge of the Wisconsin plant.

Makes Picture Giving Technical Explanation of Light and Color

A NEW departure in educational films is being made in the production of a scientific picture at the studio of the Science Wonders Films Syndicate, under the direction of William Maulsby Thomas, a scientist of Los Angeles, who has made some noteworthy discoveries and devised several inventions of major importance.

The subject of the picture is Light, and its novelty inheres in the fact that it treats of one of the physical forces emitted by the sun and is, therefore, one of the great fundamental phenomena of nature. This picture is also novel in having its most important feature—that relating to color, which is derived from light—presented in colors.

One of its principal exhibits is that of a machine for measuring the velocity of light, which is transmitted from the sun (or from any source of white light) by vibrations of the ether, as are heat electricity and magnetism, at the inconceivable speed of approximately 186,500 miles a second.

A graphic illustration of the equivalence of this speed is given by passing light around a sphere, representing the earth, seven and one-half times a second.

The exhibits also include an illustration of the pressure of light; the effect of light on selenium, which has the property of being a conductor of electricity when under the influence of light and of being a non-conductor when light is shut off; the reflection of light from a mirror, its almost total reflection from a white object, such as white paper, and its absorption by a black object such as black paper which is ignited by sunlight concentrated upon it by a lens.

The most striking and educational feature of the picture is the analysis of light—that is, its separation into its three constituent primary rays, red, green and violet; and the formation of the secondary colors, purple, yellow and blue, from the primary colors by their combinations. The color of all objects is due to the reflection of the primary color rays, singly or in combination, and the absorption of the other color rays by the objects. When all the rays are reflected the object is white; when all of the rays are absorbed, the object is black.

The picture will enable the masses to come into an understanding of the most conspicuous phenomenon of nature, that of color.

Dover Playhouse Redecorated

The Playhouse theatre of Dover, N. J., owned by Max Heller, has been released to John T. Howell for another term and is undergoing extensive alterations and repairs under his supervision. An addition to the theatre of 15 x 100 feet is already under good headway. There is to be a mezzanine floor constructed across the front of the house accommodating twelve loge boxes. By means of these additions the seating capacity will be increased to about 1,000.

Mr. Howell is refurnishing the entire theatre with upholstered leather seats while wicker chairs in the boxes, ladies rest room and anteroom will add to the comfort and beauty of the theatre. New carpets have been purchased, new draperies for stage and exits, and new lighting and ventilating systems. The decorating color scheme will be old ivory and mulberry.

S. L. Rothapfel of the Capitol theatre, New York City, employing a special voice amplifying apparatus known as the "public address" system for directing rehearsals. This apparatus has decided advantages over methods used in the past

Directs Rehearsals By Voice Amplifier

A strictly up-to-date method of directing rehearsals is now used by S. L. Rothapfel of the Capitol theatre, New York City, who employs a special voice amplifying apparatus known as the "public address system" of the Western Electric Company.

Speaking into the microphone in an ordinary conversational tone, the director is able to give his instructions equally clearly to the projection room, 200 feet away; to the man in the spotlight room above the projection room; to the electric switchboard behind the stage and the musical director, and in addition is able to reach every part of the theatre necessary.

It is claimed that this is the first time any loud speaking apparatus has been put to this novel use. It is predicted that this electrical amplifier will soon supplant the megaphone, which has been used by theatrical directors in the past.

Western Theatres Reopen

The Liberty theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., reopened a few weeks ago with feature pictures as the policy. The Liberty formerly housed tabloids and dramatic stock companies. Business is reported to be very good.

The Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mo., has been reopened under the new management of S. E. Wihoit with a picture policy. The theatre has been completely remodeled and some new equipments installed to make it a strictly up-to-date picture house.

The Howland theatre, Pontiac, Mich., formerly the Rialto, controlled by the Kleist Amusement Enterprises, was recently reopened to a very pleasing business after being closed during the summer months. Many new and important improvements have been made with new equipment installed.

Very extensive improvements in decoration and equipment are now under way at the Richmond theatre at North Adams, Mass. B. F. Taylor is the new manager and he is a real live wire in the show business.

The Garden City Amusement Co., Garden City, Kansas, has purchased the Garden and Electric theatre in this city. New equipment has been installed at the Garden theatre and other important improvements have taken place to make this one of the finest theatres in this part of the State.—Trout.

Chicago Equipment Dealers Meet

Both active and associate members of the Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America attended a dinner given by the Chicago local group, at the Morrison Hotel, at which questions that affect the material interests of both classes of membership were to be discussed. Distributors and dealers of Chicago meet every Friday at a luncheon and it is planned to hold a dinner on the last Friday of each month, beginning with September. C. H. Fulton is chairman of the local group, which is aiming to build up a profitable and pleasant relationship between manufacturers and distributors of Chicago.

comfort and commodiousness of the theatre and the quality of entertainment which it will consistently present. At the Saturday matinees prices will be: Adults 25c for any seat in the house up to 5 P. M., children 20c. Nights and holiday matinees: Orchestra, aducts 40c, children 30c; balcony, adults 25c, children 20c. All prices include the war tax and none will be varied regardless of the magnitude of the feature projected upon the screen.

The Ambassador Grand Orchestra of twenty solo artists will be under the conductorship of Mr. Dailey Alart, who, in addition to being a violinist and pianist, has two light opera scores and many symphonic and lighter concert forms for full orchestra to his credit. Mr. Alart has served in the capacity of musical director in many of the most representative theatres in this country and Canada. His concert master and assistant conductor will be James N. Nash, who formerly served in the same capacity at the Portola theatre in San Francisco. In addition to the splendid orchestra, the Ambassador is equipped with a mammoth triple-manual pipe organ.

The Ambassador will be ventilated by the latest model of Typhoon Cooling System. The Crandall chain, which, with the addition of the Ambassador and the Tivoli, under construction at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, will number ten houses of the first rank in Washington and five outside.

The new Ambassador will be under the resident managership of Robert Etris, with Paul Hurney serving as assistant manager.

The Ambassador will have a total seating capacity of approximately 1,800 and is unique in that there are no boxes on either floor. The completed, equipped and furnished theatre represents a total cost of about $500,000.

El Monte "Rialto" Latest in Construction

THE recent opening of the new Rialto theatre at El Monte, Cal., by A. L. Sanborn, owner and manager, gave El Monte a theatre of extraordinary construction. The auditorium is lighted with an indirect system, the decorations on the side walls symbolizing ancient Egypt, each panel bearing a different design. The ceiling is designed is a concrete beamed effect. The stage curtains, carpets and draperies are all rich in color and in harmony with the theatre. The stage is constructed so as to allow full height for scenic effects and equipped with a complete stage apparatus for handling of all classes of entertainments. Electrical equipment includes large Kleigel stage pockets for obtaining flood and spot lighting effects. The typhoon ventilating system is operated and controlled from the stage. The electric wiring system is of the most modern type, and the multicolored light effects are controlled from a specially constructed switchboard eight feet in length and operated by one man, special dimming equipment allowing the use of a wide range of lighting effects.

PRINTS THAT LAST

THE condition of a print after it has been projected reflects the care with which it has been made in the laboratory. Photographic excellence, while the first essential, is not the only thing to look for in first class prints. Distributors and exhibitors have a right to expect durability as well. A poor print of a good picture does no one any good.

STANDARD PRINTS are not only better photographically. They stand up under hard usage. The scientific process by which they are made and the care taken in every phase of their creation give them longer life. Some of the industry's leading producers realize this and their work goes through STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES from camera to screen. They have found distributors and exhibitors better satisfied with STANDARD PRINTS.

Whirling to the Front!

"THE Spanish Dancer", Paramount's first picture to be sold under the new demonstration policy, opened last Sunday at the Rivoli, New York, and Grauman's Rialto, Los Angeles.

On the opening day at the Rivoli, 9,033 people flocked to "The Spanish Dancer". (8,939 people attended the opening of "Manslaughter", a huge success, at the same theatre.) Business has continued at absolute capacity all week.

At Grauman's Rialto they've had to turn part of the crowds away.

This is the first proven evidence that "The Spanish Dancer" is a box-office hit. Watch the news from the other demonstration points.

"The Drivin' Fool"— with Wally Van and Patsy Ruth Miller

(Hodk., Sept. 15; 5,700 ft.; 66 to 81 min.)

This light romance-drama possesses all the elements that bid for audience appeal—fast action, spills, thrills, and a break-neck motor trip, state by state, from Oakland, Cal., to New York. Wally Van plays the title role, the Drivin' Fool; the part seems made for him:—

The father of the hero and that of the heroine are business partners. A critical business exigency arises which makes necessary the delivery in New York by a certain date of a large check. A railroad strike, just called, makes mail delivery through the regular channels an impossibility. The hero offers to drive his roadster across the continent to deliver the check and save his father's firm from going to the wall. The company to whom the check was payable are a shyster outfit, hoping the check will be forfeited so that they may take over the company, their real objective. But the hero manages to buck at every turn the various efforts of their "dirty-worker" to block his trans-continental progress. He arrives on time, intact, and delivers the check.

"The Drivin' Fool" should please well and all.

"The Drivin' Fool"

Good, Snappy Entertainment in Hodkinson Picture Starring Wally Van

Reviewed by Mary Kelly

Auto racing fans will be most pleased with this. Wally Van returns after a long absence from the screen in a speed picture of more than usual interest. The thrills, action and comedy should get any audience.

From San Francisco to New York in six days is the hero's stunt. The cross-country race has moments of great suspense and many incidents that will keep one amused. A business rival who opposes the trip arranges all sorts of delays, all of which the hero smilingly surmounts—after a bit of lively action.

Wally Van is an extremely likable actor and perfectly suited to this part. His is a live-wire performance that never allows your attention to lag. A good comedy angle is added when the colored garage boy joins forces with him for protection, and proves an adhesive companion for the rest of the journey. Patsy Ruth Miller is attractive as the girl who stays behind and proudly marks off her sweetheart's progress. Alec B. Francis and Ramsey Wallace are good in less important roles. The picture will please because no footage is wasted, and the general spirit of it is unusually congenial and entertaining.

Story

Hal Locke is rejected by his sweetheart's father-in-law, Moorehead, because he spends all his time breaking speed records. Suddenly this fault becomes a talent when Moorehead discovers that an important check, safeguarding all his business interests, has been delayed in malling. The railroads are tied up by a strike, so Henry takes the long cross-country ride, promising to have the check in New York within six days. He succeeds—after no end of excitement and delay.

SPECIAL CAST IN

THE DRIVING FOOL

(HODKINSON)

Delightful entertainment is this breezy drama of a cross-country auto race. It is fast moving, contains a good comedy element, and generally proves quite pleasing and interest absorbing. Adapted by H. H. Van Loan from a story by W. H. Sturm, and directed by Robert Thornby. Six reels.

Here is a snappy little picture that will adorn any screen to satisfaction. A story of a cross-country drive by automobile, which might readily have proved tiresome under less capable direction, the entire journey here is most delightfully pictured. There isn't a dull moment from the start of the race to the exciting finish, a series of amusing incidents keeping interest at a high pitch.

The story tells of Hal Locke, whose father Henry Locke and Howard Grayson operate the Golden Gate Packing Company. Young Locke is in love with Grayson's daughter but when he suggests that her father accept him for a son-in-law he is emphatically turned down with the explanation that as long as he continues to jeopardize his life and be arrested every other day for speeding he hasn't a chance.

There comes a day when the packing company has a note due in New York which must be promptly cancelled. There is a big storm and transportation is tied up most of the way between San Francisco and New York. Young Locke volunteers to drive the distance, have the note cancelled and save the firm from ruin. Then starts a most interesting cross-country drive, with his father's enemies trying to keep him from reaching his destination on time. Hal picks up a negro garage keeper on the way who accompanies him and between the two they lead their pursuers a merry chase.

There is a happy and humorous ending in the East when Hal reaches his goal after having driven for about a week without any sleep.

"The Drivin' Fool"

Producer: Regent Pictures Corp.
Distributor: Hodkinson

As a Whole.....A LIVELY ENTERTAINMENT THAT GOES ALONG AT A GREAT PACE IN CROSS COUNTRY AUTO TRIP; A SURE-FIRE NUMBER THAT HAS PEP AND GOOD HUMOR.

Players.....Wally Van, featured in role of speed maniac. Van gives fine performance and will be well liked for his thoroughly good natured manner. Jesse J. Aldriche, the colored Cupid, helps along the comedy business. Patsy Ruth Miller, a pretty heroine. Alec B. Francis and Wilton Taylor, two typical "Governors."

Type of Story....Not a lot to it but it's there several different ways. Everyone will like it. It has action, thrills, comedy, romance—in fact everything that makes for sure-fire entertainment. There is considerable novelty in the idea of picturing the course of the cross country trip and it has been splendidly done.

Hero with speed mania agrees to deliver check in New York with seven days to get there from San Francisco, by automobile. His success in the venture offers laughs and thrills.

Box Office Angle.....Looks very promising. Your folks will like this one very well. It's just a right good entertainment, well worth your consideration and exploitation. The receipts should prove completely satisfying.

Exploitation....Get your hands on this one and then go after the business. If your folks appreciate a snappy, bright, clean and amusing picture, here it is. "The Drivin' Fool" is one of the best automobile pictures that has yet been made. There is genuine excitement in the cross country race and the idea of following the course, both on a map, and by indication in the subtitles, makes it the more interesting and real.

You can make promises for the action and thrills. Tell them hero makes New York in seven days, from the time he goes across San Francisco Bay on the ferry until he crosses the Jersey ferry to New York and lands in Wall St.,

The Drivin' Fool

(Regent-Hodkinson—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS one will recall to mind Wally Reid's auto stories—most of which were fashioned by Byron Morgan. The main situations are nearly identical, though the characters are cut from a different mould. For one thing the heroine's father is not a crochety old man though he does object to the speed fiend becoming his son-in-law until he settles down and gives up stepping on the gas.

Wally Van, who plays the title role, does not take his work as easy as the late lamented star. He is as quick and nervous in his walk and gestures as when he played in "Love, Luck and Gasoline" many years ago. Yet he is admirably suited for the role once he hops into the car and makes his wild flight across the continent to deliver a certified check to the Wall Street sharks. There is a reason for the mad dash—the trains are not running.

It's an easy story to follow, obvious always, nevertheless, it quickens the pulse as the car hits off for Carson, Reno, Cheyenne, Omaha and points East. One may wonder that the villain—a henchman of the oily financiers—is able to throw obstacles in his path. Certainly he seems to have a large clientele among highwaymen and crooked garage keepers.

The fore part of the picture reveals Wally having an easy time avoiding work and receiving summons to appear in court. But the ride saves the feature and gives it the necessary punch. The flight is shown against good backgrounds—and one shot showing the speed fiend and his colored mechanician stalled in the snowdrifts of the Rockies is punctuated with thrills.

As is natural with this type of story the hero reaches his destination barely in the nick of time. But he saves his dad and the latter's partner—the girl's father—from financial ruin. And, of course, is accepted as a good prospect for a son-in-law. The plot is well put together and kicks up plenty of dust and should prove enjoyable everywhere.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The pep and ginger of the mad ride across country. The thrills attendant upon the obstacles placed in path of speed fiend. The suspense. The effective backgrounds. The lively incident. Good scenario and titles.

DIRECTION. Keeps it ever moving with good suspense. Lightens the monotony of mad dash with good incident and thrills—and by flashing to "straight" scenes. Never slackens the speed. Makes the wild flight look genuine. Furnishes some adequate comedy.

SUMMARY. A moving story of a speed fiend cut after a familiar pattern, but which is pepped up with breezy incident. Implausible in its villainy. Should draw well most everywhere.

New York Times

"Every player in the cast has done his bit to make this the best photoplay of its kind that has ever been produced...Here is a photoplay that shows the dawn of a new era in the motion picture world."

New York American

"Thrills, beauty, drama and tense appeal predominate in 'The Green Goddess'. It is a magnificent production and the sort that is at its best on the screen....It is a vital, gripping play."

New York Daily News

"A motion picture production outdoing by far anything that has come before in the screen careers of George Arliss, the inimitable, and Alice Joyce, the beautiful."

New York Tribune

"'The Green Goddess' on the screen is much more effective, it seems to us, than ever it was on the stage...We found the direction without a flaw... The cast is perfect."

New York Evening Post

"It is a delight to watch him, for even though there really are a few good actors before the camera to-day, George Arliss easily tops them all."

New York Herald

"There is one glorious moment that is calculated to pull the audience out of its seats wherever 'The Green Goddess' is shown."

New York Journal

"'The Green Goddess' is a film that might be called an epic of photoplays...Every scene had its thrill....Mr. Arliss proves he well deserves the praise lavished upon his acting."

James W. Dean, N. E. A. Syndicate

"'The Green Goddess' is a superb photoplay. It is my humble but unreserved opinion that Arliss is the greatest living actor."

New York Morning Telegraph

"One of the most thoroughly worthwhile pictures that has been given to us this year."

"Poodles" does good work, including some clever acrobatic work * * * His attempts to hang a hammock should cause a young riot with the average audience. It is a scream.—

"One Comedy No Exhibitor Can Afford to Overlook"

Roger Ferri in MOTION PICTURE NEWS

"Poodles" Hannaford, for years one of the most famous mimics that clowned at the New York Hippodrome, has finally invaded the screen, and the latter can be thankful that he has, for he is an artist in every sense of the word. Tuxedo Comedies signed him for a series of two-reel comedies that Educational will release. "Front!" is the first. And it is a wow. It is one of the truly funniest comedies it has been the pleasure of this writer to see. Here is a clown who can be funny without the utilization of age-worn tactics. He is original. Any comic who can have his back turned to his audience for a couple of hundred feet and hold attention is worthy of being watched, for he is a comer. "Poodles" does just that.

Clowning on the stage and screen are two different things. But "Poodles" is funnier on the silver sheet than he was back of the footlights, and if you know "Poodles"—and who is there who doesn't?—you can draw your own conclusions as to his maximum value as a comedian. In "Front!" Hannaford * * * * does every bit with a finished artistry that puts him in a class by himself. This writer just roared with laughter all through the unreeling of "Front!" And as we write these lines, bearing in mind some of the stunts that we enjoyed so immensely, we cannot keep a smile off our face. "Poodles" doesn't overlook an opportunity. He is surrounded with a good cast. The chap who plays the clerk—we wish we had his name—is superb. He is a Frank Bacon—Lightnin' Bill type. When he and "Poodles" get together, hilarious stunts follow that make you laugh until your sides ache. Here's one comedy that no exhibitor can afford to overlook.

"Don't Let It Pass"

FILM DAILY

A thoroughly entertaining number * * * it's a very good comedy and will bring the laughs. You can bank on this one to send your folks out smiling. Don't let it pass.

"An extremely good picture — and a 'good' picture is one that proves a winning box-office attraction, makes a successful bid for popularity, and enables theatre owners to hang out the S. R. O. sign. The indications are 'The White Rose' meets all these requirements." — G. T. Pardy, Trade Review.

"It is a box-office attraction. It has a pretty, happy ending, essential to box-office success. It has suspense and pathos; it tugs at the heart strings; it has the wholesome, sweet kisses; ardent love-making and intense loves that pull mere mortals into the theatre." — McLellan, Trade Review.

"To sum up, 'The White Rose' is a typical Griffith production, having an intensely sympathetic story, one close to home, and with a happy ending; and because of its tremendous heart interest and superb acting should prove a superior box-office attraction."—M. P. World.

"A dramatic gem. Should prove a big box-office attraction for any theatre. Mae Marsh does the best work of her entire career."—Exhibitors Herald.

Look Out! Women are on the Jury!

AMERICAN women through the box office have given their verdict for the Leah Baird type of motion picture.

They are being attracted to the screen in ever increasing numbers because of the miracle making women whose gripping life stories are daringly and fascinatingly portrayed in all Leah Baird films.

The gifted star has never had a greater story of adventure and romance and sacrifice than is furnished by her new photoplay, "The Miracle Makers."

It is another of those stirring pictures that made Fred S. Meyer of the Palace Theatre at Hamilton, Ohio, report to Exhibitors Herald:

> "After five days of starvation on 'The Three Musketeers,' along comes this Leah Baird picture and does a mighty good business for the next two days of the week. Box office returns simply show we don't know a thing about pictures when we see them. GRAB IT!"

Exhibitors everywhere are learning about Leah Baird's drawing power.

Ask Cornwell of the Del Monte, St. Louis.

Ask Libson, of the Lyric, Cincinnati.

URITAN PASSIONS"

"THE SCARECROW"
OSGOOD PERKINS

A brilliant musical accompaniment, interpretative of the entire story as told on the screen, has been prepared by the eminent composer, Frederick Shepherd Converse. This is the first time in the history of the cinema that a complete original musical composition has been written for a feature photoplay.

Even now, her heart told her that it was not love that drew her to this handsome, young nobleman. Yet what was the secret of the spell he had so quickly and mysteriously cast over her?

Chuckling as he worked, his deft and nimble fingers soon shaped the pumpkin into the face of a man. When, wonder of wonders! the eyes blinked, the lips parted, and a wisp of smoke came from the pipe.

Creation of Marked Individuality!

Everything is so entirely new and novel and never-to-be-forgotten in this epoch-making picture that it will create discussion among all who see it, both young and old alike. This word of mouth advertising is what all producers seek but few ever find for their pictures.

Make no mistake

GLENN HUNTER in "PURITAN PASSIONS" will be talked about and that will mean big business at the box office.

There is a destiny with pictures ~

the same as with men. Some are bound to succeed. Such a picture is "Puritan Passions." Everybody who has seen it says so—critical critics, experienced exhibitors, shrewd showmen. The premiere in a small New England town, where $3.00 a seat was charged and the theatre was packed to the doors, demonstrated its remarkable drawing powers.

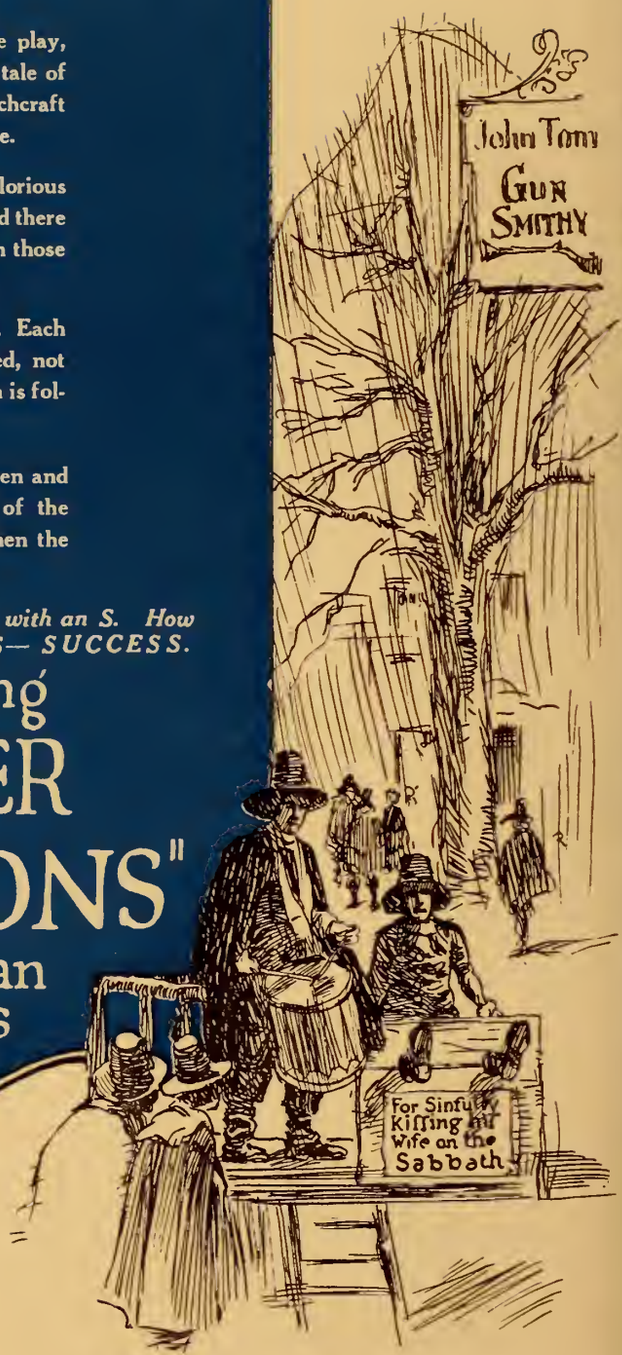
Some of the reasons for this are plainly evident:

The STAR — Glenn Hunter, the best known, most liked, and by long odds, highest gifted young actor on the American stage today. Witness his "Merton of the Movies."

The STORY — Based upon Percy Mackaye's brilliant stage play, "The Scarecrow." A whimsical, wondrous tale of love, with intrigue, sin, adventure and witchcraft for a background in quaint old Salem Towne.

The SCENES — All placed where the forefathers of this glorious land of ours had their trials and triumphs, and there are no more engrossing pages in history than those which tell of the early days of the Puritans.

The SITUATIONS — Unlike any ever shown on the screen before. Each one entirely unexpected. You sit entranced, not daring to move, as every interesting situation is followed by another even more interesting.



The SUSPENSE — It starts with the very first flash on the screen and grows greater and greater until the end of the story. There is not one single moment when the suspense lags or disappears.

Of course it has been noticed that every element mentioned begins with an S. How else then can the result be spelled than by a word with another S— SUCCESS.

Unless all signs are wrong

GLENN HUNTER in "PURITAN PASSIONS" is destined to achieve an unprecedented success

You Can Play This Against the Best of Them

In the face of the most intense Sunday competition New York has seen in years, with twenty legitimate shows running benefit performances, "The Bad Man" demonstrated that it must be placed among the big money makers of the year.

Harriett Underhill said in the New York Tribune: "Those who did not see it as a play will be delighted with it and those that did see it will not be disappointed in the picture. Yes, 'The Bad Man' might be called a screen triumph."

Quinn Martin in the World said: "It attracted bumper crowds and it sent them away almost unanimously happy. 'The Bad Man' in pictures is one of the best examples of sane transference of a stage play to the screen which we have seen, and the picture is distinctly worthy of the large patronage which it apparently is going to enjoy."

New York Times says: "There is hardly a better example of filming a play than 'The Bad Man.' It provokes a constant chuckle. Edwin Carewe, the director deserves great praise for the clever and restrained manner in which he has handled this splendid production. It is a picture which sends one away joking about the lingo of the Bad Man."

It's Tremendous!

Exhibitors! Have you read "Flaming Youth"? Get it and you will understand why it is the sensation of the country today. Read it and you will see why the screen play will be the Greatest Box-Office Attraction This Year Has Brought Forth.

Never has such a fearless story been published about the women of modern society. Never has there been a picture which, when announced in your lights, had such an impatient mass of ticket buyers waiting for your doors to open.

The byword today is: "Have you read 'Flaming Youth'?" The byword tomorrow will be: "Have you seen 'Flaming Youth'?"

This picture will have behind it the most powerful money-making force the world has ever known—

The Public First

THE recent uproar about high production costs does not seem to us of the highest importance.

It is not conclusive; it does not settle the big problems facing the business.

If the airing of such a discussion will pump some actual facts about the business into the heads of that class of directors who prefer to believe the wild gossip of the trade and whose ambition it is to achieve a name at any cost, it will have done good.

On the other hand, it is apt to give the exhibitor in general a wrong slant on the real motion picture situation.

If there is one general and big mistake made by the trade it is forgetfulness of the public.

There is just one great force that rules us all and moulds our growth and that is the box-office.

We cater to the public and by the measure of our success we rise or fall. But generally the three main branches of the industry think they cater to each other.

The public must be considered first.

Now the public wants the finer motion picture. There is no argument about that.

And the producer is making his best efforts to produce for this public taste.

And with success. We are all ready to admit that never before has a season opened with such markedly superior pictures and with the promise of so many more to come. Production all along the line is revamping itself to meet the new picture demand.

The point now—and this it seems to us is the one about which discussion should center—is this: distribution and exploitation and exhibition must also be revamped to unite successfully so that these new kind of pictures may be brought to the public with profit to all concerned.

The new kind of picture has got to have a new kind of distribution, exploitation and presentation.

It is not to be thought of, it is utterly impractical to shackle the special picture—if we may so designate it—with trade policies that were devised for program pictures.

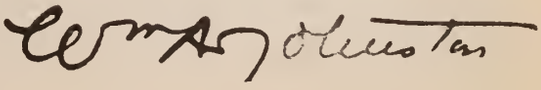
When Fairbanks makes a "Robin Hood" he deserves every dollar such a picture can earn for him. Otherwise there will be no more Robin Hoods produced.

But, on the other hand, it is wrong that the efficient exhibitor should not play such a picture at a profit.



If he doesn't, then the trouble lies with the rental policy or with the exploitation. It doesn't rest with the production cost of "Robin Hood."

We have an idea that this trade is going to change mightily this year. And it is going to change in its effort to meet the marketing requirements of the new kind of picture—the kind the public wants.

We are going to have new kinds of theatre programs and runs, new methods of selling—and above all new exploitation.

Which simply means that we must tell the public—all the public—about these new and better pictures, show them in a befitting manner and give the exhibitor a run for his rental money.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

ONE of the brightest farce-comedies which has flashed across the screen in a season or three is Associated Exhibitors' "Going Up." It is rare that a musical comedy carries enough substance to linger through five reels since in its original shape most of its highlights rely upon words and music—not forgetting the girls.

Fortunately, "Going Up," before it became a musical comedy, was a highly interesting farce-comedy, "The Aviator." Thus fortified with good material the director has not neglected to keep it sparkling with action, incident and humor. There is no over-stressing of situations or emotions. The players act their parts in correct farcical manner—which is to be serious in every expression and gesture.

It is smart, humorous, moving and to the point. It proves beyond a doubt that farce can be recorded on the screen. Incidentally, "Going Up" will get over with any audience because it has been treated with simple, direct touches—with emphasis always on the humor.

DISTINCTIVE has received information from a reliable and authentic source that its star, George Arliss, is to be knighted by the British Government in the very near future. At the present time, Mr. Arliss is appearing with success in the stage version of William Archer's "The Green Goddess," in London, and in the film version throughout the United States.

The late Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree was the last possessor of a baronetcy to appear in moving pictures made in America, but he was distinctly an English product.

George Arliss, on the other hand, has attained his high rank through his association with the American stage and screen—and if the reports are correct he will be the first Englishman to be knighted for his achievements in the States. Upon the completion of "The Green Goddess" in England, the star will return to New York to make another photoplay for Distinctive.

THREE pictures, "Ashes of Vengeance" (First National), "The Bad Man" (First National) and "A Lady of Quality" (Universal), have been favored with the National Board of Review's well known asterisk for the week ending October the sixth.

SO much discredit has been cast on the reality of scenes by various magazines and newspaper writers that theatre owners have complained that their patrons did not believe any scene in any picture was legitimately photographed—that is without "doctoring."

In order to discount this belief that no scenes are legitimate the leading producers have decided to invite the public to view the shooting of big scenes where their presence does not interfere with the work, and this policy is being first put into effect with the larger spectacular episodes for D. W. Griffith's next production, "America."

That the public is interested may be gleaned from the fact that galleries varying from 1,000 to 15,000 have followed the action day by day.

SOMETHING new in advertising signs is promised for the Great White Way within the next few weeks. And Famous Players, who were responsible for "The Covered Wagon" sign which covers most of the Criterion theatre, will sponsor the new one which will attract attention toward "The Ten Commandments."

It is to be placed on the front of the Putnam Building as a part of the advance campaign for the production which is to follow "The Covered Wagon" at the Criterion next Spring.

Two tremendous figures, the full height of the building, are to be placed at the 43rd and 44th street corners, one of Moses with the Commandments, and the other representing a modern woman.

The sign is to be the biggest ever used to exploit a picture on Broadway.

CHARLES RAY has returned to the spoken drama in a stage version of his picture, "The Girl I Loved," founded upon the poem by James Whitcomb Riley. The star gave his premiere performance in the stage presentation of the poem at the Spreckels theatre, San Diego, Calif., last Monday evening.

S. R. KENT, general manager in charge of distribution for Famous Players, is not a man who indulges in superlatives, nor does he give expression to enthusiastic praises unless the subject which meets with his approval merits them.

He considers "The Ten Commandments" the biggest contribution to the motion picture industry. After witnessing a screening of the production he voices his opinion that it is Cecil B. DeMille's personal triumph and his everlasting monument.

In his telegram to Adolph Zukor he states that "nothing that will be done in the future can rival this story, based upon solid truth and fact."

"You wouldn't take a check for five million today and give up this picture," Mr. Kent wired. "It is more powerful than the League of Nations and will be used by statesmen, by diplomats, by Christian ministers, and by missionaries to spread something that the human voice and the human agency have up to now failed in. If 'The Ten Commandments' doesn't gross ten million dollars or more it will be because the world is hopeless and because the majority of human beings are not good."

THE two foremost German screen actors, Emil Jannings Werner Kraus, have left the land of the mark to pursue dollars in America. They will take up residence in Hollywood. Meanwhile many American actors and actresses have embarked or will soon embark for European, Asiatic or African ports of entry. Edwin Carewe is taking a company to Morocco—a company including Bert Lytell, Montagu Love, Walter McGrail, Claire Windsor, Teddy Sampson and Rosemary Theby. Lillian and Dorothy Gish will set sail for Italy very shortly—and Richard Barthelmess will follow them across the ocean before many weeks have passed.

TOM GALLERY and his wife, Zazu Pitts, who have been in New York for several weeks, will depart the last of the week for Hollywood. The Gallerys have looked over the best Broadway hits and will remain in Gotham long enough to take in a couple of the World Series' games.

* * *

BABY PEGGY is scheduled to arrive in New York within the next ten days—which, incidentally, will mark the first time in her short but meteoric career that she has visited Gotham. She will be the guest of Irving M. Lesser of Principal Pictures during her several weeks stay in the East. Immediately upon her return to Los Angeles, she will be engaged in the production of the first of her series of features for Principal—all of which will be in feature length, adapted from well known books.

It is officially stated that the youngest star on the screen will not make any personal appearances in connection with any films in which she has played during her New York stay, although if time permits she may visit some of the important cities in the East and pay her respects to her admirers who are anxious to see her in the flesh.

CHARLES CHAPLIN, the new dramatic director and a young man not unknown as a comedian of parts, was the guest of honor at the A. M. P. A. luncheon last Thursday. The author, director and producer of "A Woman of Paris," who can also talk upon provocation, gave some interesting comment concerning the production of the picture which is destined to revolutionize screen technique.

It was a most enjoyable occasion and the members of the A. M. P. A. and their guests voted Chaplin as gifted a talker as he is a comedian and director.

PETER MILNE, who has been in Hollywood for several months writing continuity, has returned to New York. When asked the popular question ("How do you like Southern California?") hurled at him by our own inquiring reporter, he retorted with: "Why do you stay in the East?"

THE programs at Hugo Riesenfeld's theatres have recently been converted into miniature fan magazines. The "Rivoli Times" and "Rialto Times," as they are called, offer interesting sidelights on the screen world. They keep the public informed on new pictures that are being made, eminent authors who have migrated to Hollywood and new stars that have come under the spotlight of the films. These condensed magazines have established a large circulation with the patrons of the Rivoli and Rialto—and are edited in a compact fashion so that he who runs may read them.

TEX RICKARD, the fight promoter; Joe Humphreys, the silver tongued announcer; Jack Gallagher, who refereed the Dempsey-Firpo battle; Damon Runyon, sport writer, and scores of professional fighters who do their training in Madison Square Garden, have just made their debut as regular film actors and will soon be seen in "Cain and Mabel," one of H. C. Witwer's popular fight stories which Cosmopolitan is producing. The screen luminaries include Anita Stewart, T. Roy Barnes and Oscar Shaw. Tammany Young, the world's champion gate-crasher, whose rights, including the Scandinavian, have never been disputed by any ticket taker, has crashed his way into the picture and will register some of the fight atmosphere.

SAM WARNER'S champion Great Dane, "Props," won a silver cup and several blue ribbons at a recent California dog show.

EMORY JOHNSON and his wife (Ella Hall) were guests of honor at a luncheon tendered by F.B.O. officials at the Hotel Astor on Wednesday. In attendance were exhibitors and representatives of the trade and daily press.

Mr. Johnson made a pleasing speech, the keynote of which was that he tried to make pictures that would appeal to the masses—pictures that were "humble." And there was ample testimony that he had succeeded. Bernard Edelhertz, of the Board of Directors of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, testified to the high box-office value of the Johnson pictures. A cordial word of appreciation was also voiced by Ada Patterson, famous special writer. Nat G. Rothstein presided as toastmaster in a very capable and clever manner. Mr. Johnson's latest picture for F.B.O. is "The Mail Man."

AFTER a run of several weeks, "Little Old New York," will leave the Cosmopolitan theatre (which was its premier production) shortly, to be replaced by Cosmopolitan's attraction, "Unseeing Eyes," a picturization of Arthur Stringer's popular story, "Snow Blind." The engagement will be of definite duration, says the announcement.

In making scenes in the vicinity of the Canadian Rockies—which form the background of the film—the "Unseeing Eyes" company achieved several new and distinct records in photoplay production. For the first time in the making of a picture of the Canadian Northwest, aeroplanes play a predominant part and through their medium the new feature is said to have the most picturesque scenes of the wide open spaces that have ever been recorded on the screen.

The players include Lionel Barrymore, Seena Owen, Louis Wolheim, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Paul Panzer and Walter Miller. E. H. Griffith directed from a scenario by Bayard Veiller and Joseph Urban designed the interior settings. Victor Herbert and his orchestra will continue at the Cosmopolitan and will be a special attraction for the run of the picture.

"Little Old New York" is in the second week of an indefinite run at the California theatre, and at the Empire theatre, London, where it is playing its eighth week. The next big opening for the Marion Davies picture is at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago, where it begins an indefinite engagement on October 15th. Engagements in all the key cities will follow.

THE Juliet gossip is very much abroad these days. Shakespeare's immortal heroine who was ushered into the shadow world a few years ago by Theda Bara and Beverly Bayne may be enacted by Mary Pickford or it is possible that Norma Talmadge will play the love-sick daughter of the Capulets.

PAUL TERRY, the creator of "Aesop's Film Fables," spent a recent week-end at a small town in New Jersey. Saturday night the director-cartoonist wandered downtown in search of a picture show hoping that perchance he might see one of his creations. Stopping to buy a paper, Paul said to the newsboy:

"Sonny, can you direct me to a movie?"

"Yes, sir, for a quarter!" responded the boy.

"Isn't that rather high pay, sonny?" asked Terry.

"No, sir," piped the newsie, "not for a Movie director!"

Paul patted the boy on the back and handed him a dollar.

JESSE L. LASKY has returned to the West Coast studio after having spent a vacation in the heart of Wild Horse Mesa, Arizona, 800 miles from the nearest motion picture studio, 150 miles from a railway and 10,000 feet above the sea.

Mr. Lasky was the guest of Zane Grey, novelist and sportsman, who organized the expedition. Included in the party was Lucien Hubbard, Paramount production editor, and several cameramen and packers; the party comprised eight men and 20 horses. They were entirely out of touch with civilization for three weeks.

Arkansas M. P. T. O. in Lively Session

Most Beneficial Convention in History of Organization Decides Many Problems

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas concluded one of the most beneficial conventions in the organization's history, in Little Rock on October first. Eli Whitney Collins, of Jonesboro, who has served as president for the last year, was re-elected to succeed himself. O. C. Hauber of Pine Bluff was re-elected as secretary-treasurer with H. D. Wharton, of Warren, being continued as vice-president. The executive board selected was as follows: E. C. Robertson, Fayetteville; John A. Collins, Paragould; D. E. Fitten, Harrison, W. L. Landers, Batesville; F. B. Smith, Stuttgart; C. A. Lick, Fort Smith; E. H. Butler, Russellville; Wm. A. May, Little Rock; and L. F. Haven, Forest City.

The convention endorsed the actions of the Arkansas delegation at the Chicago convention, the administration of Sydney S. Cohen and the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation. The National Motion Picture Day was also endorsed with every member present signing an agreement to forward to the National organization twenty-five per cent. of the gross receipts on Monday, November 9.

The convention condemned as unfair and inequitable the so-called "uniform" contract and protested its use by exchange in the territory. The Board of Arbitration that has been set up in the various exchanges was also vigorously condemned so long as it operated as at present, with all members of the board being chosen by the exchanges. A resolution was passed stating that all members of the M. P. T. O. Arkansas would favor in all business dealings, those exchanges having no record of having filed claim against an Arkansas exhibitor. The records reveal the fact that only two exchanges have filed any of the fourteen existing claims against exhibitors of the territory.

A Public Service Committee was appointed with W. L. Mack, of Jonesboro, as chairman. A legislative committee to serve during the coming year was also appointed with C. H. McCroskey of Dermott, Senator Walter Raney of McCrory and William A. May of Little Rock as the personnel. This committee immediately got into action on certain adverse legislation then pending in the Senate and quick, reassuring results were obtained.

President Cole of the M. P. T. O. of Texas, was an honored guest and talked constructively on several problems that are shared by theatre owners of his territory and all others. Activity of the legislative committee kept the convention in session until 10 o'clock when adjournment was taken until April, when the usual three-day session, with the attending social activities, will take place. A large percentage of the membership was present, without the slightest evidence appearing during the entire meet that indicated anything but perfect harmony.

Montana Theatre Owners Hold Meeting

Montana motion picture theatre owners and managers held a get-together meeting recently at the Thornton Hotel, Butte. After a banquet a business meeting was held and the men present were invited to give their views on business conditions generally in their respective territory concerning the industry.

Merle Davis, of Butte, is president of the association; Frank Boedecker, of Bozeman, is vice president, and Albert Nadeau, of the Bluebird theatre, of Anaconda, is treasurer. William Woolfall, of Butte, representing the People's theatre, is secretary. The directors are James H. Rowe, E. P. White, and W. Hartwig.

County Licenses Required for K. C. Theatres

County licenses are required for theatres in Kansas City, it was decided last week when A. M. Eisner, president of the M.P.T.O. of Kansas City appeared in a test case before Justice James J. Shepard in the County Court. Mr. Eisner was fined fifty dollars for violating the order which required county licenses.

As president of the association, Mr. Eisner made his case an example.

Paramount Secures Injunction Against "Covered Wagon" Infringement

THAT the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is determined to protect the title, "The Covered Wagon," from infringement is evidenced by a permanent injunction just issued by Judge Rossman of the Circuit Court of Multnomah County, Oregon, against Jesse Sill, J. C. Cook and James C. McClellan, owners and distributors of a picture called "The Trail of the Covered Wagon." By the terms of Judge Rossman's decree the defendants are permanently restrained from using the words "The Covered Wagon" in the title of any motion picture, whether the title of the picture includes other words or not.

In the original complaint by the Famous Players it was set forth that subsequent to July 5th last, Sill and Cook produced a picture and advertised it and exhibited it throughout the State of Oregon under the name of "The Trail of the Covered Wagon." Bookings for the picture, it was set forth, were made through McClellan. It was alleged by Famous Players that this title deceived the public into believing it was the Paramount picture made from Emerson Hough's novel, with a consequent heavy damage to the value of the original picture in the towns where "The Trail of the Covered Wagon" had been exhibited.

A temporary injunction was obtained from Judge Evans of the Circuit Court of Multnomah County September 13 and the order to show cause why the injunction should not be made permanent came up for hearing October 5. A demurrer filed by the defendants was overruled and, following the hearing of testimony and the trial of the case, the injunction was made permanent. Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was represented by Malarkey, Seabrook and Dibble.

Hearings in F. P.-L. Case to Be Resumed Oct. 22

HEARINGS on the Federal Trade Commission charges in the Famous Players-Lasky case are scheduled to be resumed in New York October 22. It is expected the sessions will last about a week and will mark the close of testimony-taking by the Government.

Robert T. Swain, of counsel for Famous Players, will then seek a thirty day recess, for the gathering of testimony in Atlanta and Philadelphia to be presented in New York. When the evidence is all in, counsel for both sides will submit briefs to the Federal Trade Commission at Washington, and the latter will render its decision.

Crandall's School Classes Resume Sessions

The visual instruction classes of the District public schools were resumed last week in the Crandall residential theatres in Washington. Certain hours on certain days of each week are set apart for the instruction of the school classes through the medium of the screen and motion pictures. Harry M. Crandall has placed all of his residential houses at the disposal of the Board of Education for this purpose. A bulletin to this effect was issued by the school authorities last week.

The visual instruction classes of the Americanization School of the District of Columbia were resumed in the private projection room of Crandall's Metropolitan theatre. The classes will be held regularly throughout the winter under the joint auspices of the Board of Education and the Crandall Public Service and Educational Department, Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director.

Boss' Complaint Against Famous Stands

The original complaint of Joseph C. Boss, against Famous Players on the Sherman anti-trust law was allowed to stand by Federal Judge Learned Hand despite his criticism that it might be overdrawn and exaggerated.

Boss is asking $529,575 damages alleging conspiracy and unfair tactics. He alleges he was compelled to give up the Fotosho theatre in McAlester, Oklahoma, after contracting for Paramount pictures when the Lynch Enterprises, said to be a Famous Players subsidiary, took over the Palace theatre in McAlester. Lynch alleges that 30,000 free tickets were given away by the rival house for distribution through local merchants to customers.

Friends Fear for Safety of Albany Capitol Manager

Robert E. Forbes, resident manager of the new Capitol theatre in Albany, disappeared mysteriously last Thursday and the police departments of nearby cities have failed to locate him.

Friends of the missing man declare he had been suffering for some time from violent headaches and it is feared he may be an amnesia victim. Forbes was last seen at his room in the Ten Eyck hotel Thursday. His theatre accounts are reported correct.

More Opinions on Costs and Values

Film Leaders Give Their Views

PRODUCTION costs and exhibition values continued to be a live topic in the industry this week. Views were expressed by J. R. Grainger, of Goldwyn; Joseph I. Schnitzer, of F. O. B., and H. M. Richey, General Manager of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan.

These opinions are in addition to those printed by MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week from Adolph Zukor, J. D. Williams, Richard A. Rowland, Al Lichtman, Arthur S. Kane, W. C. J. Doolittle, W. W. Hodkinson, and Elmer Pearson.

Said Mr. Grainger:

"No one can deny that production costs are higher today than they ever have been.

"The distributor has to secure greater gross returns than ever before.

"Most of the pictures finished or in production are lavish and more impressive from an audience standpoint than formerly.

"Exhibitors are right to complain about big rentals. Distributors are right to demand them. That's the burden of all buying and selling.

"If the exhibitor can get good productions cheap, he's a wise buyer. If the salesman can get the price that his quota demands he's holding his job.

"Production costs may come down. The market may be overflooded with pictures. Towns may be overseated. Exhibitors may be unsatisfied. Producers may go broke. That's the film business.

"The constant cry from the exhibitor is Big Productions. Talk will never get anywhere."

Schnitzer Gives Opinion

Mr. Schnitzer's views follow:

"Mr. Rowland is certainly not talking through his hat. He has hit the nail squarely on the head. In my judgment, this business is never going to be able to return to the producers the tremendous sums of money which they are now investing in motion picture productions. Speaking on behalf of F. B. O., I want to point out that no such condition exists with us.

"Our pictures are being made at a very nominal cost, and particular effort is being made to select the kinds of stories that lend themselves to exploitation and advertising. We sometimes spend as much (or more) money for our advertising and exploitation campaigns as the negative itself cost, but when we do so it is because the production itself merits this, and there is more than a reasonable possibility of the returns to the exhibitor warranting the kind of a campaign that we put behind the pictures.

"We are making and exploiting pictures on the basis of a cost that will enable the exhibitor to pay us a fair rental for the picture and enable him to make a fair profit after he has shown it. In my judgment, the necessity for spending as much as three, four and five hundred thousand dollars on motion picture productions is all rot. Most of it is represented in waste and is never seen on the screen.

"I should like, some time, to have a director show me where the difference between a production that cost $100,000 and one that cost $150,000 lies. The only explantion he can offer is wasted time. Just because some producer spends a half million dollars on a picture is no reason why it is worth that much, to himself or to the exhibitor. If the distributing agency doesn't gross enough money to allow him the cost of his negative back and a fair margin of profit, the distributor gets all the blame. The producer never stops to think that he never had any earthly right to stick that kind of money into a production.

"This business is founded on its ability to provide entertainment to the masses, at a price that will permit the masses to buy such entertainment. Once in a while a picture can be put out that the public will pay a $2 price to see, but it's the exception and not the general rule.

"As far as F. B. O. is concerned, it is going to provide the best kind of motion pictures at moderate costs. Good entertainment, good values, and at prices that will let the producer, distributor and exhibitor make a fair margin of profit on the money invested.

"I repeat that Mr. Rowland knows what he's talking about, and some of our wild-eyed producers had better beware. A day of reckoning is coming."

Exhibitor Leader Talks

Following is the statement from Mr. Richey:

"Mr. Rowland's statement, for which he is deserving of the congratulations of the entire industry, is particularly opportune at this time of the year.

"Daily, exhibitors who are attempting to buy fall product are asking the question, How can I pay fifty to one hundred per cent increased rentals when my business does not show ten or fifteen per cent increase?

"If there is one thing that will get this business down nearer a business basis than anything else, it will be the elimination of the kidding relative to prices, and that certainly applies to the director, producer and in many cases the theatre owner. If the gross mentioned so many times for a picture, isn't in the country, the producer is not going to get it.

"And, if the exhibitor cannot get the gross out of his community, he either must not try to buy on that basis or if he does receive a visit from that self same sheriff Mr. Rowland mentions."

Washington, D. C., Labor Troubles Finally Settled

AFTER long-protracted negotiations, in the dispute between the Washington, D. C., Theatre Managers Association and the house employees, the conference was adjourned to New York City, where for two days of last week, the ground was gone over, the two labor negotiators and the seven managers finally coming to an amicable decision.

Instead of the 16 to 23 per cent (or more) raises sought by the unions, a net raise of fifteen per cent to the theatre musicians, effective October 1, was granted, accompanied by a flat bonus of one dollar, granted by the managers and accepted by the union conferences. Although the managers would have preferred no raise, the agreement is a victory for them, as they successfully carried their two-year contract contention. The two-weeks' notice clause was retained from previous agreements.

Musicians in the large downtown houses, hitherto drawing fifty dollars a week, will now receive $58.50. Those drawing forty dollars will get from 6 to 8 dollars additional. Although in some quarters it was said that the raise was 17½ per cent to 20 per cent, the actual raise of $8.50 is just barely 17.5 per cent of the fifty dollar basis. Stage hands and other employees will benefit from the negotiated raise.

Stanley Company to Unveil Tablet to Orchestra

The Stanley Company of America is planning a gala event for the evening of October 25. At that time a tablet will be unveiled in the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, in commemoration of the Philadelphia Orchestra, it is announced.

As a mark of appreciation of the Stanley Company in its efforts to raise musical standards in motion picture theatres, the Philadelphia Orchestra numbering 100 men gave a Wagnerian concert in the Stanley theatre on April 25. It was the first time the organization had ever played in a motion picture house.

Appropriate ceremonies will mark the unveiling. The tablet is two feet, five inches by three feet, ten inches. Bureua Brothers were the designers.

Court Will Determine On Picture As Evidence

The Appellate Term of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn will decide whether or not a moving picture is proper evidence in determining a law suit, as a result of a decision handed down in the lower court.

Billy Gibson, a vaudeville performer with one leg, was knocked down by a truck in March, 1922. He was so injured that he could no longer walk with an artificial limb, it was alleged, and was awarded $10,000 damages. A picture used in his vaudeville act showed him with and without the artificial limb. It was held as improper evidence and the appeal consequently made from the decision.

Injunction Permits Showing of "White Rose"

Over the protest of local reformers "The White Rose" is being shown at the Chicago Orpheum under the protection of a court order granted by Judge Wilson in the Circuit Court.

An original permit for the showing was given July 14, but later was revoked when the charge was made that some of the scenes were immoral. A second permit was refused, at which time an injunction was applied for and granted. restraining the Mayor, police and other officials from interfering with the showing.

Col. Varner Will Open Fine New Theatre

Col. Henry B. Varner, of Lexington, N. C., will open his magnificent new Lexington theatre formally on the afternoon of October 15 and is inviting all of his friends to be present and see the "finest theatre between Washington and Atlanta." This marks the si th addition to the chain owned and operated by the Colonel.

Two years ago Colonel Varner declared in a national convention that his motion picture interests were a mere hobby or side line, since his newspaper and other publications were his main source of revenue, declaring that it took all the money he made ont of the newspaper to run his motion picture shows. But he recently sold the Lexington Dispatch and announced that he would devote his entire time to the picture bnsiness.

Children's Performances in Wilmington, N. C.

The Community Service League of Wilmington, N. C., is making plans in co-operation with the Howard-Wells Amusement Company for a series of special performances for children, films to be endorsed by them and advertised as special children's shows. Enlistment of the various educational and welfare organizations and civic clubs of the city in the movement angurs well for the success of the ventnre.

The public school system of the city has pledged their active co-operation to make these special performances a success, as well as the Sorosis, Welfare Leagne, etc. The Howard-Wells interests declare their only desire is to co-operate and that they do not hope to make a profit on the venture.

Loew May Build Several Theatres in St. Louis

Marcus Loew who was in St. Louis on October 3 to inspect the progress of his new theatre building at Eight Street and Washington Avenue anounced that if the project is a success that he will build several other houses in St. Louis.

He further announced that the office and store annex to the Loew State theatre at Eighth Street and Washington Avenue would be eight stories instead of three as originally contemplated. The completed structure will represent an investment of from $2,300,000 to $2,500,000.

However, the altered plans will not be permitted to interfere with work on the theatre which will open about March 1, 1924.

Memphis Theatres Closed on Sunday

FOR the first time since the closing law went into effect, Memphis, Tenn., theatres did not open their doors last Sunday. On the Sunday preceding they were protected by a restraining injunction, which they instituted to prevent enforcement of the closing order. Last Sunday they closed with the determination of remaining closed on Sunday until the matter is fought out. The agitation around the closing law has been keen, and it has now reached the Chancery Court where it will be tried.

The precedent established by a decision rendered as to the constitutionality of the Sunday closing law will effect every State in the Union.

Injunction Is Denied in "Enemies" Case

A SECOND injunction suit in the cont.oversy over the booking of "Enemies of Women" was filed in New York this week. Haring & Blumenthal, members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and owners of the Belmont theatre in the Bronx, filed a complaint against the Elsmere Theatre Operating Co., seeking an injunction to restrain the Elsmere from showing the picture.

Haring & Blumenthal alleged that the Belmont was entitled to "Enemies" because of a prior booking made with Famous Players-Lasky, when the Cosmopolitan product was being released through that concern. The Elsmere booked the picture from Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan.

Arguments were heard on Wednesday before Justice Wagner in the New York County Supreme Court. Joseph A. Warren, of Blauvelt & Warren, the law firm in which Senator James J. Walker is a partner, appeared for Haring & Blumenthal; Nathan Burkan represented William Randolph Hearst; and Gabriel L. Hess appeared for Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan. Justice Wagner denied the injunction.

Musicians and Operators Threaten Walkout

Butte theatrical managers rejected the newly proposed wage scales of the musicians and operators and stage employees, following a conference at the headquarters of the Musicians' union, and unless further negotiations are opened a walkout is threatened.

Merle Davis of the Ansonia Amusement Company and President of the State Motion Picture Theatre Owners; W. J. Sullivan of the Silver Bow Amusement Company, and William Woolfall, representing the People's theatre, met the union committee who were Earle Simmons, Fisher Thompson, Jack Derville, R. J. Cloke, M. M. Moore and Trevor Thomas, representing the Musicians, and Steve Delaney, Charles Franklin, W. A. Kyle, Tom Baskin and Ed Curran of the Operators and Stage Employes. The new scale proposed an increase for side men in orchestras of stock companies to $57.50, also picture and vaudeville houses.

The orchestras have a four hour nightly performance and a two hour matinee on Sunday. Increase is also asked for the leader. Dance musicians are on the war path with the theatre orchestra men. Operators ask for an increase of 30 cents an hour for overtime and five dollars in weekly increase. Butte musicians claim they have always been underpaid according to the scale paid in other places in the jurisdiction of the federation Managers asserted they were unable to meet the demands and all fnrther conferences were called off. The result is a deadlock.

Pathe Awards Fennant Race Prizes

Philadelphia, Portland, Memphis, Des Moines and Salt Lake Sales Winners

THE winners of the Pearson Pennant Race, which extended from April 22nd to September 8th, was announced this week by Pathe. On the basis of business secured during a qualifying period of eight weeks, from April 22nd to June 16th, the thirty-four Pathe exchanges were divided into five leagues, which were in order of merit: The Champion League, National League, American League, Capitol League, and Minor League.

The winning exchanges in each of these five leagues have been announced, together with the branch managers, as follows: (Champion League) Philadelphia, Charles Henschel; (National League) Portland, L. A. Samuelson; (American League) Memphis, Cecil C. Vaughan; (Capitol League) Des Moines, R. S. Ballantyne; (Minor League) Salt Lake City, W. G. Seib.

Heretofore, Pathe sales contests have been held in March or November. Despite the handicap of the summer inactivity, however, the Pearson Pennant Race, in point of volume of business done, has been the most successful event of its kind ever conducted by Pathe.

The results actually achieved in the contest just finished have more than justified the confidence manifested in the Pathe lineup of product. Both in point of the aggregate volume of business secured and the initiative and enterprise put forth by the competing branches the Pearson Pennant Race has easily surpassed any contest of its kind that Pathe has ever conducted.

Extending right up until midnight of Sept. 8th, the struggle for leadership in each of the five leagues has continued with unabated eagerness, the leading positions being so hotly contested that it was not apparent for some days after the finish just who were the wiuners in the different groups.

The personnel of the five winning exchanges, all of whom share in the eight thousand dollars in prizes awarded the victors, are named as follows:

Philadelphia — Branch Manager Charles Henschel; Assistant Manager H. W. Lewis; Booker A. Gottschalk; Cashier Thomas Lark, Jr.; Salesmen P. F. Glenn, P. A. Schmuck, S. H. Hochfeld, G. E. Maillard, and J. R. Lynch.

Portland—Branch Manager L. A. Samuelson; Booker Arthur Grantz; Cashier I. D. Robertson; and Salesman W. C. Green.

Memphis—Branch Manager C. C. Vaughan; Booker G. Joeckle; Cashier C. T. Battle; Salesmen F. R. Dodson and S. A. Arnold.

Des Moines—Branch Manager R. S. Ballantyne; Booker L. Wedertz; Cashier F. C. Anderson; Salesmen R. W. McEwan, N. Amos, and W. H. Strickland.

Salt Lake City—Branch Manager W. C. Seib; Booker R. O. Sanders (and Myrtle Covington, resigned); Cashier R. C. Hansen and Salesman V. Stewart.

First National Gets Big Spectacle

250,000 Cattle Herd Incorporated in Authentic Picture of Passing of West

AMERICAN history was written by motion picture cameras when a quarter of a million head of cattle were driven across the border into Mexico on Monday and Tuesday of this week. The spectacle was filmed by Associated First National Pictures as the basis of an epochal drama of the passing of the west. It is called "Sundown."

Converging from the rim of the Grand Canyon, Flagstaff, Arizona and Columbus, N. M., three mighty herds were concentrated. The scenes photographed by First National are more than a motion picture undertaking. They show the last desperate stand of the cattle-kings to regain the open range from the grasping hand of civilization. For months the cattlemen have been fighting to save their very existence, and the amalgamation of three of the biggest herds in the world for a drive into Mexico has been carried on secretly.

In the dust cloud that lifts from the hoofs of the herd will fade the romance of the west. In short the biggest historical happening in the annals of the plains is being photographed.

Exclusive rights have been granted First National through negotiations conducted between the cattlemen and Earl Hudson, production chief of the producing company. Mr. Hudson himself wove the colorful romance through the event and is supervising the production.

Six aeroplanes were used in getting sky shots of the stampeding herd, a prairie fire and the burning of a complete settlement of homesteaders. In addition to the six cameramen in aeroplanes, twelve other cameramen were rushed from the Coast studios to New Mexico in order to make certain of getting every angle of the stirring spectacle.

It is understood that preparations for these scenes, which were started Monday, have been kept secret because of efforts being made by other producers to secure the same herd of cattle for use in a picture of a similar nature. The privilege has been accorded to First National and every precaution was taken to prevent the unauthorized photographing of scenes by outside cameramen.

A corps of special officers was detailed to patrol the two million dollar ranch during the days required for the making of the picture and any negatives not controlled by First National will be confiscated, it is said.

Among the scenes promised are a stampede of the herd of cattle, the fording of a river and the loss of cattle swept over the falls by a torrent of rushing water; a prairie fire which chokes the Colorado River for miles with cattle seeking an escape from the flames; the burning of a settlement of frame houses and escape of cattlemen and their families threatened alike by flood and flames.

Frances Marion has finished the script for Mr. Hudson's story. Beginning with the unfenced range, it shows the gradual encroachment of civilization of the cattlemen, with herds to feed and the barbed wire entanglements of civilization blocking the advance of hungry animals.

It is a story without a villain. But opposing the cattlemen, will be seen the relentless forces of nature, the embittered battle of the elements.

The national government is expected to cooperate in making the picture and a print will be offered the Smithsonian Institute, as the authentic and indelible record of a glorious page in America's history.

Cruze Will Build Unique Pasadena Playhouse

A syndicate headed by James Cruze, producer of Paramount pictures, is to erect a unique theatre at Pasadena, Cal. It will be a reproduction of an ancient Aztec temple recently unearthed by explorers in the extreme Southern part of Mexico.

The site of the theatre which is to be devoted to the legitimate is at Michigan Boulevard and Woodley Lane, in Flintridge, on the outskirts of Pasadena, and includes five acres of Mr. Cruze's estate immediately adjoining his home. It will represent an outlay of approximately $1,000,000. While Mr. Cruze will retain the controlling interest in the project he will be joined in financing it by several wealthy men of Pasadena, Hollywood and Los Angeles.

Mr. Cruze stated emphatically that he had no intention of transferring his efforts from the screen to the stage.

Shirley Mason Starts "With the Tide"

Shirley Mason is again busy at the William Fox West Coast studios on a new picture. "With the Tide" is its title. It was written by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. The director is David Solomon.

The scenario for "Shadows of the East," a special to be commenced next week at the West Coast studios, has also been completed by Frederick and Fanny Hatton. The story is an adaptation from E. M. Hull's romantic novel of the same name. The play will deal with phases of life in India and the African desert.

Two Added to "Why Men Leave Home" Cast

Helene Chadwick and William V. Mong, are the newest acquisitions to the cast now being assembled to give a screen interpretation of Avery Hopwood's stage success "Why Men Leave Home." The picture is soon to go into production at the Louis B. Mayer studios. John M. Stahl will direct it for First National release.

St. Louis Church Uses Films to Carry Message

ST. JOHN'S Methodist Church, one of the leading Protestant churches of St. Louis, has turned to the movies as a means of carrying the message of the church to the masses. A contract has been signed with the Rothacker Film Company of Chicago to tell in film form the versatile work of the church.

W. K. Kavanaugh and J. W. Fristoe and other leading members of the congregation are behind the movement. The film will be used to stimulate work for the church among other Methodist congregations by showing them what St. John's is doing in St. Louis.

Sunday, October 7, was Go-to-Church Sunday for every department of the congregation, for everywhere the motion picture machine was grinding.

Mother of de Milles Is Dead in Hollywood

Mrs. Beatrice M. de Mille, mother of Cecil B. and William C. De Mille, passed away at her home in Hollywood last Monday following a brief illness. Deceased was the widow of Henry C. de Mille who at one time was associated with David Belasco.

Mrs. de Mille was a resident of Los Angeles for the past eight years and in addition to being among the most successful authors' agents she was prominent in many charitable activities. Funeral services were conducted Tuesday from the Hollywood St. Stephen's Episcopal church.

Three Knickerbocker Suits Are Consolidated

Three suits, lying against the Knickerbocker Theatre Company, as sole defendant for damages arising from the roof collapse, were ordered consolidated last week in District of Columbia Supreme Court by Justice Hoehling. At the same time they were set for trial on October 15. Administrators of the estates of David Lyman and Mary Ann Forsyth sued for death claims; and Miss Mary Young brought suit for alleged injury sustained.

N. Y. Village Has Its First Sunday Pictures

The Union district of Endicott Village, N. Y., had its first Sunday pictures last week when S. Howard Ammerman, manager of the Elvin theatre and former mayor, ran a Sabbath show.

Mr. Ammerman announced his action was prompted by the result of a straw vote, taken in the theatre which resulted overwhelmingly in favor of Sunday pictures. A village ordinance in Endicott proper forbidding Sunday performances has been allowed to remain dormant for two years. Two theatres there are running on Sundays.

Ideal M.P. Day Campaign Mapped Out

Twelve Suggestions to Insure Success of Event Made by E. W. Collins

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Arkansas at its annual convention held at Little Rock on October 1, endorsed the program of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for National Motion Picture Day on November 19th.

A statement from the headquarters of the National Organization quotes a communication from E. W. Collins, re-elected president of the Arkansas body, as follows:

"I have just returned from our convention where we enjoyed a lively session of one day which brought forth results that will, I am sure, prove pleasant to you.

"National Motion Picture Day was unanimously endorsed and was exceedingly well received. I send you herewith my program as mapped out and sent to various members throughout the state."

The campaign mentioned by Mr. Collins consists of twelve suggestions for making National Motion Picture Day an outstanding event in any community, as follows:

(1) See your mayor and endeavor to have him proclaim this day as Motion Picture day in your city.

(2) See the superintendent of your schools, line him up for a talk on "The Relation of the Screen to Education" (about ten minutes).

(3) Book some educational subject as an added attraction on that day and make a reduced rate to all school children.

(4) Advertise the day with every means in your power, calling attention to the fact that your theatre has assisted in popularizing days for other movements, now you want reciprocation.

(5) See your Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis or other civic club and get them to endorse the day, also see your ladies' clubs and line them up.

(6) As a suggestion, you might secure a very old picture of ten or twelve years ago, running it in conjunction with your most modern feature to illustrate the splendid progress that has been made by the industry in these years.

(7) If conditions will permit, secure some liberal minded minister to discuss on the Sunday before the effect of the picture as it relates to religious work.

(8) Get an editorial from your local papers, if you have the necessary influence, dwelling upon the rapid strides made by the industry to date and predicting the expected growth of the future.

(9) Put a slide on your screen NOW calling attention to the date and renew that slide every week with a good selling argument.

(10) Tie up with local advertisers, taking a full page advertisement or a double truck spread, selling small spaces to those merchants for enough to pay for the entire advertisement. Make each merchant's copy mention National Motion Picture Day. Write this copy yourself if you are apt at such things, but in any case, be sure that the copy ties up directly with the day.

(11) Keep your newspapers alive with notes regarding this day and little bits of history of the industry, from this moment on until November 19.

(12) See that your program for that day is an outstanding one and if you are not sure, set it out and book in one you can bank on. Not necessarily a more expensive picture, but one that is good enough to be representative of the day.

Fairbanks Re-Issue Heard in Appellate Court

The Appellate court heard arguments this week on the appeal from the decision of the lower court which refused to grant an injunction against the re-issue of old Douglas Fairbanks five-reelers made by Triangle to two-reelers. Argument was made by Fairbanks lawyers against the re-issue of anything but the original picture. It was further argued that according to Fairbanks' contract with Triangle exclusive right to supervise and cut any of his pictures was to be given D. W. Griffith who was then with Triangle. Decision on the hearing was reserved.

Standard Laboratories Has New Eastern Chief

E. G. Patterson of the Standard Film Laboratories announced, upon his arrival in the East, the appointment of Frank G. Conklin as their Eastern Representative with headquarters in New York.

Lichtman on "Indefinite Absence"

AL LICHTMAN is on an "indefinite absence," and the distribution activities of Preferred Pictures are being directed by B. P. Schulberg, Preferred producer and J. G. Bachmann assisted by Henry Ginsberg, sales manager of the company.

This announcement was made October 6, following a week of conferences between Messrs. Lichtman, Bachmann and Schulberg. The latter, the announcement said, would return to Los Angeles this week to begin work on new product for Preferred.

"Al Lichtman, after a strenuous Summer and Fall, has decided to take a long vacation and will go into the mountains far from telegraph and telephone offices to take a much needed rest," the announcement read.

Though none of the officials concerned would verify reports that Mr. Lichtman had definitely retired from Preferred, the announcement was interpreted as justifying that belief.

Work will begin shortly at the Schulberg studios on "White Man," in which Kenneth Harlan will be starred. Director Louis Gasnier, who has just completed "Maytime," will return to Los Angeles to start production on "Poisoned Paradise," the Robert W. Service story.

Eleanor Fried Returns to Work on Coast

Eleanor L. Fried, associated with the Universal Pictures Corporation for ten years who has spent a lengthy vacation in New York, is now en route to California where she expects to dive into the working world once more.

"Hoosier Schoolmaster" to Be Filmed by Bennett

Edward Eggleston's "The Hoosier Schoolmaster" will he the next special production from the Whitman Bennett studios following "The Leavenworth Case," by Anna Katherine Green, according to announcement by Mr. Bennett this week.

Mr. Bennett stated that he had acquired the rights direct from the author's heirs. The book was first published in 1871 and treats of events that happened just a few years later than the period shown in "The Covered Wagon." Mr. Bennett has discovered there are three people still living who were real characters of the story. Their photographs, with accounts from them of the events narrated, are being obtained.

"The Hoosier Schoolmaster" was filmed some years ago by the old Alco company.

Hodkinson Will Open New Branch Exchanges

Announcement is made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation of further expansion, with the opening of additional branch exchanges in the Far West. On October 1, an exchange will be opened in Butte, Mont., in charge of H. L. Burnham as branch sales manager, to serve as a distributing center for Hodkinson pictures for the state of Montana.

On the same date a new branch exchange will open in Portland, Ore., to serve the exhibitors of the state of Oregon. Claude Odom will be in charge as branch sales manager.

Property Housing Mission in Los Angeles Is Sold

The Los Angeles Broadway property housing the Mission theatre has been sold by Mack Sennett to Robert Parker, a Los Angeles capitalist, for a price reported to be close to $500,000. Sennett will continue to operate the theatre. His "Extra Girl" is now playing there.

L. Ernest Ouimet, formerly President of the Specialty Film Import Limited of Canada, is now President and General Manager of Laval Photoplays Limited of Hollywood and Montreal.

It is reported from the Coast that Mr. Ouimet is now engaged in producing features, the first of which has as working title "The Vital Question," from the story by W. Conselman.

Mr. Ouimet has engaged as star of the picture Andree Lafayette of "Trilby" fame. Others in the cast are Jack Perrin who has recently been in Viola Dana pictures, Max Constant, Eddie Tilton, W. H. Turner, Orpha Alba and Helen Ferguson. George Benoit is cameraman.

Nigh Will Direct Series for E. L. Smith

E. L. Smith, former production manager of Inspiration Pictures, Inc., has signed William Nigh to direct for him a series of feature productions to be made in the East. Distribution arrangements have practically been completed and will be announced soon.

Mr. Smith said that work on the first picture of the series would begin immediately. He has opened offices in New York City.

Additions Made to Cast for "Three Weeks"

Several additional members of the cast of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks" have been selected. Aileen Pringle and Conrad Nagel have the leading roles. Stuart Holmes will act the part of Petrovitch, Nigel de Brulier that of Dmitry and H. Reeves Smith, has been engaged to play the part of Paul's father. Dale Fuller, William Haines, Helen Dunbar, Charles Green and Joan Standing also have important roles.

Tully Will Screen Recent Rex Beach Novel

"Flowing Gold," Rex Beach's most recent novel, will be screened by Richard Walton Tully for First National release, production starting immediately. Mr. Tully is in New York conferring with Mr. Beach.

No choice of players for the cast of the new production has yet been made but actual "shooting" will begin within two or three weeks. Tully will write the scenario, as for his previous plays.

Laemmle Will Announce Scenario Awards

Announcement is made at the home office of the Universal Pictures Corporation that the final awards in the Carl Laemmle Scholarship and Scenario Contest will be made public within the next week. It had originally been intended to announce the awards September 15, but the large number of scenarios submitted and the close judgment between those selected in the final eliminations, caused the date to be advanced for one month.

The Laemmle Scholarship contest began last February. Students in all American universities or colleges were invited to submit scenarios. The contest closed approximately with the various college commencement periods, early in the summer. Several hundred colleges and universities entered the competition, and from them many hundreds of manuscripts poured in to Universal.

"Green Goddess" Booked for N. Y. Capitol

Distinctive's "The Green Goddess," starring George Arliss and with Alice Joyce in the leading feminine role, will go into the New York Capitol for a two weeks' engagement on Sunday, October 14th. This will be the first showing in New York of this feature at popular prices. It opened at the Sam H. Harris theatre on August 14th and ran five weeks to crowded houses at increased prices.

Fox Planning Production of "Robert E. Lee"

William Fox is to make a screen version of "Robert E. Lee." Elmer Clifton is to do the directing and Barney Sherry will play the title role. The Civil War scenes which will be featured in the picture will be made on the original battlefields, it is said.

Baxter Signs With F. B. O. for Another Year

Warner Baxter, F. B. O. star, has been signed by P. A. Powers for another year. Baxter has just finished work in "Alimony" and "Blow Your Own Horn" for Film Booking Offices and will take star parts in important subjects during the course of the next year.

Quake Triples Business for International

THE International News Japanese pictures more than tripled business for that firm last week, according to an official statement made this week by Edgar B. Hatrick, General Manager, who made public at the same time copies of congratulatory letters and letters received by his company on the promptness and efficiency with which the films were distributed.

News weeklies all reported an unusually heavy business, for not a single first run or second run house in the country overlooked the 'quake views. Richard V. Anderson, sales manager of the International News reel, upon his return from a visit to Universal exchanges, reported a steadily increasing demand for news weeklies among all classes of theatre owners.

Telegraphic Briefs from West Coast

TOM WHITE has succeeded Louis Goodstadt as casting director at the Lasky studio. Sigmund Moos, head of the Universal leasing department, has returned to Universal City after a three months' trip abroad.

Marjorie Daw has replaced Estelle Taylor in the cast of Paramount's "Call of the Canyon," owing to Miss Taylor's illness.

William S. Hart's next picture is announced as "Singer Jim McKee." Emmett J. Flynn and the "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model" company have arrived from New York to film interiors.

Motion Picture Market Is Slim in Honduras

Writing from La Ceiba, Honduras, on August 4th, Consul Alexander K. Sloan says "The market for motion pictures in Honduras is not nearly as large as in many other small countries of equal population. This is attributable, in part, to the lack of cities, and partly, to the low standard of living of most of the inhabitants." The town of La Ceiba, boasts two motion picture theatres. The Tivoli is owned and operated by Senor Lorenzo Castillo, while the Rex theatre, is the property of Dr. R. H. Wilson. The policy of these houses is chiefly the exhibition of Wild West and serial films.

Brockton Houses Involved in Big Deal

A deal said to involve $1,350,000 will give the Gordon Theatres, Inc., a controlling interest in the Olympia City, Strand and Rialto houses in Brockton, Mass., as well as other houses, according to word from Boston. It is likely policy changes will be made in the houses.

Netta Westcott Coming to New York

Netta Westcott, English stage beauty, whom Al Lichtman cast for her first picture role in "Maytime," is about to go to New York for her first glimpse of America's Great White Way. Before taking up her next screen role Miss Westcott hopes to see all the new productions in the East.

Parisian Actress Signed by Distinctive

Jetta Goudal, the Parisian actress whose work in Distinctive's "The Green Goddess" attracted attention, has been placed under a long term contract by Distinctive Pictures Corporation, according to an announcement from Arthur S. Friend.

"Little Old New York" Released November 4

"LITTLE Old New York," Cosmopolitan's starring vehicle for Marion Davies, will be released nationally by Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan on November 4.

The production has just completed a three months' run on Broadway at the new Cosmopolitan theatre. It was directed by Sidney Olcott.

Czecho Slovakia Reports Few Houses Open

Acting Commercial Attache H. Lawrence Groves under date of July 28, from Prague, Bohemia, Czecho-Slovakia, says there are a total of 832 motion picture houses listed in Czecho-Slovakia. At present only 113 such enterprises are in operation. These theatres normally seat 232,000 patrons. Towns and cities possessing cinema theatres have an estimated population of 4,333,000, or the equivalent of the metropolitan area of Greater New York, with facilities equal only to Baltimore's. Of these theatres, the major portion give performances only weekly, as on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Adapting Censor's Story

Having completed the adaptation of George Agnew Chamberlain's novel "White Man" which will be Kenneth Harlan's first starring vehicle, for Preferred Pictures, Olga Printzlau is now busy at her typewriter preparing the screen version of "When a Woman Reaches Forty," a story that will be of particular interest since its author is Detroit's motion picture censor, Royal A. Baker, who is also a well-known writer. "When a Woman Reaches Forty" will be directed by Gasnier following his next production, "Poisoned Paradise."

Floyd Hopkins President of Harrisburg C. of C.

C. FLOYD HOPKINS, representative of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and one of the most prominent exhibitors in Pennsylvania, was elected President of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce, on October 10.

The Chamber of Commerce is the city's leading business organization and election to its Presidency is considered a great honor.

Stern Brothers Planning Continental Tour

Julius and Abe Stern plan to cross the country together, stopping several days in the principal key cities, in the interest of their Century Comedies. This plan of two motion picture executives calling on their exchanges and exhibitor-friends will be culminated when president Julius Stern arrives from the Coast. Abe Stern, who is in New York now, is making tentative arrangements pending his brother's arrival.

Advocates New Exhibitor Organization Plan

Jake Wells of Norfolk and Richmond, Virginia, is advocating a new form of exhibitor organization under which he would have the affairs of the M. P. T. O. A. operate. He set forth his ideas at a meeting in Washington last week at which were present exhibitors of Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The plan would provide for only one delegate from each of the twenty-six zones into which the United States is now divided. Equal representation confined to one delegate would better protect the interest of all theatre owners, he contends.

In order that New York should in no way dominate the organization the plan would be to establish headquarters in Washington, with an able executive in charge, whose business it would be to look to the interest of all exhibitors. The new body would in no way eliminate state organizations. It was suggested that the delegates present at last week's meeting, together with those of Delaware and North Carolina, meet for a discussion of the plan in Washington October 30 and 31.

"Hunchback" Premieres in Philly and S. F.

TWO big openings during the past week marked the course of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the Universal production filmed by Wallace Worsley from Victor Hugo's romance with Lon Chaney in the featured role. Both Philadelphia and San Francisco saw premieres of the spectacle film, and in both of these cities the premiere was a decided success, it is said.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" continues to repeat its initial success in New York, where it opened in the Astor theatre early in September, and its later successes in Boston, and Pittsburgh.

The opening at Philadelphia was in the Chestnut Street Opera House.

In San Francisco, the premiere was held at the Capitol theatre.

The next opening of "The Hunchback" will be in Toronto.

WHAT SHOWMEN THINK OF CURRENT RELEASES

Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Ruggles of Red Gap—

Great acting in this one. Drew well at this house. (Middle West.)

Only fair on second week. (Middle West.)

The Cheat—

In its second week, this failed to create much excitement. Considered far superior to "Bella Donna," however, and good enough for a few waiting lines the first week. (West.)

Covered Wagon—

Continued to do a nice business on the third week of the engagement. Held over for a fourth week. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Her Reputation—

This one went very well. A preshowing party helped. Some enthusiasm expressed over picture. (Middle West.)

An average picture, but nothing out of the ordinary. Business was pretty good for the week. (West.)

Dulcy—

Some patrons seemed to like it, but others didn't care for it. Business only fair. (East.)

Potash and Perlmutter—

Good. Very well liked here. (Middle West.)

Ashes of Vengeance—

Went over very well. (Middle West.)

The Huntress—

Interesting, but nothing particularly unusual. Fair business. (Middle West.)

The Fighting Blade—

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

Six Days—

Good average picture and did fair business for week. (Middle West.)

Three Wise Fools—

A real winner. Will surely entertain your audience. (Middle West.)

The Green Goddess—

A wonderful production, way above the average. Patrons appreciated it, liked it, and came to see it in crowds. (Middle West.)

METRO

Scaramouche—

Audiences liked it and business was good. (Middle West.)

Three Ages—

A clever comedy, but not quite strong enough for six reels. Patrons were not at all enthusiastic about it. Business not as good as was expected—not up to usual standard. (West.)

A very funny picture, well liked by all. Business excellent. (East.)

Rouged Lips—

Very good. Completed a satisfactory week run. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

Merry-Go-Round—

Photography, direction and settings wonderful. Story good but probably a little gruesome for the women. Great box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Played to record business during week's run. Praised by all who saw it. (Middle West.)

This picture seemed to have been well advertised but it went only fair. (Middle West.)

The Wild Party—

Should fit into any program. Has nice cast and is well put on. (Middle West.)

The Shock—

Effective melodrama, good of its sort, helped by interest in Lon Chaney. Went over well. (East.)

SELZNICK

The Common Law—

Broke record for this season. Very fine production that appeals to large numbers of people. (Middle West.)

Did an excellent business for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Rupert of Hentzau—

Opened very big and kept up big all week. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Why Worry—

It didn't break any records but it did good business—very good. It would be hard to find an audience with which Lloyd picture doesn't take. (Middle West.)

Good picture, but does not compare with previous production by Harold Lloyd. Business good. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The White Rose—

Third week fairly good. (Middle West.)

Considered a fair picture, with a strong appeal to women because of "heart interest." Did good business. (East.)

FOX

Monna Vanna—

Rather heavy in parts. Those who knew the story liked it very much. Drew fairly well. (Middle West.)

Lovebound—

Typical Shirley Mason material that was light but pleasing. Business was nice. (West.)

WARNER BROS.

Little Johnny Jones—

A very successful picturization of the story that did a good business here for a week. Name of author, title of picture and effective presentation helped put it over in nice style. (West.)

The Gold Diggers—

One of the best of its type ever produced. Drew excellently. (Middle West.)

Main Street—

Not an exceptional picture but drew well. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Loyal Lives

An odd picture, with an appeal to certain patrons. Business weak all week. (East.)

The Midnight Alarm—

Very good drawing card. (Middle West.)

ASSO. EXHIBITORS

The Destroying Angel—

Did nice business with this one. A different sort of comedy. (Middle West.)

Going Up—

Drew a good crowd all week. (Middle West.)

PREFERRED

Mothers-in-Law—

The title attracted a good many. Good business. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Yesterday's Wife—

Only a fair picture. Business not much. (East.)

Broadway Gold—

Did a fair business and seemed to strike a popular chord. Good picture. (East.)

Temporary Marriage—

Did a fair business all week and pleased majority of patrons. Good story. (East.)

Title brought the crowds, picture kept 'em entertained. A good week. (Middle West.)

Bright Lights of Broadway—

A pretty fair picture. Business was satisfactory. (West.)

Clean-cut ad on "Hollywood" (Paramount) at the Circle theatre, Indianapolis

The Randolph theatre, Chicago, employed this unusual ad on "Jewel—A Chapter in Her Life" (Universal)

We caught Sydney Cohn at the Astor, registering optimism over M. P. T. O. Motion Picture Day prospects scheduled for Nov. 19th.

Sam V. Grand had no more returned from his 19th trip across the continent than the NEWS cameraman was on the job. "It's the mark of a Grand Picture."

WITH LENS AND PENCIL

CHICAGO contributed several visitors to Broadway this week. Aaron Jones, of Jones Linick & Schaefer; Emil Stern of Lubliner & Trinz, and Edward Silverman, Chicago manager for Warner Brothers, arrived in one contingent.

And our own L. H. Mason, Chicago representative of Motion Picture News, looked over the town and visited with the staff.

ROY CRAWFORD, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, left New York this week for the Middle West. He will go to Topeka, Kans., his home town, and will also visit Wichita and Kansas City. Mr. Crawford has interests in several theatres and will look them over while he is away.

RALPH H. CLARK, who has resigned as Eastern District Manager for First National, leaves soon for San Francisco, his home town.

AN arrival of the week was Jules Levy, one of Universal's assistant general sales managers, who came from Philadelphia for a conference with the home office.

JOHN C. FLINN, of Paramount, who went to London to put over "The Covered Wagon" was scheduled to arrive home October 12, preliminary to going to Los Angeles to confer with Cecil B. DeMille on exploitation for "The Ten Commandments."

W. F. SEYMOUR, Eastern and Central Division Sales Manager for Hodkinson, has returned from a seven weeks' trip in the interest of "Down to the Sea in Ships." He reports business conditions are markedly improving.

JACK WOODY, General Manager of Associated Exhibitors, is back from a trip through the Middle West.

A. H. BLANK, of Des Moines; Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis, and C. S. Jensen, of Jensen and Von Herberg, Seattle, were among the prominent exhibitor visitors of the week.

HOWE & CONLON are opening an office in Los Angeles. Ben Conlon left last week for the Coast to supervise the establishment of the new affiliation.

MARCUS LOEW is back from Chicago, where he attended the Mid-West premiere of Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche," and St. Louis, where he inspected the work on his new theatre, representing, with the eight-story annex, an investment of $2,300,000 to $2,500,000.

DEPARTURE for the Coast included Sam Morris and Myer Lesser, of Warner Brothers. The former will attend to distribution matters, while the latter will be busy with advertising problems.

GEORGE BLAIR, of the Eastman Kodak Company Rochester, was in town this week.

EDWIN CAREWE, First National director, has arrived in New York from the Coast, preliminary to a trip abroad where he will film "A Son of the Desert," in Africa.

LOUIS CARDY, publicity and advertising director for the Rialto and Rivoli theatres, New York, has resigned to become press representative for William De Mille. He will join the latter when he comes East shortly to film "Icebound," the Owen Davis prize-winning play. Morrie Ryskind, formerly with Preferred and Famous Players, will, it is understood, succeed Cardy.

CABLEGRAMS from the London offices of Associated First National Pictures advise Irving M. Lesser of Principal Pictures Corporation, that Sol Lesser will sail this week on the S.S. Leviathan for America. Sailing on the same boat is Will H. Hays.

Marcus Loew is a busy man these days, what with planning new theatres, opening "Scaramouche" here, there and everywhere, plus his usual duties, but he stopped in front of his State Theatre long enough to pose for these the other day.

It's tough to be president! While members of the T. O. C. C. were eating in comfort, Charles L. O'Reilly was kept so busy that he had to grab a sandwich and a bottle of milk in the hall, as witness these unposed photos.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Mail Boxes as Sign Posts for "Loyal Lives"

A stunt as unique as it was effective and used by Charlie Giegerich, Whitman Bennett exploitation man, for the premiere of "Loyal Lives" at the Central theatre on Broadway, New York City, when every letter box at each street corner on Broadway and Seventh Avenue from 36th street to 96th street was used to carry a card announcing the showing at the theatre.

The cards used were of the regulation window card size with a flap at the top and bottom. The flap at the top was die cut with a circular opening sufficiently large to permit clamping the card around the post and the flap at the bottom served as a standing base to hold the card in a steady position. This simple arrangement overcame the necessity of tying or tacking the cards in place which is against the city ordinance and by leaving a space in the upper right-hand corner for addressing and stamping the cards the post office rules were complied with.

The cards were of white stock printed in red and the reading matter tied them up with the post office department's campaign for early mailing, while displaying the title of the picture and a description of the production.

This novel idea served two purposes. While they were in place on top of the boxes between collections they attracted instant and widespread attention all along the busiest thoroughfare in America and when picked up by the mail collectors they were delivered to the mailing list of the theatre. A schedule was used in placing them on the boxes so that when one batch was picked up by the collectors from tthe post office, another batch was put in their place.

Boys' Clothing Tie-up Is "Penrod and Sam" Aid

Visible evidence that Penrod Clothes are actually working and working hard for "Penrod and Sam" comes from the Boys' Shop and the Playhouse theatre at Passaic, N. J. Weiner Brothers, manufacturers of Penrod Clothes, have made at least 125 tie-ups to date.

The Passaic exploitation was done without the expenditure of a cent by the theatre. The

LOBBY FLASH ON "NINETY AND NINE"

This striking front was prepared by Manager F. J. Miller of the Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., on "The Ninety and Nine" (Vitagraph)

Boys' Shop gave the window space, interested the youngsters in their line of clothes and Wiener Brothers helped out on the donation of two suits.

The theatre co-operated with a slide and got the benefit of the window space and display cards. Everybody was satisfied, especially the two youngsters who were awarded the suits and remained to be photographed in them.

Box Kite Used to Send Receipts Skywardly

A box kite was used by E. S. Raffile, manager of the Globe theatre in New Haven, Conn., to exploit the showing of "The Spoilers" at that house. The box kite was green with the title of the picture and the name of the theatre in red letters. A boy was stationed on the roof of a building near the Yale campus, so that all of the university students saw the kite and the lettering on it.

Eddie Bonn's Alaskan coat hanger stunt proved a hit in New Haven. This consisted of an envelope labeled "Alaskan Coat Hanger" on the front. On the back was the title of the picture, name of theatre and date of showing. On being opened the envelope was found to contain a nail.

Clown Ballyhoos Showing of "Three Wise Fools"

Stanley Hull, manager of the Auditorium theatre at Stillwater, Minn., carried out the idea of the title of "Three Wise Fools" when that picture was shown at the theatre, by sending a man dressed as a clown through the town. The man rode in an automobile which bore special banners, front and rear. The clown distributed circulars from the car.

At the Sunday showing of the previous attraction, a special introductory card, calling attention to the picture and its leading players, was distributed to the patrons of the theatre.

The window of nearly every downtown business house in the city contained window cards.

"Loyal Lives" Tied Up to Mail Early Campaign

The showing of "Loyal Lives" at Manager Abrams' Mozart theatre, Canton, Ohio, was tied up with Mail Early Week inaugurated by the U. S. Postoffice Department Manager Abrams co-operated with Postmaster L. T. Cool and Mayor C. C. Curtis in the campaign to instruct the public in efforts to relieve mail congestion and make easier the burden of the postoffice employe. A parade of all employes of the postoffice headed by the American Legion band was held to which the Mozart theatre contributed two floats, one an old fashioned mail stage coach and the other a modern automobile delivery truck.

Imitation Gold Nuggets in Lobby on "The Spoilers"

Lumps of coal bronzed to look like gold, and placed in fourteen pound cotton flour-sacks were used by W. J. Stewart, Goldwyn Cosmopolitan exploitation man in Toronto for the showing of "The Spoilers" at the Allen theatre there. These sacks of bronzed coal were laid on their sides in the lobby with several lumps projecting from each sack. Specially painted cards were used for a background to the display of gold nuggets.

BRENTANO'S WASHINGTON STORE PLAYS UP "SCARAMOUCHE" STRONGLY IN WINDOW

One item of co-operation extended to the engagement of "Scaramouche" (Metro) at the Shubert-Belasco theatre, Washington, D. C., is this book store window by Brentano's

Neat Display Frames Used on "To the Last Man"

Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, Ga., put over an effective campaign on "To the Last Man," which involved no great added expense and brought the desired advertising results.

An advance tie-up was secured with a book store and a display of the books was given in the window, along with stills from the picture. With every purchase of a copy of "To the Last Man" a pass was given to see the picture.

Other windows were secured for the display of attractive compo board frames with stills inserted, among them a prominent Peachtree inserted, among them a prominent Peaches Street Clothing Store and the leading music house, which is advantageously situated. This gave good publicity to the picture.

As an added attraction a popular jazz orchestra was engaged, which proved to be very popular and it is believed helped materially. This orchestra is well known to the radio world, often contributing to the radio concerts in Atlanta, and thereby gaining much publicity.

Louisville Conceives Sunday Stunt for "Spoilers"

Fred Dolle, manager of the Alamo theatre in Louisville, Ky., aided by a Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exploitation man, tied up with the Lee Lewis, Inc., confectionery stores of Louisville in exploiting "The Spoilers" when it was shown at his theatre. The confectionery stores in the Lewis chain used large window cards, 22x28 inches, advertising the Alaskan sundae which they were serving and connecting it up with the screening of "The Spoilers." A smaller card to the same effect was placed on their fountains.

Cigar and drug stores tied up with the Strollers cigarette posters, the exploitation stunt arranged with the United Cigar Stores in New York by Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation.

The picture was screened for the sport editors of the four Louisville newspapers and they gave it write-ups from the light angle in the Saturday and Sunday issues.

"ISLE OF LOST SHIPS" SHADOW-BOX
Manager Cliff Denham of the Royal Victoria theatre, Victoria, B. C., prepared this shadow box, with scrim, on "The Isle of Lost Ships" (First National)

"Strangers of the Night" Is Given Local Tie-up

An excellent tie-up on "Strangers of the Night" has been effected in Buffalo, N. Y., by Ray H. Leason, Metro exploitation representative, who has gotten himself elected a member of the advisory committee of the Buffalo Community Players, who are to offer as their opening bill, "Captain Applejack." A few days later, the film version of the play, "Strangers of the Night" is to open at Shea's Hippodrome.

Leason pledged himself to do all in his power to put over the play for the Community Players and they in turn have pledged themselves to do all in their power to put over "Strangers of the Night." Also the Buffalo newspapers, who are heartily supporting the players have expressed their willingness to publicize obth attractions in order to draw the maximum amount of attention.

The Community Players are sponsored by Buffalo society and business men. Because of this Leason is now effecting many unusual window displays and other tie-ups.

Local Electric Firm Aids "Enemies of Women"

The local electric light company was easily induced to make a tie-up with "Enemies of Women" when it was shown at the Victoria theatre, Shamokin, Pa. They devoted two large windows to the display, one window showing the modern up-to-date electric washing machines, and the other the old fashioned hand machines and wash tubs. Over each window was an arrow in red. One bore the wording: "Enemies of Women" and the other, "Friends of Women." Posters and stills of the attraction were placed in both windows. A photo tie-up was made with the largest drug store in town; a local bakery wrapped three thousand of the regular heralds with loaves of bread, distributed to their dealers; five thousand of the snipes were placed in packages returned by the Shamokin Laundry.

The Evening News ran the story of "Enemies of Women" as a serial; five thousand heralds were distributed and one hundred fifty window cards placed. Three book stores gave window displays using covers, cut-outs and mounted stills. The lobby was decorated with a 24-sheet cut-out. An envelope containing on the outside, "Dare you hand this to your wife or sweetheart unopened," was used freely and caused a great deal of talk. Six imitation tombstones, made of white metal containing good selling copy, was placed on the main highway leading into Shamokin. This stunt also got a great deal of mouth to mouth advertising for the showing.

Score Is Broadcast to Aid "Enemies of Women"

The musical score written for "Enemies of Women" by William Frederick Peters was broadcast by Manager H. Needles of the Princess theatre, Hartford, Conn., to exploit the showing of that film at his house. Goldwyn Cosmopolitan exploitation man Buddy Stuart aided. The newspapers devoted space to this stunt and it got a good deal of attention.

The lobby was given a futuristic decoration, the house artist painting on cardboard a reproduction of the six-sheet poster. This was cut out and mounted in the lobby.

PUTTING REAL ATTRACTION VALUE INTO "THE MAN NEXT DOOR" LOBBY SET-PIECE
Manager W. E. Paschall of the Palace theatre, El Paso, Texas, arranged this attractive lobby piece in connection with the showing of "The Man Next Door" (Vitagraph)

Elaborate Lobby Display is Made on "Brass Bottle"

The skill and ingenuity of Manager A. H. MacDonald of the Re: theatre, Eugene, Ore., and his advertising manager, Russell F. Brown, in preparing artistic lobby displays was again shown on "The Brass Bottle."

Three passe partout steps leading up to a cameo stage of cardboard and beaver board, showing cutouts of the leading characters in the story bowing to the star of the magic genii and the title of the picture in the background formed the general display.

The arrangement was made in oriental colors, the figure from the bottle being mounted on a transparent tarletan. The names of the featured players were lettered on the hanging star and the title was made of transparent letters backed with yellow crepe paper and lighted by flasher illuminations.

Dark blue curtains backed the display while red and blue poles, with the colors alternating in the circles that climbed to the ceiling, supported the set. The steps and ornamental trees were painted on. The signs "Mirth," "Mystery" and "Magnificence," symbolical of the picture marked the stepping stones to the "Brass Bottle."

Showing of "The Spoilers" Gets Automobile Tie-up

When Manager M. M. Wear of the Rialto theatre, Charleston, W. Va., played "The Spoilers," he arranged a tie-up with the Buick Motor Company in which it displayed a new model Buick with a one-sheet art card.

The card read: "A car like this would have been a luxury during the Klondike gold rush twenty-five years ago, as depicted in Rex Beach's famous story of Alaska "The Spoilers" at the Rialto, all next week, but is within easy reach of every one to-day." Goldwyn's Exploitation man, H. T. Snowden, assisted Manager Wear in putting on the campaign.

A tie-up was obtained with Major's Book Store, in which an entire window was devoted to the showing. In the window was a 1-sheet art card and stills from the production, along with copies of Beach's novels. Major's Book Store also placed two thousand book marks in its circulating library.

APPROPRIAE "STEPPING FAST" AID

This street ballyhoo, with one plow wheel, was prepared by Manager Dave Morrison of the Rex theatre, Greeley, Colo., and was suggested by an incident in the picture

Five confectionery stores tied up with an Alaskan Sundae; one hundred of the Stroller Cigarette hangers were placed in every store in the city handling that make of cigarette; special screening was held for the sport and dramatic editors, which resulted in a good break on the sport and film pages of the Sunday papers.

A street bally-hoo that started a good deal of attention was a burro loaded with mining tools, led by a man dressed as an old-time miner. Cards on each side of the burro, read: "I have come a long way to see Rex Beach's 'The Spoilers' at the Rialto, all next week."

Insurance Company Tieup Aids Box Office

In return for running in the screen of the Odeon a film for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., they agreed to have all their collectors on their rounds mention to policy holders the Odeon theatre, Savannah, Ga., and the playing of "Homeward Bound" in connection with the running of their film. Manager J. L. Evins negotiated this stunt.

In addition to a display in the Odeon lobby of cut-out from the 24-sheet, one-sheets were placed in the lobbies of the Bijou and Lucas theatres. Slides were run at all theatres a week in advance, as well as special trailer at the Odeon.

Installs Headquarters for "Enemies of Women" Club

D. Frisina, manager of the Elks theatre, Taylorville, Ill., assisted by Homer Gill of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Exploitation department, attracted a great deal of attention when "Enemies of Women" was shown in Taylorville by having a small house built of beaver board on one of the principal corners. As much time as possible was consumed in erecting the small building. Signs on it read: "This Little Office will be the Registration Headquarters for a newly formed International Order of 'Enemies of Women.'" In connection with this a letter was sent to one hundred of the leading women of the town, suggesting that they should look into this organization called "Enemies of Women" and find out just what it is all about.

A score of merchants in the town carried special printing on their paper sacks for the week of the showing, along the idea that "High Prices, Poor Goods, etc., were 'Enemies of Women.'" A special post card, containing a picture of crowds in front of King's theatre in St. Louis when "Enemies of Women" was shown there, was sent out to one thousand patrons advising them that the writer had seen the photoplay in St. Louis and recommending it highly.

Contest on Ending Boosts "White Shawl" Showing

In co-operation with the Louisville Times the Kentucky theatre, Louisville, Ky., asked its patrons to decide whether or not Hergesheimer, the author, was right in the ending he gave "The Bright Shawl." The argument centered around whether the Spanish dancer, who supplies the color to the story, should have been allowed to die or whether the author should have permitted her to live and have her marry the young American hero.

To start an argument there must be some goal. The Louisville theatre furnished the motive by running "The Bright Shawl" while debate was hottest. Then Earl Payne, the manager, offered a bright shawl, a duplicate of the original worn by Dorothy Gish in making the picture. Readers of the Times were asked to give their opinions of the best ending for the story in not more than 500 words.

UNIQUE LOBBY DISPLAY PIECE AND HUGE ADVANCE SIGN ON "MERRY-GO-ROUND"

Exclusive Shops Tie Up to "Gold Diggers" Showing

During the run of "The Gold Diggers," at the Rialto theatre, New York, window tie-ups were made with exclusive Fifth Avenue shops and other stores that have been regarded as unapproachable for exploitation purposes in the past.

Cartier's, internationally known jewelers, carrying perhaps the finest and most priceless stock of jewels in the world, placed photographs of Hope Hampton wearing $150,000 worth of jewels that she displays in one scene of "The Gold Diggers" in prominent positions in their windows. Other artistic scenes from the screen version of the play drew the attention of the Fifth Avenue shoppers.

Mark Cross, the well known firm handling all sorts of leather goods, also displayed prominently portraits of Miss Hampton and scenes from "The Gold Diggers" that lent distinction to their windows on Fifth Avenue and in their other shops. The Gotham hosiery shop, Fifth Avenue contributed their share to the unusual tie-up by placing the same splendid types of photographs from the picture in their different windows. And I. Miller, the most prominent shoe dealer in New York, carried attractive window displays in conjunction with the picture and the showing at the Rialto in his six different stores around Broadway and the shopping district.

Appropriate Contest Used to Aid "Loyal Lives"

An appropriate exploitation measure employed in Evansville, Ind., to exploit "Loyal Lives" was in the nature of a contest, which brought excellent results and awakened widespread interest in the theme of the picture.

The Evansville Journal ran a contest in which twenty-five prizes were awarded to the writers of the best fifty-word essays on the subject: "What Does A Postman Do With His Time?" This contest was conducted in connection with the American theatre of that city.

"Why Worry Club" is Launched

Ottawa Exhibitor Puts Organization Stunt Over to Boost Comedy Feature

FOR the presentation of "Why Worry?" at the Regent theatre, Ottawa, Manager Oral D. Cloakey conducted one of the most efficacious stunts ever developed by an exhibitor in the Canadian capital. Mr. Cloakey organized the "Canadian Branch of the Why Worry Club," with headquarters in Ottawa and, in doing so, had the whole town guessing.

Starting a week before the opening of the picture, announcement was made in the Ottawa newspapers of the establishment of the club with Harold Lloyd as president and O. D. Cloakey as vice-president "and one chiefly concerned." It was stated that a "Why Worry Club organizer" was in the city and that a rally of the new members would be held shortly. The public was invited to secure membership tickets at 217 Sparks street, this being the street address of the Regent theatre, which, however, the general public did not know. The certificates of membership were handsome two-color forms on which were listed the 13 principles of the club. These intimated that the emblem of the club was "a smile that won't come off."

Appoints Notables to Club

Much interest was aroused through the fact that Lord Byng, of Vimy, Governor-General of Canada, whose official residence is at Ottawa, was appointed honorary president of the "Canadian branch of the club," intimation to this effect being sent by registered letter to His Excellency by Manager Cloakey. It happened that several distinguished personages also visited the city during the membership drive and each of these was made an honorary member by Mr. Cloakey, notification being sent by registered letter. Those so honored were Baron Renfrew, otherwise known as H. R. H., the prince of Wales, who arrived in Ottawa privately on October 6, Mr. Lloyd George, former Prime Minister of Great Britain, and Lord Birkenhead, former Chancellor.

Special window cards referring to the Why Worry Club and linking up a business with the club were used in the windows of various stores. A restaurant had one which read, "Why Worry and grow thin. Eat here and grow fat." This was typical of the cards used throughout the city. Membership certificates were also distributed among patrons of the Regent theatre as they left the house during the week preceding the presentation of the comedy. Needless to say, the club drive had the people in good humor before the picture was shown.

Campaigns on "To the Last Man"

Details of Methods Used by Various Exhibitors in Exploiting Photoplay

AMONG the exploitation ideas used on "To the Last Man," one of the simplest and most effective stunts reported is that used by Manager E. G. Anderson, of the Princess theatre, Aberdeen, S. Dak., aided by Jack Hellman, Paramount exploiteer.

An old bus used by the hotel twenty-five years ago was hauled in from the country two miles out by a pair of horses and driven by a cowboy, and ballyhooed around town prior to and during the run of the picture, also meeting all trains at the station. Large placards on each side read: "Free ride to the Princess to see 'To the Last Man.' Hop in, Pardy." The sign was roughly scrawled. The bus had been rigged up and repaired so as to actually serve its purpose as a conveyor to the theatre. To attract further attention the driver fired blank cartridges into the air.

Permission was obtained to snipe five double-faced street signs used by the Army recruiting station and planted on the busiest corners—the only street signs permitted.

One of the drug stores was persuaded to display Zane Grey books, with "To the Last Man" featured.

Book Angle Exploited

Manager Charles Morrison, of the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., took advantage of the book angle strongly in his "To the Last Man" campaign. On the strength of this being the screen version of a very popular book, a hook-up was made with both a book store and the book department of a large department store of Jacksonville. Each gave a display of the books, together with cards tying up the theatre and the picture, and announced that a pass would be given with each purchase of the book. The result was that copies of the book were sold out at both stores, and all parties were well pleased.

The Library also cooperated, allowing cards to be placed in their public reading room advertising this attraction. These attracted considerable attention and acted as a benefit.

So much for advance advertising, but Mr. Morrison did not stop there. After the opening of the picture he had 3,000 heralds printed, reading— "The Talk of the Town—Zane Grey's 'To the Last Man'—At the Imperial Now—Thru Wednesday." These were distributed from the running board of an automobile, one being placed on the driver's seat of the cars parked downtown. This has been found a very effective manner of distributing a large number of heralds in a limited time.

"Westbound Limited" Gets Railway Co-operation

Edward M. Fay, of Providence, Rochester and other cities, selected "Westbound Limited" to inaugurate the fall season at Fay's theatre, Rochester.

Resident Manager Archie McCullom put "Westbound Limited" over with the aid of his assistant, Bobby Barrett. A tie-up was effected with the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad. Personal letters were sent to all the railroad employees, while 10,000 attractive heralds also were put out.

The railroad moved pretty nearly everything movable into the big lobby except its tracks, engines and roundhouse. The long walls of the lobby were effectively decorated with cutouts and panels of the regular line of paper. Red and green signal lights and flags made the three entrances to the auditorium resemble the rear end of three passenger trains. Big oil cans, headlights, signal flares and photographs transformed the lobby into a real box office magnet.

Extensive Campaign Boosts "St. Elmo" in Ottawa

Oral D. Cloakey, manager of the Regent theatre, Ottawa, Ont., submits the following brief outline of his city-wide campaign to exploit "St. Elmo."

Tie-up with A. J. Freiman Ltd., Ottawa's biggest department store for Style Show; big advertising space used by store to advertise Style Show at Regent; gave us 7 col. full ad on Saturday before opening; special Models brought from New York; 10 windows in store used for display of gowns which were shown at Regent, also photos and advertising matter on "St. Elmo"; 100 cards with photos displayed throughout store on "St. Elmo" and Style Show; Frieman Ltd., had special 24-sheets painted and posted on fashion show, which was spotted with announcement regarding "St. Elmo."

Theatre used regular advertising in papers; special trailer used on screen 10 days in advance on Style Show and "St. Elmo"; Freiman Ltd., supplied baskets of flowers for stage and lobby during week; erected illuminated runway over orchestra; Freiman Ltd., sent out special letters (4,500) covering mailing list of Customers, announcing their Style Show at the Regent; newspapers covered fashion show and devoted columns to same; tie-up with book-stores on "St. Elmo," and secured 8 windows on books, and cards on attraction; regular bill-board advertising for theatre.

Novel Display Frame Used on "The Hunchback"

Marc Lachmann, exploiting "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" for Universal at the Astor theatre, New York City, conceived a novel idea in the lobby display that adorns the theatre front.

Under the heading of "Everybody's Talking About 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame,'" a photographic layout of all motion picture critics on the metropolitan daily newspapers are in evidence with clippings of the review that they wrote for their newspapers displayed opposite the picture of the critic. The idea is causing considerable talk in and out of the trade and is stopping all who pass the Astor on Broadway.

Russian Presentation With "Potash and Perlmutter"

In planning his presentation for "Potash and Perlmutter," Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, decided that a typically Russian program would fit in nicely. He therefore engaged the Moscow Artists Ensemble of ten Russian singers, dancers and pantomimists as the outstanding musical feature of the program and as a direct tie-up with the photoplay.

The Moscow Artists Ensemble presented in Hyman's staging and lighting an offering in five scenes and ten numbers, as follows: Wedding Feast in Russia, including Toast Song by choir and Balalaika Orchestra; Youth, mixed quartette; Dance of the Boyarishnia, Mlle. Sergeyeva, danseuse. Scene 2: Oh, Frost, Frost, soprano; The Fawn, with whistling valse, by Balalaika Orchestra. Scene 3: "Loubki," novelty comedy duet. Scene 4: "Chastooshki," comedy pantomime with six people. Scene 5: Village Pastimes, including Humorous Dance, Buckwheat Cakes and Flirtation Dance.

For the presentation of this offering Managing Director Hyman introduced the new glass traps in the floor of the presentation stage, which permits of lighting from beneath the stage shooting upward and backward, to augment the side and front lighting.

High School Essay Contest Boosts "Scaramouche"

Through the co-operation of the Washington Herald, the showing of "Scaramouche" at the Shubert-Belasco theatre, Washington, D. C., was exploited by means of an essay contest for high school students.

The first prize consisted of $50 in cash, second prize, $15, third prize, $10, fourth and fifth, $5 each, as well as a number of boxes and seats for the picture. There were no restrictions, except that the entrant must be a bona fide high school student.

Prominent publicity was given the contest by the Herald. Leon Victor of the special Metro staff engineered the stunt.

ARTISTIC "DADDY" LOBBY ART CARD

Old Log Cabin Brings Press Story and Business

A lobby stunt negotiated by F. J. Miller, manager of the Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., attracted attention to the showing of "To The Last Man" at that house. A small log cabin made of beaver board was set up in the lobby. In a large window in the cabin a cutout of one of the characters was placed in a position of firing a gun through the window. The front of the window was covered with a thin mesh, inside of which was a shadow box arrangement, which when lighted made a very effective display.

An old musket, one that fired the first shot in a well-known riot taking place about fifty years ago, was displayed. On the basis of this old gun and the history attached to it, a news story appeared in the papers.

Tie-up With Candy Firm Made on "The Cheat"

An unusually good e..ploitation stunt was engineered recently by Manager Howard Price Kingsmore of the Howard theatre, Atlanta, Ga., when he played "The Cheat." This was in the form of a tie-up with the Block Candy company of Atlanta, which had a direct bearing on an incident in the photoplay.

This concern furnished the theatre with over 200,000 Block's Aristocratic Kisses, each one attached to a neat card about 2 inches square. In the corner of the card was a punctured hole, through which the twisted end of the wrapper was inserted. The card read: "Pola Negri's $10,000 'The Cheat' Kiss. You'll thoroughly enjoy 'The Cheat' at the Howard, week of September 24, just as much as you enjoy Block's Aristocratic Kiss."

These kisses were distributed in the lobby of the Howard theatre one week in advance by two girls in white uniforms, who carried on their arms fancy decorated baskets filled with the kisses.

Also, in the center of the lobby, just in front of a tall flower stand, a small table held a supply of the kisses.

The Frank E. Block Company supplies the chain of Jacob's Drug Stores (numbering 18) and in every one of these 18 windows there were two stills from "The Cheat," mounted at their expense, together with a display of boxes of these same kisses.

The candy company went still further and for three consecutive days, inserted ads. 3 cols. x 8 in. deep.

A most novel and unique method of getting prominent merchants to co-operate in the matter of giving window space was accomplished by means of attractively decorated 11 x 14 frames. These were made of compo board, painted black with attractive designs in color. A still from "The Cheat" was inserted and the name of star and title painted across the face of the frame in white letters,—"Howard Theatre" across the top. The greatest feature about them is that they are just the right size to appeal to the merchant.

Ideas for "Penrod and Sam" Aids

Methods Used by Live Showman to Put This Picture of Juvenile Life Across

BASED principally upon the juvenile angle, a considerable amount of clever exploitation has been employed in putting "Penrod and Sam" over, including contests, tie-ups, displays and special stunts.

A novel method was employed by Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre, Sumter, S. C. He decided to depend upon the popularity of Booth Tarkington rather than go into any extensive displays or advertising.

He did realize, however, the value of mouth-to-month advertising and in this instance he engaged three or four boys to stand around the lobby and discuss the merits of the picture. This had the desired effect, and Mr. White states that during the period of one afternoon he saw it work more than twenty times.

Makes Tie-up With "Penrod"

The running of "Penrod and Sam" at the Gaiety theatre, Bluffton, Ind., was notable for two causes.

The first was that a short time before the play date Manager Jack Belger realized that he had never played "Penrod," the year-old Marshall Neilan picture with Wesley Barry. He put in a rush booking and got it first, tying up the showing of this picture with "Penrod and Sam" which was to follow shortly after. He aronsed audience interest by inviting comparisons of Wesley Barry and Ben Alexander in the title roles. It built up attendance for the second on the opening day. After that word-of-mouth advertising did most of the rest.

The Bluffton Boys' Band, however, contributed. The young musicians wanted uniforms. Manager Belger who has always lent his theatres for high school benefits or any movement of civic interest, offered the boys a percentage on all tickets they sold for the show. To give the campaign an official aspect, the boys were put in charge of the theatre. The boy who sold the most tickets was made theatre manager the first night and the runner-up became manager the second night.

Newspaper Aids Campaign

The Rockford (Ill.) Star plastered its front page with stories announcing its quest for the most popular boy in the city to manage the Midway theatre during the run of "Penrod and Sam."

The winner polled something like 10,000 votes and won the task of piloting "Penrod and Sam."

The stunt was staged by Al. Sobler, exploiting for First National in the Chicago territory. The combined power of the record-breaking amount of space the contest got and the presence of Rockford's most popular youth in the Midway theatre during the run proved a great help.

The Star also used a "Penrod and Sam" "cut-up kid" puzzle contest which netted several stories and a "splurge" in the Sunday issue. Free tickets were given to children who correctly assembled the puzzle.

The Rockford Gazette was also tied-up in a stunt that gave "Penrod and Sam" four front page stories and a number of columns on the inside pages. The stunt was in the nature of a column established by the paper in which readers recounted childhood experiences parallelling those of "Penrod and Sam." The column was headed "I Remember When" and each contributor was given a free ticket to see "Penrod and Sam." The column caught on and was so successful that it is being maintained by the paper as a regular feature.

Several window displays in book stores and a lavish use of bill-boards concluded the Midway's campaign which was generally regarded as the most elaborate ever used in Rockford.

Rowland-Clarke Use Lobby on Glyn's "Six Days"

An attractive lobby display was arranged by Rowland & Clarke when "Six Days" was screened in the State theatre, Pittsburgh. Over the box office were mounted small cutout figures from the drawings by John Held, Jr., showing a couple exchanging a fervid kiss for each day of the week, the costume of both man and woman being different for each day. These small figures were separate cutouts, fastened to the front of a box on which was a row of footlights, making them stand out in silhouette effect. Still above this, over the entrance from the lobby to the theatre, was a big cutout of a figure of a man and woman with arms about each other, taken from the six-sheet poster. This large cutout was brilliantly lighted with footlight effect. Underneath the seated figures was a scroll with "Six Days" painted on it in large white letters.

On either side of the lobby was a hand-painted six-sheet poster, on which was painted the six couples exchanging a kiss, taken from the 24-sheet poster. At the top of the six-sheet was the following wording: "Have you got a sweetie? Take a lesson in the art of love. It looks easy, but you've got to know how." In the lower part, above the title of the picture, the names of Corinne Griffith and Frank Mayo were featured.

Wooden Soldiers Prologue to "Penrod and Sam"

As a prologue for "Penrod and Sam" the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, Ga., presented "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" to the accompaniment of the American version popularized in "The Chauve Souris." The six wooden soldiers were operated by a mechanical device.

Little Marjorie Johnstone-Risinger, as the captain, led the contingent. Thornton Ward, Jr., did an eccentric dance in a manner that delighted the grown ups and made every youngster in the audience green with envy. At the conclusion of his dance, which marked the end of the number, the entire row of mechanical soldiers fell backwards with a crash of music and the curtain dropped in a riot of applause.

Extensive Campaign Boosts Showing of "Spoilers"

Manager Charles Morrison of the Imperial theatre, Jacksonville, Fla., utilized every channel of exploitation in putting over "The Spoilers" recently.

One week in advance of opening, several thousand bookmarks were printed, which proved acceptable for distribution in the local library, due to the fact that the copy stressed the author's name more prominently than the theatre. These were inserted in all books issued at that particular period. In addition to being placed in the outgoing books, they were also placed in every newspaper and magazine on the tables in the reading rooms of the libary.

About four days in advance 11 x 14 cards with strong selling talk were placed in principal soda fountains and cigar stands. These played up strongly the title and play date.

Two book store tie-ups were secured in advance, each dealer giving very cleverly arranged window displays, which included photos from the production and cards announcing the title, theatre and playing dates.

Several nights in advance of opening heralds were passed out carefully to patrons leaving the house. Further distribution was made in the automobiles parked downtown, where one was placed on the driver's seat. This performance was repeated daily for several days.

An unusual tie-up was secured with a local photographer, on the basis of enlarging several of the actual scenes from the play and a card announcing that these were actual reproductions of the fight scenes taken from Rex Beach's "The Spoilers." The tie-up came in by stressing on another card that the photographer made a specialty of making enlargements. To make the window noticeable it was draped with about two reels of an old discarded film. This proved quite a curiosity to passers-by and the photographer had many requests for pieces of the film as souvenirs.

EFFECTIVE USE OF MOUNTED CUT-OUT
The Casino theatre, Greenville, S. C., hung a mounted twenty-four-sheet cut-out in the lobby on "A Man of Action" (First National)

Toronto Electric Stores Give Unique Aid

Electric stores, dealers in oriental rugs, music stores and tobacco shops in Toronto co-operated with Bill Stewart, exploitation man at the Hippodrome theatre there, in putting across window displays to advertise the run of "The Green Goddess," the Distinctive Pictures feature starring George Arliss, which opened on October 8. Nathan Friend, special representative of Distinctive, went to the Canadian city to work with Stewart in the preparation of the advertising and exploitation campaign.

With the Northern Electric Company, Mr. Stewart arranged a wireless tie-up which resulted in window displays in no less than fifteen electric supply stores in the vicinity of the Hippodrome. This was based on the wireless sending scene in "The Green Goddess."

Sailors and Craft Aid "Isle of Lost Ships"

The whole waterfront and one of the islands of St. Andrews, N. B., made "The Isle of Lost Ships" a realistic thing when the attraction played the King theatre there.

Half a mile from the waterfront was a small island, unowned and unclaimed. Several ships had found Davy Jones's locker near it, due to the presence of a dangerous shoal. It was appropriate and novel. The theatre management had a huge banner made reading: "The Isle of Lost Ships." It was strung along the front of the island over the hulks of the wrecked ships in such a way that it was readable at a distance of several hundred yards. At nighttime lanterns illuminated the sign.

To complete this unusual tieup, which was given newspaper notice, the co-operation of the captains of schooners along the waterfront was sought. About two dozen fishing smacks were enlisted to carry signs on their topmasts reading: "The Isle of Lost Ships."

Inexpensive Campaign Used to Boost "Main Street"

Manager W. A. Byers of the Liberty theatre, Greenwood, S. C., put over an inexpensive campaign on "Main Street," which created widespread talk.

Interest was excited in advance by mailing cards to fifty of the leading citizens of Greenwood, suggesting a change of name of the principal street to "Main Street." The result of this was free newspaper publicity, as well as word-of-mouth comment.

The old postcard stunt was used again, though its power to arouse interest and curiosity seems ever new. Five hundred postcards showing Asheville scenes were mailed out of Asheville, advising the recipient to be sure to see the picture when it came to Greenwood. Much comment resulted from this.

Mr. Byers was also successful in landing a book store display.

Elaborate Presentation is Given "Circus Days"

A unique theatre front and lobby display, combined with a pleasing prologue, was prepared on "Circus Days" by Manager D. J. Shephard and Production Manager A. Gordon Reid of the Branford theatre, Newark, N. J.

The sure-fire-effect awning drop fronts were painted with the clowns and the regalia of the calliope call. The special theatre front sheets of Jackie and the big drum heading the circus parade were also plain to see from the street. They bore out in convincing style the theme of the picture and brought youngsters of every generation to the house.

Inside the entrance the enterprising managers had done the corridor up to give every token of a circus itself. There was the thin man and the fat woman, the hairy gorrila and the female snake charmer, the blue skinned man and the bearded lady. You couldn't duplicate them anywhere outside of a circus or a museum but Manager Shephard and Mr. Reid had them right on display.

The stunt was positively sure fire and brought thousands into the theatre simply for one look at this strange assortment. Behind the business offices Mr. Reid related to a small but interested crowd how he scoured Newark to obtain his "freaks" for the show.

There was a special talent in the selection and arrangement of the prologue production, an act that blended with the picture without losing any of its charm. Four children and a male soloist took part.

The curtain opened on the soloist dressed in the circus costume of the clown. He was an Italian singer with a rich tenor voice and, appropriately enough, the selection he rendered was the famous Caruso Pagliacci clown role. The four children followed this solo with their numbers, mingling the light comedy of the circus with the musical theme of the solo offering. It was one of the finest prologues that Manager Shephard and Production Manager Reid have staged.

TAXI TIE-UP ON "HOMEWARD BOUND"

Managing Director Herschel Stuart of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, arranged this taxicab hook-up on "Homeward Bound" (Paramount)

Gets Special Publicity on "Lawful Larceny" Run

When Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, wanted a little special newspaper publicity on "Lawful Larceny," he bethought himself of different movie stars he had met and what impression they had made on him.

The result was a special article, reminiscing about Lew Cody, Elaine Hammerstein, Larry Semon, Mae Murray and others, tying up with "Lawful Larceny" sufficiently, to which Meyer signed the resident manager's name, Harry Silver.

It was carried under a two-column head by the newspaper, and offers a suggestion to any manager of a means of cashing in on any visits to studios, conventions, and the like, where movie stars are in evidence.

Meyer Finds Style Show Is Sure-fire Attractor

There are times when it is unnecessary to advertise the feature attraction, however big, it is pointed out by Fred S. Meyer, managing director of the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, in a letter to the News.

"Such a case presents itself when a Style Show comes around," continues Mr. Meyer, "and so I am enclosing two page layouts which we used, one in the News and one in the Journal. Of course, we only stand part of the expense of these pages, but if this doesn't get them I don't know what will."

The pages in question feature the fashion show, making only the barest mention of the picture program. This is the sixth such Fashion Show staged by Mr. Meyer in co-operation with local merchants, and it has grown to be an institution. A prima donna, as well as a premiere danseuse, were brought to Hamilton for the occasion; ten local girls displayed the gowns; and special musical and lighting effects were provided.

Beaverboard Circus Tent Used on "Circus Days"

Logical circus exploitation marked the campaign on "Circus Days," by Manager Willard C. Patterson, at the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, Ga. A tremendous circus tent was stretched over the marquee. It was done in beaverboard of substantial construction and braced flush against the face of the building. Six feet in front and on the outer edge of the marquee were cutouts of figures from the circus, the entire ensemble resembling a parade up Center Street as the Ringling Brothers visited town.

Just to prove the effectiveness of the front, Manager Patterson asked how many newsboys, after looking at the decorations, wanted to come to a free showing. When Willie Hawkins, the little carrier from the outskirts, reached the theatre it became unanimous.

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

Kent Sanderson Promoted By Universal

FOLLOWING in the footsteps of Pete Morrison, who began his career before the camera as a double for western stars, Kent Sanderson is the latest aspirant for picture fame. Sanderson is the new leading man in the series of two-reel western features being made at Universal City with Lola Todd. Until his recent promotion to the short plays, he was "double" for William Desmond in "Beasts of Paradise," the chapterplay starring Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick. His first play, "Down in Texas," is now under way. He is a daring rider, tall and athletic, a graduate of the Southern California branch of the state University.

Jack Mower Starred in Universal Westerns

Jack Mower, co-star with Eileen Sedgwick of "In the Days of Daniel Boone," and seen in many other Universal pictures, is now being featured in a series of condensed two reel action dramas. Nat Ross is directing them, at Universal City. Mower, in the course of the past two years, has played practically every kind of a role it is possible to find in pictures.

Century Fall Lineup Numbers 52

Releases Include six to Eight Baby Peggy and Buddy Messinger Comedies

Fifty-two Century comedies are scheduled for release through Universal during the fall season, according to announcement made this week by Abe Stern who is making New York his headquarters at present. The lineup includes six to eight Baby Peggy comedies, already produced but not yet titled; 12 Buddy Messinger "American Boy" pictures; 12 Century Follies Girls comedies; 12 two-reelers starring "Pal," the dog star, and ten with Jack Earle and Roscoe Karns.

The Baby Peggy pictures already completed include "Nobody's Darling," "Little Miss Hollywood," "Hansel and Gretel," "Peg o' the Mounted," "Miles of Smiles" and "Such Is Life." Both "Hansel and Gretel" and "Such Is Life" are based on fairy tales, the former on the story of the same name, the latter on "The Little Match Girl." In "Miles of Smiles" the four-year-old starlet plays a dual role.

Buddy Messinger has six of his twelve pictures already completed. They are "Buddy at the Bat," "So Long, Buddy," "She's a He," "Bringing Up Buddy," "Play's the Thing" and "A Regular Boy." Stories for his other six have been handed over to the editorial department for preparation.

The Century Follies Girls will be called upon to appear in twelve comedies. Three of them have already been produced. The other nine will be made within the 1923-24 season. Special stories will be used for these girlie revue two-reelers, which will all be made under the direct supervision of either Julius or Abe Stern.

Jack Earle, the seventeen-year-old giant, has a contract that calls for two series of six two-reel Centuries. At first it was expected to have Earle appear with Billy Engle, but unforeseen obstacles prevented this. Therefore Earle will appear in his own starring vehicles, in which comedians such as Roscoe Karns and Ernie Adams will appear in support. Mr. Earle's first Century will be known as "A Corn Fed Sleuth."

Pal, a very clever dog actor, has been signed to do a series of animal comedies. Directorial and supporting talent has been engaged for his early productions, "Lots of Nerve," "Don't Scream," "The Water Dog," "My Pal" and "Any Old Port," and special effort has been promised by studio officials to make the Pal series exceptional in every way.

This schedule is said to be the most promising yet consummated by Julius and Abe Stern and gives one a real conception of the great strides made by these two producers.

It may be interesting to know that there are still something like twelve two-reel Baby Peggy comedies in the hands of competent film editors and titlers, which will not reach the market until some time in 1924. The titles have not, as yet, been decided upon, although "Little Red Riding Hood" has been carefully remade to head the new group.

Universal Serial Now Completed

Last Chapter of "Steel Trail" Ready With Others of Like Type to Follow

WORD comes from Universal City that the last camera work has been completed on "The Steel Trail," William Duncan's chapter-picture of railroad building. This marks the breaking up of what has been one of the most notable serial companies assembled on the West Coast.

"The Steel Trail" is Duncan's first Universal chapter-picture. He is said to have gone to Universal with a big idea, and "The Steel Trail" is said to be a worthy exponent of that idea. The idea, which caused Mr. Laemmle to sign up Duncan for an unlimited period, is that there is more romance in modern business than in books. Duncan believes that the building of railroads, the installation and management of great industrial plants, the projection of big mining ventures and similar modern activities are as thrilling, as exciting and as interesting as any "shoot-'em-up" western, murder mystery or society drama.

Duncan chose railroad building as his first field of action. "The Steel Trail," which he outlined, and which was adapted for the screen by Paul M. Bryan and George Plympton, was conceived as a spirited romance of the dangers, experiences and sentiments in the construction of a new railroad—during which the construction engineers faced human enemies as well as the hazards of nature. Duncan, besides directing the serial, plays the role of a noted railroad engineer called in to push the work on a new railroad, facing loss of franchise because of delays in building caused by unscrupulous competitors.

Not content with duplicating railroad construction in the studio and on the hills surrounding Universal City, Duncan took his entire company to Friant, Cal., where a new railroad actually was being constructed through a terrain, which offered every possible opposition to the engineers in charge.

In the cast are Ralph McCullough, Harry Carter, Harry Woods, John Cossar, Frank Whitson, Mabel Randall and Cathleen Calhoun. George Robinson handled the camera.

"The Steel Trail" was released the last of August. The last episode is due for release late in November.

C. C. Burr Signs Follies Beauty As Star

Kathlene Martyn, who appears as leading lady in many of the C. C. Burr series of All-Star comedies, featuring Charlie Murray, has been placed under a three-year contract by Florenz Ziegfeld, the "Follies" producer announced. Miss Martyn is at present playing her former stage role of Rosie in "Sally" with Marilyn Miller and Leon Errol at the New Amsterdam theatre in New York. Hodkinson is distributing the All-Star comedies. Miss Martyn appears in "The Life of Reilly," "Fearless Flannagan," "Fiddlin' Fool," "Pat's Patents" and "Wild and Wicked," all produced at the C. C. Burr Glendale studio.

Jack Earle's New Picture Title Is Changed

The semi-dramatic story, "The Detective," recently purchased for Jack Earle, the young giant, by Julius Stern of Century Comedies, has been finished, but the title has been changed to "A Corn-Fed Sleuth."

This is the latest news from the Century studios. The comedy has been reviewed by Abe Stern and his New York staff, and will be turned over to Universal very shortly for release. Although the title continues to put over the idea of the story, that of a detective, it was necessary to change the original name on account of its lack of comedy.

Golf Tourney Creates Big Demand for Film

The interest displayed nationally in the recent championship golf tournaments is reflected in the demand for the Educational Pictures Special, "Golf, As Played by Gene Sarazen."

Sarazen, who retained his title as champion of the Professional Golfers' Association, is shown in normal speed and slow motion photography in this two-reel special, as he executes his famous shots. Many theatres have capitalized on the interest in golf this season and have booked and advertised the picture as a special attraction.

When Sarazen a few days ago defeated Hagen in a spectacular match, retaining his title, interest in this picture was revived at once, and marked by a vigorous demand for this sports special.

Hal Roach in Session With Theatre Owners

Following the adjournment of the regular monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan on Wednesday, Sept. 26, Hal Roach, the prominent Pathe producer, met the officers and members of the organization at a luncheon held at the Hotel Statler in Detroit.

As in previous conferences with exhibitors Mr. Roach discussed various questions of production with the theatre-owners and sought particularly to ascertain what their opinions are on the types of production most in demand by the picture-going public. Mr. Roach in his production work for Pathe will make this great body of exhibitor opinions the basis of his production policy at Culver City.

E. W. Hammons Returning from Trip Abroad

E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., sailed from England Oct. 3, on the Majestic, for New York. Mr. Hammons has been in Europe for the last six weeks having his annual conference with his London associates and negotiating for greater distribution for Educational's Short Subject product abroad.

Hodkinson Releasing New Burr Comedy

"Fearless Flanagan," he C. C. Burr two-reel comedy released October 7th, features Charles Murray, Kathlyn Martin and Raymond McKee. It was directed by Gregory LaCava, and is being distributed through the Hodkinson Corporation.

New York Yale Club Sees "Columbus" Special

"COLUMBUS," a motion picture depicting the dramatic highlights of the colorful career of America's discoverer, was shown before a distinguished audience at the Yale Club, New York, on Thursday evening, Oct. 4th. George Parmly Day, treasurer of Yale University and president of the Yale University Press, which produced the picture, spoke before the showing of the film and explained the scope of the work undertaken by the Yale University Press, of which "Columbus" is the first fruits. This enterprise involves the making of thirty-three screen productions, visualizing 400 years of American history. The entire series known as "The Chronicles of America" will be distributed by Pathe.

The large invited audience at the Yale Club showing accorded the picture an enthusiastic reception, and a second showing was necessitated to accommodate the overflow which could not find places at the initial performance.

Coast Exhibitors Praise Pathe 'Quake Films

Wires from West Coast theatre managers have been streaming into the Pathe News headquarters during the week, congratulating the organization on the "scoop" attained by Pathe News in being the first news reel to show pictures of the Japanese earthquake disaster in the United States. Views of the devastated district, suffering from the repeated shocks and great fires, were shown.

Pathe Will Film Big Horse Race

Secures Exclusive Rights to Photograph International Contest Late This Month

THE international horse race classic to be held October 20 at the Belmont Race Track, when Papyrus, winner of the English Derby, will race America's best three-year-old for a $100,000 purse, is to be recorded by the motion picture camera for the entertainment of the millions of sport devotees throughout the civilized world.

In view of the world-wide interest in this event, which brings Europe's greatest race horse in competition with America's fleetest racer—probably Harry Sinclair's Zev or Admiral Cary Grayson's My Own—arrangements have been made with the Westchester Racing Association whereby Pathe Exchange, Inc., will make a permanent motion picture record of the match so that the first international meeting of America's and England's thoroughbreds will be preserved for the generations of horse-lovers to come. By virtue of the arrangements just effected, Pathe has secured exclusive rights to film the event. Elaborate preparations are now under way which will enable the Pathe cameramen to "shoot" every phase of the event and produce the most comprehensive motion picture of its kind ever taken.

This Pathe special, which will be in two reels, will be released for public showing on October 21.

Arkansas Exhibitor Finds New Use for Shorts

G. C. SWEENY has a plan designed to win new patrons for the screen among those classes heretofore adverse to the motion picture. In Gillett, Ark., where Mr. Sweeny operates the Princess theatre, there has been organized an "Educational Movie Club," which carries definite membership contracts and fees. The membership card entitles the holder to a reserved seat and is issued subsequent to the signing of the club contract, which provides that the candidate shall pay for the card at the rate of 75 cents per four weeks for adults and 35 cents for children. Two issues of Pathe news, a Pathe Review, and an educational reel are made permanent features of the club program under the contract signed. This self-paying plan has been so successful that it is to be extended to the nearby towns of Dewitt and Almyra.

Standard Acquires Jimmy Aubrey Comedy Series

L. J. Darmour, President of the Standard Cinema Corporation, announces the acquisition for distribution of 12 two-reel comedies, featuring Jimmy Aubrey, negotiations having been completed with the Chadwick Pictures Corporation last week.

Mr. Darmour also announces that his company have signed contracts whereby they will distribute a series of twenty-six Chester Outings, all one-reelers. The comedies will be released one a month and the Chester Outings will be released one every two weeks.

Pathe Oct. 21 Releases Include "Our Gang"

The second episode of Ruth Roland's new serial production, "Ruth of the Range," and a new "Our Gang" comedy titled "Stage Fright," head the Pathe schedule of releases set for October 21st.

Paul Parrott in "Winner Take All" proves his ability as an acrobat as well as a comedian of first rank. "Aged in the Wood," the current Aesop's Film Fable, presents the cartoonist's conception of a bootleg spree.

Rialto, New York, Books Timely Baseball Film

The Rialto theatre, New York, is taking advantage of the interest in the coming World's Series games in New York and is showing the Educational - Mermaid comedy, "Three Strikes." This Jack White production is a baseball comedy, which makes it exceedingly timely during the climax of the baseball season.

Around Town With the Independents

By ROGER FERRI

ANDREW J. CALLAGHAN, formerly associated with Arrow, is now at the helm of his own distributing organization, known as the Monogram Pictures Corporation. The firm will release a series of six westerns starring Fred Thompson, a well-known athlete.

BOSTON exchangemen are contributing their share toward the support of New England railroads coming to New York every week. Among those who now make weekly visits to New York are Harry Ascher, "Bill" Shapiro, Herman Rifkin, Harry Seigal and Bill McConnville.

Larry Semon, who will soon be making features for Tru-Art Productions

SOL LESSER, because of the pressure of business on the Coast, has been forced to cut short his trip to Europe. He will return late this month and go direct to Los Angeles.

JACK COHN has cancelled his proposed trip to Europe now that his firm, C. B. C., has disposed of the foreign rights to his pictures.

A. S. ARONSON, sales manager for Truart Productions, Inc., left on Tuesday for Europe where he will open negotiations for the foreign distribution of his pictures.

BEN WILSON, the independent producer, is now in New York. Ben is one of the leading independent producers in the business, making on an average of 20 features annually and about twice that number of short subjects. He is releasing most of his product through Grand-Ascher Distributing Corporation.

IT is definitely decided that Dell Henderson, who for the past three years has been making pictures for the Pine Tree Pictures Corporation of Maine, will produce "Gambling Wives," Arrow Film Corporation's super special. This picture is being extensively advertised in leading national magazines and several hundred newspapers through whose columns prize winners are selected. The latter will be cast for the picture in which established stars and players will appear. "Gambling Wives" will be produced on the West Coast.

EX-GOV. MILLIGEN, president of Pine Tree Pictures Corporation, which has been producing pictures based on James Oliver Curwood stories, was in New York this week.

ABE WARNER, who has been ill for several weeks, is coming along in fine shape, according to word given out at his office this week.

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM COMPANY last week obtained a judgment in the New York City court in their suit against Franklyn E. Backer to recover on two notes. The judgment covered $1,901. Backer is now out of the film business.

DAVE MOUNTAIN, foreign manager for Arrow Film Corporation, is authority for the statement that never before in the history of his business has there been such a clamor for American pictures abroad.

JOE DIETZ, who is now with Oscar Price's Tri-Stone Pictures Corporation, is in the Middlewest visiting exchanges handling Tri-Stone releases. He will go as far as the Coast. It is expected that he will remain away from New York for two months.

INDEPENDENT exchanges with ready money with which to buy pictures, complain that there are not enough short subjects available in the independent market. Only four companies are furnishing short subjects. They are Arrow, Grand-Ascher, C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation and Tri-Stone.

THE Michigan territory still seems to be the "jonah" for independents. Despite the fact that exchanges there have exploited on a greater scale than in past years, business, in proportion to what it is in other sections of the country, remains on about the same level. The theatre controlling situation is given as the reason for this condition by exchangemen who have come to New York during the past fortnight.

BERNIE FINEMAN, whose pictures are released by Charley Burr, is planning a series of independent productions of the more elaborate calibre.

EMANUEL J. LEVY is now office manager of Renown Exchange in New York. He was formerly with Sam Zierler's Commonwealth Pictures Corporation.

R. K. BARTLETT COMPANY, INC., has purchased the Great Britain rights to all of the C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation's product of the current season.

TOM NORTH has taken over the publicity and advertising reins of the newly organized Monogram Pictures Corporation.

"BILL" SHAPIRO of Franklin Film Exchange of Boston and New Haven, Conn., spent a few days in conference with officials of Warner Brothers this week.

INDEPENDENT exchangemen were showering Daniel Carson Goodman, Equity producer, with congratulations on his marriage to Alma Rubens, the star.

C. W. HAWXHURST of Superior Screen Service of Salt Lake City has purchased the entire output of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico and part of Idaho.

BEN CONLON of Howe & Conlon left for Los Angeles last Saturday. He said that he and his partner will open an independent publicity bureau on the Coast.

E. H. GRIFFITH will direct "Week-End Husbands," Daniel Carson Goodman's next Equity picture.

DORIS PAWN, who has been appearing in Preferred Pictures, is in New York preparing herself for rehearsals of a Broadway production in which she will be featured.

SAM SAXE, sales manager for Weber & North, has started his new sales campaign and reports satisfactory results. Sam is planning another visit to exchange centres.

SAM GRAND and Harry Ascher are completing plans for the preview showing of Bryant Washburn's first feature, "Try and Get It," for that firm. The showing will be held at the Biltmore Hotel, but no date has as yet been selected. Among those who will be present are a number of Grand-Ascher stars and directors, including Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bishoff, Cullen Tate, the director; Ben Wilson, the producer; Bryant Washburn and Mabel Forrest.

INCIDENTALLY, Sam Grand made it known this week that exchanges affiliated with his organization are arranging a personal appearance tour for some of the Grand-Ascher stars.

W. E. SHALLENBERGER, President of Arrow Film Corporation, is back in New York. The "Doc" has been pretty much on the jump during the past six weeks. He spent a few weeks on the Coast. The remainder of the time he spent visiting exchanges throughout the country.

AL HARSTN, who, in addition to operating a number of theatres in New York, finds time enough to devote to his independent exchange, has acquired the Greater New York rights to "Shattered Faith."

GEORGE IRVING, the director, has completed "Flood Gates" for Blazed Trail Productions, Inc., of Gloversville, N. Y., and has returned to his home out in Long Island. John Lowell, the star, and L. Case Russell, the star, are now cutting the film.

JOE BRANDT of C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation is authority for the statement that independents want pictures, but they must be of the quality calibre." His firm is releasing a series of six pictures this season.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Done in Oil"
(Educational—Two Reels)

JIMMIE ADAMS puts over a bucketful of laughs in this Christy Comedy, that E. A. Hammons is presenting on the Educational program. Jimmy, an oil stock salesman, is roughly handled by a couple of shrewd promoters who have stolen a well from a poor girl. The latter saves our hero, who in turn gets the well back for her. There is a lot of comedy acrobatic stuff pulled on one of the dredgers that gets over well. The stunts in the majority are new and Adams shows his best form. Walter Graham wrote the story—and there is one—while Scott Sidney directed.—ROGER FERRI.

"Simple Sadie"
(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is a two-reel comedy that is built upon the arrival of an immigrant girl, her kidnapping by a band of crooks and her ultimate rescue by her sweetheart, who is forced to deface the station building in order to obtain service from the local police force. It is a fast-moving comedy with Ruth Hiatt, Cliff Bowes and Mark Jones in the cast. Gil Pratt directed while B. McGill photographed.—ROGER FERRI.

"No Tenderfoot"
(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is an interesting Western drama with a hard-working cast including Edmund Cobb, Lillian Hackett, Jay Morley and cowpunchers who know how to hold their saddle and reins. R. N. Bradbury directed. The story concerns the adventures of Tom Windom, who falls in love with Jane and succeeds in winning her when he runs down some steers planted in Windom herd by Atawater in order to keep them out of the annual rodeo.—ROGER FERRI.

"Don't Scream"
(Universal—Two Reels)

"HAL," a clever English pup, is winning popularity in these two-reelers, which he practically monopolizes. This is great amusement for the younger folks, while the older ones will marvel at the stunts performed by this dog, who runs down a gang of thieves. —ROGER FERRI.

"Winner-Take-All"
(Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL PARROTT is featured in Hal Roach's one-reeler, "Winner Take All," which gives the star ample opportunity to display to advantage his acrobatic talent. The bits are performed at a country club field day with the hero keeping his crowd on the alert with his funny gags. This is a very brief subject, but it is a fairly good one at that, due largely to the comedy efforts of Parrott.—ROGER FERRI.

"Stage Fright"
(Pathe—Two Reels)

HAL ROACH, in "Stage Fright," furnishes exhibitors with a two-reel comedy that is worth its weight in gold, for it is one long laugh from beginning to end, without a single let-up. The rascals who participate in this deluge of laughter are at their best and seem to get a lot of fun out of their work, and well that they did, for "Stage Fright" is a knockout as a comedy of its type. All the familiar "Our Gang" characters are in it. The "gang" participates in an amateur theatrical performance of the "strawberry festival" caliber. Mickey Daniels is the chivalrous Marcus Antobius, while Kewpie makes the cutest and funniest Nero this writer has ever seen. Mary Korman is the beautiful maiden who is held captive by the Emperor. The determination of a mother to star her daughter, who has been turned down by the producing committee, adds to the innumerable laughs in "Stage Fright." Grab this one before your opposition beats you to it; you cannot afford to miss this one.—ROGER FERRI.

"Modern Banking"
(Vitagraph—One Reel)

URBAN POPULAR CLASSIC, INC., present this issue touching on the inside working of the banking system in this country. Vitagraph is releasing the subject, which begins with the preparation by bank employes for the day's work, through the regular routine, to the compilation of figures following the shut-down late in the afternoon. Lewis H. Moomaw recorded the data incorporated in the film, which is educationally interesting.—ROGER FERRI.

Short Subject Briefs

CARL LAEMMLE of Universal and Abe Stern, vice president of Century Comedies, arrived in New York Friday, September 28, on the Aquitania. Officials of both companies went down the bay to meet them.

Stanley B. Waite, sales manager of Pathe's newly formed two-reel comedy department, is on a tour of the exchanges.

Fred Parker of Christie Film, according to a note from the Coast, is also making a tour of the exchanges of the country.

Jack White has the first of the Educational specials well under way, according to an item from Los Angeles. Norman Taurog is directing the picture.

A representative audience of distinguished men and women attended a special showing of Pathe's screen expose of mediums, entitled "Is Conan Doyle Right?" at the Palace theatre, New York, Tuesday morning, October 2.

Many theatres throughout the country are booking the first of Pathe's new series of featurettes dealing with American history, "Columbus," for next week during which the anniversary of the birth of the Italian navigator will be observed.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight pictures are setting new box office records in New York State. The pictures are now being shown for the third consecutive week at B. S. Moss' Broadway and Cameo theatres in New York.

"The Three Orphans"
(F. B. O.—Two Reels)

ROUND FOUR of the "Fighting Blood" series is a comedy dramatic offering of good entertainment value. It has a human touch that will warrant exhibitor doing a little extra exploitation, for it is deserving of more than usual attention and treatment as an attraction. Ex-Champion Gale Galem, his trainer and manager advertise for a mother. This brings a deluge of applicants, but only one seems to strike the fancy of the pugilistic trio. However, the pug wins another battle, and once again the movie folks are forced to mark time.—ROGER FERRI.

"Cracked Wedding Bells"
(Universal—Two Reels)

CHUCK REISNER is star, author and director of "Cracked Wedding Bells," a slapstick newspaper reporting comedy that fills its mission. Chuck is assigned to cover a wedding in a colored section. Chuck is chased out of the territory, but a faithful newspaper reporter never says "die," so our hero resorts to shoe blacking as a means to effect a disguise. He goes back and is cordially received. In fact, he is selected to marry the bride, saved finally through an accident. This is replete with hokum that is not very new, but the comedy will get over, for it does contain laughs.—ROGER FERRI.

"Fool Proof"
(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is a Christie comedy with a bevy of "gals" who stand out for their beauty more than their ability to act. Nevertheless, they are merely "atmosphere," and as such satisfy to the letter, for Neal Burns, a love-proof youth who goes to the extreme to save his father from a supposed siren, furnishes comedy in original fashion. There is a merry chase that is snappy.—ROGER FERRI.

Pathe Review No. 42

THIS release of the Pathe Review includes "Vacation Memories," a series of so-called "living paintings"; "Macaroni by the Mile," concerning the manufacture of the Italian foodstuff; a pictorial dissertation of Nature's favor to man and a Pathecolor subject, "Sunbonnet Sue," that is very pretty.—ROGER FERRI.

"Aged in the Wood"

THIS is the title of the latest release of the "Aesop's Film Fable" series of animated cartoons. It is not as funny as some of the recent issues, but Henry Cat and Milton Mouse do some peculiar things tending to substantiate the old adage that "good wine makes a bad head and a long story."—ROGER FERRI.

"Sunshine and Ice"
(Fox—One Reel)

THIS scenic has to do with a journey made over South America's only transcontinental railroad. The trip starts from the sunshine and verdure of lowlands to the iced peaks of the Andes with the mountain shots unusually picturesque.—ROGER FERRI.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Ramblin' Kid

(Universal—6395 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE are very few stars who are so much a vital part of their pictures as Hoot Gibson. In "The Ramblin' Kid" he comes very near being the whole thing—having the action most of the time in a role which calls for plenty of individual effort—a role which places him back on the ranch as a cowhand whose impulse is to appear intoxicated when he is really sober. The early scenes showing some picturesque open vistas—a real, range country—introduce the important characters—one of whom is the customary heroine arriving from the East to visit her uncle's ranch.

The plot revolves around the taming of the harum-scarum cowboy by the fair visitor. It is a typical western of the better class and reveals as one of its highlights a dashing rodeo show. The idea centers in a horse race upon which the ranchman and a rival have everything at stake. Meanwhile Gibson has tamed a wild maverick to enter as the ranch-owner's stepper. The incident pertaining to the taming episodes are interesting and carry a deal of color. They also introduce a vein of suspense for one anticipates some heavy villainy afoot which is emphasized in a familiar manner.

This touch is the only obvious piece of business in the picture. The local saloon-keeper has his money on the other horse so he has the cowboy drugged. But the dope isn't potent enough although it makes the rider groggy—so much so—that the heroine chalks up another black mark against him, thinking him intoxicated.

After the "ramblin' kid" wins the race and discovers the villainy behind it, he punishes the crook in a scene which carries a healthy fight. The sequence isn't very well planted, but the results are satisfactory. The romantic element has been treated in the manner of making the heroine disillusioned with the cowpuncher because he is so antagonistic toward her. One shot shows a good rescue act. Hoot lassoes the girl from quicksand. The finish brings explanations.

THEME. Western melodrama revolving around irresponsible cowpuncher who rides horse as a winner in a rodeo.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The rodeo show. The taming of the horse. The bits of incident. The exteriors. The rescue from the quicksand. The fight in the climax. The racing scene. The capable work by Gibson and supporting cast—although a few are inclined to overact.

DIRECTION. Has injected sufficient melodramatic punch. Incident good. Handles star well, but permits other players to use too much expression. Doesn't plant his fight scene very cleverly—and the suspense at that point is lost. Girl showing clean clothes after rescue from quicksand is probably due to cutting. Is best with his racing episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill it as one of Gibson's best pictures. Tell about the rodeo, the new stunts, etc. Feature it as exciting outdoor romance, etc. Play up Gibson and use well known rodeo slogan, "Ride 'Em Cowboy!"

DRAWING POWER. For second class houses.

SUMMARY. A better than usual western, carrying good exteriors and worthy melodramatic punch. Is obvious and suspense is lost, but the action is fast and to the point. Gibson is very good here.

THE CAST

The Ramblin' Kid	Hoot Gibson
Carolyn June	Laura La Plante
Skinny Rawlins	Harold Goodwin
Lafe Dorsey	Wllliam Welsh
Sheriff Tom Poole	W. T. McCulley
Joshua Heck	Charles K. French

Mrs. Ophelia Cobb	Carol Holloway
Parker	Goober Glenn
Sing Pete	George King
Gyp Streeter	John Judd

By Earl Wayland Bowman. Scenario by E. Richard Schayer. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Photographed by Virgil Miller.

SYNOPSIS—Irresponsible, eccentric cowboy loves to play intoxicated when he is really sober. Eastern girl comes to ranch and is attracted to him, but he disillusions her with his crude manners. Rescues her from death, but ignores her. Tames a wild horse and rides him a winner in the rodeo show. Squares himself with the girl after punishing the villain who had drugged him.

Second Hand Love

(Fox—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A STEREOTYPED slice of small-town hokum is this newest effort starring Charles Jones. All the customary figures are present and these include the chin-whiskered idlers, the skinflint suitor, gossips and what not—and to indicate that the story never leaves a commonplace groove we will say that it concerns the usual foiling of the villain who had married the country girl. Jones plays the part of a youth described as "a happy-go-lucky itinerant tinker," who is quite happy with his horse and dog, his closest pals.

The plot is wholly conventional—carrying a pattern of ancient vintage. The gossips get in their deadly work when the heroine becomes the charge of the young tinker. They plan to run him out of town. He is severely beaten when he refuses to confess to the crime of setting fire to the library—a crime of which he is innocent. Later it is established that the villain—the girl's husband, burned the building and also framed her brother. The action plot develops a conflict between the hero and villain—with the latter being punished when he is deposited in a bed of quicksand.

"Second Hand Love" never suggests a single moment of life. It is artificial—a pattern of time-worn theatric devices. Several years of showing this type of story has not inspired the sponsors to get away from the beaten track. As they are still producing it there must be an audience for it—but that audience is satisfied very easily. Houses which feature a daily change of program will doubtless find a place for it. But patrons who follow the films day after day might ask themselves: "where have I seen this one before?"

Charles Jones doesn't have any opportunity to flash any talent. There is no inspiration in the role. Ruth Dwyer is charming as the heroine, but she also has little chance to shine. She shows emotional possibilities however, which should carry her quite a distance some day.

THEME. Treats of hero's protection of country girl who had married a criminal—and the subsequent persecution of the young guardian. Triumph of virtue over villainy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The effort to make atmosphere realistic. The burning of the library. The scene when villain is punished. The easy performance of Ruth Dwyer.

DIRECTION. Has used all the familiar and obvious devices. Plants his atmosphere in the conventional settings. Furnishes humor here and there. Handles players to get the most out of their limited opportunities. Never gets his action away from the orthodox hokum.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title might come in for a teaser campaign. Bill it as a romance of the open country. Play up Jones and Miss Dwyer and advise your patrons that latter is a new find with a charming screen personality. Put on the "rube" quartette, country dances, etc.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses only.

SUMMARY. A mediocre picture of rural hokum—a picture of old-fashioned design which is consistently theatric throughout. No chance for leading players to be colorful.

THE CAST

Andy	Charles Jones
Angela	Ruth Dwyer
Dugg	Charles Coleman
Detective	Harvey Clark
Deacon	Frank Weed
Dugg's Partner	James Quinn
Constable	Gus Leonard

By Shannon Fife. Scenario by Charles Kenyon. Directed by William Wellman.

SYNOPSIS—A happy-go-lucky youth arrives in small town—youth who is described as an itinerant tinker. Heroine's life is made a burden by village's stingiest man whose love she refuses. The youth makes her his personal charge which starts the gossips talking. He is accused of a crime, but establishes his innocence and punishes the villain.

Blow Your Own Horn

(F.B.O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

HERE is a picture rich in exploitation possibilities. Radio is sweeping the country like wild fire. And here's a film that takes cognizance of America's newest plaything to use it as a basis for the hero's marvelous invention—the wireless transmission of power. In this connection every exhibitor has a rich field to tie-up with local radio dealers.

As for the production itself, it is good entertainment. Nothing serious to be sure. In fact it gets away to a rather slow start and lags somewhat for a few reels. But then things happen and by the time the fourth reel is reached things are going strong and a real punch has been injected into the climax

The plot is built upon the idea carried in the title. And most of us know the saneness of this philosophy. So it comes to pass that Jack Dunbar, arriving home from the fields of battle, penniless, and without visible means of support, bumps into Nicholas Small, newly rich and an exponent of personal horn blowing. He sells him the idea and then introduces him into society as a luminary in Wall Street. From this point action starts and there is much fun as well as dramatic entanglements.

The real wallop of the picture is contained in the last reel when the test is made of the new wireless power invention and Small cuts a high voltage wire leading from the experimental station. This wire falls on another, short circuits it, sends sparks flying everywhere, knocks one of the inventors prostrate and imprisons the heroine in the electrified cabin. The hero and the supporting personnel rushes to the scene, the former climbs a huge tower, goes out hand over hand to the middle of a wire supported between two towers and clips it, thus saving the heroine.

THEME. Comedy drama of a young man who starts in to get his place in the sun by "blowing his own horn."

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The snappy climax which will electrify the audience as it does most of the players in the picture. The comedy supplied by John Fox, Jr., and Billy Osborne. The work of Warner Baxter, Ralph Lewis and a good cast. Some attractive exteriors. The scene in which Baxter climbs a power wire tower and cuts a wire.

DIRECTION. Too much unessential detail in early reels. This fault has tended to make action draggy. Best scenes are the moments attending the test of the invention and the rescue of the two from the cabin. Has allowed Derelys Perdue to do more posing than acting, which, however, may not be director's fault. Has saved picture by injecting real pep along about the fourth reel.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Put a truck on the street with flashing your attraction with an electric siren sending forth its roar continuously. Get after your radio dealers for window displays. Play up the appeal to radio fans. Place an ad in the radio section of your local newspaper. You have no end of exploitation possibilities in this one.

DRAWING POWER. Good for second class downtown houses and neighborhood theatres.

SUMMARY. A diverting comedy drama carrying a high voltage of fun as well as drama. Gathers power as it gets under way and sends out some live sparks as the climax is reached. Well acted by a capable cast. Technical equipment satisfactory.

THE CAST.

Jack Dunbar ..... Warner Baxter
Nicholas Small ..... Ralph Lewis
Anne, his daughter ..... Derelys Perdue
Augustus Jolyon ..... Eugene Acker
Dinsmore Bevan ..... William H. Turner
Gillen Jolyon ..... Ernest C. Warde
"Buddy" Dunbar ..... John Fox, Jr.
Julia Yates ..... Mary Jane Sanderson
Mrs. Jolyon ..... Eugenie Forde
Mrs. Gilroy Gates ..... Dell Boone
Perry, her small son ..... Billy Osborne
Timothy Cole ..... Stanhope Wheatcroft

Adapted from the play by Owen Davis. Directed by James W. Horne. Scenario by Rex Taylor. Photographed by Joseph Dubray.

SYNOPSIS—Jack Dunbar finds himself in need of a job. He meets up with Nicholas Small, a millionaire, who sells him "the blow your own horn" idea. Coveting social standing, Small seeks to make an alliance between his daughter and the son of Gillen Jolyon. The latter is an inventor, but his invention is bunk until Dunbar takes hold of it and perfects it. When Small learns how good the idea is he seeks to discourage the inventor and cripples the power-sending device. However, fate intervenes, the invention is a success and the heroine is saved from the cabin.

Going Up

(Encore-Associated Exhibitors—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT is seldom that an adaptation of a musical comedy success carries enough sparkle to carry it through as highly enjoyable entertainment. "Going Up" is an exception. It furnishes Douglas McLean with the brightest offering he has had since he co-starred with Doris May in "23½ Hours Leave." The adaptor, Raymond Griffith, who is demonstrating his versatility these days as a clever scenarist as well as a capable light comedian, and Lloyd Ingraham have co-operated together to make a picture which is saturated with rich humor—one which calls for a deal of mental conflict on the part of the protagonist to register cowardice and courage at the same time.

There isn't a single dull moment and it is so pepped up with breezy incident, bits of "business" and with the players ever on the alert, that it is certain to score with the lowbrows, the highbrows, the low-highbrows and the highlowbrows. There isn't any evidence of padding, notwithstanding that the material is slight. Ingraham has timed his situations so that there isn't a single draggy moment.

The central character has written a book about a daring aviator and promptly gets himself in "dutch" as a result. Every reader thinks he is speaking from experience and the upshot of it all is he has to make good or be branded a coward by the one girl he is most eager to please. There is a foil in the personality of a young friend and the mix-up which develops from the author trying to remove himself from the scene and not enter the aviation contest with the best aviator of France is packed with highly mirthful moments.

It is treated in the best farcical manner—and McLean, playing the part in all seriousness as farces should be played, extracts a deal of fun out of his embarrassment. No points are neglected—not even the romance. And the climax showing the inexperienced novelist taking the air in a plane and executing all kinds of tricks carries a real punch. Here is where the picture goes the stage version one better. A well balanced cast of players add to the merriment with Hallam Cooley, Hughie Mack, Wade Boteler, John Steppling helping McLean with the farcical pretentions, while Marjorie Daw attends to the romance.

THEME. Farce-comedy which treats of young author being forced to live up to what he writes about—the subject being aviation.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The clever gags and incident. The skillful playing on the part of MacLean. The exciting climax with real aviation stunts executed. The rich assortment of laughs.

DIRECTION. Plunges straight into his plot without extraneous footage devoted to planting his figures. Builds it well with an emphasis ever placed upon the humor. Packs it with clever gags and never allows his action to drag. A laugh in most every scene. Finishes with exciting climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up musical comedy and stage play upon which picture is founded, mentioning "Going Up" and "The Aviator" respectively. Use original score for musical program. Put on dance number. If you can secure services of aviator it would be a great angle.

DRAWING POWER. Should prove a winner everywhere.

SUMMARY. A bright and breezy farce-comedy filled with highly mirthful incident and clever gags. Keeps the interest on the alert, is capitally played and deftly directed. A neat job anyway you look at it. MacLean's best in several seasons.

THE CAST.

Robert Street ..... Douglas McLean
Hopkinson Brown ..... Hallam Cooley
James Brooks ..... Arthur Stuart Hull
Jules Gaillard ..... Francis McDonald
Sam Robinson ..... Hughie Mack
John Gordon ..... Wade Boteler
William Douglas ..... John Steppling
Bellboy ..... Mervin LeRoy
Grace Douglas ..... Majorie Daw
Madeline Manners ..... Edna Murphy
Mrs. Douglas ..... Lillian Langdon

From musical comedy by Otto A. Harbach and Louis A. Hirsch and play by James H. Montgomery. Adapted by Raymond Griffith. Directed by Lloyd Ingraham.

SYNOPSIS—Young author writes a book about an aviator which becomes a big seller. He goes up in a plane and resolves never to fly again. Runs away to summer resort and discovers that his fame has preceded him. Is determined to flee but falls in love with girl who inspires his courage. He is forced to demonstrate His skill as an aviator, although he knows nothing of subject of which he has written. Makes complete success of it.

The Bad Man

(Carewe-First National—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A RATTLING good comedy-drama was "The Bad Man" upon the stage—one which held the boards continuously for well over a season and which was finely appreciated when it took to the road. Since the play depended entirely upon dialogue—and since it revolved entirely around one character it doesn't strike us as the best sort of material for screen adaptation.

The figure of Manuel Lopez, a caricature of Pancho Villa, was sketched in a most colorful manner by Holbrook Blinn. His insolent manner—his crude, but humorous way of twisting the English language made the character picturesque and lent vitality to the play. With his drolleries silenced, the dialogue which has been used in all of its important episodes for captioning the picture, it may be easily seen that much of the original vigor is lost. At the Strand the audience didn't laugh uproariously as it did at the spoken version. Nor was the laughter continuous.

Edwin Carewe has made a perfect adaptation. We don't remember of having seen one more faithful in its important scenes and situations. Had he attempted to make radical departures from the original, he would have invited censure.

There is very little action, the director depending entirely on the dialogue and permitting Holbrook to re-create his role in celluloid form. It is a character sketch carrying illustrated captions. But how we miss Blinn's insolent gestures—and the quaint humor of his spoken lines. It is a fine characterization, but the rich humor does not keep pace with the development of the bandit, Lopez, a bandit wanted by two governments. The story itself is even familiar aside from the humorous twist—for it concerns a youthful rancher on the border being embarrassed by the usual land sharks and having conflict with the husband of the only girl he had ever loved. The bandit, having been befriended by him, sees to it that his enemies are eliminated—including the husband who has to be killed "twice" to keep the peace. The entire picture is Holbrook Blinn's, though the supporting cast contributes effective performances. However, the fine production, the details, the color and the star's rich portrayal will earn audiences for it.

THEME. Character sketch involving melodrama based upon a bandit's raid and his crude, but successful efforts to aid a friend.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Holbrook Blinn's fine performance. The details. The color. The intimate scenes when bandit raids ranch and threatens to carry off heroine. The humor in the way he straightens out the complications.

DIRECTION. Has made perfect adaptation, but picture lacks spirit and ruggedness of original play. Spoken dialect much more easily absorbed than when read in cold print. Such treatment makes character less vital. Has seen to every detail to be genuine. Succeeds in that respect, but nevertheless action carries too many illustrated subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. All theatregoers are familiar with play. Thousands have seen it. Play up title and star and state that Blinn appears in picture version. Put on colorful prologue featuring life along the border. Bill it as romantic melodrama of border.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in better houses.

SUMMARY. Not so good as play as dialogue is silenced. Play depended entirely upon humorous lines and quaint dialect. A good melodrama here, but the humor of original is largely missing. Finely played by star and company. Mostly illustrated captions with interest centered upon Blinn.

THE CAST

Pancho Lopez	Holbrook Blinn
Gilbert Jones	Jack Mulhall
Morgan Pell	Walter McGrail
Mrs. Morgan Pell	Emid Bennett
Red Giddings	Harry Myers
Uncle Henry	Charles A. Sellon
Jasper Hardy	Stanton Heck
Angela Hardy	Teddy Sampson
Capt. Blake	Thomas Delmar
Indian cook	Frank Lanning
Pedro	Peter Venzuella

By Porter Emerson Browne. Directed by Edwin Carewe.

SYNOPSIS—Bandit raids ranch on border which is in dispute by young owner who cannot raise money to keep it going. Land sharks want the property. The ranchman meets his old sweetheart, now the wife of another. Bandit recognizes the youth as old friend and restores him his erstwhile beloved as well as straightening out the financial obligations.

The Spanish Dancer

(Paramount—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

POLA NEGRI'S third American picture, "The Spanish Dancer," carries her nearer the heights attained in the German productions, "Passion," and "Gypsy Blood," and as a result she displays a talent which was all but buried in her two previous American efforts. Anyone seeing this picture after having seen "Rosita," will naturally make comparisons. In our opinion the Negri expression is more dramatic, while the Pickford is the more artistic. This feature is not unlike "Gypsy Blood" in that it gives the star an opportunity to play a similar role. Under Herbert Brenon's direction there is more of that careless abandon so evident in her work under Lubitsch.

The action follows along so fast that it is often difficult to follow—which may be due to faulty projection or on the other hand—faulty editing. Several sequences fairly race across the screen making the episodes jerky and unbalanced.

Brenon has given it a lavish production— and is at his best in a picturesque shot of a Spanish square thronged with colorful figures in costume. But the main feature of interest here is Pola Negri herself. Happily she returns to her best mood in a part which calls for verve and vivacity. She always dominates her pictures even when the roles lack sufficient color. She is much closer to the Negri of "Gypsy Blood" than any picture in which she has since appeared. Lubitsch was with her long enough to understand her equipment of talent.

The picture doesn't always suggest the period of the story, but nevertheless, it is gorgeously mounted in a majority of its scenes and the trimmings and trappings—of the period of King Philip, are adequately indicated. Antonio Moreno looks and acts the part of the courageous Don Cesar, the hero of the tale, while Wallace Beery endows the role of the King with vigor and vitality—even though he often errs in being entirely in character. Adolphe Menjou is too often subdfued in his role of a courtier.

THEME. Romantic costume drama, adapted from famous play—detailing swashbucking story of court life in Spain during reign of King Philip and Queen Isabel.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The best performance given by Pola Negri since she came to America. The good work contributed by Wallace Beery and by the majority of the cast. The atmosphere. The settings—particularly the Spanish square. The conflict between hero and king.

DIRECTION. Has directed Negri so that her work approaches her best German pictures. Builds up his conflict and climaxes well. A few episodes indicate that he was in a hurry or that the picture was poorly projected. Builds story in dramatic fashion, making it real swashbucking in character.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up story, title and star —also director. Make mention that it is Pola Negri's best American production. Put on colorful prologue, suggestive of period. Use Spanish music for your score.

DRAWING POWER. For the best houses.

SUMMARY. Easily the best of Pola Negri's American pictures—establishing her as the talented actress of "Passion," and "Gypsy Blood." Is treated dramatically and is conventional in treatment, but carries interesting episodes, atmosphere and backgrounds. Needs even and slow projection.

THE CAST

Maritana, a gypsy dancer	Pola Negri
Don Cesar de Bazan, a nobleman	Antonio Moreno
King Philip IV of Spain	Wallace Beery
Queen Isabel of Bourbon	Kathlyn Williams
Lazarillo, an armourer's boy	Gareth Hughes
Don Salluste, a courtier	Adolph Menjou
Marquis de Rotundo	Edward Kipling
Don Balthazar Carlos	Dawn O'Day
Cardinal's Ambassador	Charles A. Stevenson
Juan, a thief	Robert Agnew

From play by Adolphe D'Ennery and P. S. T. Dumanoir. Scenario by June Mathis and Beulah Marie Dix. Directed by Herbert Brenon.

SYNOPSIS—Gypsy dancing girl tells nobleman's fortune—a man with whom she is in love. She is ordered to appear before royalty and fascinates the king. Don Cesar, the nobleman, has his purse stolen and the gypsy girl restores it to him after being wounded in her battle with the thief. Don Cesar becomes a fugiive and the girl is captured. In effecting her rescue. Don Cesar is condemned to death. But they are secretly married and his life is saved and the king's friendship is won.

Regional News From Correspondents

Albany

FIRST interest in this section during the past week centered around an announcement that Mr. and Mrs. Edwin O. Weinberg had sailed for London, England, where they will make their future home. Mr. Weinberg is known to practically every exhibitor and exchange man in this part of the state. He received his early schooling as a house manager in Troy, graduating to Buffalo, where he handled the Elmwood and the Strand. He was appointed as manager of the State, in Schenectady, when that house opened nearly a year ago. Of late, he has been connected with the Renown exchange, in Buffalo.

Jack Pegler is the new exploitation man at the Paramount exchange in Albany, succeeding Ted Lewis, who has been transferred to Oklahoma City.

During the past week four picture theatres operated by Nate Robbins, of Utica, merged, and will be known as the Robbins Enterprises, Inc. The deal includes houses in Utica, Watertown and Syracuse.

Jerry Reap, who has been connected with the Fox exchange in Albany for the last six months, packed up his bag last week and left for Kansas City, where he will serve as assistant manager of the company's exchange.

Bert Gibbons, one time manager of the local Vitagraph exchange, but now district manager for the same company, was back in town last Monday, shaking hands with his many friends.

Sam Suckno, owner of the Albany, in Albany, is making his house most attractive these days by an application of paper and paint, and also in changing the lighting system. Sam has gone a bit further, and uniformed his man at the door, and next week will place an orchestra in the pit.

As a money maker, Jake Rosenthal and his house known as The Rose, in Troy, does not take off his hat to any theatre in this territory. Rain or shine, the house is always crowded. Mr. Rosenthal gives his patrons an excellent picture but goes a bit further and offers door prizes. These prizes have a wide range, and include almost everything from a broom up to a parlor lamp. The idea seems to have made a big hit in the Collar City.

After operating the Griswold theatre, in Troy, for a year or two Benjamin Apple, who also runs the American, in the same city, surrendered the lease last Thursday night, to the Proctor interests. Just what policy the Proctor interests will follow out when the house is reopened is not known.

All of the stenographers along Film Row pause a bit when Mrs. Hilde Angell, owner of the Park theatre, in Wappinger Falls, enters. For be it known that Mrs. Angell is one of the best dressed women who visit the exchanges for the purchase of film.

John Fleming, manager of the Vitagraph exchange in Albany, is back at his desk after a couple of days in New York City, where he attended a manager's meeting.

Oscar Perrin, who runs the Leland and the Clinton Square theatres, in Albany, and does it mighty well at that, stands ace high with the city officials, and was invited to the City Hall last Saturday for the annual inspection of the city's fire and police departments.

Mrs. William Berinstein, wife of the owner of theatres in Albany, Troy and Elmira, is expected back from Europe within the next few days. Mrs. Berenstein has been touring the continent since last June.

Aside from the Mark Strand, in Albany, none of the picture theatres of the city, reported any serious inroads upon their receipts due to the opening of the new Shubert legitimate house, known as The Capitol. The house opened last Monday with "Blossom Time," for a straight week. In view of the fact that the picture theatres of the city have been without opposition from the spoken drama, there was much speculation as to just what would happen. Apparently, there are patrons enough to go around, and the theatres will not feel any ill consequences from another in their midst.

The department of public safety in Albany, made an inspection of the motion picture theatres of the city during the past week. Judging from the report, the houses are in excellent shape, particularly in so far as fire hazards are concerned.

Word reached Albany that R. H. Clark, well known here, had resigned as eastern district manager for First National, and gone to California.

Few pictures make more of an appeal for a benefit than the Jackie Coogan series. This was pretty well illustrated last week when B. H. Roff, running the Masonic Hall, at Madalin, came to town, and would accept no other picture for a benefit shortly to be staged there.

Sherman Keeley, of the service department of the First National, was up from New York for a day last week.

The men's club of Chadwick, N. Y., has started in holding weekly meetings and will use pictures during the winter.

Norman Sper, who has been acting as manager for the Al Lichtman productions in this territory, will remain here, even though his company has merged with the Bond Photoplay. Mr. Sper took a run down to New York last Saturday, for the purpose of conferring with Arthur Whyte, booking for the Proctor houses

The First National exchange, in Albany, started last Tuesday night in screening pictures for its employees, as a part of a program for bringing about closer co-operation. A club known as "The First National" has been formed, and officers will be elected during the week.

Mrs. D. S. Regan, of the Star, in Greenwich, was welcomed along Film Row during the past week.

There is a report in Albany to the effect that the new theatre in Hoosick Falls, which is now being run by Charles McCarthy, may change hands in the near future, and become one of a chain of houses.

Marvin Kempner, manager of the Paramount exchange, in Albany, returned Saturday from a week in New York city.

E. E. Lowe, assistant manager of the Fox exchange in Albany, was in Schenectady this past week, when "If Winter Comes" opened to a seven-day run at the Strand.

According to advices, Grover Woodard, manager of the Fox exchange in Albany, now recuperating at the Brown Swan Club in the Adirondacks, is rapidly regaining his health.

The busiest boy in town is Herman Vineburg, manager of the Mark Strand, in Albany, and putting it across in wonderful shape this fall. Mr. Vineburg literally lives at the theatre, arriving each morning before ten o'clock, and remaining until the house closes near midnight. He does all of the publicity, and in fact, might be termed a Jack of all trades, but as a manager, he is ranking as A No. 1.

Frank Bolton, of Monroe, was a visitor at the Albany exchanges last week.

Uly Hill, managing director of the Troy, in Troy, and the Mark Strand, in Albany, received what was probably the greatest welcome in his entire life when he entered Reading, Pa., one day last week. It happens that Mr. Hill one time lived in the Pennsylvania city. He was well known and popular there. But this perhaps had nothing to do with the band which greeted him as he rolled up the main street. For a second Mr. Hill imagined that the reception was for him alone, but an inquiry showed that he was mistaken and that in "Old Home Week" several thousand were sharing the welcome with Mr. Hill.

News From San Francisco Photoplay Circles

LOUIS R. LURIE, San Francisco capitalist and theatre owner, who recently disposed of the Capital theatre and who acquires the lease of the Columbia theatre at the end of 1924, has taken a ten-year lease of what formerly was the Pantages theatre, at 12th and Broadway, Oakland, and will expend more than $30,000 in improvements and reopen the theatre October 28 or November 4 under the name of the Lurie, with "The Covered Wagon." The Lurie theatre has obtained a franchise to play the Erlanger and Shubert road attractions for the next ten years. The Lurie will be under the direction of J. A. Brehany, one of the best known theatre men on the Pacific Coast. Bill McStay, who has been Brehany's assistant in numerous theatrical ventures during the past four years, will be the resident manager.

Sol Pincus, for many years associated with the executive staff of the Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, comprising the Granada, Imperial (which Pincus built up), California and Portola theatres, is to assume the management of the Capitol, just acquired by the Rothchild interests. Pincus has had a long and varied career under the Rothchild banner and his promotion is hailed as an important step in the growth of the Rothchild chain of theatres in San Francisco. Identified with the management of several of the Rothchild theatres, Pincus has in recent months been a member of the advertising and publicity staff of the organization. His appointment to the managership of the Capitol, announced by J. A. Partington, general manager of the Rothchild theatres, is held as in keeping with the policy of the Capitol theatre. The new Capitol will open with the "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

George Schakultetski, a Russian of high birth who was forced to escape from his native land, attracted much attention at the Coliseum as a singer.

Max Fisher and his syncopating orchestra made their Warfield debut and Lipschultz will conduct the Music Masters as usual in overtures and for the accompaniment of the picture.

The new theatre now being erected by Samuel H. Levin in Union street, between Buchanan and Webster, is to be called the Metropolitan. With the completion of this project San Francisco is to add to its already imposing array of beautiful playhouses another picture house of distinction.

Among the latest changes made in the Rothchild theatres are the promotion of Gene Nesbit, formerly assistant manager at the California theatre, to house manager of the Imperial.

Cleveland

JOHN J. MURRAY, the genial proprietor of the Opera House and Hippodrome in Warren, was in town the other day, and called on as many exchanges as he could in the course of his limited visit. Murray is always so much in demand when he comes to Cleveland that he has hard time dividing his time among his many friends.

"Doc" Horater, who manages the Temple theatre in Toledo, after an absence from the exhibiting field for over a year, made a hurried trip to Cleveland last week. Horater is full of old-time pep and is planning big things in the way of exploitation for his Toledo patrons.

Charles W. Brill, of the Empress theatre, Akron, was one of the week's visitors in the Film Exchange Building. Tim Roberts, who owns, manages and controls the White Way and Park theatres in Mansfield, gladdened the hearts of his Cleveland friends by paying them a visit the other day.

Mrs. V. E. Sager, one of the few women exhibitors in this territory, is making quite a name for herself. She runs the Southern theatre, Akron, and, by keeping her finger right on the pulse of her patrons, has built up a big and growing business. Mrs. Sager books her attractions. She is always at the theatre to greet her patrons as they come into the lobby. She knows them all by name. For the most part she calls them by their first names. She knows their families and their family affairs, and always asks after the absent ones. She knows who comes to the theatre and who does not. And when she sees those who do not come, she asks them why they do not come. So, she finds out just what kind of pictures her patrons want to see. In this way the patrons see the attractions they want to see, and Mrs. Sager sees the patrons she wants to see. And this personal contact between theatre owner and theatre patron spells success, not only for Mrs. Sager, but also for others who will take the time and exert the patience to bridge the gap between exhibitor and patron.

Manager Frederick of the Elvira, Paris and Standard theatres, Lorain, was in town on a booking expedition the other day, and visited all the exchanges in the Film Building.

Frank Gross who has an interest in the Market Square and Grand theatres, Cleveland, has taken over the Superior theatre, Superior Avenue and East 86th Street. The Superior theatre was formerly owned by George Schenker.

Max Schiessel, who is known to exhibitors in this part of the country, through his connections with several prominent film exchanges, is now managing the Reel theatre, East Ninth Street, Cleveland. Victor Wolcott recently purchased the Reel theatre from the Zoffer brothers.

George Zegiob, who manages the Cozy and Dreamland theatres in Lorain, was a visitor in the Film Exchange Building during the past week.

The many friends of Max Schachtel will be sorry to learn that, for the second time this year, he is at Mount Sinai Hospital. Schachtel was manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange at one time. But for past five years he has retired from active business, giving what time he did work, to the "Y" theatre, which he owns.

A novel scheme of exploiting exploitation and, at the same time, rendering a distinct service to the exhibitors in the western part of the state, was originated and put through by William Exton, exploiteer of the Paramount exchange, Detroit, Mich. The exhibit was held in the Rowe Hotel, Grand Rapids, Mich., the week of September 7.

A store on the street floor was rented and completely equipped with all the paraphernalia which Paramount puts out to "put over" the pictures for the mutual benefit of exhibitors and public. The attractively decorated window drew the attention of the general public. Notices of the exhibition had been mailed to the exhibitors, and besides the local film men, who called many times to get direct lines on the most effective ways of utilizing the exploitation, about forty or fifty out-of-town men from the surrounding territory called. Four members of the state home office were on hand to furnish expert advice.

This exhibit was held for the purpose of establishing direct contact with the exhibitors.

Seattle

B. O. LOMERSON and F. P. Shuellein, representatives of the William Hearst motion picture enterprises, spent several days in this city recently at Manager L. J. Schlaifer's Universal exchange. "The Birth of a Nation" returned to Seattle for a three-day engagement recently at Manager John Danz's Colonial theatre. It is believed that this picture has played more engagements in more Seattle theatres than any other picture ever produced. Admission prices at the Colonial were raised recently by Manager Danz to twenty cents after six at night, instead of the straight ten-cent policy at any time that the Colonial adhered to during the spring and summer seasons.

Through the installation of a central switchboard in the Liberty theatre, all information pertaining to the Jensen-Von Herberg houses in Seattle, including the Liberty, Strand and Coliseum, is given out from the one house. All theatres, in their advertising, advise their patrons to call "Main 0012" for the attractions, time of starting, etc., at any of the three houses. The system is declared to simplify to a great extent the policy of telephone service and information to patrons, as evidenced by the experience of the first few weeks.

Floyd E. Wesp, assistant manager at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre, has been receiving much praise during recent weeks for the novel presentations which he has been arranging for the programs at the theatre. Mr. Wesp came to the Blue Mouse after several years' experience in other motion picture houses in Seattle and other cities and towns in this state.

Vic Gauntlett, special exploitation agent for "Human Wreckage" in the Northwest territory, spent a week in Bellingham recently, making plans for the exhibition of his picture in that city, following its Seattle engagement the middle of October.

Central Penn.

PETER MAGARO, manager and owner of the New Regent motion picture theatre, Harrisburg, announced that the formal opening of the Coliseum, his newly erected palatial cabaret and dance hall, at Fourth and Market streets, would take place on the evening of Columbus Day, October 12. The Coliseum is a distinct enterprise in no way connected with Mr. Magaro's motion picture theatre interests.

Among the prominent Harrisburg exhibitors who were among those from many parts of the state who were guests of honor of Carr & Scadd at the opening of the latter's fine new theatre, the Colonial, in Lebanon, on the night of October 1, was Peter Magaro, owner of the New Regent, Harrisburg. He spoke in terms of high praise for the appointments and beauty of the new Lebanon picture house.

Hartman, and will close it.

The Family theatre, Mahanoy City, is being entirely rebuilt by T. J. Koch, contractor. The theatre hereafter will be on the ground floor instead of the second floor.

Buffalo

E. O. WEINBERG, for many years manager of theatres in this state, has been appointed manager of the West End Cinema in London, England, which house has been leased by Universal. Mr. and Mrs. Weinberg left Buffalo last week for New York from which port they have already sailed. Mr. Weinberg came to Buffalo from Troy a decade ago to manage the Elmwood theatre, one of Buffalo's finest neighborhood houses. From the Elmwood he went to the old Mark Strand on Main street (now razed) where he succeeded Earl L. Crabb as manager. When this house closed "Eddie" went to Schenectady where he opened the new State for the Mark interests. This house closed several months ago for a period and then Mr. Weinberg returned to Buffalo as manager of the local exchange of Renown Pictures Corporation, which post he resigned to accept the London appointment.

E. O. Weinberg

Bond Photoplays Corporation of Buffalo came close to taking over all of Film Row last week. Yep, early in the week Manager Sndney Samson announced that his company has acquired the distribution of Preferred product in the Buffalo and Albany territory and before the week was over came out with another announcement that Bond would distribute the Warner Brothers' productions, which until now have been handled from the Dependable Pictures exchange in the Beyer Building. Allan S. Moritz will continue to act as state supervisor for Preferred with headquarters in the Bond office, Buffalo. Jim Fater, who was manager for Preferred in Buffalo, is now in the Rochester territory as a Bond salesman. Jim Speer, who was manager of the Albany office, has been transferred to Syracuse where he works in conjunction with Jack Kraus for Bond. R. T. Murphy is covering the Buffalo territory for Bond. The acquiring of the Warner Brothers product will not effect the staff of the latter office in any way. It looks like Bond has got its place in the sun now.

"Dick" McManus, manager of the Buffalo Paramount exchange, is in St. Louis undergoing an operaton.

Andrew Smith, assistant general sales manager, is in temporary charge of the Buffalo First National office, pending the appointment of a permanent manager. All the boys at the Goldwyn exchange are planning to put Buffalo on top during Jimmy Grainger Week, November 25 to December 1. From the looks of the contracts now coming in, Tom Brady says it will be the biggest week in the history of the local office.

Art Young was called to Rochester last week through the death of his father. Art is office manager at Universal exchange.

Southeast

MOTION picture interests of Wilmington and Charlotte, North Carolina, have some serious problems worrying them right now. In Wilmington a religious revival, with the Rev. Gypsy Smith as leader is starting early in October to continue for six weeks or more. Over in Charlotte Billy Sunday himself is billed to start a series of revival meetings next February despite the fact that local business and civic organizations for many weeks opposed the granting of a permit for the noted evangelist to appear there. These revivals always seriously interfere with business at the local motion picture theatres.

District Manager Fred Creswell of Famous Players-Lasky met last week in Atlanta with all the zone and exchange managers of the Southeastern states for the purpose of discussing and formulating plans for the new system of test runs in this zone and for the formulation of a general sales plan. Those in attendance were: J. B. Dugger, Dallas; C. E. Peppiatt, Charlotte; Scotty Chestnutt, Jacksonville; C. M. Peacock, Oklahoma City; Harold Wilkes, New Orleans; Dave Prince, Atlanta; Ernest Dawson, of the District office and exploiteers C. L. Winston, Harry Swift and H. W. Fisher.

After nearly five years spent under the banner of First National during which time he has been very active in its affairs, William A. Sanges has entered the independent field becoming affiliated with A. C. Bromberg's newly formed Progress Pictures, Inc., with a system of exchanges that is to girdle the entire southeastern States. The Progress organization started just a year ago in Atlanta and within the next two months will have seven active exchanges in operation. Prior to his affiliation with First National Mr. Sanges had film experience with the old J. Frank Hatch Film Company, of Pittsburgh.

A new theatre is soon to be built in La-Follette, Tenn., by the present owners of the Palace theatre there. Earl Hendron, the manager, states they expect to have the theatre ready by the first of the year.

Washington

THE house staff at Crandall's Metropolitan theatre enters the new Fall and Winter season resplendent in new uniforms of purple and gold. Last season's color scheme of two tones of blue was abandoned by reason of the fact that a new hotel in the Capital, being struck with the effectiveness of the Metropolitan's uniforms, adopted exactly the same models and colors. The new uniforms are the best looking the Metropolitan staff ever has had and lead the town in sartorial pre-eminence.

Miss Elizabeth Dyer addressed the D. C. Supervising principals at the Franklin School last week, outlining the visual education work. Miss Dyer who is the circuit teacher in charge, explained how the Crandall and other neighborhood theatres are being used in this interesting work.

L. M. Baker of the Empire theatre, Winchester, Va., who has been severely ill for the past two weeks, suffered a relapse last week, but is now safely on the road to recovery.

D. P. Wine of Harrisburgh, operating the "New Virginia" theatre, there, was so unfortunate as to dislocate his knee, and was thus unable to attend the special Fall convention of the Virginia M.P.T.O. which held sessions at the Arlington hotel, in Washington, the first of last week.

Announcement was made here recently that the opening of the New Pryer National theatre at Richmond will be on October 22. "Her Reputation," a First National picture, is to be the opening show feature.

Another member of the Laemmle family paid a visit to the Washington exchange of Universal Pictures the past week. Sales Manager E. J. Smith left here Saturday for the other Universal exchanges to be visited by him in his sale drive that commences his regime in the new position of the national Laemmle organization.

Walter J. Price is jovial these days, since he won the $750 prize in the summer sales drive of Goldwyn exchange managers. Mr. Zimmerman, for some time acting office manager for Goldwyn, Washington, has been made a traveling auditor. "Lou" Ribnitzki has been made a Goldwyn booker at the Washington exchange.

George Emmans, formerly at the Loew's Palace theatre, is now the organist at E. J. Stutz's Chevy Chase theatre. The fall dance season in the Ball Room opened to a fine attendance last week.

Russell Sully is leaving Paramount, to join forces with Messrs. Lewis, Insley and Henderson in the general management of their new Eastern Shore Delaware, Maryland and Virginia circuit of film theatres. Dan Scanlan is now a member of the booking staff of Paramount. Other vacancies are being gradually filled in the Famous Players local exchange. Mr. Barber has taken Mr. Boucher's place, and Mr. Boucher has taken Mr. Sully's duties. C. P. Redick, traveling auditor for the Lasky concern was a caller at the local Paramount office, and was impressed by the big record hung up for last month by Harry Hunter and crew.

Charles Tyson of First National has been ill, the past few days, and Mr. Treleaven, has been temporarily filling the gap.

Announcement has been made that Miss Agnes J. Conradi, executive-corresponding secretary of the F-I-L-M Board of Trade of the Washington territory, has tendered her resignation, effective October 15th. Miss Conradi is expecting to take up a position in a local realtor's office.

The Sampliner Photo and Slide Exchange service of New York has recently arranged with Ben Lust to be represented here through his theatre accessory agency. B. Sampliner, who has operated in New York for ten years, came down to launch his new branch.

Metro, Washington, announces the recent resignation of Miss Lottie Brickner, contract department clerk, and the promotion of Miss Agnes Purdy, former booking clerk, to the vacancy.

H. L. Colman is back in the city, following his return from Europe, recently.

Something of the quality of the musical setting for "Rupert of Hentzau," as arranged by Daniel Breeskin, conducting the Metropolitan theatre symphony orchestra of thirty for last week's presentation, may be gathered from a brief resume of the standard works comprising the score. Interspersed with various other numbers were such classics as Meyerbeer's "Coronation March"; "Suite Characteristique," Tragina; Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony"; "Farewell Symphony" by Haydn; "Festmarch" by Witteborn; "Nocturne" in E Flat, by Chopin, played as a violin solo by Elias Breeskin; "Sakuntala" overture by Goldmark; "Ruy Blas" Mendelssohn; and F. Ethelbert Nevin's "Love Song." No wonder people liked it.

George N. Payette, Jr. and E. A. Sherwood of the Exhibitors' Film exchange have just returned from an extensive motor tour through the Shenandoah Valley of the Virginias, in the joint interests of First National and the Exhibitors' exchange. Frederick, Md., Winchester, Va., Harrisonburgh, Staunton and Woodstock were among the points visited. These itinerant Crandallians also snooped around historic New Market, Va., while the Marines East Coast Expeditionary Force of 1923, was re-enacting the Civil War battle of New Market, with the aid of the V. M. I. boys of to-day, who played the same role their illustrious "old grads" of the Sixties bore in the Confederate Army.

Summer cretonnes and crash seat covers in the Metropolitan theatre have yielded place to the Autumnal canary colored Baronet satin hangings, trimmed in royal blue. Later they will be superseded by the heavy blue velours of the winter months.

Butte

A RECENT issue of the Butte Miner had this to say about Merle M. Davis, leading exhibitor and prominent citizen:

"'All work and no play——' No, not exactly that but 'more work so others can play' might well fit the energetic, busy, yet genial existence of the manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company. Millions of dollars are expended each year to entertain the public—hundreds of theatre men are constantly striving to bring the best of that entertainment before the public. It is no easy task this choosing and regulating the showing of famous pictures and plays but Merle M. Davis has successfully managed the interests of the largest local theatrical company in the state for five years. His control extends over the Ansonia theatre, Broadway theatre and Orpheum theatre in Butte and the Marlow theatre in Helena, the state direction of the Pantages circuit, not at present showing in the state during the summer, and the booking of many of the larger road shows in the region.

Merle Davis

"Coming to Butte 25 years ago as the pioneer show card writer, he stayed to gain considerable fame as a cartoonist and publicity director for several dry goods houses, serving the 12 years prior to the actual management of the theatre company in the capacity of display director and state representative. Several of his cartoons have won him recognition in the pages of the nation's press.

"Some time before associating with the present company he was engaged in cartooning the current shows in advertisement for the Sullivan & Considine circuit.

"Mr. Davis was born in Shedd Station, Ore., in 1882, spending his boyhood days in Albany, Salem and Portland. He married Miss Mabel Gladys Bowen, daughter of E. M. Bowen, Montana pioneer, at the age of 21.

"In addition to being the president of the Montana Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Montana he is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Silver Bow Club, Woodmen of the World and a Shriner and thirty-second degree Mason.

"Mr. Davis's interest in civic affairs has made him a member of a great many community drives and especially during the world war his services and adaptability were in demand."

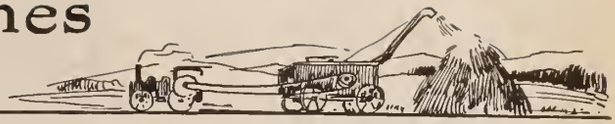
W. J. Sullivan, manager of the American and Rialto theatres of Butte, played the host royal to his staff of employees by giving them a social dance after the closing hours of the playhouses at the American hall.

C. R. Wade, formerly sales manager of the Pathe exchange in Butte, is now the branch manager of the territory under the general manager, Mr. Van Horn, whose headquarters are in Spokane.

O. K. Whipple, who was the booking manager for Pathe in the Butte exchange has gone to Seattle.

Mr. Bailey, manager and owner of the People's theatre of Butte, is offering an innovation in his house program. Blaine Allen's troupe of musical artists is the treat. The repertoire includes classical, popular, and the latest jazz hits.

W. J. Heineman, head of the Warner Bros. Butte exchange, has just returned from a statewide trip. While he was out in the territory, Mrs. Heineman handled the affairs of the exchange.



Harry Sigmond, manager of the First National exchange of Butte, has just returned from the Coast. His wife, Mrs. Alice Sigmond, died a few weeks ago and he with her father and brother took the remains to her old home at Olympia, Wash.

Mr. Sigmond has only been in Butte a short time and Mrs. Sigmond only a few weeks but a host of their new made friends have been shocked by her sudden death.

E. L. Wharton, owner of the Orpheum theatre, Glasgow, Mont., was in town arranging bookings for the coming season.

Des Moines

R. S. BALLENTYNE, branch manager, is putting Pathe to the fore in Iowa. For the week ending September 8 the largest week of sales the Des Moines exchange has ever had was turned in, with the largest part counting up to the personal sales of Ballentyne. He has an honest-John expression and a pleasant smile and the pep that gets him over the ground. Ballentyne made some big sales in the key towns.

B. B. Reingold, manager of the Goldwyn Distributing Co., returned from a week's trip in the territory, including Waterloo, and reports that all the exhibitors said business was good.

Bert McKean has purchased the theatre at Gliddon, Ia. His deal to buy the theatre at Reinbeck fell through. William R. Shay, until recently manager for the Universal exchange at Sioux Falls, S. D., is now covering the key towns for F. B. O.

The manager of the Lyric theatre at Madrid, C. Hales, was one of those who visited the Goldwyn exchange offices last week.

Famous Players in Des Moines is leading in the contest on Paramount sales and with such a big lead that it certainly seems assured that the prizes will come this way when the contest is closed next week.

Ralph Thayer is the new manager of Des Moines' largest exclusive picture house, the Des Moines theatre. Thayer comes from St. Louis, where he was exploitation man and house manager for Famous Players.

B. M. Jones of the Opera House at Lytton, Nate Chapman of the Englert theatre at Iowa City, and Carrigar of the Crystal at Clear Lake, were in Des Moines last week and visited First National. The new offices are being very nicely fixed up with new equipment, and it is going to be a swell-looking place or Weinberg, manager, is going to be fooled.

John Graham has sold his theatre at Osocola. He's looking about for another theatre in which to invest. Jess Collins, of Perry, visited the F. B. O. offices this week.

Dan Lederman, general manager for all the Universal exchanges in South America, has arrived in Des Moines. Mr. Lederman, it is understood, is to be host at a party given to his old Des Moines friends. Lederman was formerly manager of the local Universal exchange. Lederman is the son-in-law of Nicholas Amos, Pathe salesman, who makes his home in Omaha.

D. Adams, assistant general sales manager for Universal, visited the Des Moines exchange this week.

The Pathe staff members have received their prizes, rewards for the winning of the recent contest, and though plans for the official celebration party of the exchange members have not been made the party which Esther Frost, stenographer, gave at her home Saturday evening served somewhat in the nature of a celebration. Members of the Pathe staff and those to whom they are matrimonially attached were the guests.

Mr. Sage, of Adel, was in Des Moines last week and visited the Goldwyn exchange. Joe Smith, of the Majestic theatre, at Fort Dodge, also called. So did Mathews, of the Lyric theatre at Boone.

F. M. Fangman, booker for Goldwyn, spent the week end in Omaha. K. U. Breeding, who runs the Strand theatre at Mystic, stopped in at the Universal office last week.

Charles Davie, salesman for Universal in Des Moines, is to be special representative for Universal out of Minneapolis.

Mrs. Stein, of the Garden theatre, at Atlantic, visited the Des Moines exchanges last week.

John Waller, of Glenwood, Iowa, purchased the Lyric theatre of Osceola from John Graham. Mr. Graham is looking for another theatre.

The Des Moines Pathe exchange was the winner in the Pearson Pennant Race in the Capitol League class and now the checks amounting to $1,500 are momentarily expected to gladden the lives of the Pathe staff. Although the prizes do not provide rewards for those outside of the manager, assistant manager, salesmen, booker and cashier, the Pathe staff plans to divvy up so that everyone will get a share, either by dividing the assistant manager's prize, since the Des Moines exchange has no such office, or by chipping some off of each one's prize. Everyone worked hard on the contest but it agreed that the largest credit goes to Manager Ballantyne, who made a real record. In the one week ending Sept. 8, the Des Moines exchange sent in $15,000 in contracts, mostly for two-reel pictures.

D. B. Lederman, who has had charge of all the Universal exchanges in South America for the past three years, arrived in New York on the twenty-fourth. He was accompanied by his wife who came on west to be with her people in Omaha while Lederman stayed in New York to attend to some business matters. He is to wire Des Moines as soon as he finds out just when he will arrive here as plans are under way to arrange a dinner party in his honor. Lederman was formerly manager of the Universal exchange here. He is the son-in-law of Nicholas Amos, one of Pathe's veteran salesmen. The Ledermans will be in this country for three months.

Manager Nichols, of the Des Moines Famous Players offices, has been promoted to the office of district manager while Frank Crawford, salesman for the northeastern territory, has been given charge of the office here. Nichols, who will have charge of the Des Moines, Minneapolis, Omaha and Sioux Falls, S. D. branches, takes the place of Phil Reisman who is making a jump to Canada. Reisman has been in Des Moines the last week.

The Strand theatre, stage, back wall and part of the roof, dropped off into Indian Creek during the showing of the picture in the tornado which struck Council Bluffs, Iowa, Friday evening, but no one was hurt. The creek overflowed flooding the downtown district for a square mile, and six people lost their lives. As a result of the tornado and flood the Des Moines First National exchange has been busy with last minute rushes of pictures to fill in for those which did not come through from Omaha due to lack of transportation. The Capitol theatre's vaudeville show also failed to arrive for Saturday but by a roundabout way and in a special car arrived in Des Moines in time for the Sunday show.

A. H. Blank left for New York where he will attend a meeting of First National officials while next week he will be at the board of directors' meeting at West Baden.

John Waller has purchased the Lyric theatre from Graham of Osceola, and last week he visited the First National exchange to arrange for service. Waller formerly ran the theatre at Glenwood but sold out.

C. W. Ross, salesman for Goldwyn, visited the key towns this week, distributed around a few winning smiles and returned with contracts and the news that business is rip-roaring.

W. W. Hield of Collins, superintendent of the schools there, visted the Goldwyn exchange to book pictures for the shows which are put on in the school auditorium. There is no motion picture exhibitor in the town and there has been none for the past couple of years.

Otto Parknen of Marnego called at the Goldwyn offices last week.

G. M. Solon, otherwise known as Gene, owner of the nicest exclusive picture houses in the northwestern part of the state—and this means all outside Des Moines and includes some larger towns as Sioux Falls, Sioux City, etc.—has installed a new Bartola organ. There are two other picture houses in Spencer but this is the first house to have an organ. Solon secured Herma Hansell Stanley from Chicago to manipulate the Bartola. It was put into use last Monday and made a big hit.

On Sept. 12 Oelwein had its fifty year jubilee celebration. The three theatres, the Gem, Grand and Orpheum, three theatres which do very, very good business, showed a specially made film called "The History of Oelwein." The picture was shown free during the day and in the evening the regular shows were put on. The theatres did marvelous business and were fairly mobbed with crowds.

Lawrence Prosser, lately of F. B. O., started in at the Pathe exchange on Monday as special two-reel comedies salesman. He will cover the Omaha territory for four weeks and the Des Moines exchange for the next four. This will be old territory to Prosser as he used to be with the World Realty Co. some time ago. Pathe has not had a special two-reel man before.

C. E. Carrigan, of the Clear Lake theatre, was in at the Pathe exchange this week. Visitors at the Universal exchange were C. E. Dunsmoor, of the Lyric, at Jewell; J. W. Thornton, of the Lyric, at Greenfield; Tom Ackland, of Swan; Egan and Wade, of Woodward, and Harry De Baggio, of the Star, at Colfax.

Mrs. Dilsaver, of Garden Grove, will reopen her theatre some time in October. Mrs. Dilsaver has been in California and the theatre has been operated during the past year by Hoadley.

Ed Branstetter now has charge of shipping for F. B. O. in Des Moines. He was formerly with the Kansas City F. B. O. office.

William Shea, who is travelling North Iowa for F. B. O. was formerly manager of the Universal exchange at Sioux Falls, S. D.

F. W. Young, manager for F. B. O., spent the week end in Chicago at a sales meeting there.

Stanley Mayer, formerly with First National in Kansas City, is covering the southern part of the state for Goldwyn. He used to be in this territory five or six years ago with Paramount.

Ted Mendenhall, of the Famous Players staff, is sick and ordered by the doctor to stay in bed.

Exchange and Exhibitor Items from St. Louis

TWO armed men attacked John P. Shea, manager of the Novelty theatre, 3524 Easton avenue, St. Louis, as he stepped into his automobile in front of the theatre after closing the show house. Shea hit one of the men, attempting to knock a revolver from his hand. The second man then hit Shea who called for help. His cries attracted two patrolmen a block away and they hurried to his assistance. The officers emptied revolvers at the would-be robbers who managed to escape. The Novelty is owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company.

R. J. McManus, manager of the Buffalo (N. Y.) Paramount exchange, underwent a minor operation at St. Luke's Hospital, St. Louis, on October 3. He was able to leave the hospital in a few days. McManus has been spending his vacation in St. Louis and decided to have the operation performed while here.

District Manager Le Beau, of Paramount, was a caller of the week. He is very enthusiastic about the outlook for the fall and winter seasons in the St. Louis and Kansas City territories.

Roy Dickson, manager for Selznick-Select pictures, visited Jacksonville, Carlinville and Staunton during the week and landed some nice contracts.

Production-Distribution Activities

"Mail Man" Endorsed by Ladies Auxiliary

Emory Johnson's epic dramatization of the postal workers, "The Mail Man," for F. B. O. has been officially endorsed by the hundreds of members of the National Ladies Auxiliary to the National Letter Carriers Association. Production has just been completed by Mr. Johnson at the Pat Powers studios in Hollywood. It is scheduled for release in December.

In a latter from Mrs. Elizabeth Johnston of 107 Kelso Road, Columbus, Ohio, the women of the auxiliary set forth their enthusiastic endorsement. The letter reads in part:

"As secretary to the National Auxiliary to the National Association of Letter Carriers, I do most earnestly endorse the motion picture, 'The Mail Man,' and sincerely hope we may be of some assistance in getting this picture shown in as many places as possible, to as many people as possible."

Will Show "Leavenworth Case" Authoress

Whitman Bennett, producer of "The Leavenworth Case," which is being released by Vitagraph, will introduce a novelty in the film that has been offered to exhibitors. After the main title there will be a hundred feet of Anna Katherine Green, the author of this famous detective story. Miss Green is now seventy-seven years old and is still actively engaged in writing, having published only recently a new novel. She lives in Rochester, New York, and is the wife of Charles Rohlfs, once a distinguished and popular actor who played in "The Leavenworth Case" when it was dramatized in 1891. He is living and is now a designer of furniture.

Detroit Adds Praise to "Going Up"

Douglas MacLean Vehicle Continues Popularity in Different Cities

DURING its run at John H. Kunsky's Madison theatre, Detroit, last week, the Douglas MacLean production, "Going Up," maintained the high popularity pace which it had set at the Grand, Pittsburgh, the week previously. The Detroit Free Press said of it:

"It is not often that a screen player is able to follow one smashing success with another equally as good, but Douglas MacLean has done this in his latest comedy, 'Going Up.' It is just as good as 'The Hottentot.' Those who saw MacLean in 'The Hottentot' will realize that this is high praise. 'Going Up' has all the thrills that characterized his other great comedy, and is filled from first to last with comedy of the most infectious sort. It is one of the most delightful of recent pictures and will endear this clever young actor-producer to screen devotees everywhere."

The Detroit News said: "There is much amusing by-play, and MacLean's facial expressions, registering fear, surprise, relief and other emotions, readily score their points. The sub-titles also help a lot. What happens after the hero takes to the air should be imagined rather than described. The thrilling nose dives, tail spins, near crashes with the rival plane and finally the hero's sudden descent to earth keep the audience thrilled to the point of applause. Some of the stunts are breath-taking."

Said the Norfolk, Va., News-Ledger: "If the size of the audiences witnessing Douglas MacLean in 'Going Up' at the Wells continues to increase as it has for the past two nights, capacity houses will be recorded at that theatre tomorrow. And the increase is due to the boosting the picture is receiving at the hands of those who have already seen it. 'Going Up' has turned out to be the best comedy in which popular Doug MacLean has appeared and one of the best ever shown on the silver sheet. It is a scream from start to finish."

"Scaramouche" Campaign Effective

Dignified Exploitation Marks Exploitation in Big City Premieres

FEW motion pictures have received more elaborate and dignified exploitation than that which is being concentrated on Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche," the big Metro picture, it is claimed.

For exploitation, three important angles suggested themselves. First, there is Rex Ingram, creator of "The Four Horsemen," "The Prisoner of Zenda" and other big productions. Second, there are the stars and players, Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro, Lewis Stone, thirty other principals of note, and 10,000 actors. Third, the story and its atmosphere of love, romance and adventure.

Any showman who sees one screening of the picture will realize at once that ordinary "ballyhoos" in connection with it are out of the question, says Metro. The story has a tremendous appeal to all classes; yet to resort to street parades or other ballyhoos in connection with "Scaramouche" would tend to harm rather than help it. The experience of officials of Metro Pictures Corporation in handling "Scaramouche" up to the present time is that it creates word-of-mouth publicity for itself that brings a speedy increase of patronage.

Therefore, when J. E. D. Meador, director of publicity, advertising and exploitation for Metro; M. J. Kavanagh, manager of the "Scaramouche" special showings, and Bert B. Perkins, exploitation manager for Metro, conferred to map out their campaign they agreed on the following policy:

Liberal newspaper advertising and use of billboards and window displays.

Campaigns to be started two weeks before showings in large cities and kept at highest pressure up to opening night, and then held steady during remainder of run.

Working on the exploitation angle, Mr. Perkins began arranging national tie-ups. The first big one was with Grossett and Dunlap, publishers of the photoplay edition of "Scaramouche," illustrated with stills from the production. Through this arrangement more than 3,000 window displays were guaranteed in twenty large cities. New York City led this list; Chicago came next; Pittsburgh was third, and Cincinnati, Baltimore and Washington followed. The next tie-up was with the Slendaform Co., through an arrangement with Garland R. O'Neill, of the O'Neill-Lloyd Co., Inc., by which more than 150 window displays were arranged for New York City; 200 for Chicago and correspondingly large numbers in other cities. Arrangements also are being made for national tie-ups with a candy company which is known throughout the entire country; a big piano company and various drug stores, clothing and shoe stores.

Canada Rights Sold for "Only a Shop Girl"

The United Exhibitors of Canada, Ltd., have acquired the distribution rights of "Only a Shop Girl" for the entire Canadian territory.

Messrs. Jack Hunter, Bud Leonard and Phil Haza have almost completed their plans for a shop girl newspaper contest to be conducted in every key city in Canada in conjunction with the first-run showing of this picture.

In addition to the newspaper tie-up, the Canadian exhibitors are arranging an exploitation campaign whereby the mercantile establishments throughout Canada will cooperate.

Chapel Interior Built for "Big Brother"

A score of architects, artists and decorators are hard at work at the Paramount Long Island studio designing the great interior chapel set to be used in the Allan Dwan production, "Big Brother." Stained glass windows twinkle in the sunlight a hundred feet above the big stage floor, while far below, half hidden in the sombre light, stands the altar in all its piety. In the rear of the church, and raised above the rows of pews, is the choir loft and organ.

Charles Henderson, who comes directly from an engagement on Broadway in "Icebound," has the role of Father Dan Marron, pastor of the church.

F.B.O. to Distribute "Phantom Justice"

THE Film Booking Offices announce this week plans to distribute a second Richard Thomas production entitled "Phantom Justice."

The picture carries a cast consisting of Rod LaRoque, Frederick Vroom, Gordon Domont, Garry O'Dell, Lillian Leighton, Estelle Taylor, Kathryn McGuire and Fred Moore. The production is scheduled for release January 13th.

The title of Richard Thomas' first production "The Silent Accuser" has been changed to "The Love Pirate" and will be released November 13th.

"Temple of Venus" Early Fox Release

"The Temple of Venus" will be an early Fox release on Broadway. The picture, with one thousand American beauties, glorifies the nation's womanhood and at the same time surrounds her with a spectacle of nature and a tense story of love and adventure, according to Fox. It was filmed at Santa Cruz island, the Paradise of the Pacific. Directed by Henry Otto, the Fox company passed 22 weeks in this romantic spot.

The story was written by Katherine Carr. Mary Philbin has the principal role. In the leading male role is David Butler. Other prominent names are William Boyd, Marian Harlan, Leon Barry and Fred Eric.

"In Palace of King" Is Cheered at Preview

Enthusiastic applause, rarely accorded a motion picture, greeted "In the Palace of the King," Emmett Flynn's Goldwyn period romance, at a public preview held at a Pasadena theatre recently. As the film ended, the audience expressed their approval of the story by lusty applause, and Flynn and members of the cast, who attended the preview, received scores of compliments for their work.

Among those attending the showing were Director Flynn, Blanche Sweet, Edmund Lowe, Aileen Pringle, Hobart Bosworth, Pauline Starke, William V. Mong, Lucien Littlefield, June Mathis, Alan Crosland, Carey Wilson, Thomas N. Firanda and others from the Goldwyn studios.

Heyl in New York for Conferences

Anderson Vice-President Discusses Production Policy of Organization

MARTIN J. HEYL, vice president of Anderson Pictures Corporation, has arrived in New York from California for a series of important conferences with Carl Anderson and to meet with prominent authors and others.

Mr. Heyl is supervising all productions now being made for Anderson Pictures Corporation and will be permanently located in California for that purpose. For years Mr. Heyl has been a successful construction engineer and before expanding his interests to the motion picture industry, he made a detailed survey of production from an engineering viewpoint.

He believes that production costs can be greatly curtailed by the application of successful scientific methods to the mechanics of studio work. "Scientific management," says Mr. Heyl, "seems incompatible with the average director's conception of artistic production. Of course, I thoroughly agree that there must be art in production and pictures cannot be reduced to a factory-made commodity. But there are certain principles of business-like procedure and economic operation which, I feel, are largely overlooked in the studios and which can be made an advantage rather than a hindrance to artistic work.

"The finished picture is the object; its utility, its practical worth to the exhibitors and such pictures can be made, comparable in every way with productions that cost much more today, for around $100,000. This can be accomplished by a careful check of all materials going into the picture rather than a lavish outlay in the form of exorbitant star salaries, expensive location junkets and needlessly expensive studio costs.

"Pictures should be planned and built for the exhibitors in accordance with their specifications, rather than to suit the whims of stars and directors. Exorbitant rentals, based on sky-vaulting production costs, are unhealthy and uneconomic and do not work to the best interests of theatre owners.

"We would prefer to call ourselves picture engineers, rather than any other term and, by business-like methods, efficient handling and economic operations, strive to live up to that name by actually building pictures of practical value for the exhibitors for whom we build. That, in brief, is the production creed of Anderson Pictures Corporation."

Ray Premiere Wins L. A. Reviewers

"Courtship of Myles Standish" Lauded At Grauman's Million Dollar Theatre

CHARLES RAY took Los Angeles by storm at the opening last week in Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, of the world premiere of the Associated Exhibitors super-production, "The Courtship of Myles Standish."

Miss Florence Lawrence said in the Examiner: "When you see the brilliant and dramatic film which Charles Ray and a coterie of assistants have constructed out of the old Longfellow poem you will stand amazed.

"Charles Ray, as John Alden, has a part which is out of the ordinary for him. You will like Ray in his new characterization. His dramatic power becomes the more vivid and convincing as he turns from the mocking mood of the early reels to the tender moments when he caught in the complexities of that delicate triangle."

L. B. Fowler said in the course of a review in the Daily News: "Undoubtedly Frederic Sullivan realized he had exceptional material to work with when the scrip of 'The Courtship of Myles Standish' was handed to him. He realized also that Charles Ray had exceptional ability and that no sweeter person could have been selected to play Priscilla than Enid Bennett.

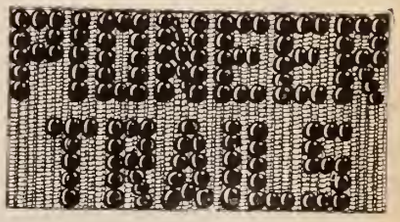
"There is plenty of suspense. When the waters of the Atlantic run over the starboard of the little Mayflower you pity those on board. In places, especially during the voyage, the picture is most thrilling. It is a wonderful story. It is a story we all loved during our school days, and still love. Ray and Sullivan have given us something to remember."

Edwin Schallert said in the Times: "The production is one to which Mr. Ray has given more time and thought and energy than to anything that he has done previously. The most enjoyment will be derived by the audiences, we believe, from those episodes which relate to the life aboard the Mayflower. Truly, this was a remarkable setting, with the real atmosphere of the sea. Even the seagulls seem to surround it naturally.

Technical Staff for Badger Named

CLARENCE BADGER has assembled his technical staff for his next picture, "The Swamp Angel," which he is to produce for First National with Colleen Moore in the leading role.

Three of his staff were members of his "Potash and Perlmutter" company, which picturized the famous Montague Glass stories and plays. These are Don O'Brien, his assistant director, Rudolph Berquist, cameraman and Reggie Lanning, second cameraman.



Milton Menasco, who has designed several of First National's recent spectacular settings, is his art director. Production on "The Swamp Angel" which is a screen version by Edward Montagne of Richard Connell's story of the same title, will begin within the next two weeks.

Crowds Greet Stars on Eastern Trip

The trip east via Santa Fe of Elliott Dexter, Bryant Washburn, Mabel Forrest, together with Samuel V. Grand, president of Grand-Asher, through which pictures will be distributed, was one long triumphal procession, according to wires received at the Grand studio.

At every city or town where they stopped for any length of time, such as Albuquerque, Chicago, Kansas City, etc., reporters from local papers met them at the train and a throng of admirers strove to shake hands with their favorites.

Besides those mentioned, Ben Wilson, producer; R. William Neill, who made the Dexter picture; Mrs. Dexter, Mrs. Grand, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bishoff, Jo Sternberg and others were in the party. A compartment car had been reserved for the movie company, which is bound for New York, where "The Way Men Love," Dexter's picture, and "Try And Get It," which Cullen Tate directed for Washburn, will be previewed at the Biltmore ballroom or in some other big hotel.

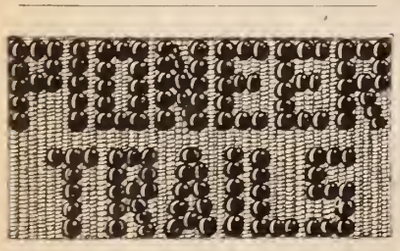
Sam Zierler of Commonwealth Exchange, New York, Says:

"'THE BAREFOOT BOY' has more real box-office value and exploitation possibilities than any pictures I have seen this season."

Warners Close Big Foreign Deal

GUS SCHLESINGER, General Manager of Warner Bros. Foreign Department, who left for England September 1st, has cabled the news to the Home Office that the Film Booking Office, Ltd., have secured the franchise for the Warners' eighteen features for the season of 1923-24. The deal was consummated with Arthur Clavering, Managing Director of the Film Booking Office, Ltd., in London.

Mr. Schlesinger took abroad with him prints of "The Gold Diggers," "Little Johnny Jones," and "The Printer's Devil." A print of the Warner Special, "Where the North Begins," was also included. Others of the eighteen which were included in the deal are "Tiger Rose," "Beau Brummel," "Deburau," "Babbitt," "Lucretia Lombard," "The Tenth Woman," "Daddies," "The Age of Innocence," "Lovers' Lane," "Broadway After Dark," "Cornered," "Being Respectable," and Wesley Barry in "The Country Kid" and "George Washington, Jr."



Klein to Handle "Great Expectations"

Hopp Hadley reports that he has placed his Charles Dickens feature, "Great Expectations," with Klein Distributing Corporation of Boston for release in New England, New York and Eastern Pennsylvania have also been disposed of and he expects to have it booking in all important territories in a few weeks.

This Dickens novel was produced by Nordisk Company who also produced "Our Mutual Friend," launched by Wid Gunning, and "David Copperfield" now being distributed by Associated Exhibitors. Little Buddy Martin, who stars in "Great Expectations" and "David Copperfield," is thus being introduced to American audiences in two Charles Dickens pictures at the same time.

C.B.C. New Product Sold for Argentine

A deal of some size was closed by Mr. J. C. Barnstyn, foreign representative of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, whereby the Sociedad General Cinematografica acquires the rights to "The Marriage Market." "Yesterday's Wife," "Discontented Husbands" and "Traffic in Hearts" in the territory of Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia.

The Simplex Projection Twins who were crowned by royalty at a huge benefit event in Sydney, Australia.

Simplex Twins Are Awarded Crowns

Praised by King George's Representative at Benefit Event in Sydney

IN far off Sydney, Australia, the Sunshine Club, which was organized to bring sunshine into the lives of unfortunately poor children of the city, appealed for funds to further propagate its splendid mission.

This appeal was heard and answered in a most substantial and hearty manner by the motion picture industry of the Antipodes. A truly representative committee of trade leaders working with civic and industrial representatives soon completed plans for a mammoth movie ball, the first, by the way, in Sydney.

That the ball, which was held in the Palais Royal, was a financial and social success is apparent in the reports covering the affair as indicated in the Australian trade press and through letters received here from those in charge.

One of the striking novelties introduced by George W. Todd, sales manager of the Australasian Films, Ltd., Simplex distributors in Australia, was the presentation of the Simplex Twins. Two boys (real twins by the way), Ian and Howard Feakes-Keast, were equipped with elaborate costumes designed by Mr. Todd which were so cleverly gotten up that at first glance the spectator invariably remarked that here indeed was a brace of the well known Simplexes that had come to life.

Not only was the mechanical detail of the mechanism carried out in a most faithful manner, but the familiar lines of the type "S" lamphouses and magazines were followed in a way that was truly marvelous, giving a technically correct appearance to these figures that was remarked by all who knew the Simplex. To add to the illusion, the lamphouses were electrically equipped in a way that permitted the twins to snap on the current, thereby producing a sharp clear light through the projector lens while a convenient operating device set in motion the revolving shutter, with the result that two animated, live Simplexes mingled with the throng flickering their way to fame.

And fame indeed it was, for in the royal box sat the patrons of the ball—H. M. King George's state representative, Governor Sir Walter Davidson, and Dame Margaret Davidson, D. B. E. In the midst of the merry making, there came a summons for the Simplex Twins to present themselves before Her Excellency, Dame Margaret Davidson, and in the presence of a suddenly hushed multitude, the first lady of Australia bestowed first prize to the Simplex Twins and addressed them as follows: "I must compliment you on your fine characters and splendid deportment—you are fit to grace functions of this nature in any part of the world." Her Excellency displayed great interest in the mechanical and electrical working features of the twins, and was particularly pleased to know that they were the prototypes of the machine that presents pictures "that are kind to the eyes." And as Mr. Todd, their mechanical father, added: "The youths who played the characters are perfect twins equally alike as two type 'S' units." And so before the evening was out, it was recorded that the Sunshine Club had been provided with a nest egg of approximately $10,000, and the Simplex Twins proved their worthiness to travel in the best society. And what, may we ask, could one evening produce more? But we almost forgot—it proved also that one George W. Todd, the man who has put the Simplex on Australia's map, could show "little old Broadway" something in the exploitation line.

"Held to Answer" Is Completed

"HELD to Answer," the second Metro Premier Feature production of the 1923-1924 program is now completed and a print of it is on the way to New York from the Metro Hollywood studios. It is a picturization of Peter Clark MacFarlane's novel of the same name and was produced under the direction of Harold Shaw.

"Held to Answer" has the following cast: House Peters, Evelyn Brent, John Sainpolis, Grace Carlyle, James Morrison, Lydia Knott, "Bull" Montana, Gale Henry, Thomas Guyse, Robert Daly, Charles West and Charles Mailes.

Winifred Dunn made the adaptation for the screen and it was photographed by Georges Rizard.

Virginia Valli to Star in "Signal Tower"

After a long search, Universal has secured rights to "The Signal Tower," widely read novel, which first appeared in magazine serial form, for the next starring vehicle for Virginia Valli. The supporting cast is being chosen and actual production is expected to start October 15.

Miss Valli only this week completed her work in the leading role in King Vidor's production for Goldwyn, "Wild Oranges," and was immediately recalled by Universal, who had loaned her for the one production, following her stellar role in "The Lady of Quality."

"French Doll" Held Over Week in Baltimore

So great was the success enjoyed by Mae Murray's latest Metro picture, "The French Doll," at the New theatre in Baltimore last week that it is being held over at that theatre for another week to satisfy the big public demand. "The French Doll" was given an enthusiastic reception by the Baltimore press.

"The French Doll" was adapted by Frances Marion from A. E. Thomas' English adaptation of the French play. It is a Robert Z. Leonard presentation through Metro and is sponsored by Tiffany Productions of which Mr. Leonard is director-general and M. H. Hoffman, general manager.

Carter Writes Woman's Melodrama

Lincoln J. Carter, noted writer of melodrama, now attached to the William Fox West Coast studios, Hollywood, is hard at work on a new thriller, "The Arizona Express."

"I am going to build a new kind of melodrama," said Mr. Carter. "In the past and in the olden days, melodrama with its pyramided thrills was constructed almost exclusively to please the men in the audience. This time I am going to write a woman's melodrama.

"Just as the old ones quickened the pulse of the men and sent red blood tingling through their veins, just so I will make 'The Arizona Express' appeal to the woman of my audience. This means that it will contain a very pronounced and distinctive heart interest. It will sway the emotions of the gentler sex, but at the same time carry a convincing appeal to men.

"So far as I know, this will be the first woman's medodrama ever written, and with the help of Mr. Fox I am going to be pioneer in this new field.

Cuban Distributors Buy Preferred Features

Al Lichtman, has signed a contract with the Cuban Medal Film Co., Incorporated, for the distribution of three Preferred Pictures in Cuba and Venezuela. The productions included in this agreement are "Rich Men's Wives," "Poor Men's Wives" and "Shadows."

Foreign Deals Reported by Export, Import

Export & Import Film Company, Inc., report the closing of two big foreign deals this week. "Robin Hood, Jr.," a six-reel feature starring Frankie Lee, has been sold for England and the continent, and a series of ten features has been sold for continental Europe.

Tourneur Picture Title Changed

"Jealous Husbands" Decided Upon Following Suggestions at Pre-View

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S newest M. C. Levee picture for First National will be released under the title of "Jealous Husbands" instead of "Jealous Fools," as originally titled.

The change of title resulted from a public preview of the picture at the California theatre, Venice, Cal., when a large number of the audience registered its objection to the word "Fools" as applied to the title of the story.

A novel method of getting actual audience opinions on the production was conceived by M. C. Levee, producer, on this occasion. Without any previous announcement in the way of advertising, "Jealous Husbands" was tried out on a representative theatre audience without even the members of the cast aware of the showing.

Just before the production was shown Mr. Levee announced that the criticisms of the audience were eagerly sought and requested every one in the audience to fill out printed forms on the production, upon its conclusion. The cards were printed up in the form of a ballot with the words: "Excellent," "Good," "Fair" and "Poor" and boxes opposite each word for the audience to check. A place was also indicated on the card for any special remarks.

When the cards were collected it was found that ninety per cent. of the audience had awarded the picture the highest mark of merit, an unusual record of audience opinion for any film. Nine per cent. of the audience marked the picture "Good," one per cent indicated it as "Fair" and none felt the film was "Poor."

In tabulating the cards it was found that a noted objection to the title of the picture was evident while a number of specific objections were made against the use of the word "Fools" in the title.

N. Y. Critics Acclaim "Three Ages"

Buster Keaton's First Feature Length Metro Comedy Approved at Rivoli

BUSTER KEATON'S first Metro feature length comedy, "Three Ages," enjoyed a spectacular New York premiere at the Rivoli theatre on Broadway last week. Its brilliant reception in other cities in this country and abroad was duplicated in New York, where the newspaper reviewers joined with the public in acclaiming "Three Ages" not only as big entertainment but also as one of the notable achievements in the field of comedy dramas.

"Buster Keaton has made the funniest picture of his career," wrote Quinn Martin in the New York World. "It is eminently worthy of feature position at the Rivoli and most every one who sees it will come away a happier man."

"'Three Ages' is a story of mankind that ought to appeal mightily to the masses," wrote the reviewer of the New York American. "It is even more simple than Professor Van Loon's classic and infinitely more entertaining. There is enough to keep the most sophisticated audience smiling steadily."

"'Three Ages,'" wrote the reviewer of the Morning Telegraph, "is a unique affair—an amusing comedy."

"'Three Ages' should be set down in the record book as Buster Keaton's funniest comedy," wrote Don Allen of the Evening World. "It gets the best laughs we ever heard in a cinema. If we were asked for our advice we should say without hesitation: By all means see 'Three Ages.' It's a whale of a laugh."

"We have said before that we like only Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin, but we now take in Buster." Thus wrote Harriette Underhill of the New York Tribune. "'Three Ages' is most amusing."

"Three Ages" was directed by Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline from the story by Jean Havez, Joe Mitchell and Clyde Bruckman. It was photographed by William McGann and Elgin Lessly. Fred Gabouri was art director. It is a Joseph M. Schenck presentation through Metro.

"David Copperfield" in Photoplay Edition

The A. L. Burt Company, of New York, book publisher, has just issued a handsome photoplay edition of "David Copperfield," to mark the release of the Associated Exhibitors feature adapted from the Dickens masterpiece. The front of the paper cover is adorned with an artistic reproduction, in colors, of one of the impressive scenes from the picture, and the book is liberally illustrated with photographs from production stills.

Associated Exhibitors' $3,000 prize essay contest, open to school children in every part of the United States, already is attracting a lively interest, it is said.

"Flaming Barriers" on Forest Location

George Melford and a company of seventy people have gone to Sonora, Cal., for the purpose of making outdoor scenes in his current Paramount production, "Flaming Barriers." A number of scenes were made on the train and the entire company stopped at Jamestown, en route, to make street scenes.

Production of "Flaming Barriers" from an original story by Byron Morgan was begun at the Paramount studio at Hollywood two weeks ago. The company will remain on location for about three weeks, during which time they will film a series of scenes in a forest fire.

The featured players are Jacqueline Logan, Antonio Moreno, Walter Hiers and Charles Ogle. The cast includes Robert McKim, Luke Cosgrave and Warren Rogers.

Costumes a Feature of "Beau Brummel"

A portion of the Warner Brothers West Coast Studio is now resembling the interior of an enormous costuming organization, as Harry Beaumont has commenced work on "Beau Brummel," the Warner classic starring John Barrymore. More than 800 costumes, typifying the periods of 1795, 1814 and 1821, have been assembled for the filming of the screen version of the famous Clyde Fitch play. This production is said to be the most pretentious offering ever attempted by the Warner organization.

"'THE BAREFOOT BOY' is a picture that every man, woman and child will want to see, and having seen it, will talk about it."

"Drivin' Fools" Are Listed in Press

IN accordance with the suggestion of the Junior Safety League, various newspapers throughout the country are printing daily lists containing the names and offenses of reckless automobile drivers. It is believed that by giving the "speed kings" prominent publicity, other drivers will be dusuaded from trying to display their prowess to the menace of human life. These lists are printed in a two column box under the head of "The Drivin' Fool Club," the offenders being designated as "members" and the club as "the most undesirable in the world." "The Drivin' Fool" is a Hodkinson picture.

To Select Players For Vitagraph Special

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, and J. Stuart Blackton are holding daily conferences on the selection of players for "Let No Man Put Asunder," by Basil King, the forthcoming Blackton production, which will be made at the Vitagraph studios in Brooklyn.

This special will deal with divorce. Basil King, the author, is one of the most vigorous writers on modern social problems. The characters move in the luxury of millions and the story carries them through the gay capitals of Europe. The production will be rich in sets, and Mr. Blackton has now under consideration two of the most noted and artistic technical directors in the industry to assist him in carrying out his own designs for sumptuous interiors.

"The Acquittal" Print Arrives in N. Y.

"The Acquittal," Universal's Super Jewel production of Rita Weiman's celebrated stage play, has arrived in the East and was previewed by a group of Universal executives.

Elaborate arrangements are being made to put it over in New York and other key cities in a way which will make every exhibitor and every photoplay fan sit up and take notice.

The picture was screened from an adaptation made by Jules Furthmann. Camera work of exceptional quality was done by Sylvano Balboni.

"Call of Wild" Scores As Picture

Jack London Story Wins Commendation of New York Audiences at Cameo

"THE CALL OF THE WILD," Jack London's famous dog story which has been graphically transferred to the screen by Hal Roach, is demonstrating its universal appeal during its two-week visit at the Cameo theatre, New York. The remarkable features of this Pathe picture plus clever exploitation are both responsible for the unusual attendance, it is said.

Besides the regular advertising features, the marquee of the theatre is supporting two tremendous cut-outs from the twenty-four sheet, showing Buck, the dog hero of the film. Pathe also carried out an extensive exploitation campaign which attracted wide attention along Broadway, and through the theatrical districts of the city.

The public approval was confirmed by the cordial and glowing reception accorded the picture by the reviewers in the New York dailies, who joined unanimously in singing the praises of the film. Here is the manner in which the critics spoke of "The Call of the Wild."

Evening Sun: "The Cameo introduces this week a very effective picture version of Jack London's 'The Call of the Wild.' . . . . The settings are very well done."

Evening Post: "A stirring series of pictures of the bleak wastes of snow and ice of the frozen North. . . . Has many sensational scenes."

Joseph Mulvaney in The New York American: "Buck is natural and he acts more as a result of instinct than training, and he is all the more lovable for it. The picture follows with commendable closeness the plot of Jack London's finest story."

The Evening Mail: "'The Call of the Wild' is an excellent picture. . . . We liked it immensely and recommend it to those who are seeking a film different from the ordinary run. Its realism is heightened by many snow scenes."

Helen Pollock in The Telegraph: "Hal Roach evidently prefers the temperamental qualities of children and animals to those of adult actors. At all events he certainly performs marvels in his chosen field, and in no recent productions has he been happier than in his results with the dog actor, 'Buck,' who is the star of the London story. Much credit should go to Fred Jackman, who directed the film."

Toronto Acclaims "Green Goddess"

Distinctive Picture Scores Heavily in Home Town of Director Olcott

DISTINCTIVE PICTURES' "The Green Goddess," starring George Arliss and directed by Sidney Olcott, opened at the Hippodrome theatre in Toronto, Monday night, October 8. The picture was acclaimed in the Canadian city, as in other cities. The old saying that "a prophet is without honor in his own land" is all wrong this time, for Sidney Olcott set out twenty years ago from Toronto to do exactly what he has succeeded in doing.

When Olcott left his home town it was not with the definite idea of achieving a foremost position as a motion picture director. His ambition, rather, was to attain a place in the theatrical world, but Fate decreed otherwise.

Starting as an extra with the old Kalem company, Mr. Olcott's ability was soon recognized and he won himself a place as director. He has directed pictures since in fourteen foreign countries in which he has had many exciting experiences.

Olcott had made arrangements to go to Toronto for the opening, but was delayed at the last minute. He sent the following telegram to N. L. Nathanson:

"Will you please convey to your audience at the opening of 'The Green Goddess' my most sincere regrets at being unable to be with them on this occasion. It would indeed gave me the greatest pleasure to be home again in my birthplace and the cradle of my ambitions, dear old Toronto. Tell them also that I still have the song in my heart of the Maple Leaf Forever."

Pola Negri Approves Shauer Song

MEL SHAUER, manager of Paramount's Advertising Sales department, whose song, "The Spanish Dancer," written specially for the exploitation of the Herbert Brenon production of the same name, is now available to exhibitors through the Paramount exchanges and is on sale at all the leading music shops in New York, has received the following telegram from Pola Negri, star of the picture:

"Consider the music you dedicated to me, 'The Spanish Dancer,' the most thrilling and beautiful I ever heard. Thank you sincerely for the delicate compliment."

Mr. Shauer's song is a prominent feature of Hugo Riesenfeld's prologue used in connection with the presentation of "The Spanish Dancer" at the Rivoli this week.

Fox Novelizes "Silent Command" For Papers

In releasing "The Silent Command," a dramatic picture of the U. S. Navy, with a powerful plot based on international intrigue, William Fox has had a 15,000-word novelization written, adequately illustrated with photographs and drawings, for release to newspapers.

The original story by Rufus King deals with a navy captain who frustrates a plot to destroy the Panama Canal. Edmund Lowe, Alma Tell, Martha Mansfield and Betty Jewel have the principal roles in the picture, which was heartily indorsed by Secretary of the Navy Denby, his assistant, Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and by General John J. Pershing. The picture was directed by J. Gordon Edwards and much of it was filmed aboard the Atlantic fleet and in the Canal Zone.

The novelization is divided into twelve installments, and is released to newspapers without charge.

New Goldwyn Service on Exploitation

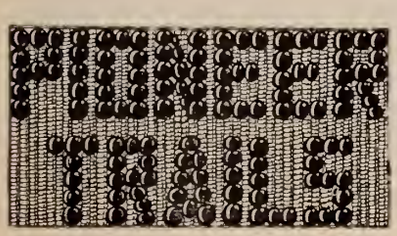
A thoroughly comprehensive Direct-to-the-Exhibitor Exploitation Service is being inaugurated by the Goldwyn Cosmopolitan Distributing Corporation through its yellow sheet supplement. This mine of valuable exploitation suggestions was originated by Eddie Bonns, Director of Exploitation. The service was prepared originally for the exploitation of the men in the field, but through their use of it, the exhibitors themselves became familiar with the yellow sheet supplement and its value in the exploitation of pictures, and requests from them for copies of the supplement began to come in to the home office from all over the country.

"Potash, Perlmutter" Gets Big Offer

WHAT purports to be the biggest outright offer, with solicitation, ever made for a motion picture production rights in England was made to First National this week by Walter Wanger for the rights to "Potash and Perlmutter" in Great Britain. Mr. Wanger is said to have offered forty thousand pounds, approximately $180,000, the rights to be confined only to the British Isles, including Scotland, Wales, Ireland and England.

While no statement has been made by Bruce Johnson, head of First National's foreign department, as to whether the offer is to be accepted, at least it is under consideration.

Bruce Johnson cabled the offer to Mr. Pugh at the London First National office, putting the proposition up to him, as being on the ground and knowing what decision to make.



Sistrom First to Sign Leasing Contract

William Sistrom, who has been signed by S. M. Tompkins and John M. Nickolaus of the Standard Film Laboratories to act as general manager of their recently acquired Hollywood studios, is said to be the first man in the picture business to ever make a studio leasing contract.

It was while Sistrom was general manager of the Universal Film Company in 1917 that this first contract for stage space was made with an independent producer and the independent was R. J. Matzene, photographer of international repute who had Mme. Yorska under contract at the time.

The Hollywood studios, of which Sistrom is now in charge, is the only large studio in the United States which does not make its own pictures and caters to independent producers as a side issue to help reduce overhead.

The studios now conducted by Sistrom exist solely for the accommodation of independents, among them being the Harold Lloyd Company, I. W. Irving Productions, the Renaud Hoffman Productions, Beverly Productions, Creative and the J. K. McDonald Productions. Priscilla Dean is the latest independent to take advantage of Sistrom's organization and her company, the Laurel Productions, will start at the Hollywood studios in a short time.

"Woman of Paris" Highly Praised

Chaplin Picture Wins Unanimous Approval of N. Y. Newspaper Reviewers

WITHOUT exception critics for the New York newspapers were emphatic in their praise of Charles Chaplin's first serious photoplay contribution, "A Woman of Paris," written and directed by himself, and having its world premier Monday evening, October 1st, at the Lyric theatre, New York.

"Without a moment's hesitation we declare 'A Woman of Paris' the finest piece of filmcry of the year," said the critic for the Daily News. "There probably won't be another like it for a long time."

"Mr. Chaplin has made the perfect motion picture, or at least it is our idea of the perfect motion picture," said Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune.

"'A Woman of Paris' easily takes a place among the new things of the screen," said Alan Dale in the American. "Mr. Chaplin has proved beyond the peradventure of a doubt that he could take a story of simplicity, usualness, and human flavor, and so present it that you almost believe you have a genuine novelty."

"Charles Chaplin's first production fascinated an interested throng," said F. W. Mordaunt Hall in the New York Times. "He reveals himself as a bold, resourceful, imaginative, ingenuous, careful, studious and daring artist."

"We believe that 'A Woman of Paris' will get the public's patronage because it is a box-office picture," declared Louella O. Parsons in the Morning Telegraph.

"Simplicity is the keynote in the making of 'A Woman of Paris,'" said Quinn Martin in the New York World, "yet it is proved here that big, gripping, human stories of life can be placed on the screen in almost a natural state of reproduction and be made to hold the interest and quicken the heart."

"This picture is rare in its natural realism, unconventional in the originality of technique, and forceful in every effect," said Joseph Mulvaney in the American. "Every foot of film is significant to the telling of the story, and there is not a gesture wasted."

"Charles Chaplin has given us in 'A Woman of Paris' something to be cinematically thankful for; he has told a big gripping story of Fate in the simple words of a first reader," said Don Allen in the Evening World.

"Magic has been performed, and the result is something rare in the movies," wrote the reviewer for the Sun and Globe.

"We enjoyed the picture very much," said the critic for the Evening Mail. "Those interested in better motion pictures are urged to go."

"'A Woman of Paris' is unbeatable," said Robert Gilbert Welsh in the Evening Telegram.

"'A Woman of Paris' contains many striking features which place it easily in the first rank of American productions," wrote the reviewer for the Daily Leader.

Exhibitors Wait "Little Old N. Y."

Release Due Shortly, Following Successful Runs in New York and London

"LITTLE OLD NEW YORK" will be released shortly, and if its present runs are an indication of what may be expected in other cities it seems destined to rank among the top-notchers of the season.

The picture has had a three months' run on Broadway at the new Cosmopolitan theatre at Broadway and Fifty-ninth Street, scoring one of the greatest successes any production has had in New York. The nature of its New York triumph is attested by its long run at the $2 top scale of prices.

London has corroborated New York's judgment on the worth of the picture and the manner in which it has been produced. The critics on the daily newspapers of London have accorded it enthusiastic reviews.

Two weeks ago the production was put on at the California theatre in Los Angeles for an extended run, inaugurating that theatre's change of policy from the continuous performances to two showings a day. It was received there by public and critics alike with the same enthusiasm which it received in New York and London.

The reviewers in the three cities were in agreement that never before had Marion Davies had such a fine opportunity for real acting as in the role of Patricia O'Day.

The screen success of the motion picture has more than duplicated the stage success of the play by Rida Johnson Young which ran for a year on Broadway. Part of this success is due to the excellent continuity prepared by Luther Reed, partly to the expert direction of Sidney Olcott.

Harrison Ford plays opposite Miss Davies. Many notable historic figures of New York in 1810 play important parts in the story. Among them are Robert Fulton, acted by Courtenay Foote; Washington Irving, acted by Mahlon Hamilton; FitzGreene Halleck, acted by Norval Keedwell; Henry Brevoort, portrayed by George Barraud; Cornelius Vanderbilt, acted by Sam Hardy; John Jacob Astor, reflected on the screen by Andrew Dillon; the original Delmonico, acted by Charles Judels. Other actors in important roles are Gypsy O'Brien, Mary Kennedy, Elizabeth Murray, Thomas Findlay, Riley Hatch, Charles Kennedy, Harry Watson and Louis Wolheim, the star of Eugene O'Neill's famous play, "The Hairy Ape."

"Mail Man" Seen at Coast Preview

A HUNDRED odd Southern California exhibitors viewed Emory Johnson's latest F. B. O. production, "The Mail Man," at a special preview last Monday night at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles.

Mr. Johnson appeared personally and paid a stirring compliment to the postal workers of the country in a brief speech. His mother, Mrs. Emilie Johnson, who has written all of the stories for the Johnson success of the past, also was present. She wrote "The Mail Man" and is now engaged on the script for another Johnson production, the first scenes of which will be "shot" in New York within the next fortnight.

Emory Johnson Greeted by N. Y. Mailmen

Emory Johnson, director of Film Booking Office features, arrived in New York this week and was heartily greeted.

Two hundred uniformed letter carriers accompanied by their brass band of forty pieces waited in the Grand Central station for the arrival of the train, which was late. The moment Johnson and Ella Hall, his wife, who accompanied him from the Coast, stepped from the train the musicians struck up a lively jingle and the march to the F. B. O. offices started.

As the parade swung into Forty-second street banners were unfolded, bearing the inscription: "Welcome to Emory Johnson and his gigantic photodrama, 'The Mail Man.'" One banner stretching across the street and carried by two letter carriers read: "Welcome to 'The Mail Man' and its director." The firemen were also on hand with banners reading: "He helped us with 'The Third Alarm.'"

While in the East, Johnson will visit with Postmaster General New at Washington, who expressed a desire to meet the director of a picture that so glorified his organization.

YOUR FACE LINES and FACING THE CAMERA

Admittedly in the picture studio or "on locations" the negatives made of your "close up" exaggerates those deep lines, hollows, wrinkles or sagging flesh.

Why not remove these signs that eventually will affect your earning power as a motion picture actress? Move time back 15 years. It is done scientifically and effectively. The Plastic Art, as practised by Dr. Robinson for more than 20 years, is exemplified by many professional and society women, who have retained their youthful and attractive facial characteristics.

This scientific treatment should not be confused with ordinary facial treatments, as every step taken by Dr. Robinson in his work is definite in purpose and results.

A personal interview is necessary. Write for an appointment to discuss your particular problem to Dr. E. P. Robinson, 18 West 34th St., New York, Suite 47. (Adv.)

Weber, North Close Foreign Sales

THE Apollo Trading Corporation has reported to L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, producers and distributors, the sale of "Marriage Morals" and "Don't Marry for Money" to Max Glucksmann, for Argentine, Chile, Peru and Bolivia. South Africa, they announce, has been disposed of to the International Variety and Theatrical Agency, and Quality Features, Ltd., has also purchased both productions for Australia.

Yale Picture Is Praised in Editorials

Newspapers throughout the country are opening their editorial columns to endorse "Columbus," the first of a series of 33 Chronicles of America made by Yale University Press and released through Pathe on Oct. 7th. The Springfield Republican has printed a favorable editorial on the film, and two of the most conservative morning papers of New York City, The Tribune and The Times, have given praise to this noteworthy attempt to portray America's history and making on the screen.

The Times speaks as follows: "Some years ago the Yale Press began the collection of still-life material illustrating the history of our country from the time of its discovery and settlement. Valuable as this authentic picturing of the past would have been if put forth in plates and in illustrations of books, its value has been multiplied many times by endowing these figures with power to move about in scenes which were familiar to their originals and to converse mutely with their contemporaries."

Warner Book of Stills For Universities

The recent request of the National Geographic Society, who expressed their desire to possess a set of exterior stills from the Warners' screen adaptation of David Belasco's "Tiger Rose" for a permanent exhibit in the Congressional Library, has prompted the Warner Brothers to make another step in an educational way.

A beautifully bound book of stills is being prepared by the Warner organization showing scenes in Yosemite Valley, taken in association with "Tiger Rose," and each one of these books will be presented to the library of the following universities: Cornell, Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Michigan, Columbia and Minnesota. Other institutions of learning will be able to secure these books upon request.

Picture Actors to Create Roles

Perley Poore Sheehan to Offer Unique Direction in Universal Feature

A DARING departure in motion picture direction is under way at Universal City, where Perley Poore Sheehan, famous novelist, has started work on the production of "Innocent." The story is his own, he is to direct it, and each actor in the cast will create his or her own role. Every member of the cast so far as possible, will be a college graduate, but this does not mean that the story is "high-brow." In fact the characters are the most elemental of people; mountain folks from the hills of Alabama, none able to read or write, and capable of only the most elemental mental processes.

"That is why college trained actors are needed," explains Sheehan. "They have to revert to the absolute primitive for this play; we of to-day are so far away from the elemental that the untrained mind cannot grasp it. It takes education to play a character absolutely without it."

But the plan to seek college trained actors is incidental to the plan for the production. The first thing to be done when the cast is assembled will be a reading of the play. Sheehan will read and explain the story to the cast, then each member will receive a copy of the script. Each actor will then form a conception of the part to be played, work out the details of makeup and gradually work up a counterpart of the character as he or she sees it.

Sheehan will have a remarkable staff in his new picture. Jack Sullivan will assist Sheehan at the latter's request. Martin Murphy, one of Universal's crack production managers, has been assigned to the picture, and Elmer Sheely will design the settings.

The cast will not be chosen for several days and actual photography is some two weeks away. The Rev. Edwards Davis, clergyman who turned actor, and became famous as a stage and screen player, will have an important role. He was selected by Sheehan for his knowledge of the people in the story as well as his stage history.

He has only just returned from New York where he was a feature of Belasco stage version of "Daddies." He is a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and twenty years ago, when he had become famous as a clergyman, forsook the pulpit with the sensational announcement that he could do more for mankind on the stage than in the pulpit. Since then he has been one of the leading figures in American drama.

"Spanish Dancer" Wins Reviewers

Pola Negri is Acclaimed at Premiere Showings on East and West Coast

OPENING its Eastern and West Coast premiere engagements simultaneously at the Rivoli in New York and Grauman's Rialto in Los Angeles Sunday, Herbert Brenon's Paramount production, "The Spanish Dancer," starring Pola Negri, was received in both cities with a degree of enthusiasm not exceeded by that accorded any of the other big productions of the current season, it is claimed.

According to a telegram received at the Paramount home office in New York, tremendous throngs jammed Grauman's Rialto all afternoon and evening Sunday and the Los Angeles critics were unanimous in hailing Miss Negri's third American picture as a triumph.

Edwin Schallert said in The Times: "At last Pola Negri has returned to the picturesque costumes in which she made her first success. A long and enthusiastic ovation was accorded her by the audience when she was ushered to her seat."

Florence Lawrence said in The Examiner: "Pola Negri as a beautiful gypsy—the Pola of some of her first pictures—comes back to us on the silver sheet in 'The Spanish Dancer.' It's a Pola you will rejoice with in her moments of ecstasy, a Pola whose dark eyes flash allure or turn tragic with the portentous foreboding evoked by that second sight of her gypsy clan."

The reception accorded the picture by the New York critics was no less enthusiastic. The Morning Telegraph said: "From the very first foot of the first reel to the last foot of the last, in short, every step of the way, 'The Spanish Dancer' is vibrant with life."

Quinn Martin said in The World: "There seems to be more of the dash of the old European Pola Negri in 'The Spanish Dancer' than in any other cinema she has made."

Robert E. Sherwood said in The Herald: "As the gypsy dancer who fascinated the King of Spain, Pola Negri returns happily to the mood of her superb 'Carmen.'"

Harriett Underhill in The Tribune said: "In 'The Spanish Dancer' one finds the old flaming, glorious, gorgeous Pola Negri, a gypsy girl, almost as untamed as 'Carmen.'"

The Journal of Commerce said: "It is one of the most colorful and dashing productions made by Miss Negri here or abroad and probably will create a sensation."

May McAvoy Again With John Robertson

John S. Robertson and May McAvoy are united again. The happy association which resulted in that delightful production of Sir James Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" is to begin anew with Mr. Robertson's next production starring Richard Barthelmess, "The Enchanted Cottage," to be distributed by First National Pictures.

Engineers Present Important Information

Excellent Papers and Good Attendance Mark S. M. P. E. Fall Convention

THE Society of Motion Picture Engineers' eighth annual convention convened at the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, Canada, October 1st, opening four days' activities consisting of both business and pleasure, that will long be remembered by the members and guests in attendance.

The business sessions brought forth a remarkable number of contributions in the form of papers pertaining to many of the engineering phases of motion pictures. These papers were of diversified subjects, treating both of the practical and theoretical.

The nature of these papers and the discussion of them by the members attending the convention was such that the issue of the Society's Transactions, soon to be published, will contribute a volume of technical information and data of such a nature as to be invaluable to the motion picture industry. In fact, the issues of the Transactions published by the S. M. P. E. in the past are considered as the most authentic and comprehensive references available on technical subjects pertaining to this industry.

Election of Officers

The annual election of officers was held. The officers elected were as follows: President, L. A. Jones, Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories, Rochester, N. Y.; vice-president, A. F. Victor, Animatograph Company, New York City; secretary, P. M. Abbott, Motion Picture News, New York City; treasurer, W. B. Cook, Pathescope Company, New York City. The two members elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Governors were J. C. Kroesen, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J., and A. B. Hitchins, Ansco Company, Binghamton, N. Y.

It was the unanimous vote of those attending that the arrangements made for the entertainment and comfort of the guests could not have been more commendable. Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, was chairman of the Arrangements Committee and probably is the most popular man in the world, if left to the S. M. P. E. members, as "Ray" outdid every expectation in his office as host. This expression of appreciation was further extended by the society through Mr. Peck to his associates and the Canadian Government for their untiring efforts and great success in the role of host.

Entertainment Program

The following entertainment program, as prepared and executed by Mr. Peck in his offices as official representative of the Canadian Government, speaks for itself. Theatre parties, Monday and Tuesday evenings (guests of the management of the Regent and Loew's Ottawa theatres). Noon lunches at the Chateau Laurier Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Sightseeing tour of Ottawa Tuesday afternoon, which proved a delightful trip among the numerous beauty spots of the Canadian National City. A visit to and inspection of the new Canadian Government Parliament buildings. And last, but by no means least, a highly successful banquet tendered the society and guests on Wednesday evening by the Canadian Government. This banquet

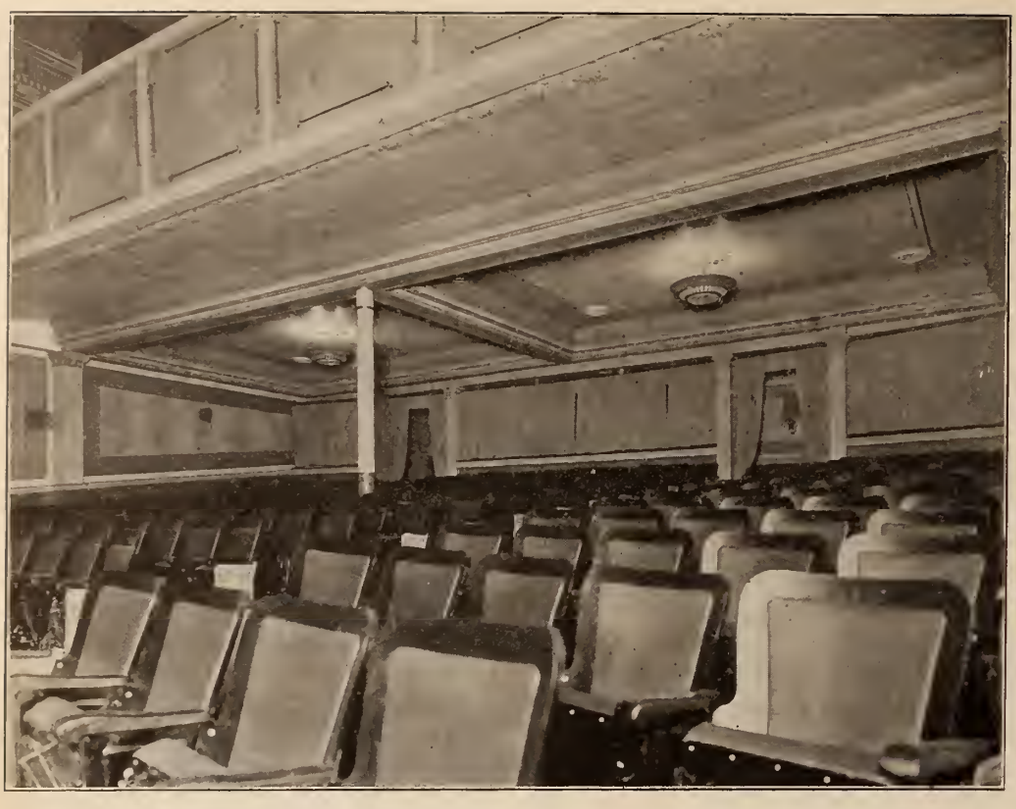
Seven Years of Remarkable Activities

OCTOBER 4th marked the closing of the eighth annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. For eight years this Society has worked for the advancement and betterment of engineering methods in this industry. Its remarkable activities in almost every phase of motion pictures has been crowned with marked success.



There is an enormous amount of work yet to be done by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The consistent growth and maintenance of a membership of the highest engineering ability is equipping the Society for great achievements in the future.

An excerpt from an editorial in a leading Ottawa paper expresses the importance and the results obtained by the efforts of the engineers in this industry:

"Whenever discussions of the motion pictures arise, and rarely a day passes when one does not, concern for the artistic aspect of the subject generally serves to overshadow the importance of the technical side. But when the latter is debated all agree that technically, the movies have made great advances during the last few years, and that if the photography of film drama were all, the silver-sheet would have well-nigh reached perfection. And this is true; had the artistic side of motion pictures kept apace with its technical development, there would be fewer symposiums on the eternal question of "What is wrong with the movies?"

Improvement in Radio Pictures

WE are presenting on this page reproductions of two photographs recently transmitted by specially designed apparatus invented by C. Francis Jenkins.

These illustrations are probably the forerunners of the perfection which we may expect in this field of endeavor in the near future. Many have not hesitated to predict that in time apparatus for sending pictures by wireless will be perfected and elaborated upon to the degree where it will be possible for motion pictures to be transmitted.

While this prediction may be somewhat far-fetched, it is highly safe to say that it is probable. An interesting detail is commented upon by the inventor, who sent, for the first time in history, a Japanese message in Japanese characters. Hitherto it has been impossible to transmit by wire Japanese characters, as the characters do not represent words but ideographs. This difficulty was strikingly illustrated during the Armament Limitation Conference, when the public discovered, through a newspaper article, that the Japanese must transfer his ideographs into English code figures, which could then be sent by the dot-and-dash wireless code to Japan, where it must be decoded from figures into original Japanese ideographs.

News Notes

M. A. Horti will erect a modern $50,000 picture theatre at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. Two late type projection machines and other equipment will be installed.

The New Grand theatre, Russell, Minn., which has been dark since last spring has been completely remodeled and will be reopened in a few weeks as a picture theatre. L. O. Tipler is the new manager.

The Hall theatre at Columbia Mo., which has been closed for several months, undergoing repairs, has been reopened to very pleasing business.

W. Warkey is planning on erecting a modern picture theatre in West Bend, Wis. Finest in theatre equipment will be installed and the theatre will be modern throughout.

The Southern Theatrical Corp., Dallas, Texas, has incorporated for the sum of $100,000 to finance the erection of a picture theatre in Dallas.

The Galveston Opera House Co., Galveston, Texas, has recently incorporated for the sum of $5,000 to erect theatres.

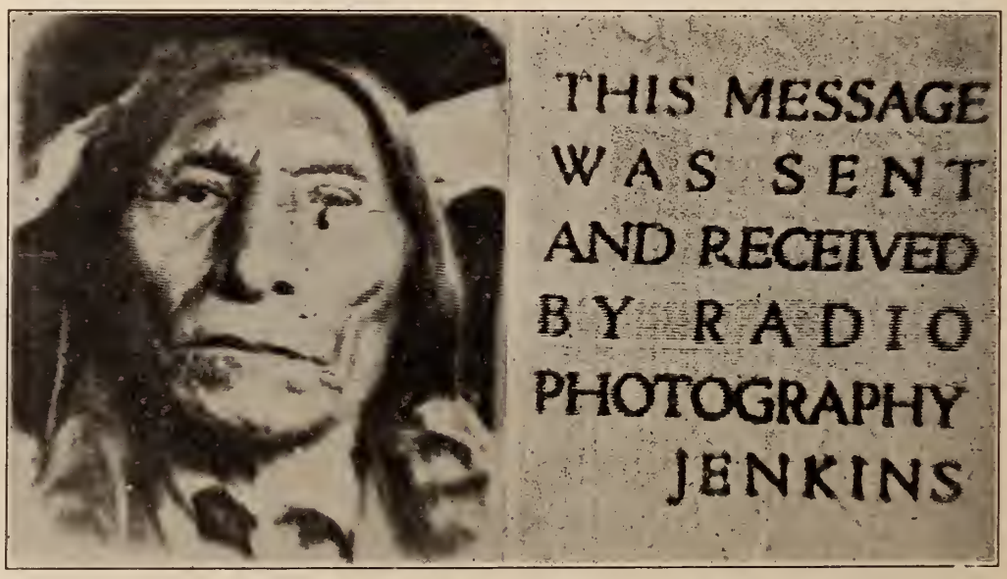
The old Baker theatre at Lochart, Texas, has been completely remodeled and new projection room and other theatre equipment has been installed to make this one of the very finest picture theatres in this part of the state. Baker theatre was recently reopened with capacity business.—Trout.

Photographers Completing New Camera

Lucker and Gleason, formerly staff cameramen for Pathe, are completing a small regular motion picture camera with all necessary equipment for the use of both professional and amateur, which will retail at the nominal sum of $250. The offices of Lucker and Gleason have been established at 11824 Jefferson Avenue, E., Detroit, Mich., and will be opened for actual business early next month. —Hefferman.

"Colonial" Opens

Exhibitors of prominence from every part of Central and Eastern Pennsylvania and representatives of practically all Philadelphia exchanges were among the guests of honor at the formal opening of the Colonial theatre, Ninth and Cumberland Streets, Lebanon. The Colonial is operated by Carr & Schad, Inc., of Reading, Pa. Jere Greiner was contractor. —Berghaus.



Exhibitors' Supply Makes Change

Henry Falk, who in point of service has the honor of being the oldest repairman for projection machines in the vicinity of Detroit, has joined the Exhibitors' Supply Co. to take complete charge of their repair department. Mr. Falk was with the Amusement Supply Co. and before that was with Bert Weddige and the United Theatre Equipment Corp.—Hefferman.

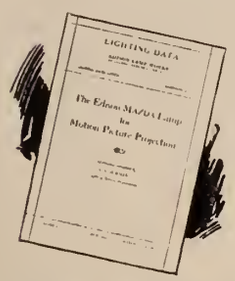
Projection Room of the Bergen Theatre, Newark, N. J. Equipped with G. E. Incandescent Lamp projection apparatus and Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps

Projectionists—A Few Words

IS your work pleasant? Are you deriving all the benefits of new scientifically designed equipment that is making the profession of the projectionist a popular occupation? Hundreds of projectionists in every section of this country are now enjoying working conditions that "old timers" never dreamed of.

Incandescent Lamp Projection permits you to work in a room free of dust and dirt. There are no carbons to change, no wandering light source to keep focused on the aperture. With an A. C. or D. C. current supply no motor generator is used.

Incandescent Lamp Projection with Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps gives a steady, flickerless, evenly distributed light on the screen and requires a minimum of attention to keep it in perfect operating condition.



Furthermore, General Electric Incandescent Lamp Projection apparatus and Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps operate equally well on A. C. or D. C. Current consumption is reduced to less than one half normally used for projection purposes.

Install this apparatus in your projection department now and make your work a real pleasure. Help your manager cut down expenses.

There is a supply dealer in your district carrying Edison MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps and G. E. apparatus.

Write our Lighting Service Department, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J., for engineering recommendations on installations.

Lesson VII—Part VI

Transformer Connections

TRANSFORMERS, as ordinarily constructed, have the ends of both their primary and secondary coils brought out at the terminal plate. In some types, two primary and two secondary coils are used and hence eight coil ends would be brought out for connecting purposes.

This practice is followed in order that the machine may be used on different voltage feeder circuits and also that various secondary voltages may be supplied. Thus, in the case of a standard lighting transformer having two primary coils, each wound for 1100 volts, and two secondary coils, each wound for 110 volts (ratio of transformation 10 to 1) there are four possible voltage combinations as shown in Fig. 123 A, B, C and D. If the two primary coils are connected in parallel (section A) the proper primary voltage will be 1100 and if the two secondary coils are also connected in parallel the secondary voltage will be 110. By connecting the secondary coils in series (Section B) and the primary is unchanged, the voltage of the latter will still be 1100 whereas that of the secondary will now be 220 volts. If both primary and secondary coils are connected in series, their respective voltages will be 2200 and 220. Lastly, if the primary coils are connected in parallel and the secondary coils in series, the primary voltage will be 2200 and the secondary 110.

Still another combination (not shown) is possible and is commonly used for local distribution (cities, towns, etc.). The two primary coils are connected in parallel thus giving a primary voltage of 1100, but the two secondary coils are connected in series and a third wire is connected midway between the two coils thus giving a three-wire single-phase A. C. service having 110 volts between either outside wire and the third, but 220 volts between the two outside wires. This is ideal for combination lighting and motor service since high efficiency electric lamps can be used on the 110 volt lines and power can be more cheaply transmitted to the motors over the 220 volt lines. This is quite similar to the three-wire D.C. system, more commonly known as the Edison system of distribution.

This department will be very glad to answer any inquiries which the readers wish to submit.

If any of the material presented in these columns is not fully explained as to be understandable to all just request more elaborate explanations.

If projectionists digest the information contained in this series, a comprehensive understanding of electricity will be obtained.

It has already been mentioned in the case of three-phase motors and generators, that there are two ways in which the armature coils can be connected. These two methods being known as the delta and star connections. The name delta comes from the fact that a diagram of coils, when made on paper, looks like the Greek letter, d, (delta), whereas the star connection, on paper, looks like a three pointed star. This is also called the Y connection for a similar reason.

These two connections can also be extended to single-phase transformers when used on three-phase service. This means that three, single-phase, transformers are used and their primaries are connected together as are also their secondaries.

There are numerous ways in which these connections can be made and a complete list is given in Table III.

Table III

Single-Phase Transformer Connections

Current	Primary Voltage	Connection
I	1.73E	Star
I	1.73E	Star
1.73I	E	Delta
1.73I	E	Delta

Connection	Secondary Voltage	Current
Star	1.73E	I
Delta	E	1.73I
Delta	E	1.73I

The principal advantagess and disadvantages of both the delta and star connections are that, in the case of the delto, the voltage between lines is the same as that across each individual transformer. Thus for high voltage transmission, which, as we know is more economical than low voltage transmission of power, the transformer coils must be insulated to withstand this high voltage. On the other hand, if one transformer should burn out, the system can be operated on what is called an open delta connection (cutting out the defective transformer) the 58% of the load can still be carried. The open delta connection is shown in Fig. 124.

In the case of the star connected bank of transformers, if one transformer burns out, the entire system is dead and cannot be operated until the burned out transformer is replaced. But the star connection has the advantage of having a higher voltage between lines than across each individual transformer so that less insulation is needed for these instruments.

A compromise is usually effected and when transmitting power, the primaries at the transmitting end are connected delta fashion and the secondaries star, while at the receiving end the primaries are connected star fashion and the secondaries delta. The straight delta connection is used for practically all low voltage transmission.

Changing Two Phase to Three Phase

For changing two-phase power to three-phase power, the Tee, or Scott, connection is used. A single-phase transformer is connected to one phase and a center tap is taken from its secondary. Another single-phase transformer is connected to the second phase and a tap taken out of its secondary at a point 86.6% from one end and this tap is connected to the center tap from the transformer one phase number one. This is shown in Fig. 125.

It will be noted that the voltage between any two feed wires is the same but the voltage across the secondary of the transformer on phase number two is only $\frac{\sqrt{3}}{2}$ E or 86.6 per cent.

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

To protect the exhibitor against screening, unknowingly, film of inferior photographic quality we make Eastman Positive Film identifiable. The words "Eastman" "Kodak" are stenciled in black letters in the transparent film margin. Look for this positive proof that you are projecting the "film that carries quality through to the screen."

Electrical Illuminating Engineering Society Membership and Functions

RECENTLY the editor of this department requested an official of the Electrical Illuminating Engineering Society to submit a short description of that society along with the membership, its functions and purposes.

R. E. Nauman, vice-president of the Electrical Illuminating Engineering Society, very obligingly submitted the following letter which serves to explain the complete functions and membership of that society.

"In reply to your letter of recent date, apologizing for the delay, we will comply with your request with the following article.

"Inasmuch as the Motion Picture industry is the fourth largest manufacturing Industry in the United States, and 85 per cent. of all American pictures are produced in and around Los Angeles, it is readily apparent that there must be some sort of an organization that can effeciently handle each and every phase of the work. This society represents the illuminating and mechanical divisions.

"In properly manipulated mechanical effects such as, Water, Rain, Clouds, Smoke, Lightning, Fire, Wind, Snow and the like, to attain nature's realism, at times set forth rather obstinate problems. In regards to illumination, ranging in magnitude, from possibly a closeup of a flower in an actor's hand to a New York Street, or a Battlefield, also has its difficulties, inasmuch as improper lighting renders ineffective the efforts of the Technical, Painting, Property, Drapery, Wardrobe, Camera and in fact all other departments of the industry.

"In consideration of the above mentioned difficulties, it was found advisable to organize this society so that the advice through cooperation of all, could be utilized by any of its members.

"As an audience is to a theatre, so is the Electrical and Mechanical departments to the industry, and it has been the efforts of this society to bring these departments up to the very highest standard, in meeting and overcoming the various problems as follows: Equipment: Through a color code, accepted by this Society and adopted by the various studios, it has become thoroughly standardized and inter-changeable in regards to polarity, line-balance, and so forth, greatly facilitating hook-ups, which means that the operator learning the code in one studio, automatically receives training, and is thereby adaptable to all studios under the jurisdiction of this society. Labor: In an effort to build up to a higher degree of efficiency, the personnel of these departments, and to dispense with the inefficient and undesirables, the society has installed a system of inter-change of information, as to the performance of the various men, through the medium of clearance cards. Consequently as the operator moves from one studio to another, only the best are utilized, only those who have been thoroughly trained in the standard set forth above, eliminating a waste of time, and building up an efficient organization that can be depended upon in an emergency. Therefore the producer in attaining the services of this society, receives not the services and advice of one man, but the service of one man and the advice of all department heads collectively.

"Our aim is to keep America first in the realm of the Photoplay, therein the Electrical Illuminating Engineering Society of the Motion Picture Industry will have attained their reward.

"The Electrical Illuminating Engineering Society of the Motion Picture Industry was organized in October of 1919, and at the present time consists of the Chief Electricians of all the studios of Southern California, as follows:

"Howard E. Ewing, President, Minerva

The Orpheum theatre, Twin Falls, Idaho, is claimed to be one of the best equipped houses in that section having a seating capacity of 500 on the main floor and 300 in the balcony. This house is owned by the Twin Falls Amusement Company, A. R. Anderson, president and manager

The Basis for Success in Theatre Management

The perfect projection of pictures made possible, and economical, by TransVerteR is all important. Its nationwide popularity is evidence of this fact.

TransVerteR permits the most artistic projection of pictures. It gives the projectionist perfect arcs; clear, white, steady light that is easily directed and controlled; and clean sharp-lined pictures.

TransVerteR is vertical in design and operates on ball bearings. It takes up less space in the booth, is quiet and economical in operation, gives better projection and more service than any other equipment.

G. & S. Theatre Being Erected

Santa Rosa, Cal., is to have a new playhouse that will be a credit to that city. George Greeott and E. Strobino, residents of the City of Roses, are erecting a theatre to cost approximately a quarter of a million dollars. The house will have a seating capacity of 2,000 and will be modern in every detail. A stage, 40 by 90 feet, will rival in size and appointments the large San Francisco playhouses and will afford ample space for the production of any road show. There will be sixteen dressing rooms. An elaborate electric switchboard will give to the theatre almost any desired lighting effect.

Twenty-five thousand dollars is the cost of the Wurlitzer organ to be installed and the theatre will have an orchestra, under the leadership of M. Rachman. The projecting room will include every piece of modern machinery that tends toward the perfect showing of the silent drama.

T. C. Reaves is manager of the amusement concern and A. G. Winckler is resident manager.—Gross.

You Have An Ancient Theater —

If you haven't modern lighting control

No matter how new your theater may be, it can not be called modern unless you are able to put on those wonderful presentations that the FA Major System makes possible. Audiences have distinct opinions and highly educated notions about what they enjoy, and they pay to see only the things they like.

Do not wait for your competitor to install the Major System. Hold your lead by acting now. You do not have to close your theater to install a Major System. Lighting control is nearly as much a feature as your film, and costs far less.

Write for the beautiful book, "The Control of Lighting in Theaters," sent free upon request.

Engineers Present Important Information

deserves more than passing comment in that it incorporated, in a most successful degree, three of the most essential elements for an event of this kind—namely, a congenial atmosphere, an excellent dinner and H. H. Cudmore as toastmaster. The many in this industry who are acquainted with "H. H." in his gifted role of chief entertainer, may well appreciate the degree of success that attended his efforts. Mr. Cudmore also assisted a quartet of local talent.

One of the most important places of interest that was held under microscopic inspection by the convention was the small town of Hull, which is located in the province of Quebec, only a ten-minute ride from Ottawa. A special investigation committee, hastily appointed, reported Hull as a "damp" place. This report was later corrected by the entire convention to read "wet."

At one of the business sessions the society voted to hold the coming spring convention, which will probably be held in the month of May, at Lakewood Farms, near Middletown, N. Y.

Members and Guests Attending

Those in attendance at the convention were: P. M. Abbott, P. L. C. Barbier, J. T. Beechlyn, Douglas E. Brown, R. S. Burnap, James R. Cameron, H. A. Campe, John G. Capstaff, G. L. Chanier, Willard B. Cook, John I. Crabtree, L. E. Davidson, Earl J. Denison, Charles A. Dentlebeck A. C. Dick, R. E. Farnham, Edmund M. Flaherty, Herbert Griffin, J. H. Hertner, Alfred B. Hitchins, Roscoe C. Hubbard, Arthur J. Holman, Joseph C. Hornstein, John G. Jones, L. A. Jones, Wm. D. V. Kelley, Herman Kellner, J. C. Kloesen, Wm. C. Kunzmann, W. F. Little, John R. Manheimer, Otto Nelson Ivan L. Nixon, B. E. Norrish, M. W. Palmer, Raymond S. Peck, L. C. Porter, F. F. Renwick, F. H. Richardson and J. A. Summers.

Guests who attended meetings and official dinner were: F. W. Ralston, General Electric Co., Lynn, Mass.; Earle E. Richardson, Eastman Kodak Co., Rochester, N. Y.; L. P. Benoit, Canadian Kodak Co., Ltd., Toronto, Ont.; H. H. Cudmore New York; George C. Beach, New York; George Perkins, Perkins Electric Co., Montreal, Canada; Frank C. Badgley, film editor, Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, Ottawa, Canada; F. C. T. O'Hara, Deputy Minister, Department of Trade and Commerce, Canadian Government, Ottawa; Mayor Frank Plant, mayor of the city of Ottawa; J. deC. Topley, Ottawa, Canada; Oral Cloakey, manager, Regent theatre, Ottawa; Capt. Frank Goodale, manager Loew's Ottawa theatre; G. E. Berry, Canadian Government Patent Office; A. A. Dion, general manager Ottawa Electric Co.

Titles and Authors of Papers Presented

The titles and authors of the papers presented at the convention follow: "The Motion Picture Engineer and His Relation to the Industry," by Alfred B. Hitchins; "Some Possibilities for Cold Light," by Herman Kellner; "A Study of the Markings on Motion Picture Film Produced by Drops of Water, Condensed Water Vapor and Abnormal Drying Conditions," by J. I. Crabtree; "Light and Shadow," by J. Serle Dawley and Oscar Lund; "A Method for Correcting Distortion in Oblique Projection,' by John T. Beechlyn; "A Friction Feed Developing Machine," by Roscoe C. Hubbard; "Design of Sprockets for Motion Picture Film," by John G. Jones; "A Motion Picture Camera Taking 3,200 Pictures Per Second," by C. Francis Jenkins; "Recent Progress in the Transmission of Motion Pictures by Radio," by C. Francis Jenkins; "Thermal Characteristics of Motion Picture Film," by L. A. Jones and Earle E. Richardson; "Importance of Synchronizing Taking and Camera Speeds," by F. H. Richardson; "Relation of Objective Lens Diameter to the Efficiency of the Optical System," by Ralph E. LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

Goldwyn

Miniature models for the settings to be used in the production abroad of "Ben Hur" were prepared here and will be taken abroad for construction on a vast scale in Italy, Egypt and the Holy City. The technical staff sailing will include Lawrence Marsten, stage manager of the original Erlanger production; Louis Kolb, chief electrical engineer; John Boyle, cinematographer; Aubrey Scotto, film editor, and William Hinckley, laboratory expert. Scenic staff and wardrobe designers will follow.

King Vidor has finished work on his production "Wild Oranges" in which Virginia Valli is featured.

Four productions, "Law Against Law," "The Master of Men," "The Day of Faith" and "Slave of Desire" are in the cutting rooms.

H. Reeves Smith, prominent on the stage of New York and London, and at present playing in a local theatre with Marjorie Rambeau in "The Road Together," has been added to the cast of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks."

First National

The complete supporting cast for Lewis Stone and Helene Chadwick in "Why Men Leave Home" comprises, William V. Mong, Mary Carr, Hedda Hopper, Alma Bennett, Lila Leslie, Sidney Bracy and E. H. Calvert.

Final scenes were shot last week on "Her Temporary Husband," John McDermott directing, principal players including Owen Moore, Sidney Chaplin, Sylvia Breamer, Tully Marshall, Chuck Reisner, Charles Gerrard and George Cooper.

Joseph de Grasse will direct Rex Beach's "Flowing Gold" for Richard Walton Tully. The cast has not yet been selected.

Cutting and editing of "Anna Christie," the Thomas H. Ince production, will be completed Oct. 15 and the picture released early in December.

Lillian Collier, Goldwyn beauty contest winner who will make her first appearance in "Three Weeks"

Walter McGrail and Rosemary Theby have been engaged for "A Son of the Sahara" which Edwin Carewe will produce in Algiers. Bert Lytell and Clare Windsor have already been announced in principal roles. The cast will sail in a fortnight.

Allan Hale and Lincoln Stedman have been added to the cast of "Black Oxen."

Frank Borzage has been selected to direct Norma Talmadge's next vehicle, "Secrets," from the stage play of the same title.

Universal

Brenda Lane, formerly of Ziegfeld Follies, has been placed under a six months' contract in stock.

Mildred June, former comedienne, will take a plunge into drama, having been chosen by Edward Sedgwick for the leading feminine role opposite Hoot Gibson in "Hook and Ladder."

The Jack Hoxie unit making "Wyoming" will go to Medicine Bow, Wyoming, for backgrounds for the picture. Irene Rich has the feminine lead.

An exact replica of the New York elevated roads is being built for "My Mamie Rose," Mary Philbin's next vehicle.

King Baggot has started work on "The Co-Respondent," a mystery story by Rita Weiman, author of "The Acquittal."

"Water stuff" occupied the Bill Desmond company making the chapter-play "Beasts of Paradise" for a full week. During this time Desmond had to fight a shark under water; do several swims under water in one of which he escapes from a subterranean cave, and then rescue Eileen Sedgwick from a flood.

Paramount

Though still engaged in titling "The Ten Commandments," Cecil DeMille and Jeanie Macpherson have also laid out the screen plot of "Triumph," production of which was scheduled to start Oct. 14.

Director Victor Fleming and the company of forty people who have been three weeks near Flagstaff, Arizona, filming the Zane Grey production, "The Call of the Canyon" have returned to the studio.

Opening scenes for the William de Mille production, "Rita Coventry," have been made on a lavish cafe set. Jack Holt, Agnes Ayres, Nita Naldi and Theodore Kosloff are among the leading players.

George Melford and the cast and staff engaged on "Flaming Barriers" are on location near Sonora, Cal.

Cutting of Bill Hart's "Wild Bill Hickok" is occupying the star.

"The Next Corner" will be Sam Wood's forthcoming production. Monte Katterjohn wrote the scenario. The cast will shortly be chosen.

With heavy camera equipment and a small army of players and workers, Irvin Willat will attempt to penetrate the trackless country 150 miles north of Flagstaff, Ariz., for the Zane Grey story, "The Heritage of the Desert." Bebe Daniels heads the cast.

Metro

A number of noted Tennessee historians have been gathered in Nashville to act in an advisory capacity to Alan Holubar in the filming of scenes for "The Bishop of Cottontown" in order that exactitude mark the production.

Two weeks were spent by Harold Shaw in locating an English manufactured taxicab of special make, for use in the filming of "The Living Past." The complete cast for this production includes Harrison Ford and Enid Bennett, co-starring, Alec Francis, Mary Alden, Harry Northrup, Arline Pretty, Lionel Belmore, William Humphrey, D. R. O. Hatswell, John Sainpolis and Lorimer Johnston.

J. M. Schenck Productions

Buster Keaton has about completed the editing and cutting of his second feature length comedy for Metro, "Hospitality." Natalie Talmadge, his wife, and Baby Buster, just over a year old, also appear in the production. The story deals with life in America in the year 1830.

Frank Borzage, who will direct Norma Talmadge in "Secrets," is back from a trip to Cleveland where he went to view the stage production from which the film will be taken.

Constance Talmadge will start work on her new feature, "The Mirage," within two weeks.

Hollywood Studios

Paul Powell has put the finishing touches to "The Daughter of Mother McGinn," Cosmopolitan production, and the picture will be shipped to New York this week.

The Renaud Hoffman company has returned from several days' location work near Sunland, where they have been shooting on "Maud Muller" in which Marjorie Daw has the lead. Paul Schofield, scenarist, has taken offices at the studios.

Director J. P. McGowan is placing the finishing touches to "The Whipping Boss" after returning from location in Louisiana lumber camps. Lloyd Hughes, Barbara Bedford, and Eddie Phillips are among the members of the all-star cast.

Here and There

"Say Yes," a dog said to be half-Arab, will have an important part, if not the lead, in the next Trimble-Murfin production. Laurence Trimble has been schooling him for over a year.

Dallas Fitzgerald will handle the megaphone in "The Dawn of Love," a picturization of the novel of the same name written by I. W. Irving, and which he will produce. Exteriors will be made in the mountains about San Diego.

Blanche Sweet's engagements for the winter include her portrayal of the lead in Alan Holubar's "The Human Mill," which she is just starting; then in the title role of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" to be directed by Marshall Neilan, following which she will be seen in a big production for a prominent producer, contracts for which are awaiting her signature. Her fourth will be another story to be directed by Marshall Neilan, negotiations for which are now under way.

The assignment of Gareth Hughes and Vera Reynolds to parts in Pola Negri's "My Man" completes the cast.

An original story by the Principal Pictures scenario department will be, in all probability, the vehicle for Baby Peggy's debut under her new contract.

M. C. Levee has changed the title of the Maurice Tourneur production "Jealous Fools" to "Jealous Husbands."

At the Christie studios two productions are in course of making. Harold Beaudine is directing "Fool Proof" with Neal Burns and Vera Steadman, while Al Christie is directing "A Perfect 36," Bobby Vernon doing a feminine impersonation, supported by Teddy Sampson, Patricia Palmer and Jimmie Harrison.

Warner Baxter, under a new contract with Powers-R. C. Productions, will be featured and starred in forthcoming dramas.

Jetta Goudal, who has been signed to a long-term contract by Distinctive Pictures Corporation

LESS HASTE SAVES TIME

ALTHOUGH STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES are printing over one million feet of film per week, visitors frequently express amazement at the quiet and order prevailing here.

This absence of confusion and turmoil did not just happen, but is the result of studied organization and careful planning.

Every step in the developing and printing of film is taken with the quiet sureness and easy confidence felt by skilled employees whose work has been systematically routed and is expertly supervised.

This freedom from undue haste insures a painstaking thoroughness which results in an actual saving of time in the delivery of a perfect production.

UNIVE HAS THE

NOW COMES ANOTHER

AS though the most sensational year in our career were not enough excitement for us, I now have the pleasure of announcing that another "knockout" has just arrived from our Universal City studio.

It is "THE ACQUITTAL."

The play was a corker, but the picture is so much better that there is no comparison. In the play, the very best of the action took place off stage. In the picture the whole tale is unfolded reel by reel and I want to tell you it is one of the best yarns ever spun!

My hat is off to the people who transformed the play into a screen story; to the entire cast; and to the clever director, as well as to every man, woman, boy or girl who had anything to do with any part of its making.

Its love theme is unique. Its comedy is delicate. Its drama is absorbingly interesting. And its mystifying twists by which suspicion is thrown from one character to another will keep you guessing until the very end.

If "THE ACQUITTAL" had been a flivver, Universal would still be enjoying the most remarkable year any producing company ever had. But to have this picture pile in on top of other successes and to have it turn out to be one of the most perfect gems ever produced in any studio in any year is so gratifying that I can't help crowing about it.

Did you ever hear of such a parade of successes as Universal has brought together this year? Did you ever know of any single company following up one hit with another and another and so on until it seemed as though the procession would never end?

And now to get back to "THE ACQUITTAL." I ask you to take particular notice of the remarkable court room scene in this production. As you know, court room scenes are one of the hardest things to handle successfully on the screen or stage. Either they don't ring true or they bore the spectator to death. The only court room scene I ever saw which was a hit was in "Lightnin'" as played on the stage by Frank Bacon. But this was due to its delicious comedy, more than to its drama. In "THE ACQUITTAL" the court room scene will grip you every minute. You will not get too much of it. You will not get enough!

I am looking forward to the newspaper and trade paper criticisms on "THE ACQUITTAL" with keenest interest. I don't believe any critic can fail to boost it to the skies, for I never saw a production more critic-proof. But, better even than this, is the fact that this is the sort of picture which people will send their friends to see. As a word-of-mouth advertiser, it will pack any house that plays it.

The Universal has smashed the bulls-eye right on the button again! And still more are coming! Watch, look and listen!

And Here's What

FROM MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

Here is a picture with a new idea, has many laughs as there are thrills, cabaret scenes in South America, a real novelty with fast action, great climax with many surprises. You will be able to please any audience with this one.

FROM EXHIBITORS HERALD:

One of the most fantastic and unique crook comedy-drama ever screened, mystery, comedy, drama and a corking love story. If you want something unusual in screen entertainment, our advice is to hop out and get "Lights Out." Especially clever is the climax.

They Say About It:—

FROM LOS ANGELES TIMES:

Affords quite the most delightful caricature I've seen on the screen for a long time. It has a multitude of delights. Really it is superb as a comedy.

FROM HARRISON'S REPORTS:

Story is sufficiently compelling, and action sufficiently fast, and thrills close enough together to keep the spectator well satisfied. "Lights Out" is good stuff.

FROM MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

There is plenty of opportunity for intrigue, surprises and accumulative thrills. The best entertainment lies in the climax.

It's an F. B. O. Picture

A VIVID ROMANCE ON PALACE SCREEN

Reginald Barker Offers Thrilling Romance and Melodrama of Canadian Northwest, With Exceptional Cast

A THROBBING melodramatic romance of the North country that teems with action and runs the gamut of emotional appeal is "The Eternal Struggle," the Reginald Barker production for Metro that is presented at Loew's Palace this week as the chief feature

"The Eternal Struggle" represents Mr. Barker's picturization of C. B. Lancaster's stirring novel, "The Law Bringers," and it derives its chief force and appeal from the conflict between love and duty experienced by two members of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police—the conflict between their love for the same girl and their duty to the law which the girl seems to have violated most grossly.

Of particular interest to the discriminating photoplay enthusiast is the fact that Director Barker has assembled, in the production of this picture, what is easily one of the most remarkable casts of the current season. The chief roles of the story are enacted by Earle Williams, Rene Adoree, Barbara La Marr, Wallace Beery, Pat Harmon, George Kuwa, Josef Swickard and others.

Few productions offered the screen this season are so inherently dramatic as this great love epic of the Canadian snows, while it is also particularly distinguished for its visualization of nature in her wilder moods—a startling series of scenes filmed on the very locale of the story, showing a great ice-jam, a terrific buffalo stampede and other incidents that thrill with their superb action and breathless force.

The Washington Herald said: The

THE CRITICS WROTE THIS AD

"An attraction of considerable merit. It has an elaborate story that provides for many tense scenes.—Celebrated names in cast.—Strong dramatic scenes aplenty."—Savannah, Ga., News.

"The shooting of the rapids by the lovers in a canoe deserves particular mention as a picturesque and hair-raising episode. Renee Adoree fascinating. Exquisitely lovely snow scenes."—Exhibitor's Trade Review.

"Reginald Barker has turned the trick. Renee Adoree bursts into stardom. Race of the canoe through rapids is thrilling. Magnificent views."—Los Angeles Express.

"Miss Adoree lends considerable charm and vitality to the role of the heroine and deserves such assignments in the future. Fine exteriors. Thrills attending canoe incident."—Motion Picture News.

"The picture was actually made on a Canadian location. There is a new tang in the very air of some of the scenes that stimulates you. Miss Adoree is the life of the party. She has some marvelous scenes."—Los Angeles Times.

"Marvelous series of scenes showing the hero and heroine shooting down rapids in a canoe. Best thing of this sort we have ever seen. Renee Adoree is charming."—Morning Telegraph.

CAPACITY AT THE CHICAGO

This Reginald Barker production packed 'em in at the windy city's big cinema palace. "The big lobby was well filled with standees Wednesday midevening and the five thousand (seating capacity) within when the writer saw the picture gave every indication of approval," said the critic of Exhibitor's Herald.

"Strangers" at Capitol Best There This Season

Following on the heels of "Scaramouche," Metro looks to have another winner at the Capitol this week with "Strangers of the Night," the screen adaptation of "Captain Applejack." The film is a Fred Niblo production, presented by Louis B. Mayer and releasing through Metro.

Niblo has turned out an excellent piece of work with this vehicle, that ranks with or surmounts any feature the Capitol has housed so far this season. Not only is the production of decided note, but the work of the cast marks a combined effort that augments a picture which will have that most valuable means of advertising—by word of mouth.

That the picture will create talk seems certain if the manner in which it was received by yesterday's matinee audience is a criterion. The house figuratively ate it up to the extent it must be classed as one of the best mystery-comedies ever registered upon celluloid.

A Metro picture in the Capitol is unusual enough and it did go in and "clean" with a resounding send-off.

It marks about the best effort Matt Moore has ever donated to the camera. Enid Bennett and Barbara La Marr are not far behind in personal honors. Others include Robert McKim, Mathilda Brundage, Emily Fitzroy, Otto Hoffman and Thomas Ricketts.

It's there.

PIONEER TRAILS

AN EPIC of the golden West when brave adventurers blazed paths to new homelands through virgin prairie and unmarked mountain wilderness.

A DRAMA of sun-scorched plains when cruel Indians in vivid warpaint overwhelmed caravans of prairie schooners and wreaked horrible vengeance on innocent women and children with scalplock knife and tomahawk.

A STORY of youth's fair love, rising above the hardships and perils and treachery of frontier life, sustained by a girl's unfaltering faith in the man she adored.

Here is what the exhibitor is looking for and the public too,—good, sound screen entertainment, full of human interest, a delightful love story and the whole enacted among the most picturesque settings imaginable. Written and directed by David Smith. Seven reels.

Here is really an excellent picture of the days of the great gold rush in 1849. It has everything the exhibitor is looking for, love interest, human interest, and melodramatic situations. The scene of the wagon train attacked by Indians, the settlers defence of their property and lost fight are at once impressive and show exceptional directorial knowledge. Another thrilling bit of action is the runaway stage coach down the steep mountain road and the checking of the lead horses in their mad dash by the hero. A final stirring incident was the escape of Jack Plains from the court room when things looked darkest.

A splendid picture and one that ought to make good in any house.

"Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing"

Mae Marsh Becomes a Comedienne in Allied Producers Comedy Drama

Reviewed by Beatrice Barrett

Mae Marsh, the wistful, appealing girl who has brought tears to the eyes of the audience so often, is forgotten in this production, and instead we have a new Mae Marsh, a vivacious, hoydenish girl who will be every bit as appealing to an audience and keep them laughing and intensely interested for fear they will miss one of the bright, quickly moving fun filled scenes she is creating for them on the screen.

There are no idle moments in "Paddy-the-Next-Best-Thing." It is good, clean fun, irresistibly funny, with one event coming so quickly on top of another that the audience will be carried along with the verve and rush and fun of the thing. And coupled with the splendid acting of Mae Marsh and the excellent support given by George K. Arthur, Darby Foster and Lillian Douglas, as well as the rest of the well picked cast, each of whom make their own bit worth while, is some of the most exquisite photography ever put on the screen.

Good, light entertainment—which will really entertain—is this production. The story is a sketchy affair with just enough plot to carry the various interesting incidents, but it is the life and swing and fun of the action which will make the great appeal to the audience.

To give a little more weight to the story they have introduced a melodramatic ending with Paddy wandering in the marsh and being caught in the deadly clutches of the quicksand. Here those who must have thrills with their pictures to be fully satisfied will find them in abundance, with a little glimpse of the more familiar Mae Marsh in the more tragic role.

VOL. XXVIII NEW YORK, OCTOBER 27, 1923 No. 17

An Exhibitors' Year

IT would appear from some printed expressions of opinion that a sort of buyers' strike is on among exhibitors with respect to this season's feature output.

This would not be surprising; in practically all lines of manufactured goods the high cost of production—due to labor costs—has caused merchants to stock up warily, hesitatingly and only as public demand compels them.

But we candidly doubt if a so-called buyers' strike exists to any degree of any consequence in the film trade.

We have talked to a good many satisfied exhibitors and find that they are striking no more on prices than any careful buyer strikes at all times; and some prominent producer-distributors, prominent enough to talk carefully, assure us that rental prices are no higher this year than last. It is true that the gross rental intake of the industry this year, 1923-24, will considerably outdistance last year; but this increase will come from the season's markedly better pictures and because the public will pay more into the box office for them.

The public wants these better pictures. There isn't the least question about that. And the up-and-coming exhibitor knows this; and he also wants and will pay for these better pictures.

The worst thing that could happen to the exhibitor is not to get these pictures, to be compelled to run on the poor product of say two years ago, even with the rental prices that went with these inferior pictures.

Production costs have gone up but so has quality. And that is very fortunate for this industry.

The exhibitor differs from other merchants at the present time in two important respects.

One is a disadvantage to him: that is, he hasn't raised his admission prices as has the general retailer as his goods have cost him much more.

But again the exhibitor has a lot of seats to sell which cost him money if unfilled. And the country at large is overseated.

That's one reason why we say that this is the era of exploitation. To put it in simple words, the exhibitor's greater problem this year is to tell his public about the better kind of pictures so that those idle seats will be filled.

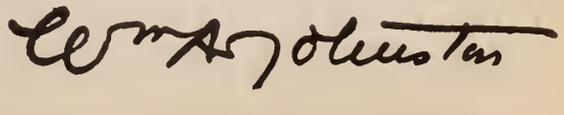
The public, we repeat, wants these better pictures. And they are being produced. That's certain.

And whatever straining and creaking is going on right now is simply the reordering of rental plans and policies and exhibition resources so that these new and better pictures can be handled logically and profitably.



There must be advertising—to get the public in.

There must be runs long enough so that these pictures can pay both the exhibitor and the producer.

It's a big exigency to meet and the industry will have its hands full this year. There will, there must be vital changes.

Some exhibitors may think the whole trouble lies with rental prices. Other exhibitors will effect the necessary changes and make money.

We don't believe there's an exhibitors' strike on; we believe this is an exhibitors' year, a year of great possibilities, determined by the effort made to fulfill them.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

BETTY COMPSON possesses some characteristics in common with Charlie Chaplin. She is not only a modest, unassuming personality capable of charming conversation, but when she talks there is much sound philosophy and common sense in her viewpoints.

Miss Compson who has lately returned from England where she stayed several months doing picture work has given some frank impressions of the English film situation. She met all the British trade leaders, attended two trade dinners and was the guest of many British exhibitors at their theatres during week-end vacations.

"I admire the British exhibitor greatly," stated Miss Compson, "and I do not want to hurt the feelings of anyone of the British film industry when I say that not one-quarter of the British public attend the pictures that should attend. The fault is in exhibition—not exploitation, because what exploitation is done seems to be suited to the temperament of the average Englishman. High power American exploitation methods might fall flat over there.

"The English fans would appreciate the luxurious atmosphere of the American picture show," continued the American star, "and this particularly applies to the women and young girl fans. The wonderful comforts of the American picture theatre are missing in most of the cinemas. In fact, I think you have to be an extraordinary fan over there to persist in going to the pictures the way they are presented. The fault is really not the exhibitor's, when you analyze it. He would build theatres on the American order, but finds it difficult, if not impossible, to secure the necessary capital.

"So in the final analysis, the root of the trouble is an economic one, and the British capitalists can be blamed. If they would assist the capable exhibitor to build better cinemas, the British industry would automatically gain higher financial prestige.

"The English press was very kind to me throughout my stay," said Miss Compson, "but they can be criticized along with the capitalists for their short-sighted attitude toward motion pictures. They, too, do not see the possibilities—which they could help bring about if they gave the British industry support in any reasonable degree. And it is to the newspapers' interest as the public want to read about the films.

"I trust that the Motion Picture News will emphasize that I appreciate the courtesies shown me by individual members of the British press, and whom, I am sure, would not want me to withhold from our own trade press what I consider to be the sad truth. I would not talk so bluntly if I did not think my remarks could be made helpful to those whom they concern."

Miss Compson frankly states, "Let the British exhibitor beat down those two evils of financial and newspaper apathy and nothing can stop the motion picture coming into its own over there."

Being an observant personality, she has caught a real perspective on conditions in England. The reason the American film industry is on such a secure plane lies in the fact that the capitalists—men of vision, who are not afraid of taking a chance—and the newspapers and exploiteers and exhibitors have all co-operated.

THE German production menace frequently referred to about a year ago—that is the danger of competition with American production—is completely ended, according to Ben Blumenthal, who has just returned to this country. German producers have all but quit owing to the currency situation. The leading producer, Joe May, has gone to London and will produce there with English and German capital. The German restrictions against the importation of American films still prevail but there seem to be a great many special importation licenses, and according to Mr. Blumenthal's estimate, within a year the German theatres will be showing at least 95% American films. Conditions in Austria and Hungary are good; currency is back on a pre-war basis and here again the American producer will find an equally improving market.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame" has been in London with a profitable run from the first week on.

Mr. Blumenthal has brought back with him the ten reel production "I.N.R.I.," a ten reel feature of the life of Christ. The cast contains a number of prominent Russian actors and features among others, Henry Porten and Asta Nielson. The stills show some remarkable sets and fine characterizations on the part of the Russian actors. The print of the picture is on its way over.

J. D. WILLIAMS of Ritz-Carlton, has booked passage on Leviathan which sails October 20th.

IT is interesting to note that Maude Adams, one of the best-loved stage stars, is to be a moving picture producer. Time was a few years ago when she looked coldly upon any project for making her a screen luminary.

The actress who brought J. M. Barrie before the public has been in a more receptive mood of late concerning the silversheet, for she has been experimenting and studying films, camera, lighting, etc., for several months. She has succeeded in interesting Rudyard Kipling in her ambitions so that he is willing to give her the motion picture rights to "Kim."

"Kim" has been one of the most sought-after stories, but up to the present Mr. Kipling has been unwilling to part with his treasure for picture purposes. It is said that it was through J. M. Barrie that negotiations were conducted.

It will be remembered that Miss Adams has played in several of the Barrie plays and their friendship is of long duration. One condition under which Mr. Kipling sold the motion picture rights of "Kim" was that the title role should be played by a boy, rather than by a girl, and second, that the film should be made in India.

Miss Adams will not appear in the picture herself, she will merely act in the role of the producer. Her present plan is to start for the Orient next winter and to film "Kim" in India, getting all the picturesque atmosphere of the country.

IT'S been a long, long time since Paul Revere, astride his horse, rode madly through Lexington—yet history has never recorded any facts concerning the color of the steed. No one knows to this day whether the dashing Paul rode a bay or a chestnut or a white or a roan or a mottled gray or a black. Of course darkness had enveloped him and the good farmers along the road side were unable to identify the rider, or the horse.

This is apropos of D. W. Griffith's picturization of the eventful years of the American Revolution. Steps have been taken for the foundation of an independent historical research bureau under the direction of Will Hays so that in the future there may be an authentic record of exactly how things looked.

Historians may not have erred in detailing the figures and facts, but they haven't possessed photographic minds. As a result Griffith has spent a snug sum seeking to learn the color of Paul Revere's galloping steed. Furthermore, no one could tell him the sort of wagons used by the Colonists. And the historians have again failed on the smaller details in dwelling upon the larger facts.

The illustrations of the rider who aroused the slumbering Minute Men indicate that the horse was not white—still that is no certain proof that he wasn't white for it may have been the artist's fancy to paint him black. Nothing like being a stickler for detail—for the chances are some octogenarian's great-grandfather may have sold or traded the horse to Revere and knew its exact color—and the old gentleman would waste no time in telling the whole world that the stepper shown galloping through Lexington was out of character if his color didn't match his great-grandfather's description.

We hope that the incident of Washington crossing the Delaware will be straightened out at the same time. Here again the artist fools us. For one thing we refuse to subscribe to the popular belief that the leader of the Continental Army was ever so foolhardy as to stand up in the boat in a river packed with ice. Washington may have possessed a charmed life and any artist with a sense of the dramatic has painted him immune to injury—whether in a boat or on a horse—but the chances are he didn't indulge in unnecessary heroics.

Mr. Hays' historical research bureau can set a lot of things right—and the Revolutionary War needs a few correction marks here and there. * * *

JERLEY POORE SHEEHAN, the fictionist and scenarist, has heard the call of the megaphone and is about to take up his career as a director. Mr. Sheehan, who has contributed dozens of stories to popular magazines and whose screen duties have involved considerable adaptations—one of which is "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," is well qualified to shoot continuity inasmuch as he possesses a story mind and knows a thing or two about dramatic technique. Success, Mr. Sheehan, for shaking hands with Old Man Opportunity!

RICHARD A. ROWLAND put one over the other day which is entitled to some attention. The general manager of First National, who is also one of the prominent citizens of Rye, N. Y., and a member of the Rye Country Club, arranged a unique golf match between Gene Sarazen, professional golf champion, and Edwin Carewe, the picture director—before the latter sailed for Europe the other day.

Carewe, while well known as a mean swinger of clubs on the West Coast, does not usually travel in such high class golf company as the former national open champion, so Rowland arranged that Sarazen should be blindfolded before each shot, after getting his stance.

The match was played at the Rye Country Club and a gallery of two hundred followed the players and Rowland who acted as stakeholder of the considerably sized side bet. At the end of of nine holes Sarazen turned in a 47 and Carewe a 44. The professional golfer's score is considered remarkable in view of the conditions.

Carewe is now cheered on his ocean voyage by the knowledge that he is the only film director ever to defeat a national golf champion.

JOHN DOUMERY, a member of Rex Ingram's production staff, sailed on the Mauretania last week to join Mr. Ingram in England. Mr. Daumery will assist in searching for locations in Egypt and in Central Europe where it is likely the next two Ingram pictures will be made.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, October 11.—When Morris Joseph, manager of the local Universal film exchange, received the following message, he didn't know whether some one was playing an April Fool or a Hallowe'en joke on him.

The telegram said: "Sorry to do this but compelled to cancel Universal service, theatre blown up." (Signed) Manager, Smithfield Opera House. Upon investigation Manager Joseph discovered that a bootlegging organization was held responsible for the dynamiting of the town and every building was damaged.

Manager Wood of Smithfield afterwards notified the Cleveland exchange that the necessary repairs would be made and he would continue to be an 100 per cent Universal customer.

ERNEST FREDMAN, editor of The Film Renter and Motion Picture News, a British trade paper, sailed from England last Saturday on the "Adriatic" and will reach New York, the 21st. His purpose in visiting the United States is to endeavor to glean as much information from the executive heads of the industry in New York that will be of value to the exhibiting and renting side of the business in England.

Mr. Fredman's last visit to this country was eighteen months ago. He will stop at the Plaza during his stay in New York.

WHEN "Jealous Husbands" is released it will mark the fiftieth picture directed by Maurice Tourneur since his arrival in this country from France in 1914.

This is on the average of about five a year—which indicates that the French director is not a subscriber to the theory that pictures must be run off per schedule. Many will recall his first American offering, "Mother," which was followed by "The Man of the Hour," "The Wishing Ring," "The Pit," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Trilby"—with Clara Kimball Young, "The Pride of the Clan," "Blue Bird," and a host of others—the most recent of which are "The Christian," "The Isle of Lost Ships," and "The Brass Bottle."

Michigan Exhibitors Hold Meeting

Ample Finances Provided for Increased Activities at Enthusiastic Gathering

THE annual convention of the Motion Picture Owners of Michigan marked another milestone in the forward march of this substantial and progressive organization. At the sessions which were held at the Otsego Hotel, Jackson, Mich., Oct. 16th and 17th, plans were made and finances provided for increased activities which will prove beneficial to Michigan exhibitors and the records of the past year's accomplishments.

The best in the Association's history were reviewed.

Politics, the bane of many state organizations, were tabooed and no reference to differences with the National organization were heard. the business of the convention going forward briskly without a single jarring note. That Michigan is prepared to do its part in supporting a National organization when it deems it was was shown by the budget item setting aside $4,000 for this purpose. The money being already in the treasury.

Plans for the coming year include an active campaign for the building of public good will and by means of speakers who will address Kiwanis, Lions and other men's and women's clubs throughout the state and extensive advertising. The entire campaign is being aimed to bring the eighty per cent of the public not now theater attendants into the movie houses. Five thousand dollars was set aside for this purpose.

Other work outlined in detail for the year was a comprehensive campaign to have the admission tax removed and plans which will probably secure an adjustment of the so-called music tax. The report of Manager Richey showed a splendid growth under President McLaren and his strong board of directors. Four hundred and fifty-eight cash supporting members now being on the roster, compared with three hundred and twenty-seven one year ago. All but two per cent of the money pledged at Flint a year ago has been paid and the audit of the association's books shows a balance of $6,222 on hand after spending more than $26,000 during the year.

The enthusiasm of members for organization work was shown by doubling of pledges, more than $11,000 being pledged by members at the convention as compared to $6,000 last year. With income from other sources $40,000, it is estimated will come into the treasury this year, a sum just equal to the amount saved members by the new fire insurance department last year.

At the annual election of officers, J. R. Denniston was chosen president, the incumbent, W. P. McLaren declining to run again; Phil. Gleichman, vice-president; Harlan T. Hall, secretary; John E. Niebes, treasurer. Saginaw was chosen as the next convention city.

An elaborate program of entertainment was successfully carried out and the unusually large number of members' wives present were given a splendid time. At the banquet, which was a notable affair, speakers of national note were heard and addressed the exhibitors on vital topics. Among them were included C. C. Pettijohn, Judge Alfred J. Murphy, Lt. Gov. T. R. Reed and many others. It was decided by the directors that Michigan will be represented at the coming French Lick conference.

Massachusetts Billboard Fight in Courts

THE billboard fight in Massachusetts has at last reached the courts. Advertisers who have been accustomed to using this means of exploitation have a long time contended that the state is overreaching its powers in trying to ban the erection of signs on private property.

Now summonses have been served on four of the big concerns in the state who build and rent such signs, on a complaint made by the State Department of Public Works. The cases are returnable in the Malden district court, the boards which form the test case being on the Revere Beach Parkway.

The department alleges that they ordered the removal of five huge signs at that locality, that their orders have been ignored, and that the signs are being left there in violation of a department regulation prohibiting such structures within 300 feet of a public parkway. It has been stated by officers of the defendant concerns that in the event the decision in the lower court is against them, that the case will be carried to the Supreme court.

School Questionnaires a Surpirse

An "eye-opener" to exhibitors of northern Missouri was the recreational survey made by a committee of the Independence, Mo., Chamber of Commerce and John E. Mitchell, field representative of the Playground and Recreation Association of America. Replies from questionnaires to 1,931 school children more than eleven years old revealed that in the town of Independence, which has about 11,000 population and two motion picture theatres, more than $13,000 is spent annually by school children, including only ward schools and high schools.

Truth in replies to the questionnaires was assured by the fact that no student was required to sign his name, there being several other questions on the list which might cause the student to refrain from answering had he been forced to include his signature.

There were 121 boys between the ages of 11 and 12 who spend $1,704 at motion picture theatres, this question not being asked of girls this age. At the Junior high school 502 boys and girls spend $5.458 annually, the ages averaging from 12 to 14 years, while at the William Chrisman high school, the ages averaging from 14 to 18 years, 270 boys spend a total of $6.071 a year at the two picture houses. The questionnaires in this high school showed that girls, after reaching the age of 15 or 16, spend very little on theatres, it being "the man who pays."

While the survey primarily was for the purpose of furthering the interest of playground development, it is in no way antagonistic to the screen and only praise of the modern motion picture theatre was made by Mr. Mitchell.

"The average boy or girl would be much better off in some first-class motion picture house than they would at many other places," Mr. Mitchell said. "The questionnaires in Independence are the first in which I have included a question pertaining to motion pictures, but in the future I shall include it in all of them."

Little Mickey Levee, son of M. C., and his playmates, gathered together for a party in celebration of Mickey's birthday.

"Gag" Men Name Tommy Grey as Leader

With all branches of the industry forming their own little organizations, the "gag" men on the coast have at last swung into line. The word was passed out to all the studios recently calling them to a meeting this week and all of them responded. A permanent organization was launched with Tommy Grey from the Harold Lloyd staff named as president of the body.

Al Jolson Sued by Kelly for $250,000

Al Jolson was made the defendant in a suit for $250,000 in the Supreme Court Wednesday as a result of his recent deal with D. W. Griffith. Anthony Paul Kelly is the plaintiff. He claims responsibility for negotiating the arrangements which brought Jolson and Griffith together for a series of pictures and he figures his services worth the amount asked, it is said.

Jolson abruptly departed for Europe at about the time the cast was assembled for the first picture and Lloyd Hamilton was substituted for him.

Industry Aid May be Asked to Aid Prohibition

Motion picture producers will be asked to aid in prohibition enforcement according to word from Washington, where the committee on educational policy of the Governors' Conference is discussing the problems of prohibition.

A conference with producers is suggested in an effort to have all flings at prohibition eliminated from the screen. It is contended that pictures that scoff at the dry measure tend to mould public opinion to oppose enforcement of the measure.

Harvey Greets Indians of "Covered Wagon"

Cable dispatches received from London tell of an interesting gathering at Tuesday night's performance of "The Covered Wagon" at the Pavillion Theater. Ambassador Harvey and Mrs. Harvey were the guests of honor.

The Indians who went to London to appear in the prologue there were presented to Ambassador Harvey by Col. T. J. McCoy, who is in charge of the Indian detachment. Mr. Harvey shook hands with the Indians and welcomed them to England in a brief speech. Chief Goes-in-Lodge responded in the Indian sign language, which was interpreted to Mr. and Mrs. Harvey and the other guests by Col. McCoy.

T.O.C.C. Endorses Nat'l M.P. Day

Resolution Prepared by Special Committee Is Unanimously Passed at Meeting

NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE DAY, November 19, 1923, was unanimously endorsed by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce by a resolution presented by a special committee of fifteen, appointed by the president for the purpose of preparing same, at a largely attended meeting held October 16 at the Hotel Astor. The resolution read: "Resolved, that the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce endorses National Motion Picture Day, November 19, 1923, and urges its members to contribute 25 per cent of the receipts of their theatres on that day to a committee to be appointed by the president to carry out the purpose of this resolution."

The special committee which prepared the resolution met on the previous day and was composed of the following members: Sydney S. Cohen, Charles L. O'Reilly, William Brandt, Sol Raives, John Manheimer, Hyman Rachmiel, B. Edelhertz, Charles Moses, Arthur Hirsch, Harry Traub, Louis F. Blumenthal, Sol Brill and Charles Steiner and thoroughly discussed the purpose of National Motion Picture Day.

Addresses were made at the meeting on October 16 by President O'Reilly of the T. O. C. C., President Cohen of the national organization, President William Brandt of the M. P. T. O. of New York State and many other members.

President O'Reilly of the T. O. C. C. has appointed committees of exhibitors from each borough of the Greater City and from northern New Jersey to carry out the purpose of the resolution. They follow:

Borough of Manhattan—J. Arthur Hirsch, Morris Needles, Louis Selmeider, J. Louis Geller, William Landau, Harry Traub, A. J. Wolt, Sol Raives, Jack Schwartz, Benjamin Knoble,, J. Alton Bradbury, H. Yaffa, Sol Saphier, Charles Steiner, J. Elpern, Lee Ochs, Max Silverman, Nathan Block, B. Sherman.

Borough of the Bronx—Bernard Grob, Joseph Weinstock, Henry Suchman, Charles Goldreyer, Clarence Cohen, Joseph Jaime.

Borough of Brooklyn—Samuel Schwartz, Samuel Rhonheimer, John Manheimer, Rudy Sanders, A. H. Eisenstadt, Philip Rosenson, Max Barr, Arthur Rapf, William Small, Otto Lederer, Ahraham Schwartz, Samuel Sonin, Hyman Rachmiel, S. Rinzler.

Borough of Queens—Charles Schwartz, Hy Gainsboro, Sol Brill, J. Goldberg, B. Rossy.

Borough of Richmond—Charles Moses, Leon Rosenblatt.

Northern New Jersey—Joseph Seider, David Keiserstein, Louis Blumenthal, Joseph Stern.

Famous Players Would List 14,288 Shares

Famous Players are said to have petitioned the Stock Exchange to list 14,288 additional shares of common stock at no par value. It is likely that 11,000 shares will be turned over to Sid Grauman for his interest in the Million Dollar, Metropolitan and Rialto in Los Angeles.

Paramount Tokyo Representative in New York Recounts Experiences in 'Quake

TOM D. COCHRANE, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation branch office at Tokyo, Japan, who was slightly injured in the earthquake which destroyed Tokyo and Yokohama, arrived in New York Saturday, October 13, to confer with E. E. Shauer, director of the Foreign department, regarding plans for the distribution of Paramount pictures, from the temporary offices opened at Kobe immediately following the disaster. While in New York Mr. Cochrane will assist the Foreign department in restocking the new Japanese office with films and advertising accessories to replace the supplies destroyed when the office in Tokyo was wiped out.

"The earthquake and fire which swept Tokyo were the most appalling forms of destruction I have ever seen," said Mr. Cochrane in discussing the disaster. "I cannot find words to describe the events which happened immediately after the first shock of the earthquake was felt at noon on Saturday, Sept. 1st. My wife and her sister and myself were at a resort near Tokyo at the time and in a few moments a scene of quiet and peacefulness was turned into a shambles of destruction. My sister was pinned beneath the wreckage of the house and was only rescued after the most difficult and trying effort. Fortunately she was not seriously injured.

"One of the heroic incidents was the feat performed by R. E. MacIntyre, assistant manager of the Tokyo office, who walked sixty-five miles to bring assistance to us. As all of the roads and rail lines were destroyed his trip called for the greatest exertion, which was cheerfully given in order that we might escape from the stricken district. It was necessary to make the trip to Kobe overland and it was many hours before we were able to reach a place of safety. My wife and sister-in-law are now at Kobe recovering from their terrible experience.

"The Paramount offices in Tokyo were totally destroyed, with all of our prints, records and valuable advertising material. Fortunately there were many prints in use outside the earthquake district and these have been keeping in circulation since the reopening of our offices in Kobe. Mr. MacIntyre has taken charge of the tremendous task of restoring our service in my absence and our first effort will be to get under way as many new pictures as possible. We expect to co-operate as fully as possible with the government of Japan in its work of providing entertainment for the masses of people during the tedious work of reconstruction."

Reginald Denny Injured in Auto Wreck

REGINALD DENNY, Universal-Jewel star, was seriously injured several days ago in an automobile accident near Los Angeles. Denny will be laid up for some time.

His injuries consist mostly of severe strains, cuts and bruises. He was riding in an automobile with Ben Hendricks, an assistant director for Universal. The car skidded, crashed into a telegraph pole and turned turtle. Hendricks also was injured.

Denny had just completed work on "The Spice of Life," in which he took the role of a racing automobile driver. He passed through a number of hazardous experiences during the making of the picture, only to be injured in a matter of fact ride home from the studio.

Film Leaders Give Views on Production

director hears of the largs sums another director is spending of the releasing companies' money, he realizes that salaries cannot be paid with conversation and the talk that he hears about the large gross that pictures do must be true. The fault back of this whole situation is the excessive, uncalled for and unnecessary use of adjectives and superlatives.

"The answer to it all is that the releasing organizations, for their self-preservation, should get together for a gentlemen's agreement (if there he such) to hold their production costs to a point where the theatre, the producer and the releasing organization can share equitably, and where pictures can be sold and the public entertained from the viewpoint of a logical story in lieu of a lavish and vulgar display of money and money-talk. After all, it does not bespeak art. The basic principle of art is not in magnitude or the lavish coating of tinsel and gilt, but rather of a thing well done or well told in a dignified way.

"The several executives are right: but people who live in glass houses should pull down the blinds."

Sam Berman to Make Tour of New York State

Samuel I. Berman, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of N. Y., will shortly make a tour of the state in the interest of admission tax repeal and matters connected with the general good of the organization. It is expected the trip will occupy several weeks.

Austin, Texas, Enforces New Occupation Tax

In accordance with a new ordinance passed in Austin, Texas, a special occupation tax is imposed, making it compulsory for all theatres and places of amusement to take out a state license.

Fire Causes $5,000 Damage to Elroy House

Fire in the Majestic theatre in Elroy, Wis., is reported to have caused damage to the extent of $5,000. The blaze originated in the projection machine and the damage was principally to equipment in the booth.

Forms Plans for National M. P. Day

700 Theatre Representatives Attend Monster Mass-Meeting in Pittsburgh

WITH representatives of 700 theatres in attendance, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania held a giant mass meeting last Sunday evening, October 14th, at the Davis theatre, Pittsburgh, to formulate definite plans for National Motion Picture Day on Monday November 19th.

Exhibitors from all over the state listened to an address by Harry Davis, who presided, on "National Motion Picture Day." Mr. Davis is a National Director of the M. P. T. O. A. He was followed by former Congressman Hon. James Francis Burk, a prominent legislator for 25 years, who spoke on "Motion Picture Legislation." Following the Hon. Mr. Burk, William Bender, National Treasurer, M. P. T. O. A., and National Chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee made a spirited plea for united and concerted support for the movement.

The meeting opened with a series of jazz selections by the Mason-Dixon orchestra and a vocal solo by Chauncey Parsons. At the conclusion of the speeches, the meeting unanimously voted to celebrate National Motion Picture Day. The cards were distributed and every theatre owner present, in pledging his support to the movement, agreed to turn over 25 per cent. of the day's receipts on November 19th to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Harry Davis, who is Chairman of the Motion Picture Day Committee for Western Pennsylvania, had previously called a meeting of 50 theatre owners, representing the district chairmen throughout the territory, which was held on October 6th at Pittsburgh. At that time the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania voluntarily appropriated any amount of money up to $1,000 for the extra and added exploitation of National Motion Picture Day. This action was unanimously taken, following a motion to approve and endorse the day.

An array of 3 sheets, 1 sheets and snipes are being prepared and plans are maturing for a campaign culminating with the celebration on November 19th which will bring nation-wide publicity to the event among the public as well as theatre owners. This campaign began with the big rally on Sunday night last, which was broadcasted by radio from KDKA, the Westinghouse station. It was also given much space in the Pittsburgh papers and put on the wires reaching hundreds of other papers throughout the country.

It is expected that the idea of a mass meeting of theatre owners will be adopted by other state organizations as a means of stimulating interest in National Motion Picture Day. New Jersey is proceeding along similar lines, and, in addition, the celebration on November 19th is being made a part of a general public service drive. As the purpose of the theatre owner's big day is, among others, to strengthen the spirit of cordial relationship between the theatres and their patrons, New Jersey's idea fits admirably into the plan.

There, the campaign will be taken direct to the public by means of a series of slides. The public will be told what National Motion Picture Day is, what it stands for, what is being done in celebration of the event and how it can result in greater public service. To secure the public's reaction and ideas, blanks will be used in hundreds of theatres for weeks before November 19th, upon which patrons express their preference in picture entertainment. The theatre owners feel that in this way, they can check up on the tastes of their patrons and be in a position to give consideration to the wishes of the majority. It is understood that the whole campaign will be tied-up to National Motion Picture Day, which will benefit by a tremendous amount of publicity, assuring the success of the big celebration.

Fifty more New Jersey theatre owners have been added to the list of chairmen, in addition to the Congressional District chairmen already appointed and at work. Plans are now being completed toward making the day a huge success in every city and town of the state.

K. C. Exhibitors Become Permanent Body

The Kansas City division of the M. P. T. O. A. Tuesday ceased to be a temporary organization and, with the election of officers for the year, became a permanent body. A. M. Eisner, who has been serving as temporary president, was elected to head the Kansas City body, while L. C. Walker was elected vice president and Jay Means was chosen secretary-treasurer. H. H. Barrett and "Rube" Finklestein compose the trustees.

Headquarters will be shared with the M. P. T. O. Kansas at Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets, Kansas City, while it is the plan of the Kansas City body to minimize office expense by requesting the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri to share office quarters in the same space.

At the meeting Tuesday each of the contributors to the recent fund subscribed by Kansas City exhibitors was present, in addition to other exhibitors, and the meeting was said to be the most successful yet held by the Kansas City organization.

Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Seek Theatres

The Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan Dist. Corp. are said to be negotiating with John Hamrick for a fifty per cent interest in Hamrick's string of Blue Mouse theatres located in different cities in Oregon and Washington. They are already supposed to have concluded a deal for the houses in Seattle and Tacoma.

C. E. Williams Heads M. P. T. O. of Nebraska

C. E. WILLIAMS was elected President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa at the fifth annual convention held at Omaha October 16-17. He succeeds A. R. Pramer. Other officers were elected as follows: F. M. Honey, Tecumseh, vice-president; J. E. Kirk secretary (Re-elected); and George M. McArdle treasurer.

Resolutions were adopted urging the officers of the national organization and of other exhibitor bodies to co-operate in the fight for Admission Tax Repeal; condemning the so-called Music Tax; endorsing the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation and National Motion Picture Day; and condemning alleged discrimination by some distributors in the matter of prices. Film rentals based on inflated production costs were censured.

The convention was addressed by G. H. Drummond, of Warner Brothers and C. R. Gilmour, of the Fox Omaha exchange. The latter urged exhibitors to co-operate in promoting sales ethics by reporting salesmen who resort to unfair practices.

Canada Exhibitors to Hold Meeting in Toronto

Theatre owners of Canada will assemble at a large meeting, which will be held in the King Edward Hotel in Toronto, Canada, on Thursday and Friday, November 1st and 2nd. It is called under the auspices of the Ontario division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Canada.

The organization of the Canadian division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America took place in Montreal at the Mount Royal Hotel on September 6th and 7th, and since that time, many important additions have been made in the ranks, especially in the Toronto district.

National President Sydney S. Cohen and members of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and other national officers will be present at the Canadian meeting.

L. A. to Have Premiere of "Long Live King"

Jackie Coogan's first Metro picture, "Long Live the King," will have its inaugural presentation in Los Angeles. This announcement is in accord with the known desire of West coast film people to make Los Angeles one of the premiere picture show cities in the world. A theatre has not yet been selected but it will undoubtedly be the largest in the city as it is recognized that "Long Live the King," aside from its great popular appeal, is a noteworthy contribution to the "boost-Los Angeles" policy.

Work to Start Shortly on Chicago Capital

Work is to start shortly on the $1,000,000 Capital theatre at Halsted and Seventy-ninth streets in Chicago. The house will be the property of the National Theatre Corporation. It will seat 3,000.

Paramount Demonstration Centres

Fifty Leading Houses Selected

AFTER weeks spent in sorting out applications the distribution department of Paramount has selected approximately fifty leading theatres in the United States, located in cities ranging in size from New York down to some possessing a population of only twenty thousand, as demonstration centers for Paramount pictures under the plan announced by the company six weeks ago. Additions now under consideration will bring the list up to about one hundred theatres, some of them located in cities as small as ten or fifteen thousand population.

The only change in the original plan, Paramount states, is in the number of theatres chosen, the list being much larger than was at first contemplated. This change was brought about by the large number of insistent requests from exhibitors in towns of all sizes to have their houses designated. Thirty-five of the theatres on the final list will be located in so-called key cities, with the remaining fifty-five or sixty in smaller cities where local conditions are such as to justify their selection for the tests.

Many Applications

Immediately following the policy announcement in the trade press and daily newspapers the Famous Players-Lasky offices were deluged with requests from exhibitors to have their houses designated. Within one week nearly five hundred applications were made by telegram or letter, with the result that General Manager S. R. Kent and the other executives of the distribution department have had a most exacting task to work out. Careful examination had to be made of every condition of exhibition entering into consideration. The result is that the theatres chosen represent as widely divergent conditions as are possible, not only as regards population but as to the character of their audience and their tastes in entertainment, in order that they might best serve their purpose as the leading and only factor in establishing an equitable price in their respective territories for the pictures shown.

As the first step toward carrying out the announced provision for an adequate but not unnatural exploitation and advertising campaign for each picture, Claud Saunders, director of exploitation, left several weeks ago on a trip which will take him to practically every one of the demonstration centers, going over the plans of campaign with the exhibitors and the members of the field force of his department.

Through the advertising department big display advertisements are being placed in the local newspapers in all the demonstration towns, calling upon the local public for cooperation and informing them that this is the first time that the responsibility of signifying just what they want or do not want in the way of motion picture entertainment has been put directly up to them. This local theatre advertising ties up directly with the national announcements concerning the new demonstration policy run in the Saturday Evening Post.

List in Detail

The list of demonstration centers chosen to date follows:

Will Hays Returns from Trip Abroad

WILL H. HAYS returned to his office Tuesday morning after an absence of nearly six weeks, most of which time he spent in England as the guest of Ambassador George Harvey.

While he was in England, Mr. Hays observed with great interest motion picture conditions over there, and he came back filled with enthusiasm over the fact that ninety per cent of all motion pictures shown in England are American made.

"Thus it is that the efforts of the motion picture industry in America toward its own continued improvement is of quite as much interest over there as it is here," said Mr. Hays.

"The international understanding by the peoples of the World, each of the other, which will be brought about by the right kind of American motion pictures all over the world, will move us very far indeed in the direction of World peace."

One of the largest functions which Mr. Hays attended in England was a dinner given in honor of T. P. O'Connor who, in addition to being a distinguished parliamentarian and journalist, is the censor for all motion pictures shown over there. Mr. Hays said he was greatly pleased with the complimentary remarks concerning American-made photoplays, uttered by the famous "Tay Pay."

Film Thief Detected by Hays Organization

THROUGH the activities of the Hays organization, twenty-four reels of film stolen from the projection booth of the Eden theatre in Waterbury, Conn., have been recovered, and a man said by the police to have confessed to the theft has been placed under arrest.

It was his custom to hide under the seats of the theatre when the evening patrons departed, then go to the projection booth, take what he could find, and hide it in a space beneath the flooring of the theatre. Evidently he intended to dispose of the film when he had a sufficient quantity on hand to make it well worth his while.

Canadian Branch of M. P. T. O. Opens Quarters

Official announcement has been made that the headquarters of the Canadian branch of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association have been opened in the Dominion Bank Building, Blenry and St. Catherine streets, Montreal, Quebec, where Vincent Gould, secretary of the Canadian unit, is on duty. President J. B. Sparrow may also be reached at the same address, it is stated. It is further announced that communications to the Canadian vice-president should be addressed to J. C. Brady, Madison theatre, 506 Bloor street, West Toronto.

Delaware Charters Granted New Corporations

Delaware has granted the following charters to film corporations and theatre concerns: The Coliseum, Inc., conducting places of amusement, etc., $25,000; Graphic Imperial Pictures, Inc., dealing in photoplays and to conduct a film exchange, capital, $5,000; Standard Pictures Distributing Company, to purchase, produce and exhibit motion pictures, $25,000; Swain-Hall Enterprises, Inc., to conduct places of amusement, $250,000.

Seattle, Portland Boards of Trade to Meet

A general get-together meeting of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle and the Film Board of Trade of Portland was scheduled for Saturday, October 20. The gathering was to be held in Portland. Items of interest to both groups were to be discussed, according to the advance notices, and the session was to be closed with a dinner and social gathering in the evening.

Marcus Loew Resigns from T. O. C. C.

MARCUS LOEW has resigned from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City. The resignation was accepted by the organization at its meeting October 16.

Mr. Loew was summoned recently by the T. O. C. C. board, after the Loew circuit settled a controversy with the operators' union. The T. O. C. C. members had previously voted not to settle individually. Mr. Loew did not appear before the board.

Loew Tells of Conditions Abroad

U. S. Pictures Are Most Popular, Declares Metro Chief on Return

THE American film, its director and star is what France now demands in their cinema theatres and England must have to continue, is the opinion of Marcus Loew, president of Metro Pictures Corporation and the Loew chain of theatres throughout the United States and Canada. If Mr. Loew's viewpoint is correct, times have changed abroad. Patriotism, a most commendable virtue in England which kept inferior subjects before the fans for a time, has died to the extent that the English movie fan now demands entertainment in elaborate film productions and will no longer stand for the imitation.

French theatre owners who for a long time held sway with their home made product because of their control of the many cinema palaces of Paris have been forced to accede to the demands of their patrons and give them true American made films with the necessary change of titles.

This change of heart and taste is undoubtedly due to Mr. Loew's efforts while abroad more than a year ago. He discovered at that time that foreign theatre owners were at least four years behind in releasing pictures to the public. By the time a film made in 1910 was released for public consumption, the clothes then modern were antiques and serious dramas were made without effort into comedies.

He retired a number of his own films bringing things up-to-date and on his return to American shores induced several important producers and distributors to follow suit. As a result he found in his recent trip that results were forthcoming and that American films were not only gaining a foothold but represented 90 per cent. of the entertainment in English and French moving picture theatres.

"I was amazed to learn in France that producers would not dare invest more than 200,000 francs ($12,000) in a feature film," declared Mr. Loew shortly after his return. "This is probably due to the fact that they have not grossed more than that amount on any of their features and bankers would surely not advance them more than they could produce with all elements in their favor.

"What they make in France is good, but it is entirely too short and does not carry the weight of the American made product. That it does not carry weight is evidenced in this country, the greatest field for anything made, and yet we see little or no foreign made film.

"English directors, who have generally been educated in American studies, have foggy weather to combat and that is indeed a serious handicap. Their artists are good, and what American talent they secure are perhaps stars of a lesser light in this country.

"Lack of funds, however, seem to be the main reason for the slow progress of foreign film manufacture and the idea of putting a million and a half dollars behind a director and the filming of a picture such as our recent one, 'Scaramouche,' would rock the foundations of foreign film industries."

In discussing the dominating factor of the success of a feature picture, Mr. Loew places the entire responsibility on the director's shoulders. He declared that if the director did not possess the qualifications to bring out the fine points of a story, the film would show it. He does not deny the star's drawing power at the box office, but maintains that with improper direction that star will soon lose that drawing power, solely through the fault of the director.

Mr. Loew cannot see how the film industry can help but combat strongly the drawing power of the legitimate theatre. He also is of the opinion that that combat alone will tend to help vaudeville and make that phase of theatricals even stronger than it is in the present day.

Where in the industry's infancy a two reel subject was thought to be too long, the supreme effort of the producers in the present day is to keep the story from running over 7 reels. That this is one of the most compelling matters of importance is seen in the efforts made to keep Rex Ingram's "Scaramouche" in ten reels, when it could have easily run many more.

Getting back to the subject of foreign distribution and selling of American films, Mr. Loew says that the smallest French motion picture theatre has a higher price of admission than our leading Broadway theatres. The smallest charge from twenty to thirty cents more than our leading New York cinema palaces.

Foreign movie fans are deeply interested in American-made films. Jackie Coogan and Mae Murray are great favorites abroad. The work of Rex Ingram has placed him among the few super-directors in English and French minds.

Exhibitors of Washington State Organize

SEATTLE was chosen as the state headquarters of a new motion picture exhibitors' organization, to be known as the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, at an initial meeting held in that city early in October. Temporary plans for the organization were drawn up, and it is planned to associate with the National Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America when the Washington state body is finally fully developed.

W. Flint, of the American theatre at Arlington, was chosen temporary president and J. W. Home of Bellingham temporary secretary. Among the twenty-six men present were representatives from Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane, and other cities and important towns of the state. A meeting to form a permanent association was scheduled to be held in Seattle on November 7 and 8.

Only Two Companies Take New York Charters

The past week brought the incorporation of but two motion picture companies in New York State, the following giving the names of the companies and incorporators: Burr-Rogers Producing Corporation, issuing 100 shares of stock of no par value, Charles C. Burr, C. R. Rogers, William T. Lackey, New York City; Cobra, Inc., $1,000, Mildred Lieberman, New York; H. Robert Levine, Eleanor Stern, Brooklyn.

M. P. T. O. A. Directors to Meet in Rochester

NATIONAL PRESIDENT SYDNEY S. COHEN of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, has called a meeting of the members of the board of directors for Rochester, N. Y., on Tuesday, October 30th. This meeting will be held in the Seneca Hotel in that city and many matters of special concern to the Theatre Owners in particular and the Motion Picture Industry generally will be discussed.

Among the important elements will be the reports on National Motion Picture Day from the Committee having charge of the work and from the National Officers and district leaders in all parts of the country.

A meeting of Theatre Owners of New York State will follow at Hotel Seneca, Rochester, on Wednesday, October 31st, commencing at 2 P. M.

Among the features to be discussed will be the move for the repeal of the Admission and Seat Taxes.

Ontario Amusement Chief Resigns Office

The reorganization of the Provincial Treasury Department of Ontario took an unexpected and startling turn on October 11 when Otter Elliott, director of the Amusement branch of the Ontario Government, tendered his resignation to the Provincial Treasurer, Col. W. H. Price, at Toronto. No official reason was given for Mr. Elliott's resignation.

For many years, Mr. Elliott had active direction and regulation of the issuance of theatre, operators' and road show licenses in the Province of Ontario and was also identified with the enforcement of the Amusement Tax Act in Ontario. The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors has also been linked with his department and general rulings with regard to the operation of theatres came largely from Mr. Elliott through the Provincial Treasurer's office.

Pathe Makes Promotions in Sales Personnel

Pathe announced this week three important appointments, effective October 8. Charles Henschel, formerly branch manager of Pathe's Philadelphia office, has been promoted to the Eastern District managership. W. A. V. Mack, formerly branch manager at Buffalo, succeeds Mr. Henschel as branch manager at Philadelphia. Mr. Mack's place as manager of the Buffalo office has been filled by the appointment to that post of Basil Brady, who has covered the Rochester and Buffalo city territories for Pathe during the past six years.

All three appointees have had extensive experience in the sales division of the film business and are well known in their respective territories. The Philadelphia office under Mr. Henschel's direction recently won first place in the Pearson pennant race.

Walter Anthony Wins Post With Coogan Forces

Walter Anthony, former newspaper editor and critic of drama and music, has moved his desk from the Principal Pictures Company to the Jackie Coogan Productions on the Metro lot. Anthony was responsible for the titles in "Long Live the King." Jackie's first for Metro.

Analyzing the Production Problem

More Comments by Film Leaders

FURTHER comment was forthcoming this week on the subject of the production problem from several quarters in the industry. Opinions were voiced by B. P. Schulberg, producer of Preferred Pictures; by Inspiration Pictures, Inc., and A. J. Callaghan, president of Monogram Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Schulberg believes that the production problem that must be faced by all companies this year is not that of making pictures cheaper but that of making pictures better at the same cost—or not at all.

"With a market well filled with good productions," said Mr. Schulberg, "the production job is to get more efficiency out of the plant, without increasing the overhead.

"In the show business it is an axiom that 'nobody ever goes out deliberately to produce a bad show.' That idea is not true in the picture business. Many a director starts a picture knowing that he is going to turn out a weak production. Especially is this true where quantity production is necessary and there are release dates to meet and where the sales department has contracted long before the picture was finished to deliver prints to exhibitors on certain definite dates.

Cart Before the Horse

"Many a director has started shooting with half a script completed and with no definite knowledge of how his story is going to end. Many a producer has looked over a script and said to himself: 'Well, it doesn't look very good, but we have to catch a release date and maybe it will turn out all right.' And he tells the director to go ahead and shoot. He has to, for the cast has been hired, the sets are being erected and the costumes are all made, and it will cost a lot of money to hold up things until a satisfactory script is written.

"I know of instances where a producer has bought a story before the script was written and the sales department has sold the picture. Then investigation has shown that the story is not worth making. But because the contracts were already in, the picture was made, the exhibitors lost money, demanded rebates and the company lost prestige and a great deal more money than if the producer had had courage enough to say: 'We won't make that picture. The story is no good.'

"Thousand of dollars in exhibition values are thrown away, too, because pictures are not properly cut, titled and edited. Projection room juries may decide that a picture is perfect, but the opinion of these juries is a delusion and a snare.

"They may even try them out in small theatres around Los Angeles and have these opinions ratified. But still the picture has had no worthy test. These 'pre-views' in small theatres around Los Angeles are worthless, for the audiences have learned all about the trick. They know that the director, the star and all the production staff are on hand to watch the emotions of the audience. The result is that the audience, feeling its importance, 'yesses' the picture and confirms whatever complimentary opinions the production staff may have had about the show.

"It is no trick to give a script or a finished picture or a title a genuine test. Preferred Pictures has been doing it for some time and the results are justifying the tests. We are far enough ahead in production so that we can try out our sample prints on many audiences. We do not send our negatives to the laboratory until these tests are all completed through audiences that do not know that they are being watched.

Victor Shapiro, president of the A.M.P.A., garbed as a real Westerner and greeted on his arrival in California by Joseph Jackson, president of the Wampas

"We are not satisfied after we think we have a print perfectly cut and titled. We watch it with audiences in theatres time after time, trying one title at one performance and another at another; shifting sequences back and forth until we have learned just what form of that picture is the most interesting to the general public.

"This system, we believe, has made it possible to get every dollar of box office value out of each picture. We are thus able to profit from 'second guesses.'

"It is merely the system of refining and getting every ounce of value out of your product—an idea that is old in the production of every form of merchandise except motion pictures.

"We're not accepting Hollywood's decisions on pictures. We're getting advice from the people far from the business, who represent faithfully the great masses that we're trying to entertain."

Quality and Box-Office

Quality as a determining factor in the box office value of a picture is the solution of the production problem, according to a statement by Inspiration Pictures, Inc.

"The much abused phrase, 'fewer and better pictures,' rang true until it became a catchword in the mouths of everyone connected with the motion picture industry," said Inspiration's statement.

"Inspiration finds no production problem, so far as it is concerned. We believe there cannot be too many good pictures, and, conversely, too few bad ones. A good picture can no more be rushed through production than a masterpiece of art or of literature can be turned out in a few days.

"We have found that quality, in the choice of stories, stars and production methods is the best guarantor of the financial success of a motion picture. The cost alone of a picture is not the all important thing. If, even assuming a picture did cost a million dollars, if it is good enough it will earn its cost and pay a handsome profit."

Andrew J. Callaghan had this to say: "It is very interesting to note the controversy that is going on relative to the production cost and picture values today. It seems to me these views are being expressed by the executives of the very corporations who are to blame for this condition—and when I speak of executives I speak in the abstract, and more directly to the corporations themselves, who, through their various functioning bodies, are responsible for this policy.

"Several releasing companies in the industry who are now asking the producers and exhibitors not to take the exhibition values too seriously are the very people who educate the producers and exhibitors to expect a tremendous gross, which the releasing companies have discussed at the time of making their arrangements with the producers who are contributing to their program.

Calls System Wrong

"The system is wrong, or there would not be such a controversy today. Directors are hired by releasing companies on a guarantee of $—— a week and a percentage of the net profits, and when they make these deals with the directors they elaborate on the anticipated profits and net returns discussed in quoting terms. After the deal is made the director is given carte-blanche to a fabulous sum for his production cost. He spends it, with the realization that $50,000, $75,000 or $100,000 more on a production does not mean a whole lot, because the executives of the releasing organizations know their business and it surely must follow that if the releasing organizations have so much money to spend, the profits must necessarily be large. The moral effect of such a condition on the entire industry and everybody pertaining thereto, from the diminutive property boy to the highest paid director, is bad. This effect eventually reaches the theatre-going public. The condition that exists today, wherein there are five studios in Los Angeles that seem to be in keen competition to see who can spend the most money on a production, also has a bad moral effect on everybody associated directly or indirectly with the industry.

"After all, it is a small industry. Seventy-five per cent of the people thus engaged are living in a more or less small community and where gossip runs rampant; so, when one

Fall Production Booming at Paramount Studio

FALL production activities at the Paramount Long Island studio are on the increase. Four companies are working and preparations are being made for other pictures to be started in the near future. Glenn Hunter is nearing the end of his work in "West of the Water Tower," Homer Croy's novel, which Rollin Sturgeon is producing. Allan Dwan is progressing rapidly with his new production of Rex Beach's story, "Big Brother," adapted by Paul Sloane, and Sidney Olcott is busy casting for Gloria Swanson's next Paramount picture, "The Humming Bird," which Forrest Halsey adapted from Maud Fulton's play.

Alfred E. Green and Thomas Meighan, who recently came from the Coast, are busy editing and cutting "Woman-Proof" while preparing to film "Pied Piper Malone," Booth Tarkington's original story which will be Meighan's next vehicle.

Vitagraph is offering "The Man From Brodneys." These scenes are taken from the production.

Californian Winner of Laemmle Prize

Universal President Will Personally Present Award to Student at Berkeley on November 9

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, is on his way to California to make a personal presentation of the $1,000 award in the Laemmle Scenario Scholarship Contest. The prize-winning scenario, it now is announced, was written by William Elwell Oliver, a student in the University of California. The selection of his story, entitled "The Throw-Back," as the winner marks the ending of a spirited contest between more than a thousand college students, representing more than two hundred American colleges and universities.

At the request of W. W. Campbell, president of the University of California, Mr. Laemmle plans to go to the university on November 9, when the presentation ceremonies will be an important part in the exercises of that day—annually celebrated as University Day.

Prior to attending the university ceremonies at Berkeley, Cal., Mr. Laemmle will go to Universal City, where he will outline arrangements for the early adaptation of "The Throw-Back" to the screen. Universal plans to make a big production of the story, and it is likely the prize-winning scenario will blossom out as a Jewel picture.

In addition to the $1,000 prize, Oliver also has been paid $500 for the picture rights to his story. An additional $1,000 will be given to the University of California by Mr. Laemmle on November 9, to be used as a scholarship fund or to further the interests of motion pictures in some other way.

Besides the prizes awarded to Oliver and to the university which he represents, Universal also recognizes the runners-up in the competition. The second and third best scenarios have been purchased at $500 each and will be screened. The second best was written by Clee Woods of the University of Denver. It is called "Beyond the Law." The third was written by Charlotte P. Kunzig of Temple University, Philadelphia. It is called "Headlights."

Honorable mention is given to the following students, who submitted scenarios closely approximately the excellence of the leading three: Ethel Post of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; Frances S. Beane of the University of Pittsburgh; Martha Beck of Coe College, Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Marguerite Drennan of Pomona College, Claremont, Cal.; E. Bernadine Coughlin of Columbia University; Harry Hayden Clark of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.; Erin Samson of Trinity College, Washington, D. C.; May Stubbs of Louisiana State University; Grace C. Hauss of Temple College, Philadelphia; Anthony Rose of Temple College; Tilton L. Bronner of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.; Betty Coburn of the University of Washington and Amelia Pearl Jones of the University of Washington.

Over a thousand manuscripts were received and carefully read by a committee consisting of R. H. Cochrane, P. D. Cochrane, R. F. Roden, Raymond Schrock, Paul Gulick, Helen E. Hughes and G. D. Cobb.

So enthusiastic is Mr. Laemmle over the success of the initial scenario competition that he plans to continue it during the coming year. First, however, he will seek the advice and opinions of various college heads. He has written to a number of the country's leading educational figures for a sincere and personal survey of the situation, so that in his future awards he will be able to accomplish the greatest good. It is more than likely that the Laemmle Scenario Scholarship Contest will be repeated for one more year, at least, if not made an annual institution.

Universal Announces Cast for "Signal Tower"

The cast has been selected for the forthcoming Universal Jewel "The Signal Tower," being adapted from Wadsworth Camp's prize short story. It will be directed by Clarence L. Brown.

Virginia Valli will be featured at the head of the cast.

Rockcliffe Fellowes will play her husband.

Wallace Beery, J. Farrell MacDonald, Dot Farley, Frankie Darrow and James O. Barrows, will handle the remaining principal roles.

"Yolanda" Title Changed to "Mary of Burgundy"

Charles Major's romantic story which the Cosmopolitan Corporation is now making with Marion Davies as star, will be presented on the screen under the title of "Mary of Burgundy," instead of the original title "Yolanda."

This change is due to the fact that the latter title is more appropriate to the location and historical action of the picture, it is said.

"Long Live King" to Be in Nine Reels

According to the current announcement, Jackie Coogan's first Metro picture, "Long Live the King," will be released in nine reels. This footage represents the final editing of the several hundred thousand feet of film that was exposed during the process of production.

Whitman Bennett to Make Society Melodrama

Whitman Bennett announces that he is planning the production of a society melodrama based on the divorce question. It will be made under the title. "The Truth About Love," with production getting under way about November 15.

Hodkinson Makes Changes in Branch Personnel

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that George Falkner, Branch Sales Manager, has been transferred from Buffalo, to his former territory, Washington, D. C. W. H. Wagner has been promoted to the position of Branch Sales Manager at Buffalo. Mr. Wagner is well acquainted with exhibitors' needs, having been an exhibitor himself.

In recognition of his good work as salesman at the Minneapolis office, Jack Flannery has been appointed Branch Sales Manager at Omaha.

Buffalo Stampede for Ince Picture

Government Roundup Of 8,000 As Basis For Scenes In "The Last Frontier"

BY taking advantage of a roundup of 8,000 wild buffaloes arranged by the Canadian government in the enormous Buffalo Park in Alberta, Thomas H. Ince will incorporate in his new picture for First National, "The Last Frontier," scenes of the largest herd of bison ever brought together by man. Ince has been given the exclusive right to film all scenes in connection with the spectacle for "The Last Frontier" as well as for an educational and scenic picture to be preserved by the Dominion government.

Not until the arrival at Wainwright, Alberta, of the Thomas H. Ince staff, including two directors, John Ince and Reeves Eason, seven cameramen, expert rifle shots and riders, was any intimation given by government agents that the big buffalo roundup stampede and annihilation of 2,000 excess bulls was to be recorded in a motion picture feature.

The buffalo, with hundreds of deer, elk, moose and antelope, roam the Alberta range within the Canadian National Buffalo Park of 102,000 acres, the world's greatest preserve for wild animal life. The rapid increase of the buffalo during the past few years is resulting in a serious shortage of forage and J. G. Harkin, commission of Dominion parks, has planned for several months for the slaughter of 2,000 bulls and a partial segregation of the herd. To do this, scores of riders will round up the herd over a period of several days. The thousands of animals, the last of the American buffalo in existence, will be brought together in a stampede, while the Ince cameramen located in special towers and from hidden pits in the very center of the stampede grind away thousands of feet of film.

The entire undertaking will be carried out under the direction of A. G. Smith, superintendent of the park preserve and in charge of government experiments with hybrid buffalo yak and range stock. Included in the roundup and stampede work will be several hundred Cree Indians from the Hobbemma Reservation and Canadian rangers and hunters under the leadership of Lloyd Myers, Alberta's champion horseman.

Submerged and protected camouflaged pits are now being constructed in the valley and the hillsides where the final roundup and stampede will occur. The well-known cameramen selected by Thomas H. Ince to film these scenes will be Paul Eagler, Paul Perry, A. G. Gosden, Harry Mason, Abe Scholtz, George Alsop and William Minke.

Colleen Moore Starts on "Swamp Angel"

Camera work was started this week on "The Swamp Angel," a new First National picture featuring Colleen Moore, which Clarence Badger is directing. Production is at the United studios. "The Swamp Angel" is adapted from the Collier's Weekly serial of Richard Connell. The screen adaptation was made by Edward Montagne. In the leading male role is Ben Lyon, a recent recruit from the New York stage. Others in the cast are Mary Alden, Mary Carr, Russell Simpson, Charles Murray, Sam De Grasse, Anna Q. Nilsson and June Elvidge.

O'Sullivan on Hodkinson Exploitation Staff

Joseph O'Sullivan has joined the exploitation staff of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Mr. O'Sullivan has had wide experience in the exploitation field, having been with the Mutual Film Company in Chicago, Robertson-Cole Pictures, the Grand Circuit of Theatres in Mexico City, the Montreal Grand Opera Company, and more recently with the Fox Film Corporation.

For the present, Mr. O'Sullivan will devote his time exclusively to the putting across of "Michael O'Halloran."

Fox Announces Releases for Current Week

THREE star series attractions, a Clyde Cook comedy and an educational short feature are announced for release the week of October 14 by Fox Film Corporation. Charles Jones, John Gilbert and Dustin Farnum are the stars featured in the current releases.

Charles Jones will be seen in his latest "Big Dan." This is an original story by Frederick and Fanny Hatton and was directed by William Wellman. The cast includes Marion Nixon, Trilby Clark, Ben Hendricks, Jackie Gadsdon, Jack Herrick and Charles Coleman.

"The Exiles," one of Richard Harding Davis' stories, is the latest attraction, starring John Gilbert. Edmund Mortimer directed the picture which was adapted by John Russell. The supporting cast includes Betty Bouton, John Webb Dillion, Margaret Fielding and Fred Warren.

"Mask of Lopez" Prints Due This Week

The first of the Harry J. Brown Productions, "The Mask of Lopez," starring Fred Thomson and released through Monogram Pictures Corporation, the new Andrew J. Callaghan company, is now being cut, assembled and titled and is due in New York this week. A trade showing will be given next week, which will start the Monogram company on its way.

"The Desert Ranch" is about to go into production and the cast is practically assembled. Albert Rogell has been engaged by the Harry J. Brown Productions, makers of the picture, to direct Fred Thomson in this, his second picture to be sold on the state rights basis by Monogram. The following players will support Thomson: Joseph Swickard, Hazel Keener, Chester Conklin, Wilfred Lucas, Taylor Graves and Joseph Butterworth.

Lois Wilson Here to Play Opposite Meighan

After completing a featured role in Zane Grey's "The Call of the Canyon," which was filmed by Paramount at authentic locations in Arizona, Lois Wilson has arrived in New York to play opposite Thomas Meighan in "Pied Piper Malone," an original story written by Booth Tarkington especially for Meighan.

Selznick Will Distribute "Bag and Baggage"

The Selznick Distributing Corporation is to distribute the latest Finis Fox production, "Bag and Baggage," featuring Gloria Gray and Carmelita Geraghty. Mr. Fox will leave for the Coast shortly to make a new series of pictures.

De Grasse Named to Direct "Flowing Gold"

Richard Walton Tully's production of Rex Beach's "Flowing Gold" is to be directed by Joseph De Grasse.

De Grasse is at present enjoying a short vacation at Wellington, pending the return from New York of Tully, and actual production will start within a couple of weeks.

Universal Lining Up Big Stories

Laemmle Purchases Product of Leading Authors for Adaptation to Screen

UNIVERSAL has lined up an unusual selection of literary material for adaptation to the screen, it has just been learned from the Universal home office. The stories are by worldwide authors for release in the coming months.

The list, selected under Mr. Laemmle's supervision by Robert F. Roden, eastern scenario head, and Raymond L. Schrock, Coast scenario chief, includes the following stories:

"The Inheritors," a novel by Miss I. A. R. Wylie; "Love Insurance," a novel by Earl Derr Biggers; "Wine," a story by William MacHarg; "Courtin' Calamity," by William Dudley Pelley; "Judgments of West Paradise," by Valma Clark, and "The Free Trader," by Kathrene and Robert Pinkerton.

Some of the stories are due for early production. Scenarists already have been engaged to whip them into film form.

Frank Beresford, veteran playwright, stage director and author, has been engaged to write the continuity of "The Inheritors." This novel will be used as Mary Philbin's second Jewel production. The first, now approaching completion, is being made under the working title of "My Mamie Rose," its original title as an Owen Kildare novel. Bernard McConville, supervising editor of Jewel productions, already has done the initial work in adapting "The Inheritors" for the screen.

"Love Insurance," the Earl Derr Biggers novel, is being scenarized by Rex Taylor, long associated with Mack Sennett. He was engaged by Universal under a special contract to make this story into a super picture for Reginald Denny.

Work on "Love Insurance" will be started at Universal City as soon as Taylor has completed the continuity. Edward Kline has been engaged to direct.

The third story on the new Universal list, "Wine," is being turned into screen form by Harvey Gates. He was especially selected by Bernard McConville to handle the continuity of "Wine."

"Courtin' Calamity" will be made into a farce with Hoot Gibson in the starring role. As a Saturday Evening Post story, it was immensely popular.

"Judgments of West Paradise," a short story by Valma Clark, recently published in McCalls, has been adapted for the screen by Frederica Sagor, of the Universal scenario staff, and will be made as an all-star attraction.

Among the recent purchases, one is for serial adaptation. "The Free Trader" ran serially in the Argosy.

Several other well-known stories are in the process of production at Universal City.

Following completion of "Clay of Ca'lina," starring Herbert Rawlinson and directed by Robert Hill, work will be started on "Jack of Clubs," a story by Gerald Beaumont, being adapted by Schrock as a Rawlinson story.

Work on the adaptation of "The Tornado," Lincoln Carter's melodrama, is also under way. George W. Ogden's "Claim Number One" is in process of scenarization for Jack Hoxie, as is William McLeod Raine's "Ridgway of Montana."

"Souls That Pass In The Night," the mystery story written by former chief William Flynn of the United States Secret Service has also been purchased by Universal and is being adapted to be produced in the near future.

Perhaps the most important picture under way is "Damned," the anonymous novel, now being filmed at Universal City.

Mission Is Preparing to Make "Flattery"

Leon Rice, president of the Mission Film Corporation, announces the completion of the story for their next all-star feature. It is from the pen of H. H. Van Loan and is entitled "Flattery."

The continuity is now being written by E. R. Schayer in collaboration with Mr. Van Loan.

Production will begin in the very near future, according to Mr. Rice.

Stills from the Peter Clark MacFarlane story, "Held To Answer," a Metro Production

"Secrets" Is Next Norma Talmadge Picture

NORMA TALMADGE will be under the direction of Frank Borzage, creator of "Humoresque," during her next picture which will be an adaptation of Margaret Lawrence's stage success, "Secrets," by Rudolph Besier and May Edginton. Miss Talmadge is at present completing "Dust of Desire" and "Secrets" will be started immediately thereafter. The continuity is being prepared by Frances Marion who, with Chester Franklin, is directing "Dust of Desire."

Eugene O'Brien, who played opposite Miss Talmadge in some of the earlier pictures, will again be seen with the star.

Revolutionary War Relics for Griffith Feature

New England has agreed to open its treasures of Revolutionary relics to motion pictures, and D. W. Griffith has gone to Boston with 150 members of his staff and players to photograph the incidents of the early war on the actual sites, for his next production "America."

By arrangement with several of the historical societies including in particular the Lexington Historical Society, the weapons, drums, costumes, vehicles, etc., used during the war will be used in the action. It will be the first time these articles have ever been shown to the world through motion pictures.

Battle scenes will be taken on the famous Lexington Common, where the historic "shot heard round the world" was fired. Buckman's tavern and the Adams house where John Hancock and John Adams were sleeping on the night the British came, will be used as settings.

Fox Announces "Shadow of East" Cast

The cast has been selected for the screen version of "Shadow of the East" by Edith M. Hull, which now is being produced at the William Fox West Coast studios. This picture will be released with the third series of the special productions announced by Fox Film Corporation for the season of 1923-24.

Mildred Harris will have the femininė lead. Frank Mayo and Norman Kerry have the leading male roles. George Archainbaud is directing the production from the scenario prepared by Frederick and Fanny Hatton.

Denison Clift to Direct "Loyalties" for Fox

Denison Clift has been put under contract by Fox. His first assignment will be to direct the screen version of "Loyalties," the John Galsworthy stage play which had a long run at the Gaiety theatre in New York. Mr. Clift will report to the Fox West Coast studios at once.

"Covered Wagon" to Open Run in Omaha

"The Covered Wagon" will be seen for the first time in the Middle West when it opens Sunday at the Brandeis, a legitimate house in Omaha. It is announced that the run will be an indefinite one.

Sol Lesser Returns from European Trip

SOL LESSER, vice president of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., returned from Europe this week on the Leviathan after having spent six weeks abroad.

"Russia," said Mr. Lesser, "is opening up tremendous opportunities for a great era in motion picture development. Other foreign countries are developing with equal strides."

Mr. Lesser conferred with many of the foremost authors in Europe, including Sir Arnold Bennett, Sir Hall Caine and Maeterlinck. With the thought of obtaining the services of these authors for screen material he has practically obtained the consent of all of them to create suitable story material for scenarios and the silver sheet.

While abroad Lesser was honored guest at many social and business receptions.

Next Tourneur Production Is "Torment"

M. C. Levee has purchased the motion picture rights to William Dudley Pelley's story, "Torment," as the next production to be staged by Maurice Tourneur for First National release. The adaptation is by Fred Myton. Casting for this picturization has started at the United studios, where the opening scenes will be taken within the next week.

"Jealous Husbands," Mr. Tourneur's last production for First National, is now completed and will have its initial public showing shortly.

First National to Screen "Woman on Jury"

"The Woman on the Jury," the dramatic play which has been running for months on Broadway, is to be screened by First National. It is now being placed into continuity by Mary O'Hara. Harry O. Hoyt, who will direct the picturization, is choosing his cast. Production was expected to begin around October 15.

Burr Starts Production on "Restless Wives"

C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., placed in production "Restless Wives," with Doris Kenyon, at the Burr Glendale studio this week. It is one of the Burr series of specials for the independent market which Mastodon will make and distribute during the season of 1923-24. Gregory La Cava is directing.

George Fawcett in "Pied Piper Malone" Cast

George Fawcett has joined the cast of "Pied Piper Malone," Thomas Meighan's newest Paramount picture. He will play the role of Captain Clarke. Alfred E. Green is producing the picture at the Paramount Long Island studio from an original story by Booth Tarkington.

United Completes Big Improvements

Levee Plant at Hollywood Now Said to be Largest Leasing Studio in World

WITH the completion of a number of administration buildings at the United studios in Hollywood, the $800,000 improvement activities which have been under way during the past five months were concluded last week.

As a result of the renovations and improvements made at this plant under the supervision of M. C. Levee, president of the studio company, the United studio in the heart of Hollywood's producing industry, is now one of the most modern institutions of its kind in the country and the largest leasing studio in the world.

The entire arrangement of the big plant has been changed, buildings having been moved about to facilitate waste motion and expense in the production of photoplays. Administration buildings have been joined together under one roof, new administration buildings have been added, a cement wall has been built across the front of the studio grounds, more than 100,000 square feet of concrete roads and sidewalks have been laid, ornamental lamp posts line the roadways and many other improvements are now evident.

In the planning department, in charge of Fred Pelton, many changes and additions have greatly facilitated the work of this organization. New loading platforms and ramps have been built outside every stage and shop, additional generator capacity has been installed including the largest transformer capacity of any Los Angeles studio, automatic lift trucks, new mill machinery and additional transportation facilities have been completed, capacity of tin, plaster and smith shops has been increased, new scene storage docks, a fireproof repair garage and a portable acetylene generator plant have been installed and the lumber yard considerably increased in capacity. A new glass greenhouse containing practically every type of plant is now available to producers.

Hardly had the finishing touches of the program of improvement been completed when Mr. Levee started plans for new additions to the plant. A prop storage building, to house all furniture, hand props, draperies, electrical fixtures, etc., is to be erected at a cost of $100,000. This will greatly enlarge the scope of the leasing department catering to the entire film industry here as well as to hotels, entertainments and other enterprises outside of the picture business.

Despite its increased facilities, the United plant is still handling capacity business, every inch of available space having been contracted for by independent producers.

Wilfred Lytell Signs for "Warrens of Virginia"

Wilfred Lytell has been engaged by Fox for the part of Lieutenant Burton, the young Northern officer in "The Warrens of Virginia," which William Fox is making from the David Belasco stage success. Rosemary Hill will play Betty, the part created by Mary Pickford.

Stars Signed for "A Tale of Red Roses"

Dustin Farnum and Patsy Ruth Miller have been engaged for "A Tale of Red Roses," the next David Smith production, picturized from the novel by George Randolph Chester, which will be released by Vitagraph.

I TAKE this means to express my sincere appreciation of your wonderful magazine. I have never seen such a magazine of such unlimited use. It is the best of all motion picture journals.

T. Miyamoto,
Empire Theatre,
Hilo, Hawaii.

Specialists Sign for "Thy Name Is Woman"

Fred Niblo has engaged Pablo Aguilar, an art student of Madrid who recently came to this country, to assist in the research work for his forthcoming Metro-Louis B. Mayer production, "Thy Name Is Woman"—a film version of the Spanish play which was presented on Broadway several seasons ago with great success.

Ben Carre has also been signed by Fred Niblo to take charge of the designing and construction of the many sets of "Thy Name Is Woman."

Mr. Carre is thoroughly familiar with the locale of the story. Born and brought up in France, he spent many years in the Spanish Pyrenees, where the story is laid.

Carewe Sails for Morocco to Make Picture

Edwin Carewe, producer and director, whose productions are released by First National sailed from New York on the Majestic, October 13. His ultimate destination in Biskra, Algeria, where exteriors for his next production, "A Son of the Sahara," will be made.

Next month a company of actors will embark for Paris, where they will be met by Mr. Carewe. The company will include Claire Windsor, Bert Lytell, Montagu Love, Rosemary Theby, Walter McGrail, Paul Panzer, Co-director Rene Plaissetty, as well as a production, technical and business staff.

"Why Men Leave Home" Cast Completed

John M. Stahl has completed his cast for his picturization of the stage play, "Why Men Leave Home." This First National picture will be interpreted by Lewis Stone in the principal role, Helene Chadwick, Mary Carr, William V. Mong, Alma Bennett, Hedda Hopper, Lila Leslie, Sidney Bracey and E. H. Calvert.

"Why Men Leave Home" was adapted to the screen by A. P. Younger. Sol Polito will turn the camera.

Read to Produce "Recoil" for Goldwyn

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has entered into an arrangement with J. Parker Read, Jr., by which he will produce in Europe a film version of Rex Beach's story, "The Recoil." Mr. Read has engaged T. Hayes Hunter to direct the production. Mr. Hunter sailed this week to prepare for the filming of the story.

Betty Blythe has been engaged for the leading role in the production and Mahlon Hamilton has been assigned to play opposite her.

Francis Bushman's Son for Metro Feature

Ralph E. Bushman, son of Francis X. Bushman, has been engaged by Metro for an important part in the new picture, "The Man Whom Life Passed By"—one of the important series of Metro Premier features which form part of the 1923-1924 Metro program.

"North of 36" Goes Into Production

"NORTH OF 36," Emerson Hough's epic of the stirring and colorful pioneer days that bridged the gap between Indian warfare and America's industrial birth, is to be filmed at once, as the result of a decision reached after months of planning and deliberation by executives of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Jesse L. Lasky announced in Hollywood Tuesday.

James Cruze already has taken up the production reins. He left Hollywood Monday with a corps of cameramen and other technicians on location survey work, to be gone ten days or more. The actual work of filming will start in about three weeks.

Illustrative of the manner in which plans are being pushed for giving Producer Cruze a cast of merit, Jack Holt, leading Paramount player, and Ernest Torrence, outstanding actor in "The Covered Wagon" and "Ruggles of Red Gap," another Cruze production, have been selected for leading parts in "North of 36."

F. B. O. Will Release Three Features in November

The Film Booking Offices announce this week three feature releases for the month of November consisting of "The Lullaby," "The Love Pirate" and "Blow Your Own Horn."

"The Lullaby," features Jane Novak and was produced by Chester Bennett. It is to be released on the 11th. The story is based on a magazine publication of the same name written by Lillian Ducey and adapted by Hope Loring and Louis D. Lighton. The cast consists of Jane Novak, Robert Anderson, Fred Maletesta, Dorothy Marion Brock, Cleo Madison, Otis Harlan, Peter Burke, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Pat Moore, and Mickey Moore.

The second F. B. O. release is the Richard Thomas production, "The Love Pirate," featuring Carmel Myers with a cast consisting of Kathryn McGuire, Melburne MacDowell, Clyde Fillmore, Carol Holloway, Spottiswoode Aitken, Edward Borman, Tex Ballard and John Toughy. This production is scheduled for release November 18th.

The third is "Blow Your Own Horn," a James Horne picture featuring Warner Baxter, Ralph Lewis and Derelys Perdue. It is released on the 25th.

"The Shepherd King" Made in Holy Land

"The Shepherd King," taken from Wright Lorimer and Arnold Reeves' stage play founded upon biblical history, was made by Fox among the scenes in Egypt and the Holy Land referred to in sacred history.

Much of the transportation was accomplished on the backs of camels. The scenario was written by Virginia Tracy.

"Woman to Woman" Due For Early Release

Announcement was made this week by the Selznick Distributing Corporation, that they have scheduled for early release, the production, "Woman to Woman," the latest Betty Compson starring vehicle.

MacLean Cast Is Selected for "Yankee Consul"

Douglas MacLean has finished the selection of his cast for "The Yankee Consul," his second starring feature for Associated Exhibitors, and the work of production is now in full swing. In the last few days scenes have been made in both San Francisco and San Diego. The picture will take many weeks to complete.

Mr. MacLean will appear, of course, in the title role. Patsy Ruth Miller has the leading feminine role. Among the others in the cast are Stanhope Wheatcroft, Arthur Stuart Hull, Eulalie Jensen, George Periolat, Fred Kelsey, Bert Hadley and Gerald Pring.

James W. Horne is directing the production. The story was adapted by Raymond Griffith and Raymond Cannon from the musical comedy by Henry M. Blossom, Jr., and Alfred G. Robyn.

Burr Engages Rennie for "Restless Wives"

James Rennie has been engaged by C. C. Burr as leading man in "Restless Wives," with Doris Kenyon, which is now in production at the Burr Glendale studio. Gregory La Cava is directing this modern-day society melodrama which will be one of the Burr series of Independent specials for the 1923-24 season.

Mr. Rennie just finished playing in "His Children's Children" for Famous Players-Lasky and appeared opposite Dorothy Mackaill in Edwin Carewe's "Mighty Lak' a Rose," a First National release.

Cullen Landis Starts First Starring Vehicle

Cullen Landis is arranging for his first starring vehicle in the picturization of "The Ridin' Kid from Powder River" by H. H. Knibbs, the scenario rights of which he owns. J. Edwin New, Mr. Landis' business manager, and Robert Ensminger, who will direct the film, left some time ago for Arizona to establish the location sites for the production and to make reservations for the company. Actual production was scheduled to start this week.

"When Odds Are Even" Is Completed by Fox

William Fox has completed "When Odds Are Even" at the West Coast Studio. This picture stars William Russell. Dorothy Devore is Russell's new leading lady. The supporting cast includes Lloyd Whellock, Frank Beal and Allan Cavan. James Flood directed the production from the story and scenario by Dorothy Yost.

Capitol Anniversary With "Green Goddess"

Distinctive's "The Green Goddess" inaugurated the fourth anniversary program at New York's Capitol theatre, on October 14, and S. L. Rothafel gave this feature the most elaborate setting he has ever given to a photoplay in his mammoth house. This was the first showing at popular prices in New York City.

COMING ATTRACTIONS FOR THE DIVERSIFIED PROGRAM

Christie Plans Twenty Comedy Releases

"There's gold in them thar hills" is the theme of the western comedy now in production at the Christie studio. A colorful little western village covering many acres has been built on the Christie lot.

The Christies have scheduled an active program for the 1923-24 series for release through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., which will keep their four featured comedians busy. In the twenty pictures that are to be made this season, Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Jimmie Adams and Dorothy Devore will be starred in five each. Supporting players will include Jimmie Harrison, Vera Steadman, Charlotte Merriam, Babe London, Natalie Joyce, Tom Murray, Ward Caulfield, George French, Bob North, George Burton, Felix Valle, Bude Fine and Roy Weston.

Charles Christie returned from Europe just in time to view activities on the elaborate western set. With him from the British Isles came John H. Taylor, managing director of Christie Film Sales, Ltd., and John Maxwell, owner of a chain of theatres in Scotland.

Rodney With Fox As Star in New Series

Earl Rodney, comedy star, has been engaged by William Fox West Coast studio executives to appear in a comedy production to be made at the Fox Hollywood "lot" under the direction of Noel Smith.

Noel Smith Will Direct Sunshine Comedies

Noel Smith, comedy director, has returned to the William Fox "lot" and will commence production immediately on Sunshine comedies at the big William Fox West Coast studios.

Four Producing Firms for Century

Julius Stern Makes Known Plans for Messinger, Kerr, Follies and Gillstrom

NEWS over the long distance telephone from Julius Stern, president of Century Comedies, announced that four companies are being formed to produce pictures for his company. Plans were talked over with Abe Stern, who is now in the East, who gives out the information along these lines:

Al Herman will continue with Century and will direct either all of the Buddy Messinger comedies, or the all-star series. He is now assembling his people for his next comedy, the first of them already engaged being William Irving, well-known Christie comedian. It is expected this comedy will be all-comedian.

Bob Kerr, a real veteran of two-reel comedies, may be assigned to the directing of pictures with Jack Earle, the youthful giant.

It is anticipated that Harry McCoy will sign contracts this week to handle the Century Follies Girls, or Pal, the dog. Confirmation of his signing should be forthcoming very soon.

Arvid Gillstrom, who directed several of the Baby Peggy pictures, is marshaling his talent for his latest picture. Dick Smith will assist with the "gag work" and will play an important comedy role. Sadie Campbell and Lillian Worth have also been chosen for important parts in Gillstrom's comedy.

Mack Sennett Completes Next Pathe Comedy

Mack Sennett's latest production, in his two-reel series of laugh-winners for Pathe distribution, is titled "Flip-Flops" and presents an all-star aggregation of well-known comedy players in a story marked by novel gags and fast action. Roy Del Ruth, whose name has long been associated with successful screen comedies, directed "Flip-Flops." The cast, headed by Lewis Sargent and Alberta Vaughn, also includes such prominent comedians as Jack Cooper and Andy Clyde.

"Wet and Weary" Is New Clyde Cook Comedy

The latest Clyde Cook comedy produced by William Fox is called "Wet and Weary." And through every foot of the film, Clyde Cook is "all wrong and all wet."

"No Scarcity of Short Subjects"

So Notes General Sales Manager Storey of Pathe in Telling of Progress of Field

By J. E. STOREY
Pathe General Sales Manager

WHILE in accord with the general tenor of the editorial, which maintains that the demand for laughs on a program surpasses the call for any other form of screen entertainment and that there is need for greater exhibitor support for short-length comedies, Pathe after a thorough survey of short subject material available, especially in the comedy field, is of the firm opinion that never before has there been such an amplitude of subject entertainment at the disposal of the discriminating showman. While fully cognizant of the wide range of comedy output other than its own, Pathe iu refuting any claim of a scarcity in the field of short-length comedies must necessarily confine itself to that body of product concerning which it can speak authoritatively, namely, the output of the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett studios being released through the Pathe exchanges.

A glance over the Pathe schedule reveals the wide extent of this comedy output. A minimum of one single-reel and one two-reel comedy release is provided for every week throughout the year. Quite often two-reelers as well as a single-reel comedy are made available on this weekly release schedule in addition to the serial and novelty releases. More specifically, the Hal Roach comedy product to be distributed by Pathe provides in the two-reel brands for the 1923-1924 term thirteen "Our Gang" subjects, or one every four weeks; thirteen Will Rogers vehicles, released at the rate of one every four weeks; a like number of Stan Laurel comedies, one every month, and the current series of "Spat Family" subjects, which will also be made available at the rate of one a month. The Mack Sennett production schedule provides for a minimum of six Ben Turpin vehicles during the year as well as thirteen two-reel Sennett Comedies, to be released one every four weeks.

On the one-reel comedy program there will be one release every week. On this program will appear the subjects featuring "Snub" Pollard, who returns to the single-reel comedy in the current release titled "It's A Gift," and Hal Roach" popular "Dippy Doo Dads" series, featuring an all-animal cast. This abundance of short subject material extends to the several other entertainment brands. A feature of Pathe's weekly schedule of releases is the "Aesop's Film Fables" series, which assures a steady supply of fifty-two single-reel cartoons throughout the year. The laugh-provoking contents of the numbers in this series have won unqualified endorsement from exhibitors in all sections and have repeatedly gained recognition in the critical columns of newspapers for their entertaining quality.

These comedy series together with such short-length features as the "Chronicles of America" subjects, the weekly releases of Pathe Review and Topics of the Day and the semi-weekly issues of Pathe News provide amply for the increasing demand for short subject entertainment being experienced in all sections of the country. It remains for the exhibitor to recognize the truly important place that short subjects occupy iu the tastes of the picture-going public and accord them the wholehearted support that they deserve.

Twenty Cameras to Film Zev-Papyrus Race

Arrangements for the filming by Pathe of the international horse race between Zev and Papyrus at the Belmont Race Track, October 20, are progressing rapidly. As announced last week, Pathe, through arrangements effected with the Westchester Racing Association, has secured the exclusive rights to film the event and will make a two-reel special, covering every phase of this classic of the turf. This picture will be released by Pathe October 21.

Ten stands are being erected within the enclosure. A staff of twenty cameramen have been assigned by Pathe to take both regular and slow-motion views of the event.

Stan Laurel, Hal Roach's latest comedy acquisition, in action in "Frozen Hearts," released by Pathe.

Novelty Is Tied Up with Radio Broadcast

THE musical program of Crandall's Metropolitan theatre, Washington, D. C., was broadcast by radio through station WCAP, the radio station of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company on Thursday evening, October 11. The big musical feature of the bill consisted of the singing, by the entire audience, of the old favorite songs contained in "Golden Gems," the second of the "Sing Them Again" series by Norman Jefferies, distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

Pathe Sales Head Says Comedies Are Needed

Stanley B. Waite, sales manager in charge of the two-reel comedy department, who has just completed a business tour, which took him to Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and Milwaukee, reports that the demand for two-reel comedy product is greater than ever before. The strongest contributing factor to this situatiou, according to Mr. Waite, is the exhibitor's conviction that his comedies must measure up in every way to the improved standards manifest in all the other divisions of his program.

First-run bookings on all the series of two-reel comedy product appearing on the Pathe schedule, were registered by leading theatres in every one of the cities visited, thus assuring the presentation in representative houses during the coming season of Hal Roach's "Our Gang," "Spat Family," Will Rogers, and Stan Laurel comedies, and of Mack Sennett's and Ben Turpin and all-star productions.

Day of Exploitation of Shorts Is Here

"The day of exploitation of short subjects is undoubtedly here." is the comment of "The Pepper Pot," the official house organ of the A. H. Blank Theatrical Enterprises, in their announcement of the signing of the contract covering the showing of the 1923-24 product of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

"For instance," continues the article, "the 'Siug Them Again' series are going over with a bang at the Des Moines theatre, where Manager Thayer has arranged that a quartette of male voices from Drake University lead the audience in singing the old songs. The 'Close Harmony' number was featured with Harold Lloyd's 'Why Worry?' this week."

Bay State Civic Leaders Plugging "Columbus"

In a letter addressed to the Olympia Theatres, Inc., of Boston, the Civic League of Massachusetts, one of the most influential organizations of that state, not only endorsed "Columbus," but offered its active co-operation in bringing the picture to the attention of the public.

Pathe officials single this tribute out as tangible evidence of the ready support that the "Chronicles of America" series, produced by the Yale University Press for distribution by Pathe, will secure from civic and patriotic organizations everywhere that they are booked for showing.

Educational Short Subjects Win High Praise

SEVEN subjects released by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., are listed in the Photoplay Guide, published by the National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with the National Board of Review, covering the pictures reviewed by that board during September. These subjects are the Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, "Speedville," the Mermaid Comedies, "High Life" and "Running Wild," featuring Lige Conley, the Christie Comedies, "Hold Everything," starring Bobby Vernon, and "Navy Blues," starring Dorothy Devore, and the Cameo Comedies, "The Limit" and "Moving," with Cliff Bowes and Virginia Vance in the leading roles.

Short Subject News

MONTY BANKS, the Grand-Ascher comedian, is shortly expected in New York, according to word received from the West Coast this week.

David J. Lustig is directing a series of six two-reel comedies starring Eddie Bowles for Stellar Pictures Corporation. The first two have been completed.

Seven cameramen are touring with Lloyd George, the former British premier, for news weeklies. Two of them represent British producing concerns.

Standard Cinema Corporation, which was incorporated recently, is planning on handling an extensive line of short subjects. Officers of the firm are negotiating with a number of short subject producers.

Babby Peggy is expected in New York within the next fortnight. It is expected that she will make some personal appearances while in the East.

Independent exchanges are clamoring for short subjects. Independent producers have curtailed their short stuff this season, according to exchange men who visited New York during the past week.

Harold Rodner has purchased the New York City and northern New Jersey distribution rights to C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation's Hallroom Boys Comedies and Screen Snapshots.

Finds Shorts Booming Abroad

E. W. Hammons of Educational Says Conditions in Europe Better Than Ever

"CONDITIONS never looked better for the American-made short subject in England and Europe," said E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., on his return October 10 from Europe and England, where he had been conferring with his British and Continental associates.

"Practically no short subjects are produced in England," said Mr. Hammons. "They depend entirely on the American-made productions. British concerns are producing longer features, generally using American stars and directors, but there is practically no comedy production. American-made comedies are the standard.

"The feature market is glutted with American and English-made productions. First-class theatres are showing for the first time features released here two and three years ago with a few exceptions, but the short subjects are put on the screen as soon as possible after the arrival of the negative from the United States.

"The Christie Comedies are very popular. They are firmly established, due to their consistent quality over a number of years and Mr. Christie's efficient distributors for the British Isles, the Christie Film Sales, Ltd. The Mermaid and Hamilton Comedies have made wonderful progress during the past year, and the general comment on them, outside of their excellent entertainment value, was on their clean comedy plots and gags.

"The one-reel Cameo Comedies are attracting a lot of attention, for there is nothing like them offered on the British market. The Bruce Wilderness Tales have established a firm foothold in England and in Europe in spite of the millions of feet of foreign-made scenic negative, which can be purchased for almost nothing over there.

"I was surprised at the exploitation accorded these short subjects in England. Their exploitation and printed matter on short subjects approaches that which is issued on long features in America. As a result, our comedians are as well known in England as they are on Main Street here."

'Jamestown" Pathe's Next Historical Film

"Jamestown," adapted from "Pioneers of the Old South," written by Mary Johnston, is in four reels. It deals with that period of American history in which England and Spain fought for control of North America. The drama involves such historical characters as Pocahontas, John Rolfe, King Powhatan and Sir Thomas Dale, English marshal of Virginia. Nov. 4 is set as release date.

New Haven, Ct., Gets Out "Columbus" Boost

PATHE'S release of "Columbus," first of the series of Chronicles of America pictures, and its announced opening at the Poli theatres on the eve of Columbus Day, was the occasion of a proclamation by the Mayor of New Haven.

As printed in the New Haven Register in connection with a full page of "Columbus" stills, and signed by David E. Fitzgerald, Mayor, this official statement makes probably the most remarkable indorsement of a series of motion pictures ever coming from such a source.

Department Stores in Peggy Contest

Two large department stores in Ohio have pledged their co-operation toward Century Comedies in which Baby Peggy appears in starring roles.

One of them is the May Company of Cleveland, which is considered one of the largest department stores in the country. After a purchase of several hundred dozen Baby Peggy dolls they assured the Cleveland Universal film exchange that they would start immediately on window tie-ups, newspaper spreads, etc., in connection with theatres running Baby Peggy comedies. A contest is imminent, and details may be worked out some time next week.

In Akron the M. O'Neill Company also has pledged co-operation of the best in connection with the dolls and Baby Peggy comedies.

Department stores, exhibitors and newspapers all profit on these co-operative tie-ups—the exhibitor coming in on all of the store's work. Exhibitors should prepare themselves to get in on all of this every chance they get.

"Pinhead" Latest Clyde Cook Comedy

"The Pinhead" is the title of the latest Clyde Cook comedy, in which the funster plays the part of a "simp" who seems to be the fifth wheel of every party. The Fox Educational Entertainment for this week is "Toilers of the Equator," which gives an insight into interesting phases of tropical life.

Attendance has dropped off quite a little bit in the fourth week, and the picture is ending its engagement after fifty-six performances—twice a day for four weeks. (West.)

Wonderful picture. Business especially good. (West.)

To the Last Man—

Had a fairly satisfactory week, and production seemed to please. Is a good production of its type. (East.)

The Silent Partner—

Only a fair picture. Business not very good for this time of year in this house. (West.)

The Marriage Maker—

Missed fire. (East.)

Zaza—

Gloria Swanson's best in some time past and shows her in a totally different role. Went over to fair business. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Ashes of Vengeance—

A tremendous hit which packed the house. (East.)

A motion picture treat. Unusually fine. Splendid week's business. (Middle West.)

Fair business. (Middle West.)

Her Reputation—

A pleasing production. Just about an average week's business. (Middle West.)

Potash and Perlmutter—

The title alone would bring them in. Proved popular attraction. (Middle West.)

The Meanest Man in the World—

Some liked it a lot. Some didn't like it at all. Although Bert Lytell, star, was appearing in person at a neighboring theatre, and George M. Cohan, author, was also appearing in person in a legitimate house, the picture didn't go over nearly as well as was expected. (Middle West.)

The Age of Desire—

Just the regular run of picture. Nothing special to condemn or recommend. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Ponjola—

Clever and unusual feature in which Anna Q. Nilsson made a decided hit. Pleased our patrons and did big business. (Middle West.)

Dulcy—

Constance Talmadge always draws a good crowd here. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN-COSMO.

The Eternal Three—

It went very well here, and kept the interest wide awake all the way through. Has some tense moments and a big punch. Very good business. (East.)

An artistic work that was appreciated by a few. (East.)

Six Days—

An excellent picture that has been doing a big business and is being held over for a second week. (West.)

The title attracted many. Excellent business. (Middle West.)

METRO

The French Doll—

Good picture. Business excellent, aided by fashion show. (West.)

Star's exaggerated gyrations ruin this one. But the flappers like it, so business held up good. (East.)

Gorgeous and voluptuous is no name for it. Where Miss Murray is liked this one will be a knockout. Excellent business. (East.)

Strangers of the Night—

This one has met with such approval here, and has been doing a nice business on a week engagement, although not extraordinary. (West.)

Good picture. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

The Eternal Struggle—

Fair picture. Fair business, as house is popular. (West.)

Her Fatal Millions—

Did a good business the greater part of the week. Patrons were pleased. Ordinary program material. (East.)

The Three Ages—

Those who saw it liked it, but it did not draw the big crowds of the week. Would do well in a smaller house. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Clean Up—

A good thriller. Business better than it had been for several weeks. (Middle West.)

Stormy Seas—

A fairly entertaining story of the deep. A much filmed plot. Business fair. (East.)

Drifting—

It made them sit up here all week. We thought it was well up among Miss Dean's best. Very good business. (East.)

The Merry-Go-Round—

This is an exceptionally strong box office attraction. Love story and direction excellent. Business good during the entire run. (Middle West.)

The Shock—

A Lon Chaney picture always does well here and this was no exception. Found a warm welcome with patrons. A ripping good melodrama. (East.)

FOX

If Winter Comes—

Unusually big second week. (East.)

Did so well with it held it over for another week. Papers and patrons praised it. (Middle West.)

This picture draws big in the first place because it was a book, but it is also a good picture and builds trade. Being held over for second week. Not a record breaker but a picture with which to do good business. (Middle West.)

Hell's Hole—

A very good show. Did consistently big business all week. (Middle West.)

Boston Blackie—

A fair picture. Has been drawing good houses. (West.)

The Lone Star Ranger—

Very much on the Mix style and therefore good entertainment. Went strong here. Very good business. (East.)

PATHE

Why Worry?—

Good picture. Business good in second week of showing. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Common Law—

Another popular magazine story here given elaborate production. A real star cast. It takes well, the men liked it as well as the women. (Middle West.)

Well acted, interesting film drama, with splendid settings. Business good. (Middle West.)

VITAGRAPH

Loyal Lives—

Did only a fair business, and picture did not seem to take so well. (East.)

Masters of Men—

UNITED ARTISTS

The White Rose—

On the strength of Griffith's name picture did well, and was played second week. Seemed to make a strong appeal to women, but not so popular with men patrons. A good sob picture. (East.)

A typical Griffith offering that is drawing large houses but is not pleasing the patrons like former pictures did. Held over for a second week. (West.)

Fair business on this one. (Middle West.)

Very, very different from the sort of thing that has been classed as Griffith, but they liked it. A simple little story, but one that brings the tears. Excellent business. (East.)

F. B. O.

Daytime Wives—

Proved a fine drawing card. Lends itself readily to exploitation. (Middle West.)

Divorce—

The popularity of Jane Novak saved this one. Contains much hokum. Business fair. (East.)

WARNER BROS.

Little Johnny Jones—

Had a very profitable week, and picture struck a popular chord. Press coincided with opinion that it is a good picture. (East.)

Did not make much noise. (East.)

Where the North Begins—

Pleased dog lovers and movie fans generally. Rin Tin Tin rivals picture stars as an actor and hold-outs were of nightly occurrence. (Middle West.)

Hal Roach presents

The Call

A Feature

London's great book has passed through edition after edition; it has been read by millions; translated into foreign languages; it is the greatest dog story that has ever been written.

Primitive passions, love, hate, revenge, bravery and cowardice stamp the picture from start to finish. It is an epic of the far North, thrilling, beautiful, appealing.

It is a picture for every audience.

of the Wild

Though not yet shown to the reviewers, several trade papers "caught" the picture at its pre-release in Los Angeles

"A production that has universal appeal. . . Hal Roach has cut loose with a punch that registers. . . A picture that will appeal to everyone who likes a whiff of the open with a tang of the north. . . All the spirit of the London classic has been retained and it is a thoroughly interesting and novel production. . . Some remarkable photography. . . Action moves with a fine sweep and is animated with the utmost sincerity. . . Marvellous snow scenes, bleak wastes and wonderful silhouettes. Mr. Roach need have no fear for the success of his first dramatic effort. . . It should prove a money-maker for the exhibitor."—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"A very satisfactory adaptation of Jack London's novel. . . Provides fine entertainment. . . Should prove a satisfactory audience picture anywhere."—Film Daily.

"Pictorially beautiful with plenty of red-blooded action. . . All will find real enjoyment in this offering. Will undoubtedly prove a real box office magnet."—Atlanta Weekly Film Review.

For ratings on current and older releases see Motion Picture News—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Inexpensive "Circus Days" Drive

Manager Gets Circus Parade, Band, Three Newspapers and Store Tie-up

GETTING citywide co-operation and exploitation at trifling cost was the achievement of Dee Robinson, manager of the Madison theatre, Peoria, Ill., and Al Sobler, First National exploitation man, on "Circus Days."

They persuaded the Peoria Journal Transcript to sponsor a "Circus Days" costume contest and parade for children. Thirty-five dollars were offered the children participating in the parade wearing the most attractive circus costumes. More than one hundred kiddies responded in costumes of large variety and assembled in front of the Madison, where awaiting them they found the Journal Transcript Boys' Band, consisting of thirty pieces, a camel donated by the local Shrine, a squad of policemen, several floats and gayly bedecked trucks and tractors contributed by the local Ford agency. Following the selection of the winners, the parade was formed and marched throug the main streets of Peoria, where it caused a veritable sensation.

In addition to a parade that extended for more than two city blocks the costume stunt netted the Madison theatre reams of valuable space in the news columns of both the Journal and Transcript.

Tie-up Made on Want Ads

A tie-up was also effected with the third Peoria newspaper, the Star, which selected names from the telephone book at random and scattered them among the want ads with a free pass for "Circus Days" awarded those whose names appeared. Display advertising space valued at $300 was devoted by the Star to publicizing this stunt. The cost to the theatre amounted to fifty tickets.

Peoria's largest department store devoted a full window display to circus toys and advertising on "Toby Tyler" with prominent mention of "Circus Days," which is based on the Otis story; the local Kresge five and ten-cent store offered free autographed portraits of Coogan to children purchasing school supplies at its stationery counter and used a window display to call attention to the premium, and three United Cigar Stores contributed window advertising announcing the fact that a certain brand of tobacco figured in the action of "Circus Days."

One week preceding the opening of "Circus Days" at the Madison, the lobby was festooned with circus pennants and an attention-compelling display in the form of a gaudy circus tent in miniature, which was placed in the center of the lobby and attracted no end of attention and comment. This direct house advertising was supplemented by the use of the "Circus Days" song as an overture, accompanied by screen slides.

Double-page Co-operative Ad on "Why Worry?"

When Sol Harris, proprietor of the Capitol theatre, Little Rock, Ark., booked "Why Worry," he saw in the title distinct possibilities for tying up local shops on an elaborate co-operative advertising stunt.

After Sol approached the principal business concerns in town and broached the subject of a co-operative advertising tie-up that would, by virture of the space involved, redound to the advantage of everyone concerned, he found twenty-seven firms willing to participate.

The result was a smashing broadside in the form of a double-page co-operative advertisement in the Arkansas Gazette on Sunday. In each unit of the display the idea of "Why Worry" when we can supply you with the commodity or service you need—was carried out. In the center of the layout Harris spread the major message of the display, an announcement of a week's engagement at the Capitol of "America's greatest Tickler—Harold Lloyd in 'Why Worry.'"

ARRESTING LOBBY SHADOW BOX ON "SIX DAYS" IN MILWAUKEE

This hand painted shadow box was used by Ascher's Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, in connection with the recent showing of "Six Days" (Goldwyn)

EFFECTIVE LOG CABIN LOBBY PIECE

Utilizing the western angle, Manager F. J. Miller of the Rialto theatre, Augusta, Ga., prepared this lobby set piece on "To the Last Man" (Paramount)

"Enemies of Women" Given Strong Opening Drive

William Epstein, manager of the Strand theatre, Laredo, Texas, picked "Enemies of Women," to open the Royal theatre which he recently took over from H. A. Daniels. The Royal Theatre was redecorated throughout and transformed into a beautiful and inviting picture house.

Manager Epstein and J. W. Falvella, advertising solicitor of the Laredo Times, who was engaged to aid in exploiting the picture, began a publicity campaign which brought the opening of the theatre and the name of the first picture to be screened to the attention of every resident in the city.

On the Saturday preceding the opening, the Laredo Times carried a double-page splash of advertisements from a score or more merchants, each one playing up the title "Enemies of Women" in large type in its own advertisement. In addition, the regular theatre advertisement was featured in the center of the double-truck. This advertising tie-up was arranged by Mr. Falvella.

An extensive billboard campaign was used. The theatre lobby was decorated with cut-outs from the posters, special cards and frames of stills.

Book Store Gives Window Over to "Scaramouche"

Leon Victor, who is handling the run of "Scaramouche" at the Shubert Belasco theatre, Washington, D. C., for Metro, obtained a highly creditable book window display for that picture.

Victor brought about a striking tie-up with Brentano's book store in the Capitol by using an exact reproduction of one of the carriages of the period and hundreds of copies of the photoplay edition of Rafael Sabatini's novel. "Scaramouche." The striking effect was procured in the simplest manner by ranging the books like a frame around the carriage, row upon row. The brilliant jackets of the books and the mass effect of their arrangement, coupled with the unique carriage attracted attention instantly and won much favorable comment.

Novel Tableaux Feature of Annual Style Revue

During the week in which he played "The Cheat" and "The Silent Partner," Manager George A. McDermit of the Rialto theatre, Macon, Ga., put over an elaborate style revue. He sold the idea to the local merchants and obtained the support of the Chamber of Commerce. A runway was built over the audience and elaborate lighting equipment provided for the occasion.

Various stores were represented in the display of fashions—a department store, men's wear store, jewelry store, millinery and shoe stores. All were not represented at each showing, but each had certain days. However, the last two days, there was a combination display and a special display of models in beautiful evening gowns.

Each day a tableau was featured. For instance, on Monday and Tuesday, a page in white appeared before the curtains with a card reading—"The Most Popular Models of All." Immediately the recruiting officers of the Army and Marine Corps marched down the aisle to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne." As they reached the center of the platform the curtains were drawn, revealing a young woman in the uniform of a Red Cross nurse, while the orchestra played "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The preliminaries for the Wednesday night tableau were the same as the former, the page presenting a card reading—"The Best Models of All." The same Army and Marine officers marched down the aisle to the center of platform and as the curtains were drawn a Boy Scout was revealed, holding in his hand a large silk American Flag.

On Thursday the tableau displayed "The Sweetest Model of All"—a bride and groom—an illuminated background showing a church window.

Friday the tableau was "The Most Beloved Model of All." The house lights were lowered and as the orchestra played "Mother Machree" the curtains were drawn back, revealing a white haired old lady seated by a fireplace, its red glow reflected in her face.

UNIQUE "SPOILERS" DISPLAY PIECE
The Grand theatre, Centralia, Wash., used an automatic flapjack turner in the lobby on "The Spoilers" (Goldwyn) as shown here

This scene, of course, depicted . . . "Mother."

On Saturday the same tableau was enacted, except that for the climax, the marine and soldier marched down the aisle, and the curtains were drawn back, depicting the homecoming of the boys bearing gifts for "Mother." The soldier presented a large bouquet of flowers, and the marine, a large box of candy.

Twenty Million Marks Aid "Money, Money, Money"

Twenty million German marks were the outstanding feature of George Schade's exploitation campaign on "Money, Money, Money," at the theatre bearing his name in Sandusky, Ohio. The cost of the marks, in American gold, was two dollars.

It was less expensive than to print handbills, which was the purpose for which Schade used them.

The difficulty consisted in getting them over It required a full-sized trunk to transport them and the express charges cost more than the marks. Schade paid the express company and made his money on the advertising he got out of it in Sandusky and nearby towns.

Author's Endorsement Used on "To the Last Man"

Manager Thomas G. Coleman of the Galax theatre, Birmingham, Ala., put over a campaign on "To the Last Man" which, while not abnormally heavy, proved entirely adequate.

The additional lithographs, window cards, locally printed handbills, etc., attracted interest, since on the ordinary run of attractions large quantities of paper are not posted.

In order to attract further attention and back up the outdoor campaign, the entire front of the theatre was covered with beaverboard panels. The "Greater Movie Season" colors of orange and blue still retained gave quite a color flash. To supplement this an entire 24-sheet was mounted over the marquee next to the wall of building.

In all newspaper copy, throwaways, slides, personal interviews and on the lobby front, stress was laid on Zane Grey's statement that —"It is the best Western picture I ever saw. It has no fakes." In like manner Jesse L. Lasky's endorsement of the picture was incorporated into all advertising.

Pretentious Prologue Given With "Green Goddess"

Manager William Fait of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, expended special effort in his presentation of "The Green Goddess," and gave it the support of one of the most pretentious prologue offerings he has used to date.

A special drop depicting the shrine of the "Green Goddess" was painted for the occasion and served as the background for an impressive temple ceremonial in which seventeen members of the Eastman Theatre Ballet and three singers from the operatic department of the Eastman School of Music took part.

A devotional dance before the shrine served to create the proper atmosphere for the story, its effectiveness being materially heightened by the vocal rendition of the prayer from the opera "Lakme."

BUILDING UP AN EFFECTIVE SHADOW BOX DISPLAY IN LOBBY ON "THE BRASS BOTTLE"
Manager A. H. MacDonald of the Rex theatre, Eugene, Ore., and his advertising manager, Russell F. Brown, were responsible for this attractive lobby display on "The Brass Bottle" (First National)

"Human Wreckage" Showing Given Many Tie-ups

The showing of "Human Wreckage" at the Civic Auditorium, Portland, Ore., under the auspices of the municipal government, was given a forceful publicity and exploitation campaign by Vic Gauntlett. Some of the stunts put over by Mr. Gauntlett were:

An anti-narcotic week proclaimed by Mayor Baker of Portland, given wide space in all the city newspapers, and started off with a speech by the mayor from the stage of the Auditorium, preceding the picture, on the opening night.

Tie-ups with the Portland Telegram, responsible for a two-column page one editorial on "Human Wreckage," articles on the Portland Board of Censorship and its action in passing the picture without a single elimination, and finally the distribution of more than 60,000 rotogravure heralds, four pages in size, inside the Sunday Telegram the opening day of the engagement.

Narcotic paraphernalia, including opium pipes, hypodermics, samples of various banned drugs, etc., was exhibited in windows of three downtown stores at the city's busiest corners. Through arrangements with the police department, an officer in uniform was stationed inside each window all the time the exhibit was visible to the public.

A tie-up with newsboys of the city the first few days of the run, with the result that the boys, selling their papers on the street, would shout, "Oregonian—Telegram—paper here—get your paper and read all about the opening of 'Human Wreckage.'"

Tie-ups with the municipal authorities, resulting in one-sheets pasted on the front and rear ends of every street car, and the exhibition of a huge banner at the baseball park, carried about the field in the middle of each game. Tie-ups with the police department resulted in a special war on dope peddlers, and much newspaper publicity thrown to "Human Wreckage" from this source, a great amount of it being front page publicity in all the city papers.

Tie-ups with the state penitentiary at Salem, through which Governor Pierce of Oregon issued a statewide proclamation used by all newspapers, etc. One of the four hundred convicts that witnessed the showing of "Human Wreckage" at the penitentiary was also persuaded by Mr. Gauntlett to write a review of the picture, and this was given statewide publicity that had its share of power toward "selling" the picture to the Portland public.

MAKING STREET-CAR BALLYHOO GOOD

This ballyhoo on "The Abysmal Brute" (Universal) was arranged in Wellington, New Zealand, by Manager Coulter of the Paramount and Artcraft theatres

Phonograph Tie-up Made on "Enemies of Women"

Claude Miller, manager of the Strand theatre, Dayton, Ohio, and H. T. Snowden, of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exploitation force, induced the Dayton Furniture company to tie up with the showing of "Enemies of Women" with a Victrola display. A special one-sheet art card used with this tie-up read: "Homes without music are enemies of women. A Victrola will make your home complete. Let us demonstrate and see 'Enemies of Women' at the Strand."

A book window was obtained at Elder & Johnson's store, with a double truck newspaper advertising tie-up, which was placed with the Dayton News.

Hosiery Tie-up Employed on "The French Doll"

In advertising "The French Doll," Manager H. B. Clarke of the Gariug theatre, Greenville, S. C., tied up with the Outlook Clothing Company, an exclusive ladies' ready-to-wear shop, to give away pairs of silk hose to ladies attending the matinee, who wore the exact size hose as Mae Murray. The newspapers gave special notice of this, and the stunt created widespread interest among the ladies.

The method of procedure in this contest was as follows: Each lady buying a ticket to the matinee was given a card with space for her name, address and the size of hose. This she would fill out and hand to the doorman. If her number corresponded to the correct size, her card was okayed by the manager and she was so informed, so that after the show she could secure the hose at the store mentioned.

A very attractive window display was also featured by the Outlook Clothing Company, showing the hose to be given away and also displaying a number of beautiful gowns, such as are worn by Mae Murray.

Lobby was made up of a large cut-out of Mae Murray, taken from 24-sheet. This was arranged in center against a scenic background made of wall paper and photographs and air brushed in beautiful colors. This set was illuminated by spotlight placed at the top.

Cigar Stand Tie-ups Given on "Three Wise Fools"

Manager M. C. Cooper of the Grand theatre, Grand Forks, N. D., obtained fourteen tobacco stand tie-ups for the showing of "Three Wise Fools" in his theatre. Special hangers were printed for these tobacco stands, advertising locally popular cigars and cigarettes.

A special story on "The Greater Movie Season," featuring "Three Wise Fools" and other productions, was obtained in the Herald. Window displays were obtained in several of the important stores; heralds and novelties were used freely.

STRIKING AND INEXPENSIVE FLASH IN DISPLAY FRONT FOR AUSTIN SHOWING OF "HOLLYWOOD"

The use of an abundant quantity of stars, streamers, pendants and the like gave Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre, Austin, Texas, this appropriate front on "Hollywood" (Paramount)

Four Shoe Window Tie-ups Are Made on "Trilby"

Full advantage was taken of footwear tie-up possibilities on "Trilby" by the Chicago theatre, Chicago, in connection with the playing of that picture.

Four windows were devoted to the theatre's offering, the most remarkable being that of the Walk-Over Shoe Company. This was made available by reason of the national tie-up arranged through First National's New York office and the producing center, where Mlle. Lafayette was working in Hollywood on the one end and the Walk-Over shoe people on the other.

The fact that Mlle. Lafayette had such beautiful feet and that she wore Walk-Over shoes, which helped her to retain beauty and shape of her feet, were duly commented upon in a three-foot card that adorned the window. The display was arranged in contrasting light and dark colors. With electric lights from overhead it was equally effective at night time.

One of the unusual features of the tie-up was the use made by the Walk-Over people of quotations from the Chicago newspaper critics on "Trilby." This was done in smaller cards and handbills.

"WHITE ROSE" LOBBY DISPLAY GOTTEN UP LIKE REGULAR STAGE SETTING

Dignified Campaign to Put "Rupert of Hentzau" Over

Manager George E. Brown of the Imperial theatre, Charlotte, N. C., based his plans on "Rupert of Hentzau" on the assumption that a dignified campaign would reach that class of persons which would most enjoy the picture, so he used only standard outdoor advertising, lobby art work and newspaper copy to put it over.

Several special stories with art illustrations were featured, written with a view to reaching the class of people who would find the picture to their liking. He reports that this line of reasoning proved sound.

Advertising Stunts on "Six Days"

Six Day Sales Prove One Effective Tie-up to Exploit This Photoplay

SPECIAL contests, six-day sales and other special features have been used by various theatres to exploit the early runs of "Six Days." Several such ideas are presented here for the convenience of exhibitors.

For the showing of "Six Days" at Miller's theatre in Los Angeles a tie-up of an unusual character was obtained. This was a photographic contest arranged by Mr. Miller and his publicity director with the Sun Drug Company, which operates a chain of stores in Los Angeles.

The prizes were: First, a pastel painting, 28x42 inches, valued at $600, executed by Hubbard G. Robinson, well-known Los Angeles artist; second, an oil painting, same size, valued at $400, also painted by Mr. Robinson; third, a charcoal drawing, the same size, valued at $200, drawn by Mr. Robinson.

The contest was under the auspices of the Sun Drug Company, Charles Brabin the director; Corinne Griffith and Frank Mayo.

Merchant Tie-up Obtained

For the showing of "Six Days" at the Lyric theatre in Butler, Pa., Manager John A. Graham, assisted by William N. Robson, Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exploitation man, got an unusual merchant tie-up in exploiting the picture. Several window displays were arranged, in several of which it was announced that each day during the showing of "Six Days" there would be a special article displayed in the window at a special price and that with each sale of this article on that day a ticket to "Six Days" at the Lyric theatre would be given free.

Many Stores Co-operate

Floyd Morrow, manager of the Regent theatre, Washington, Pa., obtained effective merchant tie-ups when he showed "Six Days." Several of the leading merchants in his town agreed to put on special sales of different articles for six days with appropriate displays in their windows tying up with the picture. A special price was made on one article for each day of the week and a ticket given to the showing of the film to purchasers of the articles. The merchants went in together on a special herald, advertising the tie-up.

The customary billing and newspaper advertising was done and the lobby was dressed with cut-outs from the striking six-sheet posters and with frames of stills.

WHAT ONE LADIES READY TO WEAR STORE DID FOR "THE FRENCH DOLL"

Manager George Rotzky of the Allen theatre, Montreal, arranged this tie-up on "The French Doll" (Metro), with a prominent store

Ottawa World Premiere Campaign

Details of Manager Cloakey's Stunts to Aid "Richard, the Lion-Hearted"

THE showing of "Richard, the Lion-Hearted," at the Regent theatre, Ottawa, constituted the world premiere, a fact of which Manager Oral D. Cloakey took full advantage in his publicity, advertising and exploitation campaign.

He started off with a teaser campaign in the Ottawa papers, "Watch for Season's Biggest Photoplay," and announcing a theatre "scoop" at the Regent. Street car cards, both inside and out, called attention to the daily papers for details of the "scoop." Five hundred half-sheet advertisements called attention to the "scoop."

Next came a private screening for two hundred Ottawa notables four days in advance of the opening, as the result of which there were several letters endorsing the picture, and a leading minister preached a sermon on the production.

For a week in advance of the opening a special trailer was used at the Regent. Special heralds were distributed on the Regent's "scoop" and giving information about the feature. Permission was obtained from the city council for a big banner across the street at main intersection near theatre.

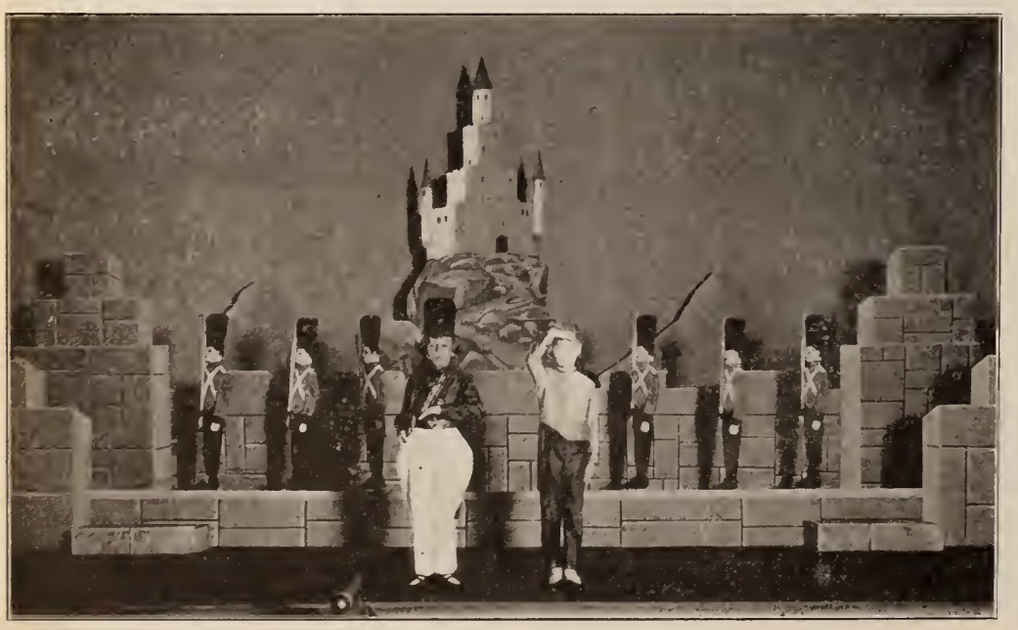
Procession Delivers Print

Mr. Cloakey then arranged with the fire chief, police chief, the Dominion Express Company and Ottawa's crack regimental band for a parade in which the fire chief led, followed by Mayor Plant, after which came the regimental band, then the express wagon guarded by armed policemen, the wagon bearing this banner:

"This wagon contains film of 'Richard, the Lion-Hearted,' on its way to the Regent theatree under special guard for world's premier, starting Saturday, September 22."

Then came the chief of police with six armed men. The parade passed through the principal business streets and thence to the Regent, where Mayor Plant broke the seal of the film container. This was the first time the mayor of Ottawa ever had consented to help put over a picture, his co-operation and that of other civic departments being obtained because of the importance of the world premier showing.

Mr. Cloakey arranged with the morning newspapers to run off 4,000 extra copies the day before the opening and had his printers run the words, "Scoop. Word premier showing of 'Richard, the Lion-Hearted,' at the Regent theatre," in bright red ink across the front page. These papers were delivered at the homes in the residential section for the regular early morning deliveries.



Twenty window displays were arranged for in the best business streets, one house devoting a special window to picture with old armor, spears, broad swords, and the like, and using wax models dressed in the costumes of the period of the picture. There was a purple plush background with baby spots playing on the armor and the wax figures.

There was a special lobby display of flags, shields, and the like, as suggested in the press book. Fifteen 24-sheets were used. A mailing list of 1,000 was used, while extra advertising space was taken in the newspapers; also in Hull, the city near Ottawa.

Girl Poses as Doll to Aid "The French Doll" Run

An excellent bit of exploitation was employed by the management of Loew's Valentine theatre in Toledo, Ohio, about two weeks ago in connection with the run at that theatre of "The French Doll." One of the largest windows of Toledo's biggest department store, The Lion Store, on Toledo's busiest commercial street was given over to an animated display on "The French Doll" which attracted big crowds to the window and to the theatre.

In the midst of the big window, set with a large lobby painting of Mae Murray and just enough clothing display to dress up the window, an animated French Doll, impersonated by a young and beautiful woman, stood on a raised stage. Her "animated French Doll" performances were instantly popular. The display aroused a lot of comment as it was both unique and extremely interesting.

UTILIZING JUVENILE APPEAL IN "PENROD AND SAM" PROLOGUE

Manager Willard C. Patterson of the Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta, Ga., staged the "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" as a prologue to "Penrod and Sam" (First National), as shown

ATTENTION GETTING STREET STUNT

Manager Ben Apple of the American theatre, Troy, N. Y., had this man on the street giving away valueless foreign currency on "Don't Marry for Money" (State Rights)

Manager Utilizes Robbery on "Three Wise Fools"

The blowing of the theatre safe five days before the opening of "Three Wise Fools" was seized as a means of exploitation for the picture by William Goldman, owner-manager of the Kings theatre, St. Louis.

The Monday afternoon papers carried stories of the robbery with pictures of the cracked safe, and Monday evening Goldman ran a trailer with a still of the wrecked office, the ad copy emphasizing the fact that the robbers selected the Kings from among the 120 theatres of St. Louis as "the one where the crowds go. Kings of course!" the trailer read. "They were Three Wise Fools," even larger crowds will be here next week to see "Three Wise Fools," etc.

Ads on Tuesday advised the newspaper readers:

"Three burglars cracked our safe yesterday. They were ahead of time. 'Three Wise Fools' opens Saturday." The wrecked safe was also placed in front of the theatre with an appropriate poster on it and some stills of the crook scenes in "Three Wise Fools."

The picture was further exploited through tie-ups with leading business houses. A window was obtained in a downtown cigar store and 1,750 window posters were put up by the same company telling of the coming engagement of "Three Wise Fools." The distributor of the Dolly Varden chocolates also placed 600 window cards with pictures of Eleanor Boardman eating candy, while a window in the shopping district hooked up the picture with Blue Bird pearls.

Three clowns and a trained pig that drank milk from a bottle were used as a ballyhoo in the downtown sections, and also visited various public schools. The clown also worked the Veiled Prophet Parade and the roads leading to the International Air Championship races.

"Dumb-bell" Slogan Used in "Dulcy" Advertising

A popular chord was struck in St. Louis by the "Dulcy" advertising for the Skouras houses, including the Capitol, New Grand Central and West End Lyric theatres.

R. T. Smith, manager of the New Grand Central, the largest of these theatres, explains that while these houses spend freely in the exploitation of attractions the type of the clientele virtually restricts their efforts to newspaper advertisements with frequent direct mail appeals. The New Grand Central has a resident mailing list of more than ten thousand addresses, which are periodically circulated with "exhibitors' helps," and the newspaper ads of these theatres in combine stand in the first rank as to size, dignity and ingenuity in advertisement.

"Don't say paper, say Star" has for several years greeted the St. Louisan from every angle, it being the registered slogan admonition of the St. Louis Star of the daily evening newspaper field. Whether St. Louis is really saying "Star" is not as certain as that all St. Louis is familiar with this popular slogan, proclaimed on every hand by tongue, billboard or printed page. So popular has this slogan become that it has found its way into the slang as a jocular colloquialism.

Such being the case, the feature was adequately exploited when the Skouras houses charged "Don't say dumb-bell, say Dulcy!" The tying of the advertising for the Constance Talmadge picture to an already thoroughly exploited slogan was an achievement that paid the theatres well.

Aims "Hollywood" Campaign at Entire Community

Starting his work well in advance of the showing, Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre, Gadsden, Ala., put a thorough and comprehensive campaign back of "Hollywood" at that theatre.

Mr. Snell employed many angles in his advance work on this production. To begin with, all roads leading into Gadsden were placarded in advance with signs reading: "This way to Hollywood." These were painted by the house artist. Signs were tacked in every available spot along the road for five miles distant. The Railroad ticket heralds were also distributed in the rural delivery boxes along the road.

On Sunday before showing roto sheets were placed in the Sunday newspapers. In addition to this distribution, they were passed out to members of every Civic Club in the town, thus interesting the worth-while people.

Freight cars were bannered, thus carrying the message to people in nearby towns. Signs were placed on the spare tires of automobiles and a banner was displayed on the Southern Railroad ticket office.

A guessing contest was inaugurated, which created lots of interest. Frames bearing photos of twelve different stars in the picture were displayed in three different stores and the announcement made that passes would be given for the correct indentification of the stars. Mr. Snell reports that this stunt went over fine, resulting in good publicity and drawing crowds around the windows at all times.

USING 24-SHEET CUT-OUT ON FRONT

The Colonial theatre, Watertown, S. Dak., made this effective use of a founted 24-sheet cut-out on "Main Street" (Warner Bros.)

Modified Post Card Stunt Is Used on "Minnie"

A modification of the post card stunt that has been effectively used on "Minnie" found a response when used by Manager Roy Smart at the Noble theatre, Anniston, Ala.

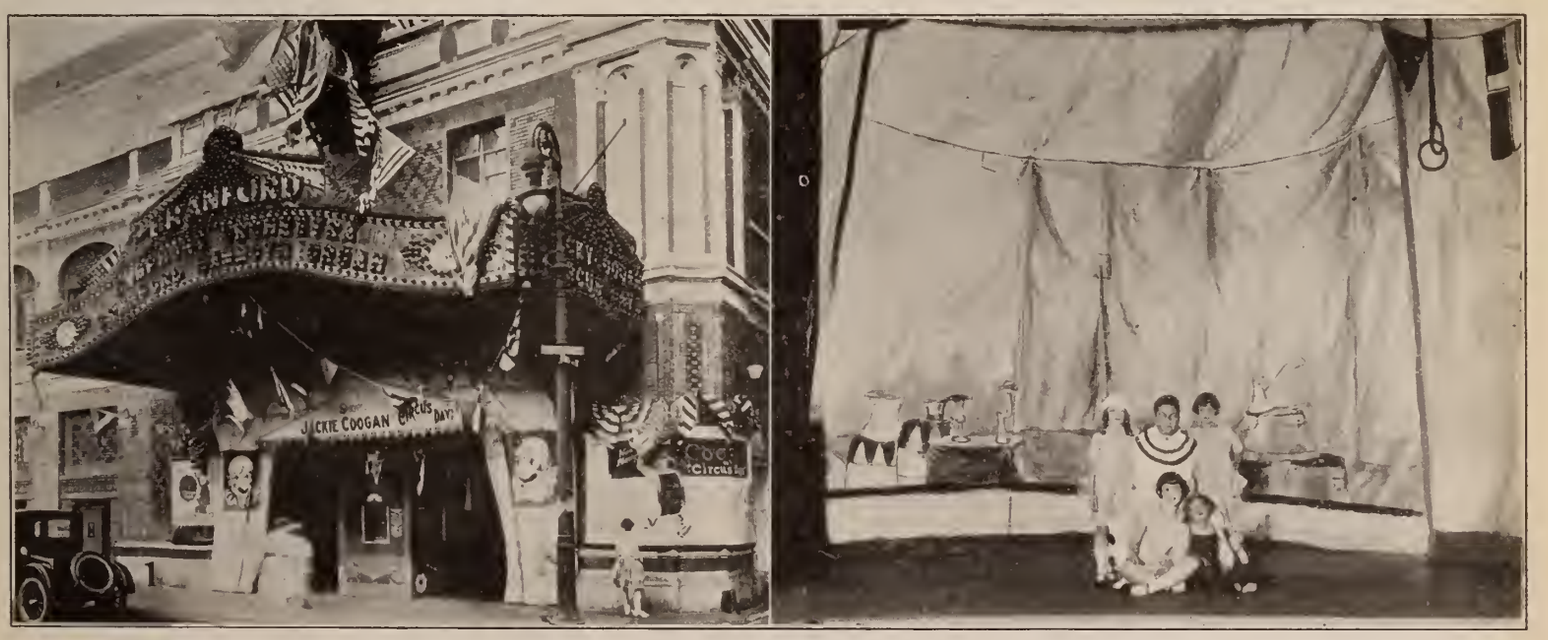
Changing the method of attack, Manager Smart concentrated upon 300 of Anniston's most prominent married men as logical candidates. A few days before the opening they received postals reading:

"I know I'm ugly but I've got to have a beau. Won't you meet me at the corner of Tenth and Noble at 8 Monday night? Minnie."

This follow-up came afterwards: "I may be an ugly duckling but I got my man. Come down to the Noble Tuesday and see how I did it. Minnie."

Irate wives were up in arms for a time. It wound up as a laugh, however, because the men were able—even if tardily—to appreciate this joke upon themselves.

Pirate Angle Played Up in "Penrod and Sam" Front



A somewhat different slant was given to his "Penrod and Sam" front by Manager Harry Browne of the T. & D. theatre, San Jose, Cal.

He played up the pirate angle, which, although not emphasized in the picture, comes in logically enough and made a corking good front. The display centered around the top and bottom of the box office window with a mask cardboard covering, that contrasted the skulls and crossbones and daggers on a black and white layout.

Wedding Herald Boosts "Bluebeard's 8th Wife"

Manager Miller Stewart of the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, used a clever mailing piece on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." It was gotten up in the form of a wedding announcement, the copy reading:

"The Marquis and Marquise de Briac request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Monna, to Mr. John Brandon on Saturday, the eighth of September, at the Metropolitan theatre, when she will become 'Bluebeard's Eighth Wife.'"

Albert E. Smith, whose name is a synonym for "Vitagraph," sailed this week for England on a combined business and pleasure trip, but stopped long enough to pose for the cameraman.

This one of Edwin Carewe was caught just before he sailed for France and Algiers to film "Son of the Sahara," to be followed shortly by a company of players who will go down to Biskra, right on the edge of the Sahara, to get the real thing in "sheik" atmosphere.

WITH LENS AND PENCIL

ALBERT E. SMITH, President of Vitagraph, sailed Tuesday on the Berengaria for his annual trip to Europe. He will be abroad about a month, going first to London to arrange for the housing of Vitagraph activities under one roof, and thence to Paris where his company has greatly increased its activities and is now producing. Upon his return to New York, Mr. Smith will go at once to Hollywood. All production work of the company will be done there during the coming winter. He will be accompanied on the trip West by J. Stuart Blackton, who by that time will have completed "Let No Man Put Asunder," the Basil King story.

HAVING seen "A Woman of Paris" started on its metropolitan run, Charles Chaplin, after whose name must now be written director-producer as well as star, left New York for Hollywood Sunday.

THE mountain breezes say that Larry Weingarten, publicist extraordinary for Jackie Coogan, has left the Coast for Broadway to take over the town while he exploits "Long Live the King," the starlet's first for Metro.

THERE was a general exodus of First National officials to French Lick this week for the annual meeting. Richard A. Rowland, Harry Schwalbe, E. A. Eschmann, Moe Mark, C. S. Pinkerton, Felix Feist and Bruce Johnson were among those who caught the train from New York. Sol Lesser, just returned from Europe, and his brother, Irving, also departed. Most of them will be back by the time this meets the reader's eye.

ARTHUR KROCK, who has occupied an executive post with the Hays organization, has resigned to become assistant to Ralph Pulitzer, publisher of the New York World. Krock is one of the country's best known newspaper men. He was one of the late "Marse" Henry Watterson's mainstays on the Louisville Courier-Journal and subsequently editor of the Louisville Times.

ABRAHAM CARLOS, producr of "The Unknown Purple" and the Richard Talmadge series for Truart Film Corporation, left New York this week for Los Angeles to take active charge of the productions being made under the Carlos banner.

AMONG the visitors to Film Row this week were Fred Desberg, of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., and Bob Lynch, Philadelphia Metro manager.

PROMINENT arrivals from the Coast on Tuesday were Joseph M. Schenck, Constance Talmadge and Mrs. Margaret Talmadge. Buster Keaton came in a few days previously and attended the World Series.

SIDNEY R. KENT, Paramount General Distribution Manager, is expected in New York shortly from Los Angeles.

CHARLES E. WAGNER, former trade paper man and secretary of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, has resigned from the Hodkinson publicity department.

CHARLES WILCOX, of Graham-Wilcox Productions, London, is expected in New York shortly from abroad with the motion picture version of "Chu Chin Chow."

DENISON CLIFT, the former Lasky scenario writer and Fox director, who left California three years ago for a world tour, and who stopped over in London to become identified with English productions, where he established quite a name for himself, will return to Hollywood in November.

Sam Rork, producer of "Ponjola," which he explained to us was Kaffir for the stuff the bootleggers grow rich on. He assured us he could never take a good picture, but he'll probably retract that after he sees this.

When she found out that we were going to take motion pictures, Lois Wilson was worried because she didn't have her make-up, but this picture, snapped on the roof of the Seymour, proves that make-up isn't so necessary if you have the other requisites—such as beauty, for instance.

Around Town With the Independents

By ROGER FERRI

AMONG the visitors to Warner Brothers' home offices this this week was Lou Berman, President of Independent Film Corporation of Philadelphia, who reports business in that section progressing encouragingly for independents.

NAT Beier, manager of Warner Brothers' New York State Exchange, returned to the metropolis from Buffalo this week, after completing a deal whereby Warner Brothers' product for that territory will be handled by Sidney Samson of the Bond Photoplay Company.

TOM CURRAN, special representative for Arrow Film Corporation, is in the Southwest for his firm.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, who is now associated with Anderson Pictures Corporation, was due in New York late this week following a long stay on the Coast.

DAN W. FISH, foreign representative for Preferred Pictures, Inc., is due in London Saturday. He left New York last Saturday on the Majestic.

WHITMAN BENNETT has apparently made up his mind to confine his efforts in the future to the making of pictures that can be exploited on an extensive basis. He announced this week that he starts production early in November on "The Truth About Love."

BRYANT WASHBURN, the Grand-Ascher star, is spending the month of October in New York. He was the guest of the Grand-Ascher firm during the recent world's series.

ABE CARLOS, who is making pictures that Truart is distributing, left on Monday for Los Angeles to resume production activities. He came East with a print of "The Unknown Purple."

JOE FRIEDMAN, of Celebrated Film Players Corporation of Chicago, was a visitor to New York this week.

SAM WARNER of Warner Brothers has been very much on the go since his arrival in New York, to pinch hit for Brother Abe, who is still ill. He spent the week-end down in Philadelphia and on Monday ran up to Boston to give Bill Shapiro's Franklin Film Exchange the "once-over."

JERRY LEWIS, representing Timely Films, Inc., of New York, is spending several weeks in Ohio, visiting exhibitors. He will make his headquarters in Cleveland.

E. E. PERKINS, a veteran Northwest film salesman, had his loyalty to the Tri-State Film Exchange of Minneapolis rewarded this week when he took up the managerial reins of that exchange's new office in Fargo, North Dakota.

FRANK J. CARROLL has been selected by the newly formed Colorado Pictures, Inc., of Denver, to direct that independent firm's initial picture, "The Birth of The West."

IMPERIAL PICTURES, INC., OF CALIFORNIA is the newest independent organization formed on the Coast. It has been capitalized for $2,500,000, and is understood will deal principally with the distribution and production of pictures.

HAROLD RODNER, a New York independent exchange man, has decided in the future to devote himself entirely to the distribution of short subjects.

JESSE WEIL, formerly with Eddie Small and lately with Independent Pictures Corporation, joins Producers Security Corporation next week as publicity director.

CONTRARY to expectations the curtailment of the double bill policy in most sections of New England has not hampered business at independent exchanges in Boston and New Haven, according to admissions made by several exchangemen who came to New York this week.

One of the units in the Daytime Wives League formed to exploit "Daytime Wives"—(F. B. O.)

THE world series brought many independent exchangemen from various parts of the country to New York. Most of them left the metropolis on Tuesday.

JAKE WILK, who has been abroad for some time, is expected home shortly with pictures for which he has purchased the North American distribution rights.

JESSE J. GOLDBURG, President of Independent Pictures Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles this week. He will remain on the Coast for about ten weeks supervising production on a new series that his firm will state right.

SAM MOSCOW, of Moscow Films, Inc., of Boston, was another out-of-town exchangeman who visited the metropolis this week.

J. CHARLES DAVIS, 2nd, publicity director, is paving the way for the follow-up exploitation on "Gambling Wives," Arrow's big 192 x 24 special. W. E. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film Corporation, since his return from his three-months' tour of the country, has been kept busy applying finishing touches to plans for the production.

ED PETERS, formerly an official of the M. P. T. O. A., and a former exhibitor leader of Texas, is now at the helm of his own independent distributing organization in New York.

ARTHUR ROSSON is now on Grand-Ascher's directorial staff, having already started work on the first Mildred Davis picture, according to word given out this week by the G-A publicity director, Cobb.

EXCHANGEMEN in Denver and Salt Lake City, are working on a plan for the re-mapping of their territories. Those territories have been hard-pressed during the past two years and exchangemen there complain that the percentage valuation of the territory is greatly exaggerated and that under the present rating it is almost impossible for them to buy in the open market on anything but a commonwealth plan.

E. H. GRIFFITH started last week to shoot on "Week-End Husbands," Daniel Carson Goodman's next Equity picture starring Alma Rubens. Maurice Costello also is in the cast.

DAVE STARKMAN, of Imperial Film Exchange, Philadelphia, who operated the Savoy theatre in Atlantic City, N. J., has closed the latter and is now devoting all his time to his exchange interests.

JACK MOWER will make a series of five-reel society features that will be released in the independent market as soon as his current contract with Universal expires.

LOU MARANGELLA, who is in charge of Warner Brothers' publicity on the West Coast, writes to the effect that his golf "has improved considerably," and a "full-fledged golf bug of the first order now."

TONY LUCHESE and Oscar Neufeld of De Luxe Film Exchange of Philadelphia last week refunded to exhibitors their first money on their new cooperative plan, which provides that the firm will return to theatre owners all moneys collected over a certain fixed picture quota.

LARRY SEMON, who is slated to make a series of five-reel comedies for the independent market as soon as his contract with Vitagraph has expired, arrived in New York this week.

HARRY WILSON, publicity director for Principal Pictures and the Lesser interests, spent several days in Cleveland last week. He returned on Monday, and will remain in New York until his chief, Sol Lesser, returns from abroad.

JOHN LOWELL, producer and star of "Ten Nights In A Barroom" and "Lost In A Big City," two Arrow pictures, came to New York from Gloversville, N. Y., this week to complete arrangements for the distribution of his next feature, "Floodgates," written by L. Case Russell.

"The White Panther"

Phil Goldstone—6,000 Feet

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$35,000.

Producer—Phil Goldstone.

Theme—A disillusioned Sirdar of Afghans, holding the English responsible for the shame of his daughter, plans the downfall of the sweetheart of the offending officer and daughter of the local Governor as the price of his vengeance.

Cast—Rex (Snowy) Baker is starred in this one, which is the first of a new series of four. He does well, and shines as a horseman of daring ability. The rest of the cast is well balanced with "Billy" Franey, in a light comedy role, attracting much attention with what little he does.

Classification—Military melodrama.

As a Whole—The story involved is interestingly told throughout without waste of footage. The director gave "Snowy" Baker and his beautiful white horse the right of way, and the star has things pretty much his own way. He will win patrons of houses where fast-moving, riproaring dramas of the fight-every-five-minute fashions are sought. The exchange man looking at this picture as a prospective buy will be favorably impressed with the massiveness of the settings and the group scenes which are cleverly handled. The picture has been produced in special fashion, and if your territory embraces theatres whose clienteles delight in getting a little logic along with romance in its melodramas, "The White Panther," as a whole, looks like an excellent buy.

Shortcomings—None.

Settings—Very good throughout. The exteriors, with India as the locale, are especially massive, and appropriately picturesque.

Photography—One of the strongest features.

Direction—Good, although the star apparently did what he wanted.

Exploitation—Producer-distributor is apparently depending upon exchanges to exploit this series, for very little has been said about the pictures in print.

Exploitation Possibilities—All depends on how far you can go; if you want to cash in maximumly you have many possibilities with the Indian "mystery teaser" stuff, although most of the stunts suggested in the campaign book are stupid and anything but original. The best bet is the story itself, for it invites teasers and tieups with carpet, antique, curiosity, clothes and sporting goods shops. And keep plugging on the mystery: "What is the White Panther?"

Producer Advertising—Little trade paper advertising.

Advertising Accessories—Posters, press book, heralds, cuts and mats and lobbies.

The Cast

Major Bruce Wainright ..... Rex (Snowy) Baker
Irene Falliday ..... Gertrude McConnell
Tommy Farrell ..... Phil Burke
The Governor ..... W. Bainbridge
Yasmini ..... Lois Scott
Shere Ali ..... Frank Whitson
His aide ..... Karloff Boris
The private ..... Billy Franey
The bandit leader ..... Stanley Bingham

Story by Jack Natteford. Directed by Alvin J. Neitz

SYNOPSIS—Irene, daughter of the British Governor of an Indian province, discovers her lost shawl on the person of Yasmini, who loves Tommy Farrell. The latter is in love with Irene and promises to regain the shawl. He succeeds, but not until after he has shamed the native girl in the eyes of her father and his subjects. The offended Shere Ali seeks revenge and Irene is kidnapped. Maj. Bruce Wainright, who secretely loved Irene, seeks her and after a series of adventures, aided by his faithful horse—the "white panther"—he rescues the girl and wins a wife.

UNDER the above heading productions are reviewed for state rights buyers only and opinions rendered are on the basis of distribution.

As soon as a picture is available for theatres, a second review covering the production from the exhibitor's angle will be published.

"The Bargain"

Tri-Stone—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—Not ascertained.

Producer—Not given. This is a re-issued film, made probably in 1914.

Theme—Regeneration of a two-gun bandit who steals money lost by the sheriff as his part of a bargain for freedom following a romantic marriage.

Cast—William S. Hart is starred in this reissue in which also appear J. Barney Sherry, J. J. Dowling and Clara Williams.

Classification—Western.

As a Whole—Not up to the standard as a vehicle of entertainment and adapts itself only for use as a second feature or in the cheaper houses. It has a virile story, but technically the picture is old in treatment. The presence of such players as Barney Sherry and J. J. Dowling help, although their work interests only as a means of making comparisons. The scenic surroundings are striking, the film having been made in the Grand Canyon.

Shortcomings—Antiquated western hokum, but the sort that first attracted the attention of the public to Hart.

Settings—Very beautiful, mostly exteriors. The latter can compare well with most of the westerns, the locations apparently having been carefully selected.

Photography—Acceptable.

Direction—Good.

Exploitation—Very little to sell exhibitors via trade publications, distributor apparently depending on exchanges to do their own exploitation.

Exploitation Possibilities—The title and star offer many possibilities for exploitation. The title can be hooked up with local stores. You might suggest the co-operative advertising section as the title furnishes a good excuse for this sort of co-operation. Publicity given William Hart by newspapers lately also can be capitalized.

Producer Advertising—None noted.

Advertising Accessories—Not given out.

The Cast

Two-Gun Man ..... William S. Hart
The Girl ..... Clara Williams
Her Father ..... J. Barney Sherry
Sheriff ..... T. J. Burke
Preacher ..... J. J. Dowling

Directed by Reginald Barker, Supervised by Thomas H. Ince, Story by William H. Clifford.

SYNOPSIS—News reaches a Western border town that the two-gun bandit is in the neighborhood. The sheriff and his men seek to prevent robbery of the stage coach, but through a ruse the bandit outwits them but is injured. He seeks refuge in a farm house, falls in love with and marries the owner's daughter, and determines to go straight. In seeking to return the stolen money he is finally captured by the sheriff who loses the money gambling. The two-gun man bargains with the sheriff, holds up the place and gets back the money. The sheriff keeps his part of the bargain by allowing the two-gun man to return for his wife and make his getaway into Mexico.

"Single Shot Parker"

Exclusive—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Roger Ferri)

Distribution Basis—$15,000.

Producer—Not credited. (Re-issue, formerly "The Heart of Texas Ryan.")

Theme—A sure-shot cowboy, seeking to fight off a band of rustlers, finds himself face to face with his ideal girl, only to discover that she is sought by the rustler's leader.

Cast—Tom Mix is starred in this re-issue picture, and he is supported by George Fawcett, Frank Campeau and Bessie Eyton.

Classification—Western.

As a Whole—The acting of the players, particularly Mix, is of first order, but the style of dressing, presence of antiquated automobiles, etc., will prevent booking of the picture in houses with fussy audiences, for a comparison would bring only laughs. However, for those who want dare-devil riding, a lot of shooting, fighting and falls, this one should fill the bill. As far as Westerns go this is as good as most of the ordinary Westerns released today. The only setback is the style of dress, but this the exchange man can easily remedy by inserting titles making audiences understand that the story was based on the period when the picture was taken. If that were done this re-issued picture should go over with a bang, for in the point of outdoor melodrama it is there. You don't have to worry about Tom Mix, for so far as he is concerned he is good in every particular. This is good for a second feature or neighborhood houses.

Shortcomings—Acting of woman lead, who certainly looms forth as an amateur alongside of Mix and Fawcett.

Settings—Mostly outdoor and typical Western interiors. The outdoor shots were well chosen.

Photography—Acceptable so far as Westerns go.

Direction—Acceptable.

Exploitation—Very little.

Exploitation Possibilities—The best possibilities are in the popularity of the star, although the picture warrants little exploitation.

Producer Advertising—Trade paper.

Advertising Accessories—Posters, slides, single and double column cuts, press sheet and 11x14 and 22x28 photogelatine enlargements.

The Cast

Jack Parker ..... Tom Mix
Colonel Ryan ..... George Fawcett
"Dice" McAllister ..... Frank Campeau
Texas Ryan ..... Bessie Eyton

Story by Gilson Willet

SYNOPSIS—Jack Parker, a dare-devil cowboy, is a mystery man and the best hand on the Ryan Ranch. He has fallen in love with a photograph of "Texas" Ryan, daughter of the rancher who returns from an eastern school. "Dice" McAllister, leader of the rustlers, falls in love with the girl and warns Parker to "keep his hands off." This challenge is taken up by Parker. Meanwhile the community is terrorized by the ranchers who become bold in their thievish operations. Under the pretence of a friendly call, McAllister calls on the Ryans and makes love to "Texas" who rejects his proposal. This does not satisfy the man. Parker is captured by the band, but, after a series of gun fights, he is saved by "Texas" to whom it is presumed he will be married.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Gold Madness

(Principal—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE outdoor settings in this picture and the photography are the best features of this story that follows along the usual James Oliver Curwood lines. The plot isn't very convincing, in fact, it is one that forces the observer to stretch the imagination more than usually found in a tale of this type.

It's not enough to put Guy Bates Post in a picture as a star. In fact Mr. Post does not fit the role of Jim Kendall at all. It is hard to associate his characterization with a Northwest Mounted sleuth. It is fortunate for the picture that much of its action takes place in the city where Mr. Post is given opportunity to get into the latest Bond street clothes and use his "distinguished looking glasses." By the way he's the first member of the Royal Mounted we've ever seen wear glasses.

The story has to do with the eternal search for gold, with the unfaithful wife of the gold seeker, his revenge and final triumph. According to tradition a redcoat always gets his man. In this case he gets his man and a woman.

Some of the shots which look like views in the Canadian Rockies are real treats for the eye, but the story shifts to the city early in its action and so this redeeming feature is not long enjoyed. The photography starts out very promising and we are given some unusually fine sepia shots, but this does not hold out when the scene shifts Friscoward. The story runs so straight along the much-worn path that the climax loses much of its strength. One can see the end soon after the beginning. This picture will doubtless please those patrons who aren't "fed up" on an old-time plot.

THEME. One of those Canadian Northwest Mounted stories in which the hero officer gets his man—and a woman.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The attractive mountain exteriors showing some fine scenic views. The beautiful photography in the early scenes. The meeting between the unfaithful wife and the husband. The attempt of Miss Madison to appear convincing.

DIRECTION. Having a poor scenario to work with the director has had a tough job to begin with. He has not succeeded in making the story convincing and the star has been allowed to do too much posing.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Your one big bet on this one is to play up the name of Guy Bates Post, who has been associated with some big productions such as "Omar the Tentmaker." Might get a bunch of money bags from the bank, pack them with paper and pile them in the lobby tying the display up with some appropriate advertising. Put over a bookstore window display on Curwood's books.

DRAWING POWER. A picture for the program house.

SUMMARY. Producers handicapped with ancient plot. It is a conventional story of the Canadian police of which the screen has had so much in the past few years.

THE CAST

Jim Kendall.....Guy Bates Post
Olga Kendall.....Cleo Madison
Scotty McGee.....Mitchell Lewis
Margaret Stanton.....Grace Darmond

Adapted from James Oliver Curwood's story, "The Man from Ten Strike City." Adapted by Fred Myton. Directed by Robert T. Thornby. Photographed by Harold James.

SYNOPSIS—While seeking a fortune in gold, Jim Kendall is deserted by his wife who flees with a mining stock swindler. Seeking to drown his sorrows, Jim joins the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police. He is ordered to Frisco to catch two swindlers, a man and a woman. The man proves to be the one who ran away with his wife and the woman the unfaithful spouse. Jim lures them back to the scene of the flight and justice. Jim wins the swindler's stenographer who has aided him as a bride.

A Prince of a King

(Dinky Dean Production-Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

DINKEY DEAN, a Chaplin discovery, who made his bow in "The Kid," comes forward in a real, high-class production, every minute of which holds entertainment. It is without doubt one of the best photoplays for the children that has ever been screened. Exhibitors will go a long way before they find a production more suitable for the nation's juvenile fans.

Dinky Dean flashes some acrobatic stunts that would make the Barnum & Bailey stars take notice. He interprets his role just like a regular human being would act in real life. After seeing this sample of his work, we predict that other juvenile stars will soon be looking to their laurels.

Everything about the picture is distinctly high class. The settings are well done and there has been much attention paid to detail. The plot is laid in a mythical period of long ago in merrie England. This gave the producers an opportunity for using some fine costumes. The exterior sets are excellent examples of rural landscapes with the photography one of the features of the picture.

It will be interesting to note that "A Prince of a King" marks the return of Virginia Pearson, who appears as the queen. Then there are such well-known players as Eric Mayne, Joseph Swickard, John Sainpolis, Mitchell Lewis and Sam de Grasse.

The story is of the fairy tale type and will be hailed with delight by young and old folks. Mention should be made of "Brutus" a dog that contributes some of the stirring moments of the picture. The plot has some real suspense toward the end and works up to a fine climax.

THEME. A comedy drama of the costume type laid in old England in which we see a noble villain usurp the throne by poisoning the king and then attempting to kill the heir who, however, is saved.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting of Dinkey Dean. The fine cast especially Mitchell Lewis as the giant, Virginia Pearson as the queen and Sam de Grasse as Roberto. The clever work of Brutus, a dog. The fine settings and photography.

DIRECTION. Albert Austin has acquitted himself admirably in putting over Dinkey Dean in this picture. He has accomplished a big task. He has succeeded in keeping up the interest to the end and has packed some real punches into many of the scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Dinkey Dean as the youth discovered by Charlie Chaplin and who won fame in "The Kid." Play up the names in the all-star cast. Put on children matinees.

SUMMARY. A thoroughly enjoyable program picture that maintains interest through its unusual character sketches and dramatic and amusing incidents. Introduces a child actor who will soon be in the same class with other noted youths of the celluloid world.

THE CAST

Gigi, the Prince.....Dinky Dean
Queen Claudia.....Virginia Pearson
King Lorenzo.....Eric Mayne
Mario.....John Sainpolis
Urbano.....Joseph Skickard
Duke Roberto.....Sam de Grasse
Andrea, the Giant.....Mitchell Lewis
"Brutus," the dog.....By Himself

Adapted from the book "John of the Woods," by Abbie Farwell Brown. Directed by Albert Austin. Scenario by Douglas Doty. Photographed by Harry Thorpe.

SYNOPSIS—The usurper of throne attempts to do away with the heir, just born, but the little fellow is found by acrobats in a basket where he has been hidden by a sympathetic soldier. He eventually escapes from his captors and falls into the clutches of the usurper. However, the acrobats once more kidnap the boy, who again escapes and finds his way to the palace. He is placed on the throne and the usurper is arrested.

Cameo Kirby

(Fox—6931 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE are so many picturesque highlights in this melodrama that it is certain to score with any audience despite its old-fashioned conventions and the fact that every situation is clearly defined in advance. Its very ruggedness of theme—together with its colorful characters and the excitement accompanying its main situations—these are sufficient to carry it by a winner.

Certainly it is the best offering in which John Gilbert has appeared and in the title role he demonstrates a flair for romantic expression that justifies his position as a star. As the youthful gambler who plays straight he might have stepped forth from a Mark Twain novel.

The subject matter is not original, nor does it expose any novel touches. But it does register with a definite vitality which gives it its strength. A tale of the Mississippi of the glorious days when gamblers plied their profession upon its picturesque steamboats, it truly carries a punch and plenty of spectacular effects, one of which is an exciting steamboat race. There is an authenticity about it—a color and picturesqueness—which more than compensates for its familiar theme.

We know that from the moment when Cameo Kirby enters the poker match with the intention of restoring his winnings to the elderly gambler that he will be confronted with all the customary situations such as being marked by the crooked gambler for assassination—and being so involved in trouble that he has a difficult time proving his honesty to the honest gambler's daughter. We anticipate all these scenes, and yet their obviousness doesn't detract a single moment of interest—so well has the director fashioned his plot and detail. The wealthy Southerner kills himself before Kirby can restore him his winnings—which brings on the conflict between the youth and the crooked gambler—a conflict which terminates in a duel and death for the crook after a series of melodramatic adventures.

The love interest is well pointed and colors the picture with an adequate vein of sentiment. Gertrude Olmstead and Jean Arthur give mellow performances as the heroine and her companion and Alan Hale and Jack McDonald lend forceful contributions to the interpretation.

THEME. Romantic melodrama of early days on Mississippi steamboats when gambling prevailed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Best acting part John Gilbert ever had. The steamboat race which provides thrills. The atmosphere and settings. The fast-moving climax. The color and detail. The highly creditable support.

DIRECTION. Has established all the color and romance of original play. Is rich in settings and atmosphere. Gets full melodramatic values and keeps the spectator's interest on the alert. Furnishes suspense with steamboat race.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Offers exploitation on title, the fact that it is the work of two famous authors and playwrights. Presents opportunities to put over novel prologue suggestive of the atmosphere of picture. Old-time melodies and dances, etc.

DRAWING POWER. Should interest patrons in any locality.

SUMMARY. The very title of this picture is alluring—and the production itself is high class. A melodrama of the old school made interesting through its action, romance and heart appeal. Well acted by Gilbert and supporting players.

THE CAST

Cameo Kirby	John Gilbert
Adele Randall	Gertrude Olmstead
Colonel Moreau	Alan Hale
Colonel Randell	Eric Mayne
Tom Randall	William E. Lawrence
Cousin Aaron Randell	Richard Tucker
Judge Playdell	Phillips Smalley
Larkin Bunce	Jack McDonald
Ann Playdell	Jean Arthur
Madame Davezac	Eugenie Ford

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. Scenario by Robert N. Lee. Directed by Jack Ford.

SYNOPSIS—Wealthy Southerner is trapped into betting on a fixed steamboat race. Youthful gambler who is honest enters a subsequent poker game and wins the stakes. He intends to turn over his winnings to unfortunate gambler, but the latter kills himself. The youth is wounded in conflict with crooked gambler who establishes himself as avenger of the man who committed suicide. The hero meets the victim's daughter and they fall in love with one another. The complications are eliminated and the romancers find happiness.

The Acquittal

(Universal-Jewel—6523 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AS a rule a picture revolving around a murder trial with most of its action centered in a courtroom setting is inclined to drag inasmuch as there is no novelty introduced into the situations and incident. Here the director has taken Rita Weiman's successful play and worked it out ingeniously with emphasis placed on its treatment of the flashback in the taking of evidence. As a result the suspense is always indicated. Indeed the flashback treatment is the only method which could be used wherein a murder trial furnishes the background.

The picture starts off with a novel touch showing the principal figures involved with the transcript of the evidence. That the scheme of the author and director is to keep one mystified over the actual identity of the murderer—though the evidence is all against the defendant—is established in the manner in which the various figures give their testimony. The transcript is introduced and the action flashes back to each character's evidence. However, there is a gap in the State's case inasmuch as it is never brought forth what caused the death of the victim. It looks to us as if the district attorney relied too much upon circumstantial evidence. Certainly any alert prosecutor wouldn't fail to use every means possible to establish a motive for the crime—even to performing an autopsy on the victim inasmuch as poison is planted as the probable instrument of death.

But eliminating this analysis, the picture is ever interesting—made so by a director who has emphasized the mystery element and brought out the melodramatic detail by taking each witness' evidence. The courtroom episodes—and these take up most of the action—are well executed, and the figures are acted in all sincerity by players chosen for their adaptability. The climax in view of what has preceded it is rather clumsy—for the real assassin—the man who has been on trial confesses to the crime—and it is such a simple confession that it makes the district attorney look incompetent.

The manner in which the defendant is saved by his wife is genuinely novel. Indeed the case hinges on the hour in which the murder is committed. A theatrical touch is indicated when the wife brings in a butcher's scale which as you know always points to the top figure when not in use. It had covered the clock which hung right behind it. Despite the flaws of evidence the picture is a clever melodrama and certain to excite attention and be favorably received.

THEME. Murder mystery melodrama.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The courtroom episodes. The dovetailing of transcript of evidence with testimony of witnesses. The acting. The climax when real criminal is identified. The good settings.

DIRECTION. Gets right into his story and starts it off with mystery element. Plants evidence so that suspense is ever ahead. There are gaps in story which destroy logic, but director has covered them in a creditable manner—so that spectator's interest is on the alert.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title and the cast. Also feature author and fact that play had long run on Broadway. Feature it as one of the most compelling mystery melodramas ever screened. Use cuts of stars with question mark—asking "Who killed Andrew Prentice?"

DRAWING POWER. High class melodrama—should appeal to all classes.

SUMMARY. A first rate mystery melodrama with suspense and interest maintained to finish. Gaps in plot, but story is well treated so that they are not noticeable to any extent. Coutroom sequences well handled.

Slave of Desire

(Goldwyn—7 Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

BALZAC has reached the screen—one of his tales having been modernized for present day fans. Love, adventure and thrills have been woven into a celluloid document of real power, possessing in addition to its entertaining value of high degree a moral that selfishness can lead only to ruin.

Balzac was a student of human nature and his observations on the subject have been written in such a way that they have stood the test of time. To-day his books are still among the most popular of the shelves of the nation. And one of his most fascinating works is "The Wild Ass' Skin," from which this picture is adapted. And all praise to George D. Baker for his finished work.

"Slave of Desire," is a gem of the photographic art, the lightings and camera work being especially good. The plot carries pep, punch and power and is rich in dramatic moments.

Carmel Myers puts over one of the best character portraits of her career as the sorceress. Her gowns will be the talk of the feminine part of any city in which this picture is shown. And it should be shown in every village, town and city of the nation. George Walsh carries the leading role of Raphael, Marquis de Valentin, who, about to end it all in the Seine, is presented with a magic skin with power to bring him anything he desires. With each wish the skin becomes smaller. When it has been reduced to fit the palm of his hand, death is supposed to be near. But his last wish is for someone else—for a change. That unselfish wish saves him and his boyhood sweetheart, while the sorceress passes on into the great beyond.

"Slave of Desire" is a quality picture and should meet with universal approval.

THEME. Filmization of Balzac's love drama which seeks to point out the evils of selfishness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Carmel Myers' characterization of the role of the Countess Fedora. The good support. The atmosphere of Paris. The scenes attending the presentation to the hero of the magic skin. The mountain scenes and avalanche introduced in the dream.

DIRECTION. The plot has been made to flow along smoothly from beginning to end which is a wonderful bit of work considering the difficulty of transferring Balzac to the screen. Good detail. Has builded up to a fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie-up with your literary societies on this one. Play up the fine cast. Get the style shop to co-operate with you on a fashion display using the photos of Miss Myers in her gorgeous gowns. Tell the folks of the fine moral it teaches.

SUMMARY. A high-class picture fit for the best houses in the land. Well acted and directed. Carries that much desired modern ingredient, pep. Characters live in this picture which is a real asset.

THE CAST

Raphael de Valentin	George Walsh
Pauline Gaudin	Bessie Love
Countess Fedora	Carmel Myers
Madame Gaudin	Eulalie Jensen
Rastignac	Wally Van
Gene Dauncourt	William von Hardenburg
Viscount de Champrose	William Orlamond
Duc de Navarreins	George Perliot
Taillefer	Nich de Ruiz
M. Gaudin	Herbert Prior

By Honore de Balzac. Directed by George D. Baker. Scenario by Charles Whittaker and George D. Baker. Photographed by John W. Boyle.

SYNOPSIS—Raphael, a poet, is down and out. A friend introduces him to society. He meets the Countess Fedora who reads his poems and he becomes a national figure over night. He falls desperately in love with the Countess, but she spurns him. Going into an antique shop to pawn a scarab, he is led into the presence of a wise man who presents him with a magic skin. This skin will bring his every wish. But when it reaches the size of the palm of his hand he will be near death, but if unselfishness should enter into his makeup by that time he might be saved.

Shifting Sands

(Hodkinson—5,098 Feet)

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE most obvious treatment of the eternal triangle is exposed here in a picture which is burdened with flowery sub-titles, mediocre acting and errors of omission and commission of production. One of the captions—to illustrate—says of the other man that he is "the type that women adore and men abhor," which isn't a clever way to introduce a character. One becomes quickly antagonistic toward him as a result.

But if that isn't sufficient the role is acted in a most amateurish manner. The manner in which he is introduced is bluntly executed. There is a quarrel between the wife and her husband which terminates when the philanderer hurls a bronze statue at him, leaving him for dead. So they journey to Tripoli where in the course of time the unfaithful spouse tires of him. The convenient note intrudes when the husband's artist friend and daughter meet the woman in Tripoli and promise to care for her little boy. And also for the sake of convenience the wife is accidentally killed when she steps back toward an open window in fear of the trespasser.

The scene shifts to the husband who recovers from his injury with a determination to locate his missing child. He goes to Tripoli too, but circumstances take him to the interior where he is given up as lost. However, before his departure the trend of the story indicates that the wife's demise was permitted to allow the injured husband to have a romance with the artist's daughter.

And so to the climax which introduces a sheik as chieftain of a bandit tribe. He proves to be our villain who is planted in the first scene as a man of French and Arab extraction. So he reverts to type and kidnaps the artist's daughter—who is rescued in the nick of time by the husband, an officer in the Italian army. After a due punishment of the home-wrecker, the unfortunate man is reunited to his boy—the only character to show his age in the lapse of ten years—and finds happiness with the girl.

A clumsily executed story carrying several gaps—but which is neatly mounted insofar as backgrounds are concerned. The Tripoli exteriors resemble the real thing—with the atmosphere suggestive in every detail. The best point is the photography. Gibson Gowland, a good actor when properly cast, is not adaptable to the role of the artist. At that he gives the best performance.

THEME. Domestic triangle revolving around philanderer stealing man's wife and finding punishment in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The exteriors which look like the real thing. The street scenes in some city of Tripoli. The climax showing pursuit of desert bandits. The atmosphere. The photography.

DIRECTION. Never makes his story logical, much of the force of tale being spoiled through the captions which tell too much of the action. Rushes headlong from one scene to another with none of the threads of plot dovetailed. Allows coincidence to mar whatever reality it might possess. Players incapable of getting anything out of their roles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Don't feature this as triangle story, but play it up as modern tale of love and retribution, featuring the desert exteriors and the Tripoli atmosphere. Put on Arabian dances, music, etc., much as "Song of India," or "Less than the Dust," employing adequate color and characters.

DRAWING POWER. For program houses.

SUMMARY. A mediocre story of the eternal triangle, clumsily conceived and directed hap-hazardly. Interest rests in production values—such as atmosphere and settings.

THE CAST

Barbara Thayer	Peggy Hyland
Dr. Willard Lindsay	Lewis Willoughby
Yvonne Lindsay	Mlle. Valia
Pierre Moreau	Richard Atwood
Samuel Thayer	Gibson Gowland
Leroy Lindsay, age 4	Tony Melford
Leroy Lindsay, age 14	Douglas Webster

Directed by Fred Leroy Granville.

SYNOPSIS—Wife leaves her husband after quarrel, and, taking her boy, flees with philanderer. They journey to Tripoli where after a few years she tires of him and longs to be reconciled to husband. The latter follows them to the Orient and refuses to entertain his wife. In fact he has become enamoured with daughter of an artist friend. He joins Italian army and eventually is reunited to his boy and saves the girl from bandit chief—who turns out to the trespasser of his home. The latter meets his death.

Defying Destiny

(Chaudet Production—Selznick—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

LOOKS like Selznick has a box office picture here. Primarily because it is just the type of film play that "the folks back home" like. Tells about the rise and fall and then rise again of a regular American youth with his red-blooded romance appealingly woven into the entire fabric. The picture has a story to tell and in business-like way goes ahead and tells it. There are no frills, no elaborate scenic sideplay, just a regular plain entertaining tale that will please 90 per cent. of film fans.

Monte Blue and Irene Rich co-operate to put this one over. They give convincing performances while their support which includes Jackie Saunders, Russell Simpson, and Tully Marshall is high class.

The plot has all the ingredients of a business getter. Right off the handle we are introduced to a realistic storm and fire in which some thrilling rescues are staged. Then follows some dramatic moments in which the hero is accused of stealing some bank funds, the trial in which he is found not guilty and his fleeing from the town—driven away by public opinion. Then a sequence introduces plastic surgery in which some very prominent scars are removed from the hero's face and he returns to make the town pay. From this point on there is something doing every minute and it all ends as most pictures do—with the little girl in the big man's arms.

Technically the production is well nigh flawless. The sets are artistic and when necessary, as in the club ball scenes, quite elaborate. Photography and lighting are good and the titles are a bit different.

THEME. A romantic drama centering around the life-long love between a daughter of wealth and a son of poverty. Although scarred by flames and public opinion, the man never loses the girl's love and trust.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The splendid acting of Irene Rich and Monte Blue and most of the supporting cast. The thrilling fire and rescue. The court scenes in which hero is exonerated. The moments attending hero's return to the town.

DIRECTION. Chaudet has turned out a bit of real life in a most artistic and convincing manner. He has done it in a simple way. The plot has been made easy to follow and the characterizations are excellently drawn. Has builded up the action to a fine climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES.. Tell your patrons of the fine cast, especially Irene Rich and Monte Blue. Use the black and whites showing Miss Rich in gorgeous costumes in a fashion store window tie-up. Develop the plastic surgery theme into a discussion by local surgeons and ask your editor to run the various opinions.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for large as well as small downtown and neighborhood houses.

SUMMARY. The fine acting of Monte Blue and Irene Rich make this a thoroughly worthwhile piece of film entertainment. The story is not startlingly original, but the way in which it is handled will grip most patrons.

THE CAST

Jack Fenton	Monte Blue
Beth Alden	Irene Rich
Dr. Gregory	Tully Marshall
Mrs. Harris	Jackie Saunders
Sam Harris	Z. Wall Covington
Mr. Wilkens	Russell Simpson
Mr. Alden	James Gordon
Mrs. Alden	Frona Hale
Jack Fenton's aunt	Laura Ames
Promoter	George Rheems

By Grace Sanderson Michie. Directed by Louis William Chaudet.

Photographed by Lenwood Abbott.

SYNOPSIS—Unjustly charged with theft of a bank's funds, youth is exonerated by court trial, but is driven from town by public opinion. In the city to which he flees he is injured when buried under falling debris at a fire, but he recovers and through plastic surgery his scars suffered in a fire in the old town are removed. He returns to the village, where he makes good and wins the banker's daughter.

Ponjola

(Rork—First National—6500 Feet)

(Reviewed by Fred Clements)

AN unusually interesting best seller becomes in its transference to the screen, an unusually interesting photoplay—one saturated with romance and adventure—one which may be catalogued under a familiar formula, but through a clever manipulation of plot and incident, coupled with most effective interpretation—to say nothing of an effective background—takes on a value which will further increase the circulation of the novel and bring a large patronage to the theatre.

The tale is laid in South Africa and features the exploits of a young Englishwoman who journeys to that distant country to escape the clutches of the law. The action starts in Paris and the introductory shots disclose the heroine balked in an effort to commit suicide by a stranger who is returning to South Africa and his promised bride. He takes her into his confidence—and as a result she resolves to forget her suicidal impulse. She even goes so far as to accompany him to South Africa disguised as a man—and right here we wish to state that Anna Q. Nilsson makes a startling appearance in her masquerade and manages to be more convincing than any contemporary who has essayed such a role—and discovers him a drunkard—the instrument of his degeneration being "Ponjola," Kaffir word for whisky.

You may be able to see the plot building all this time—and it does run true to form—but it grips you with its exciting adventure, its love interest and its heart appeal. The regeneration is effected—as it always has been effected whenever the spiritual and sympathetic factors enter—but before the conclusion which reveals the masquerader revealing her identity, one sees the betrayal of the hero by his partner who, to make matters worse, had married the fiancee. The episodes featuring the regeneration are fraught with thrills and lead up to a trial in which the heroine's identity and the past she was running away from are uncovered.

Let it be said that "Ponjola" is expertly acted by Miss Nilsson and James Kirkwood—the latter putting considerable feeling into his expression. Tully Marshall and Joseph Kilgour also contribute effective performances. We will also say that Miss Nilsson did not spare the shears in trimming her locks. It is a regular hair-cut. The picture looks like S. R. O.

THEME. Story of regeneration after hero has sunk to depths—he being rescued by girl whose love and sympathy have been aroused.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Something new in characterization—Anna Q. Nilsson's realistic performance masquerading as a man. The fine acting by James Kirkwood and Tully Marshall. The adventure and thrills. The atmosphere and settings.

DIRECTION. Has taken familiar formula and made it thoroughly interesting by clever handling of situations and details. Gets every ounce of drama from his climaxes. Makes characters real by clever handling of players. Stages it with appropriate atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up with bookdealers on sale of novel. Feature it as one of the biggest sellers. Play up cast—and use stills of Miss Nilsson in her novel characterization.. Put on atmospheric prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for all classes—high and low.

SUMMARY. A very interesting picture on an old theme. Director has kept it moving with crackling incident. Filled with romance and adventure and expertly acted.

THE CAST

Desmond	Anna Q. Nilsson
Lundi Druro	James Kirkwood
Count Blauhimel	Tully Marshall
Conrad Lyplatt	Joseph Kilgour
Eric Luff	Bernard Randall
Gay Lyplatt	Ruth Clifford
Ludhia Luff	Claire DuBrey
Mrs. Hope	Claire McDowell

By Cynthia Stockley. Directed by Donald Crisp

SYNOPSIS—Girl, to avoid tragedy in her life, is about to commit suicide when she is prevented by stranger. He takes her into his confidence and tells her he is returning to South Africa to his promised bride. She decides to accompany him without his knowing her identity—so she cuts her hair and dresses as a man. He becomes a rotter through a partner who has ruined him, but his regeneration is effected by the girl who discloses her real identity.

Book Week Campaign Is Completed

Organizations Pledge Support

BOOK week, conducted annually by the leading book publishers of the country for the past five years, is scheduled this year for the week of November 11 to 17 inclusive. In the past it has been known as Children's Book Week. This year it will be Book Week as well for the grown up.

The movement has the complete cooperation of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, and through that body the cooperation of the National Committee for Better Films. These organizations by various means of exploitation, publicity and advertising have in turn secured complete co-operation from women's clubs, parent-teachers associations, library associations and organized bodies of every character advancing the book week project as a means of arousing the general public interest in the reading of better books and the seeing of better pictures which are made from those selected books. This year a list of 83 pictures have been selected to supplement the 109 on last year's list. These pictures represent the work of fifteen producing concerns.

The aim of those behind the book week project is to have booked in as many picture houses as possible those pictures recommended by the National Committee for Better Films and to make of the display of those pictures the most prosperous week of the year for those exhibitors showing the selected pictures.

The value of the cooperation of the book seller and the exhibitor has been learned to the mutual benefit of both. This has been shown in the past year more than ever before by the way they have functioned together on the presentation of pictures. Scarcely a picture of importance made from a book has been released during the year without the producer immediately securing a national tieup with the book stores.

That picture displays in book stores have been a tremendous aid to local exhibitors there can be no question. Such stores as Gimbel Brothers of New York, Brentanos of New York, Marshall Field, A. C. McClurg, The Fair and Rothchild's of Chicago have devoted whole weeks to special displays of picturized books. These stores have in their daily customers a circulation probably as great as the leading newspapers and the displays are so elaborate that they are directly called to the attention of every customer.

On the other hand the value to the local bookseller of the picture on display at the movie house has been proven beyond the semblance of a doubt. According to publicity matter put out by the book week committee, there are many instances where a book that had little or no sale when introduced proved among the best sellers after it had been advertised for presentation on the screen.

As an instance of this, "Robin Hood" is advanced. It is said that some 40,000 copies of this book were sold within six months following the showing of the Fairbanks picture. Sales on other books that have thrived in a similar way are those on "Manslaughter," from which the Thomas Meighan picture was taken, "Main Street," "The Leather Pushers," "Burning Sands." "The Three Musketeers" and many others.

The National Book Week Committee has built up a splendid clientele through which book week interest is stimulated for both the book seller and the motion picture exhibitor. Supplementing the advertising of the exhibitor and book store is a mouth to mouth advertising campaign which few pictures outside of book week have the advantage of. The project is called directly to the attention of millions through the spoken word.

As an instance of how this campaign functions it is said that over one hundred communications have been sent to national and state presidents of the Federated Women's Clubs urging their support for better pictures and their patronage of those included in Book Week. Replies from these communications in every instance have been to the effect that every encouragement would be given to the idea. This means that the plea to support book week and its pictures will be read before millions of women in cities, towns and villages throughout the United States.

In addition to urging the support of the women the communications addressed to them called attention to the educational, artistic and dramatic values of both the books and the pictures.

Librarians throughout the United States have responded enthusiastically to the stimulation of the book week idea and will encourage the reading of the books and consequently the seeing of the pictures to be displayed during the week. The committee has dispensed over five thousand list and plan leaflets to member libraries of the American Library Association. The libraries consider it a splendid idea for increasing their circulation of good books and have a thorough appreciation of the value of a picture to increase the demand for their product.

Art leagues, civic organizations, public welfare bodies, university extension classes, educational societies, recreational leagues, schools and churches have all been bulletinized as a part of the National plan for drawing attention to this splendid book week movement. Ordinary projects upon which similar attempts have been made for publicity purposes usually meet with a cool reception through these channels. Such communications find their way into waste paper baskets, but in this instance thousands of replies have been received urging more information as to how help may be given and bearing copies of resolutions endorsing Book Week as a project worthy of the support of all.

With the foundation laid nationally the exhibitor has an unparalled opportunity to function through the same channels locally in making the week even more successful than it has been in the past. Approximately fifteen thousand letters have been sent to exhibitors apprising them of all of the details of the plan and telling them of the organizations in their local communities that have replied enthusiastically to the proposition or have been bulletinized regarding it. Every local exhibitor will find a number of local organizations ready to respond to his plea to make the Motion Picture Book Week a tremendous success. They are only too willing to publicize a movement that is fostered by the best book publishing concerns, the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures and the National Committee for Better Films. The general public knows with this exploitation behind the books to be read and the pictures to be shown there is no buncombe attached to the movement.

Grosset and Dunlap, publishers of New York City, have sent return postcards to every theatre manager in the country accompanying literature with regard to book week. These cards read as follows:

"I have received your announcements and shall be very glad to cooperate with your local book sellers. Please send me their names and addresses."

These cards have been coming back to the publishing house by every mail and the desired information has immediately been forwarded to the exhibitor. It seems likely that a complete tieup will be effected by bookstores and exhibitors well in advance of the actual opening of Book Week. With this link firmly established it should be an easy matter to weld the complete chain with local organizations that will make this the greatest publicity campaign ever waged in the interest of books and pictures.

Putnam's Sons Endorse Book Week Idea

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, publishers of New York City, are another publishing concern that have entered heartily into the spirit of book week and are urging the fullest co-operation between publisher and bookseller. "Ponjola," a Cynthia Stockley book from which the First National picture was made is a product of Putnam's Sons and one which has been aided materially by the issuance of the picture.

Another of their publications "That Marvel—the Movie," is one that should be read by every one connected with the industry, for it gives the history and the facts about the industry and points out its power for good or evil. The volume contains an introduction by Will H. Hays. The New York Times referred to it as "a most interesting study of the moving pictures. The whole volume is sincere and frank."

"Try and Get It" Among Popular Pictures

WHILE the best of pictures for display before all types of audiences are being selected that of the Grand-Asher Distributing Corporation "Try and Get It," cannot be overlooked. It is a production that gives promise of exceptional results in the large cities or the smallest communities.

Bryant Washburn Productions, Inc., is the producing company and the story is adapted from that famous tale of Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., "The Ringtailed Galliwampus."

Rarely has a more evenly balanced cast been selected than for "Try and Get It." In addition to Bryant Washburn, the star, it includes Billie Dove, Edward Horton, Joseph Kilgour, Rose Dione, Carl Stockdale, Lionel Belmore and Hazel Deane. Cullen Tate is the director and the story was adapted by Jules Furthman. Photography was by Kenneth McLean.

CABLE ADDRESS
"GROSLAP"

October 1st, 1923.

Dear Mr. Exhibitor:

A few years ago we would not have felt that we could address a letter to the Moving Picture Exhibitor without an introduction beforehand. In those days, however, the Producers were not making their biggest successes from popular novels, while now--well, just glance at the page opposite this one and you will see a few of the Fall releases which were all produced from Grosset & Dunlap books.

Last season saw some splendid co-operation on the part of the Moving Picture Exhibitor and the bookseller in the same town on big productions like "The Christian" "When Knighthood Was in Flower", "The Flirt", "Robin Hood", "The Prisoner of Zenda" and many others. But it was only a start. This year will find more and more of the very biggest pictures produced from books which are being advertised all through the country in the way that counts the most -- by word of mouth.

We feel that the sale of hundreds of thousands of these books which have supplied the stories for the pictures you are exhibiting has publicity value to you, just as we feel that the tremendous amount of advertising which you and the Producers are doing for the pictures is worth something to the man who is selling the books. By combining the publicity both the Exhibitor and the bookseller will do a bigger business.

And so we are suggesting here that you take the list of Books on the opposite page and call on your nearest book merchant and hold a conference with him on the promotion of the big pictures listed on that page. Ask him to give you a window display of the book. Tell him that you in return will supply him with display materials and other assistance. You will find in most cases he has already been primed by the Grosset & Dunlap salesman who calls on him and he will be more than ready to co-operate with you. Where you worked together last year you will find him enthusiastic over the picture tie-up.

Any information or any assistance within our power will be cheerfully furnished if you will drop us a letter at any time.

Very truly yours,

GROSSET & DUNLAP

Save This Page!

This page shows only a few of the big photoplay productions made from Grosset & Dunlap books. Hundreds of thousands of these books in the attractive 75 cent edition are being sold in stores all over the country. Save this page. Consult your date book on these productions and then arrange with the book dealer in your community for a tie-up that will make money for both of you!

TO THE LAST MAN

by Zane Grey

Paramount has spent thousands of dollars in publicity and advertising for this great Zane Grey title produced from the book which has just been released in the Grosset & Dunlap edition. It is a fighting story of the west of the same epic proportions as "The Covered Wagon."

Every copy of a photoplay book sold means that the interest of a family is behind it—and that means the interest of hundreds of people in your town. Don't forget the importance of the man who sells the book from which the picture is made!

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK

by Rida J. Young

A truly great production is this picture in which Marion Davies stars. And the book is equally delightful. Here again you have the opportunity to exploit a book which has never been published before. Thousands of copies were sold during the New York run of the picture.

THE WHITE SISTER

by F. Marion Crawford

The beautiful Lillian Gish production of this most dramatic of all Marion Crawford's romances is on a par with pictures like "Robin Hood" and "Scaramouche." It will make hundreds of thousands of people want to read this poignant story of a beautiful nun's love.

CALL OF THE WILD

by Jack London

As Jack London wrote "The Call of the Wild" around the life of a dog, so has the picture been filmed. It is Buck's joys and sorrows and career that are dominant. This is the great author's best known hook and critics are unanimous in saying it is his best.

PENROD AND SAM

by Booth Tarkington

This picture based on Booth Tarkington's favorite book, has proved since its release in June to be one of the most successful features ever released by First National. Every dealer who has tied up with the picture has sold the book in remarkable quantities.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN

by Gene Stratton-Porter

Here is the book put into pictures exactly as Mrs. Porter wanted it to be. A beautiful story of an American boy, a book that sells almost as readily as when it was first published, it is now being released throughout the country by W. W. Hodkinson as a splendid photoplay.

SCARAMOUCHE

by Rafael Sabatini

A tremendous Rex Ingram Metro production with a cast of 10,000 has been made from this great book. Every bookseller has an opportunity here for one of the greatest Fall and Holiday sales in the history of Reprints. You can sell hundreds no matter what the size of your community is.

THE LONE STAR RANGER

by Zane Grey

Tom Mix in a Fox Superspecial—that is what you have to tie up with this dramatic Zane Grey novel of which something like six hundred thousand copies have already been sold. You will sell hundreds before Christmas!

RUPERT OF HENTZAU

by Anthony Hope

A Selznick all-star production on the same superb scale as the picture of which it is the sequel, "The Prisoner of Zenda." The photoplay has just been released after a successful run in New York, and it is taking the country by storm.

THE CHEAT

by Russell Holman and Hector Turnbull

This book has never appeared in print before. It is a novel based on the story by Hector Turnbull which has been released by Paramount as a great Pola Negri Special Production. Here you have a $2.00 book to sell for seventy-five cents.

RUGGLES OF RED GAP

by Harry Leon Wilson

Paramount Pictures have made a corking photoplay from this book, directed by James Cruze of "Covered Wagon" fame. With all the publicity the picture will arouse and the success of this author's other books, you can sell a lot of "Ruggles."

THE COMMON LAW

by Robert W. Chambers

Selznick have produced a film masterpiece from this most popular of all Robert W. Chamber's stories. It is daring yet clean, with a galaxy of stars such as is seldom gathered into one picture. A beautiful new edition of the book liberally illustrated from scenes in the photoplay is now available.

MAIN STREET

by Sinclair Lewis

As the big Warner Bros. photoplay gets wider distribution booksellers will have one of the most splendid tie-ups ever offered. The book sells big on its own merits, but where dealers will tie up with the picture the sales will be phenomenal for a long time to come.

FIGHTING BLOOD

by H. C. Witwer

This book will outsell even "The Leather Pushers." The pictures (released by F. B. O.) are showing all over the country, and since they come in installments, the publicity is continuous. Thousands of men will buy this book in the Popular Copyright edition.

GROSSET & DUNLAP - PUBLISHERS - 1140 Broadway, New York City

Grosset, Dunlap Pioneer of Plan

Appreciate Full Co-operation

NO BOOK publishing concern in the United States realizes more fully than Grosset and Dunlap the value of co-operation between the bookseller and the motion picture exhibitor. Grosset and Dunlap have books to sell and the exhibitor has pictures to sell. The publishers know that the showing of pictures made from their books materially helps in the selling of the books. They also know that every book they sell from which a picture is made makes customers for the motion picture house.

Consequently Grosset and Dunlap are doing everything in their power to line up local booksellers everywhere to swing behind and co-operate with local motion picture houses everywhere. They are bulletinizing the booksellers and they are bulletinizing the picture houses, urging them to get together to their mutual advantage, for they regard it a fifty-fifty proposition between them.

Samuel A. Jenkins, advertising Manager of Grosset and Dunlap, was among the first in the publishing game to realize the publicity possibilities between the exhibitor and the bookseller and he pioneered the movement for co-operation. That Grosset and Dunlap have realized handsomely from his foresight there can be little doubt. That the exhibitors have profited in the same way is evidenced by the fact that every picture now produced from a book seeks the National book store tieup.

Mr. Jenkins's enthusiastic comment on the movement was as follows:

"It seems a strange thing to me that even more motion picture exhibitors and booksellers are not giving each other the benefit of all of the publicity they can. The more books that are sold the more people will go to the picture houses to compare the picture with the book. The issuance of a book previous to the showing of the picture has untold value for the exhibitor. If this was not so there would not be so many books picturized. The producers of pictures know this. They know that the books create a ready market for their pictures. Take any of the most popular fiction of the last year and see the prices that are being paid for the picture rights to the book. Why there is scarcely a book published nowadays that does not find its way into the picture studio.

"Take the motion picture critics as a basis for the value of a book for picture purposes or vice versa. What is the principal thing the reviewer criticises? He immediately compares the book with the picture or the picture with the book. If that was not what his public wanted the critic would not make the comparison.

"Before it became a general thing for books to be made into pictures you would not find stores like Marshall Field and Gimbel Brothers featuring their show windows with a whole week's display of picture editions of popular stories. One has made the demand for the other and both have benefitted mutually."

Grosset and Dunlap have launched a wonderfully effective publicity campaign in an effort to get the fullest co-operation between the exhibitor and bookseller. A big double truck of newspaper size on exceptionally fine embossed paper with two-color cuts of displays in leading store windows in principal cities throughout the United States is being forwarded by them to both booksellers and exhibitors in every city in the country.

In it the message to the bookseller is as follows:

"If a book was largely advertised in your town by billboard posting, large and small, in the newspapers, on the trolley cars, and in all sorts of places, you would be very keen to get the full benefit of this advertising, wouldn't you? You would make a wonderful display. You would feature it in the front part of your store and in your window, and incidentally, you would put an ad in your local newspaper to the effect that you had this book to sell. Well, all this is being done in your town right now, almost every week, and you are getting it all for nothing. How far have you linked up this publicity?

"One of the biggest factors in bringing new buyers into your store is the display of motion picture titles for the name of the book has been so very largely advertised by the motion picture exhibitor right in your own town that it attracts the attention of the young woman in particular and of nearly everybody in general, many of whom become your regular customers. In the ordinary course of events it would be the work of years to attract all these people to your store."

And to the bookseller, exhibitor and publisher, Grosset and Dunlap sends this message:

"Bookseller, exhibitor and publisher should get together! We are sending over 7,000 moving picture exhibitors a broadside similar to this one, calling their attention to the real opportunity for a close link-up between the motion picture and the book.

"Do you know that more than $40,000 has frequently been paid for the picture rights to a good story? There must be some wonderful, interesting material in these stories to induce shrewd business people like the moving picture producers to pay this sum.

"Nearly all of the big titles from which the big moving pictures have been made recently are in the Grosset and Dunlap Popular Copyright list. Here's your opportunity to link up with the exhibitor in your town.

"Among the many methods for selling more moving picture titles, we simply mention a few of the obvious and natural ones. First, advertise them in your local newspaper when the theatre is advertising the photoplay. Next, get an announcement in the lobby of the theatre itself. Distribute an ad of the book in the theatre or put an ad in the theatre program. Use our slides on the screen in the local theatre. These are a few of the many ways that can be worked to advantage. Continuous, insistent, persistent effort is bound to bring satisfactory results."

According to figures submitted by Grosset and Dunlap approximately fifty per cent. more books have been picturized during the past twelve months than in twelve months previous to that time. Not less than thirty books were filmatized in a very big way last year, and indications are that an even greater number will be made into pictures in the coming twelve months.

Just how popular these books have become as a result of the motion picture advertising and the advertising of the publishers and booksellers may be judged by the fact that books which have had little or no sale for some time have increased to twenty, thirty and forty thousand copies within six months following the word that the book was to be picturized or that it was about to be shown on the screen.

Inexpensive editions of Grosset and Dunlap publications have been much in demand following such pictures as "To the Last Man," "Fighting Blood," "Under the Red Robe," "Penrod and Sam," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Manslaughter," "Peg O' My Heart," "The Flirt," "The Christian," "Rupert of Hentsau," "Truxton King," "The Leather Pushers," "The Rustle of Silk," "The Ragged Edge," "The Bondboy," "The Girl of the Golden West." "Michael O'Halloran," "Masters of Men."

The result of this pioneer work on the part of Grosset and Dunlap is certain to be tremendous, both in the field of motion pictures and in the field of books. The sale of the popular price photoplay editions of the books brings them within the reach of all, and the showing of screen versions of these same stories will attract to them a new class of readers, with consequent benefit to the bookseller.

YOUR BIGGEST BET for NATIONAL BOOK WEEK NOV. 11th-17th

"Lorna Doone" represents by a long shot, one of the biggest bets for your box-office, during National Book Week, that the market offers today.

Here is a classic that has been read, and loved for three generations and a book that is known all over the civilized world.

In addition to its popularity as a novel, take this into consideration; Maurice Tourneur made a picture from the book that ranks as one of the finest things this industry has ever seen and that this production is receiving the greatest national tie-up through book stores, music stores, jewelers, shoe stores, department stores and the National Biscuit Company salesmen that any picture has ever received.

So—we repeat—"Lorna Doone" is your biggest bet for the week of November 11th to 17th.

Twelve Universal Features to Be Displayed

IT is not strange that twelve of the Universal features have been selected for book week showing, for the Universal organization is turning largely to books from which to get its productions.

What has been voted one of the greatest pictures of all time is "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," from which Lon Chaney wins the reputation as the greatest character actor of the screen. His portrayal of the crippled creature has been hailed as a masterpiece wherever the picture has been shown. "The Hunchback" boasts some of the largest sets and greatest mob scenes of all time.

There is little to choose between the Universal pictures. They are all equally good and they cover a wide variety of subjects. There is Jack London's story, "The Abysmal Brute," a tale of a nice boy forced into prize fighting, with Reginald Denny in the feature role. "The Leather Pushers" is a series of two-reelers written by H. C. Witwer, in which Denny is also the star. No more humorous nor clever short stories have been transposed to the screen.

"The Flirt," a Booth Tarkington story, has been among the popular releases of the season and is receiving exceptional notices wherever it is shown. Others in the Universal list are: "Another Man's Shoes," with Herbert Rawlinson; "The Bolted Door," with Frank Mayo; "A Chapter in Her Life," with Jane Nevier; "Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande," a Western with Hoot Gibson; "The Power of a Lie," with an all-star cast; "The Prisoner," with Herbert Rawlinson; "The Ramblin' Kid," a horse race story with Hoot Gibson, and "The Scarlet Car," with Herbert Rawlinson.

Exceptional Goldwyn Pictures Are Selected

OUT of the selections made for Book Week no better choices could be made than those produced by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. There are nine of them and they include the most successful productions of the screen. It is an aggregation of pictures that any producing concern could well be proud of.

Rex Beach's "The Spoilers" is a tale that has been very widely read and one of the most popular stories of that popular author. It is a yarn of the Alaska gold rush days with the most realistic fight that has ever been seen on the screen. Milton Sills and Anna Q. Nilsson head an exceptional cast.

"Brothers Under the Skin" is from the pen of that master of literature and fiction Peter B. Kyne. It is a comedy of husbands dealing with obstreperous wives and is told only as a Kyne can tell it. Helene Chadwick and Pat O'Malley head the cast.

"The Christian," taken from the Hall Caine novel, has Richard Dix and Mae Busch in the leading roles. It tells the well known story of conflict of an Anglican Priest between love and duty.

No stronger nor more popular picture has appeared on the screen recently than "Enemies of Women," from the Vicente Blasco Ibanez novel, a drama of the degenerate days of the Czar. Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens head an exceptional cast.

Other pictures selected from the Goldwyn list are, "The Green Goddess," with George Arliss; "The Ragged Edge," with Mimi Palmeri and Alfred Lunt; "Souls for Sale," with a complete list of filmdom stars; "The Strangers' Banquet," with an all-star cast, and "Vanity Fair," the William Makepeace Thackeray masterpiece, with Mabel Ballin.

Selznick Pictures Chosen for Book Week

AMONG the pictures adjudged especially suitable for Book Week showing are eight which are in the hands of Selznick for distribution. They are, "The Bohemian Girl," "The Cricket on the Hearth," "Milady." "Prince and the Pauper," "Prince of a King," "Toilers of the Sea" "Rupert of Hentzau," "Timothy's Quest."

"Rupert of Hentzau" is one of the most elaborate pictures ever shown on the silver sheet. An Anthony Hope story, it culminates the romance of Rassendyll and the Queen of Ruratania. Its costuming is gorgeous and its settings as extensive as those of the great costume pictures. One of the widest read of books it will appeal to young and old for book week showing. The cast, an all-star one, is equal in every way to the production.

"Toilers of the Sea" is taken from the famous Victor Hugo story, which has been read by millions of readers. It is an Italian fishing village story and boasts an all-star cast.

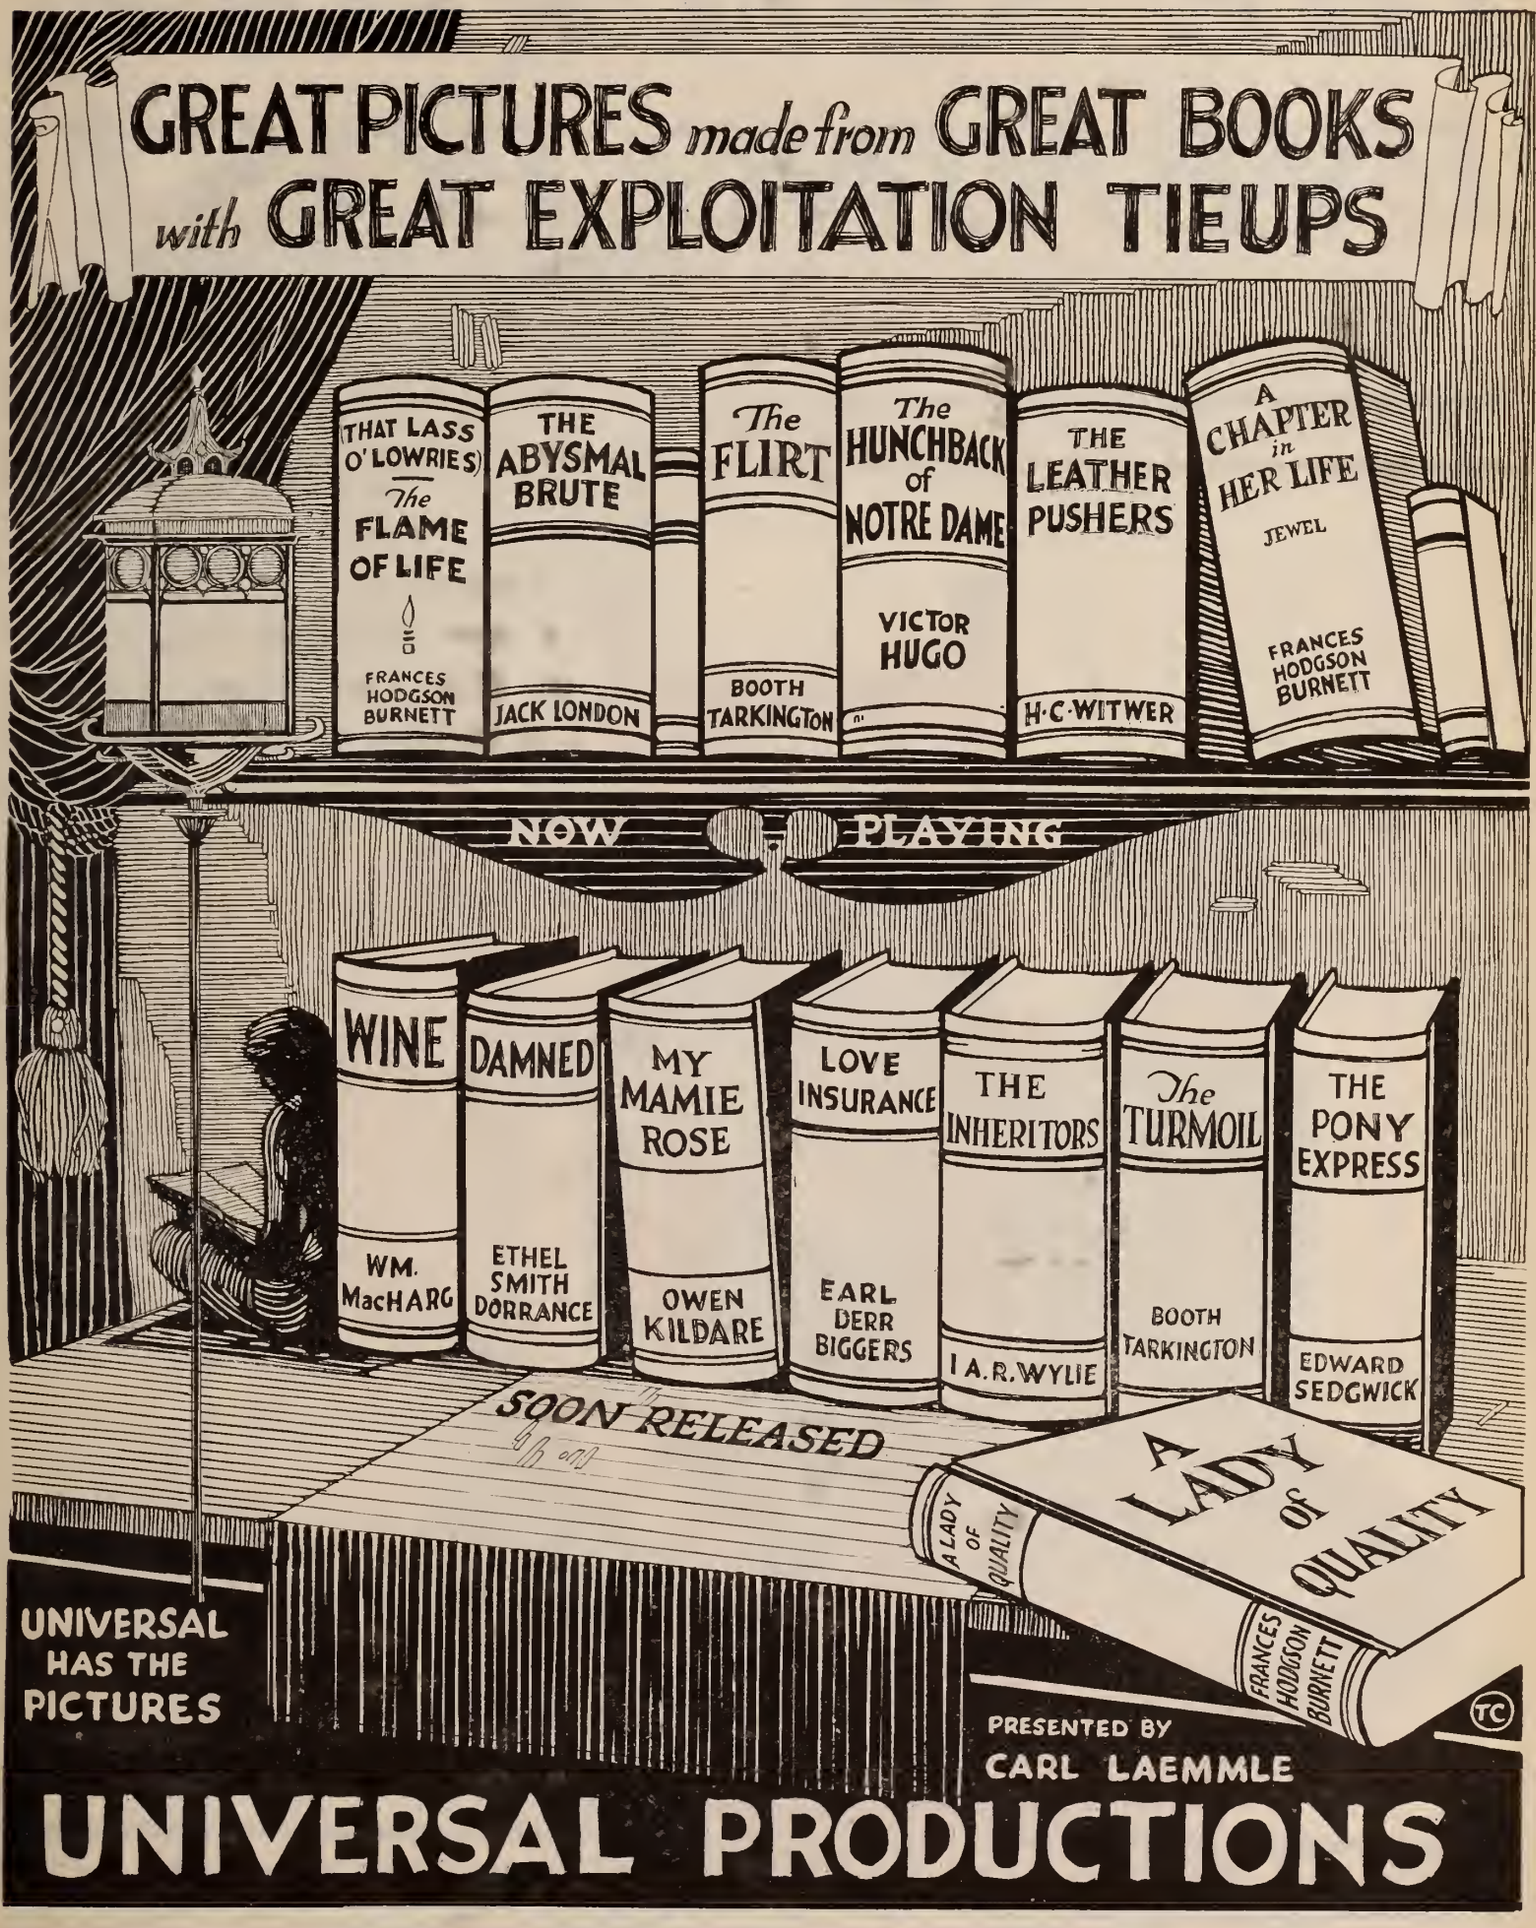
"Timothy's Quest" is by that much beloved authoress, Kate Douglas Wiggin, and tells of the humanizing of a New England Spinster by two children. Master Joseph Depew is featured in the picture.

"The Bohemian Girl" is too well known as an opera to need much reference. It recounts the romantic drama of the girl kidnapped by Gypsies and its appeal on the screen is even stronger than it was on the operatic stage. The popular Ivor Novello is the featured player. "The Cricket on the Hearth" is another of the popular Charles Dickens' stories that will remain a classic as long as the human race endures. The story is of a toymaker and his blind daughter and the cast is an all-star one.

Ten Are Selected from First National List

FIRST NATIONAL fared exceptionally well in the selection of pictures for Motion Picture Book Week by the National Board of Review. No less than ten of their productions are included in the list and the majority of them have an equally strong appeal for old and young. Taken from such classics as "Oliver Twist," "Toby Tyler," "Omar the Tentmaker," "Penrod and Sam," "Potash and Perlmutter" and others they must of necessity be included in the showing of pictures taken from the most popular stories.

No pictures have a more popular appeal to the younger element than those in which Jackie Coogan is the star. And the younger element includes all those aged from seven to seventy. Jackie is the star of two of the First National selected pictures, "Circus Days" and "Oliver Twist."



Where is the kid of any age who does not await the coming of the circus? In this picture made from the story "Toby Tyler" from the pen of James Otis by Jackie's parents every element of appeal in the circus is included. Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coogan, adapting the story for their own child, have included every element within the scope of Jackie's talents. It is the story of the small boy working in the circus to support his mother and the drama and pathos are generously interspersed with the well known brand of Coogan humor.

And aside from in "Circus Days," where could Jackie be seen to better advantage than in that leading classic of Charles Dickens, "Oliver Twist"? It is as the ragged little urchin that Jackie has probably been liked the best. No picture has ever showed him more likable than as the urchin in Oliver Twist, the tool of Fagan, the fence. No picture has a bigger appeal to young and old generally than one which depicts the slums of London as they were known and pictured by Charles Dickens.

The First National pictures include the best known stars in these stories selected for book week. There is Dorothy Gish in "The Bright Shawl." with Richard Barthelmess in the leading male role. This is regarded one of the best of the many Joseph Hergsheimer stories. And this same pair of stars are seen in "Fury," from the pen of Edmund Goulding.

Then there is "Money, Money, Money," with Katherine MacDonald as the star. And "The Fighting Blade," by Beulah Marie Dix, with Richard Barthelmess as the star.

"Omar the Tentmaker" is one of the most successful stage plays of all time and critics have said it has improved with the picturization. Guy Bates Post, star of the stage play, is also the picture star. "Potash and Perlmutter" is another of the most successful stage plays included in the First National List. "The Voice from the Minaret" shows the popular Norma Talmadge to splendid advantage.

Ponjola

Cynthia Stockley

A great story it is—of the gold fields of Rhodesia—of the wild, adventurous life on the African veldt—of a girl disguised as a man who saves her lover from the curse of ponjola, Africa's poison drink. Read PONJOLA. It's great. $2.00.

That Marvel—The Movie

By Edward S. Van Zile

The author of this volume has a tremendous theme—and the possibilities which open up before the universal language of moving pictures are almost infinite in their variety and incalculable in their importance. His book, "That Marvel—The Movies," gives the history and the facts about the industry and points out its power for good or evil. The volume contains an introduction by Will H. Hays.

The New York "Times" calls it "a most interesting study of the moving pictures. The whole volume is sincere and frank." At all bookstores. $2.00.

Pictures Selected for Book Week

National Board of Review Announces Complete List For Special Showing

THE list of books selected this year by the National Board of Review for showing during Book Week could hardly be improved upon. All of them have a book source and were reviewed and selected by the disinterested volunteer committees of the Board within the past twelve months.

The success of Children's Book Week has led to the extension of the idea to include pictures based on literature even where both picture and source are distinctly for adults.

The complete list of selected stories follow:

Alice Adams, David Copperfield, The Destroying Angel, Lady Godiva, Silas Marner, The Bright Shawl, Circus Days, The Fighting Blade, Fury, Money, Money, Money, Oliver Twist, Omar the Tentmaker, Penrod and Sam, Potash and Perlmutter, Voice from the Minaret, Canyon of the Fools, Fighting Blood, Flying Dutchman, Our Mutual Friend, Snow Shoe Trail, Thelma, Brass Commandments, If Winter Comes, Just Tony, Lone Star Ranger, Mixed Faces, Monna Vanna, Monte Christo, St. Elmo, Snowdrift, Truxton King, Village Blacksmith, Brothers Under the Skin, Christian, Enemies of Women, Green Goddess, Ragged Edge, Souls for Sale, Spoilers, Strangers' Banquet, Vanity Fair, Affairs of Lady Hamilton, Down to the Sea in Ships, Puritan Passions, All the Brothers Were Valiant, Famous Mrs. Fair, Fog, Hearts Aflame, Quincy Adams Sawyer, Scaramouche, Where the Pavement Ends, Call of the Wild, Without Benefit of Clergy, Shadows, Virginian, Bohemian Girl, Cricket on the Hearth, Milady, Prince and the Pauper, Prince of a King, Toilers of the Sea, Rupert of Hentzau, Timothy's Quest, Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, Garrison's Finish, Richard the Lion Hearted, Salome, Suzannah, Tess of the Storm Country, The Abysmal Brute, Another Man's Shoes, The Bolted Door, A Chapter in Her Life, Don Quickshot of the Rio Grande, The Flirt, The Hunchback of Notre Dame, Leather Pushers, The Power of a Lie, The Prisoner, The Ramblin' Kid, The Scarlet Car, Masters of Men, Brass, A Dangerous Adventure, Main Street.

Offer Many Advertising Mediums

Exhibitors Booking Book Week Pictures to Receive Splendid Support

EXCHANGES representing companies which have been fortunate enough to have some of their pictures included for showing during Book Week, November 11 to 17 promise the exhibitor the fullest cooperation in the way of exploitation and publicity aids. Every effort is to be made this year to publicize book week as it has never been publicized before.

In addition to all those publicity mediums that have been outlined in this Book Week section, slides may be introduced in the theatres announcing Book Week Pictures. Most of the companies will furnish stills to the exhibitors for posting in libraries, book stores and wherever else they can be displayed to advantage.

An attractive one-sheet poster, "Motion Picture Book Week," in colors for young people's and family performances can be obtained at ten cents each from the principal exchanges or from the National Committee for Better Films. The books themselves should be exhibited in book stores and libraries. Newspapers will give space to the performance as a community event.

The theatre is the logical and popular place for the exhibition of these films. If, however, no theatre should be available, they might be rented for use in school, library, church or other auditorium.

In booking these pictures recommended for Book Week it should be remembered that to capitalize fully on the week the exhibitor needs only to follow out the leads already established for him and to take advantage of all those offered. It must be remembered at all times that the movement has the unanimous support of hundreds of thousands outside of the picture industry.

The majority of exhibitors have been endeavoring for a long time to make of their house a popular community center. This movement affords the exhibitor an opportunity to establish himself in that direction.

Women's Clubs, churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, Y. W. C. A.'s, fraternal organizations, school authorities, civic leaders, charitable organizations and all other organized bodies are heartily in accord with Book Week. The pictures to be displayed were chosen only after the most careful consideration in the hope that they were just what the public wanted for such an occasion. This seems to be the unparalleled chance to cash in.

Grosset, Dunlap Offer Good Advice

Here are some words of advice from Grosset and Dunlap, by using which the bookseller and exhibitor can realize handsomely, the Exhibitor through book week and the book seller for a considerable period thereafter:

"Set aside a week right now! Call on your nearest exhibitor with your plan and let him read what one store did with the cooperation of the picture people, and get him to supply you with stills, posters and other accessories. Let Grosset & Dunlap help you. Write for generous advertising materials. But remember that you can't put on a display of this kind unless you have the books to back it up. Attend to that first of all."

Regional News From Correspondents

Washington

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal, visited his Washington branch last week. Later he went to Baltimore, accompanied by Manager H. S. Brown of the local office.

Attending the weekly grievance and arbitration committee meeting of the Maryland, D. C., and Virginia Film Board, Friday, were Harry Bernstein of the Virginia exhibitors, Frank Durkee of the Maryland Exhibitors' League, and Proprietor Frylander of the Roosevelt (colored, film), theatre in Baltimore.

Miss Odom, executive clerk of the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture censors, was a visitor at the local exchanges, Friday. She is quoted as saying that few deletions have been made necessary in recent films passed by the Maryland board.

President R. Clinton Robin (Pathe manager) and Executive Committee Secretary J. A. Bachman (Educational exchange manager) of the F-I-L-M Board of Trade in the Washington region, announce the recent appointment of J. F. Driscoll, formerly of Bayonne, N. J., as executive and corresponding secretary of the regional board, effective at once. Mr. Driscoll has recently graduated from the Georgetown University Law School.

Manager F. L. McNamee announces the following changes in the personnel of Washington branch of F. B. O. exchanges: Miss "Pat" Shobert has been promoted to confidential secretary to the manager. While familiarizing herself with the new duties, she is breaking in her successor as contract clerk, Miss Aline Roberts.

Harry M. Crandall left Friday for French Lick Springs, Indiana, to attend the fall convention of First National's regional franchise holders.

The Baltimore News, which runs a two and one-half page dramatic and film section on Monday evenings, has made a new feature in the shape of pen and ink drawings of Baltimoreans owning, operating or managing the city's dramatic enterprises. A recent subject was Frank R. Durkee, head of the chain, composed of the Palace, Belnord, Faust, Schanze, Patterson and Community theatres. The caption noted that "Mr. Durkee, who is president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Maryland, is the Maryland representative on the Washington regional F-I-L-M Board of Trade's joint exchange-exhibitor arbitration and grievance committee." When in Washington, Mr. Durkee told the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative that the Patterson theatre, which at present is a 600-seat neighborhood house, was being remodeled by the addition of a balcony, and by other structural changes and improvements, so that it will be, in the near future, a thoroughly modern theatre in the 900 to 1,000-seat house class.

It is announced that a new picture theatre, to be known as The Community Playhouse, will open its doors shortly, at Elkton, Md.

Chincoteague Island, Va., is soon to have two thoroughly modern picture theatres. As previously noted, one is being financed by the Lewis-Insley-Henderson-Sully Eastern Shore Tri-State circuit. The other projected theatre is being erected by J. T. Powell, of the island, who for several years has operated the venerable Chincoteague Opera House. The antiquated play-house in which many barnstormers and stage celebrities of other days have appeared, will be scrapped, following the opening of Powell's new auditorium.

Jake Flax of the Liberty-Federal Film Exchanges, Inc., recently motored to Chincoteague Island by the new Causeway route. He was accompanied by Herndon Edmunds, of the Washington office of Metro.

As a symbol of the return of normal seasonal business in Baltimore film theatres, the daily movie chart of the Baltimore News this past week listed thirty-three theatres as showing films. The list was headed by the Schubert-Academy, under lease to Marcus Loew and the Metro Pictures Corporation, for the Baltimore run of "Scaramouche," now entering its fourth week in Baltimore. Later the Carl Laemmle production of Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" is to be shown there, followed by "The Covered Wagon." Following the special engagement theatres, are listed the other thirty-two film houses, both first run and neighborhood classes being included. However, there are at least forty film theatres now in operation, according to Mr. Durkee, as a dozen of the smaller white, and colored theatres do not carry daily advertising. The thirty-two theatres listed are: Apollo, Aurora, Belnord, Blue Bell, Boulevard, Bridge, Broadway, Capital, Clover, Cluster, Colonial, Columbia, Garden, Good Time, Grand, Hampden, Harford, Hippodrome, Horn, Lafayette, McCoy, McHenry, Metropolitan, New, Palace, Parkway, Pimlico, Princess, Rialto, Rivoli, Walbrook, Wizard, and York theatres.

Frederick, Md., is getting a new movie novelty at the hands of W. O. L. Decker and the Tri-State theatre circuit of the Blue Ridge states. Known as the "Frederick News" this local movie reel is to be shown at the City Opera House once a month. The October release was shown last Wednesday and Thursday, and shows local people in the many historic and picturesque "locations," in and near Frederick.

Joseph Young, manager of Preferred Pictures, announces the appointment of H. R. Murray, formerly with F. B. O. exchanges in the Pittsburgh and Washington territories as salesman for Maryland and Virginia, succeeding Mr. Earps, who has entered the service of Louis Reichert, regional manager for Selznick Distributing Corporation, and is covering portions of Tidewater, Virginia, and North Carolina for the Washington Selznick exchange.

J. M. Collins of Richmond, Va., has sold his interest in the Hippodrome theatre at Covington, Va., to Mr. Sherrill, who is now operating it.

A. T. Howison of New York, is the latest addition to the recently depleted sales force of the local Paramount exchange. Miss Agnes Raffo is the latest annexation to the film inspection staff of the exchange.

The Capital (girls) Athletic Club, organized by Mrs. Locher and her private secretary, has received quite a bit of notice on its fall and winter swimming program in the Sunday paper pink sporting sections, photos of the girls and an account of their program being conspicuously played up.

Assistant General Manager John J. Payette of the Crandall contingent, accompanied by Manager E. A. Sherwood, of the Exhibitors' Film Service exchange, spent several days of last week in New York City to see the World Series. General Manager Joseph P. Morgan and Mrs. Morgan entrained Wednesday for the Metropolis, also to act as special observers at the Polo Grounds.

Samuel M. Boyd, private secretary to Harry M. Crandall, owner of the Crandall amusement activities and of the First National franchise, is being overwhelmed with congratulations. Mr. Boyd, who recently served as secretary to the managerial-union joint arbitral board that terminated satisfactorily the wage dispute, and is permanent secretary of the Washington Exhibitors' League, has just been admitted to the Bar of the District of Columbia. Sam graduated from Georgetown Law School last year. He worked day and night at the Crandall executive offices while studying Blackstone and Coke, attending classes and passing all examinations.

The Savoy theatre at Wilmington, Delaware, has changed its policy for a short time, and is featuring revivals of film favorites in productions of two or more years ago.

The Lyric theatre at Frostburg, Md., took care of local ball game fans during the recent World Series by the installatoin of an electric scoreboard.

S. B. Lust of Super-Films, Washington, has spent a couple of weeks in Baltimore advancing the showing at Loew's Hippodrome, there, of "Deserted at the Altar." His Baltimore aide, H. H. Hartlove, drives around Baltimore in his sedan with a wax model, dressed as a bride, bearing the legend, "I was Deserted at the Altar." A stage wedding is to be given on the Hippodrome stage. The same extensive and thorough exploitation employed by Mr. Lust in Wilmington, Del., and Richmond and Norfolk, Va., and other cities, is to be used throughout the Baltimore campaign.

Sam Lust, brother of Sidney B. Lust, is to marry Miss Helen Hayden shortly. Sam is in the shipping section of Preferred Pictures exchange here.

Miss Mildred Crandall, now a student in National Park Seminary, Washington, D. C., was favored by the society editor of The Sunday Herald with a finely reproduced photo and the announcement that father H. M. Crandall's new home at 16th and Buchanan streets will be ready prior to Miss Mildred's formal debut.

Film premieres to be held here shortly are the southern premiere of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the first local showing to the public of "The Covered Wagon," Griffith's "The White Sister," and the national premiere of Cecil B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments." The local presentation of "Little Old New York" is to be at the Rialto.

Film Flashes From the Florida Territory

CHARLIE SAPPAL, who operates the Maceo, Tampa, is making some history. The Maceo is for the exclusive patronage of colored people, and what acts, or shows, he has used in his house have always been negroes. But now Mr. Sappal has booked the Ugly Brothers' Minstrel, an all-white company, for a two days' showing at his house. This is probably the first all-white show that has ever played to an all-colored audience in Tampa.

J. A. Waterman, W. E. Lee and M. G. Gibbons filed in the office of the circuit court at Tampa, last Wednesday, a charter for a new amusement company to be known as the "Hillsboro Amusement Company, Inc." Mr. Waterman is the president of the Consolidated Amusement Company of Tampa, who operate all of the downtown theatres in that city. He is also interested in the Sarasota at Sarasota. Mr. Lee is the Mayor of Plant City.

Seattle

THE entire Film Row of this city was overcast with a spirit of sadness last week as a result of the sudden death of Mrs. Dorothy Lachman Rosenberg, wife of Al Rosenberg, owner and general manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Company. A slight cold contracted by Mrs. Rosenberg developed into pneumonia, and her death came upon her twenty-fifth birthday, barely a week after the first signs of her illness. Mrs. Rosenberg is survived by her husband; Robert, their two-year-old son; Mr. and Mrs. Lachman, her parents; and four brothers. Film and theatre men and women from over the entire state were present at the funeral, held in Seattle on October 7, and scores of beautiful floral tributes gave evidence of the esteem in which Mrs. Rosenberg was held and the sorrow at her passing.

Lannon and Sheffield's Greater Features exchange moved recently from their old quarters at 2010 Third avenue to a new and more spacious office at 2006 Third avenue, vacated a week or more ago by the Kwality Pictures exchange.

Following his return from a short road trip, Manager Seth D. Perkins of the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan exchange, is hard at work with his staff working on plans for the coming Jimmy Grainger Week, November 25 to December 1.

Charles Beale, formerly manager of the Film Booking Office exchange in Portland, Oregon, is now Portland representative for the Vitagraph company, working out of the Seattle office, according to an announcement made by Manager H. A. Black here recently. Mr. Black has just returned from a short trip to Portland and the Oregon territory, and is now supervising the work of his salesmen in the Washington district.

E. A. Lamb, salesman for Manager Paul R. Aust's Selznick exchange, has returned from a short trip into the eastern part of Washington, and will spend a few days around this city before starting on another tour to Portland and Oregon districts, which will keep him away for a number of days.

Fred G. Slyter has just joined Manager Charles E. Feldman's First National branch as salesman, and will cover part of the Washington state territory. Before coming here, Mr. Slyter was field manager of short subjects for the same company in the entire western division.

Guy F. Navarre, manager of the Fox branch, has been out of the city for the last several days on a trip to Boise and other points in Idaho and Montana. Announcements regarding first run bookings for some of the new Fox product were expected upon his return to the local exchange.

L. K. Brin, manager of the Kwality Pictures Company, has been confined to his home for several days by a severe cold, but expected upon his recuperation to make a short sales trip to Portland during the time that his first Warner Brothers picture, "Where the North Begins," was running at the Rivoli theatre.

A. H. Huot, manager of Film Booking Offices branch, is back in the city after a brief tour of some of the key towns in Washington.

W. A. Lamont, formerly booker at the American Releasing Corporation exchange until its absorption by the Selznick organization, has just become head booker at the Greater Features branch, in their new offices.

Motion picture theatre men and representatives from Film Row gave up much of their time early in October to the Seattle Community Chest drive, when they covered their districts in this city soliciting offerings and subscriptions to the fund of $775,000, which will carry the combined charitable organizations through another year of work. The drive is held one week each year, and at that time people of the city are asked to donate toward financing the combined philanthropic institutions of the city. Aside from collecting more than their allotted portion of subscriptions, the theatre men, both large and small, furthered the drive by exhibiting reels and slides in their houses all during the week, urging the audiences to contribute their share toward the Community Chest fund.

John G. Von Herberg, general manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, left recently for an extended trip to New York and other points in the East, and has been leaving business transactions to be handled by Ed J. Myrick, assistant general manager, during his absence. Mr. Von Herberg was accompanied by C. S. Jensen, who heads the organization in the Oregon territory, with general offices in Portland.

Tom Williams, for three years a doorman at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre, left that position recently and is now enjoying a vacation in this city, preparatory to formulation of definite plans for the future. Mr. Williams was connected with the Blue Mouse since it opened in 1920, even having been employed there during its construction as a night watchman. He has been replaced by C. H. Metcalfe, formerly connected with the Rialto theatre in Wenatchee, during the time that Floyd G. Wesp, now assistant manager at the Blue Mouse, was manager of that show house.

E. Spjut, a newcomer among the motion picture theatre men of this territory, has taken over the ownership and management of the Bijou theatre at Marysville, Wash., according to word just received here. Madame Paul, a veteran showwoman of this state, was former owner of the house, having operated it for a number of years. The sale of the Bijou leaves her without a theatre, but Madame Paul upon a recent visit declared that she would soon be in the exhibiting field again—time and place unknown at present.

Ray Grombacher of the Liberty theatre in Spokane was a recent visitor in this city, spending several days here at the theatres and on Film Row. A. O. Jones, owner and manager of the Grand theatre, in Burlington, was also one of the infrequent visitors to Seattle who spent a few days here early in October.

The Weihe Sisters, instrumentalists and vocalists, who have been featured on several programs in California theatres recently, presented a musical novelty on Manager Hal Daigler's Columbia theatre program last week.

Canada

ALD. W. A. SOMERVILLE of the Toronto City Council has purchased the property at the northeast corner of Danforth and Woodbine avenues, Toronto, on which to erect a suburban moving picture theatre having a seating capacity of 1,200 at a cost of $100,000. The property has 100 feet frontage on Danforth avenue and is 180 feet in depth. The site cost $26,000, or over $200 a foot, which is a good price considering the distance from the downtown section of the city. Ald. Somerville's theatre will come into direct competition with the Palace theatre, a Famous Players house managed by Charlie Querrie and also with the Allen's Danforth theatre, another large theatre of the Danforth district.

Montreal, Quebec, has a brand new picture theatre and it is the first new film house that has been thrown open there in many months. The new place is the Corona theatre, Notre Dame street west and Atwater street, and the ownership of the house is vested in the Independent and United Amusements, Limited, Montreal, which company owns and operates the Strand, Regent, Papineau, Belmont, Plaza, Moulin Rouge and other local picture theatres. The special musical program was under the direction of Willie Eckstein, piano soloist at the Strand.

George Nicholas, managing director of the company, announced on opening night that Thomas Keegan, formerly assistant manager of the Papineau theatre, which was opened two years ago, had been appointed manager of the new Corona. The latest house seats about 1,200.

The Star Theatre Company, Limited, is the name of a newly incorporated amusement firm which has been organized at Carleton Place, Ontario, with an authorized capitalization of $40,000, to operate the Star theatre at that place. The directors of the company include William Wilson Tabor, merchant; William James Hughes, druggist; Samuel Alexander Torrance, and William Alfred Johnson, theatre manager, all of Carleton Place, and David E. Grant of Ottawa, insurance agent.

James T. Moxley, manager of the Russell theatre, Ottawa, and manager of the Regent theatre, as well, for years, was initiated into active membership of the One Hundred Club of Ottawa, an exclusive business men's organization of the Canadian capital, on Friday evening, October 12. As a silent boost, Mr. Moxley presented each of the 175 persons present with tickets for the theatre performance at the Russell on Monday evening, October 29, which is to be a One Hundred Club night.

The shareholders of the Garrick theatre, one of the centrally located moving picture houses of Winnipeg, have selected D. E. L. Fisher of Winnipeg as manager of this locally owned theatre in succession to Walter P. Wilson, the first manager of the Garrick, who resigned to take charge of the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, at a high salary. As soon as Mr. Fisher took charge of the Garrick he announced that, starting October 20, the weekly programs would open on Saturday instead of Monday. The Garrick has been a highly popular theatre during the two years that it has been operated. It is centrally located.

The Capitol theatre, Winnipeg, a Famous Players house, conducted a unique competition among the ladies of the Manitoba capital during the week of October 8 for the presentation of "Trilby," starring Andree Lafayette, the new French star. The theatre co-operated with the Real Silk Hosiery Company by presenting one pair of silk stockings to the first 50 ladies attending the theatre who wear the same size stocking as the film star. Rannard's Portage avenue shoe store also joined in with the stunt by donating two pairs of selected shoes to the first two ladies having the same foot measurements as Andree Lafayette. Coupons to be filled in by the ladies were available at the theatre as well as at the stores, the necessary details being supplied by the patrons themselves.

John T. Fiddes, formerly manager of the Tivoli and System theatres, Montreal, has taken over the lease of the National theatre, Winnipeg.

Albany

"VIC" BENDELL, former manager for Goldwyn in Albany and more lately for the F. B. O. offices, and still more recently associated with his brother, Robert, in handling the Selznick Distributing Corporation's product, has just transferred his affections to Hodkinson, and from now on will cover central and northern New York for this concern. George Dillon, general manager for Hodkinson, was in Albany Monday and planned an aggressive selling campaign for Mr. Bendell. It is quite possible that if things break right that Hodkinson will shortly open an exchange here. Mr. Dillon attended Monday's meeting of the Albany F. I. L. M. club.

Harry McNamara is building a new theatre in Valatie. The house will seat about 400 persons, and as soon as completed will result in Mr. McNamara's other house closing.

Charles Walder, manager of the Goldwyn exchange in Albany, did a fine stroke of business in Gloversville the past week when he closed with Meyer Schine for Goldwyn's output over the entire Schine circuit. This completes all key points in the capital district.

Oscar Perrin, accompanied by Mrs. Perrin, spent the week-end in New York City, returning to Albany on Monday.

The WGY orchestra of Schenectady, which has been heard by hundreds of thousands of radio fans, will play each Sunday from now on at the State theatre in Schenectady in connection with the picture shown that day.

Ben Apple, owner and manager of the American theatre in Troy, was in New York last week attending the World Series games.

Miss Marie Wheeler, manager of the Merit exchange in Albany, was in Gloversville, Johnstown and Amsterdam the past week arranging playing dates.

H. C. Bissell, formerly connected with United Artists as a salesman, but who came lately with the Goldwyn exchange in Albany, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis in Malone, and was operated on in that city.

Jimmie Sper, who has been handling the Al Lichtman pictures out of Albany, has just been transferred to his old stamping ground in Buffalo, leaving for there last Thursday.

There is one road man who fairly dreads northern winters, remembering his experiences of a year ago, when he drove 25 miles in an open sleigh and was nearly frozen to death. He is Simon Feld, connected with the First National exchange here and covering northern New York territory. Mr. Feld was in Watertown the past week seeing exhibitors.

Alec Herman, live-wire manager for First National in Albany, was in Utica last week and reports much business booked.

B. Morganrath, who has been special representative for Fox, has just been added to the Goldwyn sales force in this city and will cover the Capital district.

Back from New York, where he spent all of last week, Marvin Kempner, manager of the Paramount exchange here, is rather inclined to cuss a bit by reason of the fact that he was unable to see even so much as one of the World Series games. The one day when Mr. Kempner could attend the game, he found himself unable to secure a ticket of admission.

The State, Strand and Albany theatres in Schenectady are being well advertised these days in a converted Ford car carrying posters announcing pictures that are being played at each house.

The Strand in Albany is this week trying out old-time songs, with every one joining in. The idea seems to have caught on and may be continued from time to time.

Charles Marshall, a well-known exhibitor of Ausable Forks, was among the buyers on Film Row this week.

Frank Bruner, manager of the Pathe exchange, is having a run of hard luck with his automobile. The car was injured to the extent of $300 in a collision two or three weeks ago, and last Sunday figured in another smash-up, much smaller, in Schenectady.

The Avon in Utica has just been made a demonstration theatre for Paramount productions in this part of the State.

L. E. Fitzgibbons, of Utica, has been added to the sales forces of Paramount and will cover northern New York in place of J. H. Moran, resigned.

Charles Sesonske, of Gloversville, was in town during the past week.

An admission of 25 and 40 cents again prevails at the State in Schenectady. When the house first opened, nearly a year ago, these same prices ruled. Business fell off, however, and the admission dropped to 25 cents, being later raised to 35 cents.

At the Lincoln in Troy the price of admission has been raised to 30 cents, which is ten cents under that now being charged by its chief competitor, the Troy.

Charlie Walder took a portion of his bonus check recently and bought himself one of the handsomest Elks' pins in all Albany. The pin is set with diamonds. Mr. Walder, through his work for Goldwyn, has managed to land two bonus checks, and in each case divided with his office employees, feeling that they had shared in his success.

Over 500 orphans in Syracuse attended the Robbins-Eckel theatre in that city last Saturday as guests of one of the newspapers. Automobile trucks and street cars, donated, transported the tots to the theatre.

Edgar Weil, one of the most popular motion picture theatre managers in Syracuse, has suffered a nervous breakdown and is now recuperating at Little Rock, Ark.

Automobile thieves operating in Ogdensburg stole a brand new car from in front of the Strand theatre the other night while the owner was inside enjoying the picture.

There is talk of three new theatres, two in Watertown and one in the neighboring village of Alexandria Bay. One of the theatres in Watertown will have at least 3,000 seats and will play pictures at a ten-cent admission. The other house in Watertown will be built on the north side of the city, which has not had a motion picture theatre for several years. The third house being planned would be built and managed by the Robbins Amusement Company, and would be located at Alexandria Bay, in the heart of the Thousand Islands.

In the capacity of host there are few exchange men or film representatives who can equal Bernard Frank of Syracuse, representative of Pathe in that territory. All of which is by way of appreciation of the kindness shown to the Albany correspondent of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS on a recent trip to Syracuse, and during which Mr. Frank not only provided the tickets to a football game, but also the automobile to the grounds.

The Mark Strand theatre in Albany is to be the scene this Winter, beginning Nov. 3, of weekly symphony concerts, in which the combined orchestras of the Mark Strand and the Troy theatre will be featured. Uly Hill, managing director of the two houses, is entirely responsible for the innovation. The idea has the approval and endorsement of the women's clubs as well as the musical organizations of the two cities. The concert will take place at 10.30 o'clock Saturday mornings, lasting for about one hour and fifteen minutes, and with Julius Boxhorn, leader of the Mark Strand orchestra, conducting. There will be several solo numbers each week. Admission will be thirty cents.

Cleveland

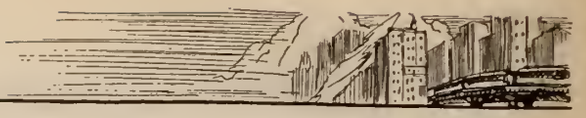
MANY happy returns of the day to William Raynor, manager of Reade's Hippodrome, Cleveland. He had a birthday last Saturday. He might have overlooked it. But his associates did not. Goaded on by Milton Korack, assistant manager of the theatre, the Hippodrome employees and vaudeville artists appearing that week staged an elaborate birthday party for him on the stage. There was a dinner served to fit the occasion. An orchestra was engaged to supply dance music. And to top it off in style, Raynor was presented with a beautiful silver and gold cigarette case as a memento of his associates.

The Stillman theatre, Cleveland, celebrated Saturday, Oct. 13, nationally called "the sweetest day in the year," by making over 1,800 kiddies happy. The theatre management staged a special Saturday morning matinees for orphans and children of every institution in the city in honor of the day. The candy merchants of Cleveland presented every one of the Stillman theatre guests with a box of candy. The Boy Scout band played in front of the theatre preceding the performance, and more Boy Scouts were ushers and distributors of the candy boxes. The newest Harold Lloyd picture, "Why Worry?" was the feature of the day. This picture has not yet been shown in Cleveland, so the kiddies were luckier than the grown-ups. "Captain Kleinschmidt's Adventures in the Far North" was also on the program. Maurice Spitalny, musical director, gave his youthful audience not only a complete overture, but threw in a couple of violin solos by himself as good measure. The Sweetest Day in the Year? Ask any one of those 1,800 girls and boys who were guests of the Stillman theatre last Saturday and they'll tell the world it was.

A. G. Constant, who runs picture houses in East Liverpool and Steubenville, was in Cleveland recently.

J. F. Allman, manager of the Pike theatre, Dover, spent the first three days of the week in Cleveland taking in the shows. They were three busy days for Allman, for he went to all the first-run picture houses, as well as to the "legits" and vaudeville.

Norman Moray has been appointed manager of the Cleveland First National exchange. Moray is not a stranger in Cleveland. He came here from Indianapolis last Spring to become manager of the local Pathe exchange, and has made many friends, all of whom wish him well in his new environment.



Oscar Ruby is the new manager of the Cleveland Pathe exchange. Ruby has been with the local Pathe outfit for six consecutive years. That's some record in the movie business. He began at the bottom of the ladder and has risen steadily until now he has reached the top.

R. S. Schroeder, Pathe district manager, spent the week in the Cleveland exchange, filling the interval between the resignation of former exchange manager Norman Moray and the appointment of present exchange manager Oscar Ruby.

Robert Fox, manager of the local Fox exchanges, is in New York.

Chicago

L. RUDOLPH, well known theatre man, has purchased the Emmett theatre, 4338 Wentworth avenue, from Brunhild & Young. Mr. Rudolph recently disposed of his Violet theatre in Milwaukee, and for the present will devote his entire attention to the management of the Emmett.

Assistant General Manager Clyde Eckhardt, of Fox, was in Chicago conferring with Local Manager Sid Meyer last week. Chicago's film row still looks good to Mr. Eckhardt, although his duties keep him in New York most of the time.

Walter Strassheim, who for some time has been connected with the Lubliner & Trinz organization, is now manager of the Ben Hur theatre.

"The White Rose," now playing at the Orpheum theatre, is being exploited in Chicago by Pat Campbell, who has on several previous occasions done the publicity work for Griffith productions in this locality and has a host of friends in Chicago.

Walter R. Shiel, William P. Chapin, Robert E. Gumm, H. Stanley McLeod and James E. Rocap, of Indianapolis, incorporated the Exhibitors' Supply Company of Indiana and will engage in the business of buying and selling for theatres at the Hoosier capital.

Roy Alexander has been appointed manager of Universal's Chicago exchange and assumed charge of the office on October 17th, on which date Herman Stern severed his connection with this exchange. Mr. Alexander made such an excellent record in Chicago as salesman, manager of the short subject department and country sales manager that he was promoted to manager of Universal's Kansas City exchange, where he has been located for the past year. He is one of the most popular film men in the territory, and Chicago picture men are much pleased over his return to this city. Mr. Stern has not announced his future connection, but it is understood that he will remain in the picture business in an important executive capacity. I. R Leserman, a veteran of the Universal organization, became supervisor of sales when Mr. Alexander took charge of the office.

James Douglas, veteran showman, who recently returned from South America, where he operated several theatres, has purchased the Empress theatre, Springfield, from George Koehn. In addition to managing the Empress, it is understood that Mr. Douglas will co-operate with George Hickox in putting on presentations and supervising productions at the Chatterton.

Executives and members of First National's sales staff helped Sales Manager C. E. Bond celebrate his birthday on Tuesday evening at his home. The popular manager was the recipient of several gifts suitable to the occasion.

Architects Rapp & Rapp are preparing plans for a $500,000 2,300-seat theatre, which will be erected at Archer avenue and Robey street by H. Schoenstadt & Sons. It is understood that work of construction of the new house, which will be known as the Archer, will be started at an early date. Upon completion of the new playhouse the present 800-seat Archer theatre will end its career as a show house and may be remodeled into a garage. Schoenstadt & Sons now operate five theatres in Chicago—the Brighton Park, Halfield, Atlantic, Boulevard and Archer.

Arbitrary cuts ordered by the Censor Board in films to be shown here by Lecturer Newman and "The Bad Man," a First National feature, and other pictures, which have come before the board recently, may result in a general shake-up in the board, according to rumors on film row and around the City Hall.

W. K. Hollander, of Balaban & Katz organization, who has been confined to the hospital for some time, is reported to be improving and is expected back at his desk within a few days.

The many friends of L. M. Carlson, of the Rosenfield & Hopp Co., will regret to learn that he lost his wife last week. Mrs. Carlson passed away at their residence in Rock island.

Harry Rathner, Sol Lesser's representative, was in Chicago last week checking up on Coogan releases and conferring with the local First National sales staff on sales plans for "The Meanest Man in the World," featuring Bert Lytell.

Aaron Jones has returned from New York, after signing up Mary Pickford's new feature, "Rosita," to follow D. W. Griffith's "The White Rose" at the New Orpheum when the Griffith production has completed its run. This may not be for some weeks, as, according to Ralph Kettering, of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer organization, "The White Rose" is a big, popular success. Another feature that Mr. Jones viewed in New York and which he is quite enthusiastic about is Charlie Chaplin's "The Woman of Paris," the first picture to be directed by the famous comedian.

George Gibson, superintendent of the Chicago Rothacker laboratory, is back at the Diversey Parkway plant again after four months spent at the Rothacker-Aller plant in Hollywood. His visit to the West Coast laboratory was in accordance with Watterson R. Rothacker's policy of an interchange of executives and ideas between the two laboratories.

Joseph Hopp made a booking trip to New York last week and arranged for the playing of some of the biggest musical shows on the road at his Fort Armstrong theatre, Rock Island. According to the arrangements he made, "The Gingham Girl," Irene Castle's company, and Ed Wynn's show will be among the musical productions which will play one-night stands at the Fort Armstrong under the Schubert & Erlanger management.

Sam Morris, of Warner Brothers, was a Chicago visitor last week and spent a couple of days in conference with Manager Eddie Silverman, of his company's local exchange.

Earl Silverman is now north side salesman for First National, having been promoted from booker. Charles Fanning takes his place as chief booker. Mike Caswell will fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Fanning's promotion as second booker and Al Halperin becomes third booker, coming from the shipping department. Miss Gabbert has taken the place of Miss Bowman at the cashier's window.

President Carl Laemmle stopped in Chicago this week, en route to the West Coast studios of his company. He was accompanied to Chicago by General Sales Manager E. J. Smith. R. D. Anderson, general manager of the International News Service, was also making his headquarters at Universal's Chicago exchange this week.

An audience of unusual distinction was present at the first night of "Little Old New York," the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan picture, starring Marion Davies, which had its formal Chicago opening at the Roosevelt on Monday night. Balaban & Katz set aside the entire mezzanine floor for city officials, society leaders and notables of the art and literary world who attended this performance. Interviews with these leaders in civic life were printed in the daily press on the day following the opening, and all were laudatory of this picture, which has made such an exceptional success during its New York run.

Kansas City

A SHAKE-UP occurred in the First National Kansas City office last week, L. J. McCarthy, assistant manager, being promoted to manager of the Omaha branch office, while Tom Byerly, who has been traveling in southern Missouri for First National, will succeed Mr. McCarthy. Mr. Byerly will be succeeded by H. E. Corbin. The Omaha territory is familiar to Mr. McCarthy, as he formerly traveled out of that key center.

Damage amounting to $7,00 was done to the Pershing theatre, Argentine, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City, last week by flood waters from the Kaw river. The house is owned by Fred Meyn. An organ, costing $6,200, was damaged beyond repair, while 200 seats were ruined.

Richard Melvin, assistant manager of the Kansas City Fox office, has been transferred to the Cincinnati office and left for that post last week. He will be succeeded by C. M. Reap, formerly of Albany, N. Y.

It was with genuine regret that Kansas City's film colony learned of the resignation of "Colonel" William Yoder, district manager of Pathe in the Southern territory. Mr. Yoder will go to Oklahoma City and then for a four weeks' motor trip to California. His plans for the future have not yet been outlined.

J. J. McCarthy, known as the "whiz bang" salesman for First National in the Kansas City territory, has resigned and will go to California in search of improved health.

W. E. Shallenberger and Tom Curran, president and special representative, respectively, of Arrow Pictures Corp., were in Kansas City last week visiting friends. Mr. Shallenberger is on his way East from the Coast.

Herb Stultz is the latest addition to the F. B. O. sales force in the Kansas City territory. He formerly was with Select and Universal and is covering the northern Kansas territory.

Roy E. Churchill, branch manager of the Kansas City F. B. O. exchange, and Sam Benjamin, Oklahoma City branch manager, were nothing else but highly enthusiastic over the sales conference in Chicago last week. Both were disposing of some mighty flowery language about the Kansas City film colony upon their return.

The Capitol Enterprises have moved headquarters from 115 West Seventeenth Street, Kansas City, to the Davison Building, Seventeenth Street and Grand Avenue, thereby obtaining much more office space for the concern which has enjoyed an unusual growth the last few months.

The life of a bookkeeper became entirely too monotonous for "Curley" Wilson of Pathe last week and he proceeded to join the sales force of Associated Exhibitors, covering the Kansas territory.

Several changes have been made in the sales forces of Kansas City exchanges the last week. E. J. Eagen has been added to the Fox staff, covering Kansas, while two new salesmen have been added to the First National force, Harold Cass, formerly with Fox, who will cover the northwestern Kansas territory, and H. W. Beddoe, who will travel in northeastern Kansas, he having formerly been First National branch manager at Oklahoma City. Albert W. Eaton has joined the Preferred Pictures force.

FILM SALESMEN OPPORTUNITY—Want two representative men for the Chicago country territory. This is an opportunity for a permanent connection with an established National Organization controlling thirty-two branches.

If you are ambitious, a steady producer and can sell a meritorious product, as well as yourself, and desire to make a change for your betterment (we have recently raised Eight Salesmen to branch managers), address in strict confidence with full particulars, Motion Picture News, Box C, 752 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Buffalo

AL BECKERICH was showered with congratulations the past week on the occasion of the second anniversay of the new Loew State theatre, the success of which is due in great measure to the live wire methods of Mr. Beckerich in attracting the public to the box office. In connection with the anniversary celebration Al put over a big two-page display in the Buffalo Times, and among the advertisements were many from the film exchanges wishing "Al" continued success. Mr. Beckerich has been connected with the theatre business for the past 19 years. He is now president of the Buffalo Theatre Managers' Association. The local State theatre is one of the most elaborate in the entire Loew chain.

Al Beckerich

Frank Young, who last year resigned as booker at the Select exchange to take over a similar position with Vitagraph, is now back on his old job at Select, where he succeeds Al Barnett. "Al" has become a member of the sales staff and will cover the Syracuse and Binghamton districts for Select. He has been booking and looking after the city sales. Mr. Young's successor at Vitagraph has not as yet been announced.

Claude Saunders, in charge of exploitation for Paramount, has been in the Buffalo territory setting demonstration points. H. Powers is a new member of the local F. P.-L. sales staff. Dick McManus, branch manager, is in St. Louis recovering from an operation.

Chester A. Saunders, manager of the United Artists' exchange, has engaged L. A. McCaffrey of Pittsburgh as a member of his sales force. Bill Allen is now representing U. A. in Syracuse.

Manager T. W. Brady of the Goldwyn office announces the resignation of Sherman Webster as a member of the sales force. Mr. Webster has been succeeded by W. Smith, who comes to Buffalo from Detroit.

W. L. Gibson, formerly with Pathe in Pittsburgh, is now associated with the local First National office as a salesman. "Andy" Smith is still at the F. N. exchange pending the appointment of a manager.

W. R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Company, came to Buffalo this week to attend the wedding of his sister, Estelle. Arthur Regan, a graduate of Canisius College, is being taught the film business at the local exchange. Bill Mahoney, Fox salesman, is sporting a new Durant. Victor Allen Warren of the Strand, Messena; Fred A. Rice of the O-at-Ka, Warsaw, and Ned Kornblite have all written Clayton P. Shechan, district manager, telling him how good some of the new Fox product is.

E. J. Hayes, who is associated with Mort Shea in the distribution of the Dempsey-Firpo fight pictures in New York State north of Westchester County, now has his office in the Bond Photoplays Corporation Building in Franklin Street. He has engaged Clarence Williams, formerly treasurer of the Teck theatre, and Harry Devere, formerly with Pathe, as members of his sales force.

Phil Gentille, Graphic booster, is visiting towns along the southern tier and in the Syracuse territory this week in that new Ford of his. Phil expects to use a dogsled to make the same territory this winter.

Nat Bier of Warner Brothers has been in Buffalo turning the W. B. product over to Bond Photoplays Corporation for distribution in the Buffalo and Albany district.

George Weeks, division sales manager, has taken over supervision of the Buffalo Paramount exchange, which work was formerly done by Harry Ballance. Mr. Weeks was in town last week.

We have it on the authority of one of the local district managers that there have been 84 changes in exchange heads in Buffalo in the past four years.

Now that Eddie McBride is treasurer at the Teck theatre, the film men are able to get seats in the front row, instead of the last, as formerly. The other night we saw old Bill Allen and Percy Emslie of United Artists and Vitagraph, respectively, perched in the bald-headed row. Eddie is an old film man himself, having been connected with the Fox exchange for several years.

Lillian Walker received an ovation when she made her debut at the Criterion last Monday night as leading lady of the new stock company presented by Clark Silvernail. Miss Walker has a host of friends in Buffalo.

Over 30 producers, distributors and buyers of motion picture advertising film attended the convention in Rochester last week of the Screen Advertisers' Association. Douglas A. Rothacker of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, serving his second term as president of the association, presided.

George Eastman has returned from his trip to Alaska and British Columbia, which lasted two months. Mr. Eastman said that he was glad to get home and declared that after his transcontinental journey to the mountain fastnesses and the desolate sections of the Yukon territory he is more convinced than ever that "Rochester is a mighty fine place to live in."

Western New York exhibitors will be interested to know that old "Andy" Sharick, who used to visit their towns and exploit Selznick pictures like a Barnum circus, is now manager of accessories sales at the Warner Brothers' home office in New York. "Andy" is a former Buffalo newspaper man and for several years was in charge of exploitation at the local Select exchange. His whereabouts became known this week when Manager Arthur L. Skinner of the Victoria received a letter from the old "fillum plugger."

Harry E. Thompson, for the past two years manager of the local exchange of Associated Exhibitors, has been appointed manager of the New Haven office of the same company, according to an announcement by Harry E. Lotz, district manager. He assumes his new duties on Monday, October 22. He has been succeeded at the Buffalo office by H. L. Levvy, fr many years a First National salesman in western New York. Mr. Thompson made a host of friends among exhibitors hereabouts during his stay in Buffalo, and he goes to his new position with the well wishes of both showmen and exchange associates.

Harry E. Thompson

Madame Nellic Melba, famed for her golden voice, spent last week-end in Rochester. One of the principal reasons for the visit was a desire to see the Eastman theatre. "How do you like the Eastman theatre?" she was asked. For a moment she paused, then, lifting her hands with a dramatic gesture, she exclaimed: "Oh! It is a fairy tale! There is not one bit of fault in it. Say for me that the people of Rochester should go down on their knees and thank God for the great patron they have in Mr. Eastman. I sat in the theatre in various seats, and I thought it perfect."

A unique musical act on this week's program at the Eastman theatre is a film fantasy entitled "Sona's Song," featuring David Pesetzki, Russian concert pianist, who appears in a film and in person. The film centers around a haunting Russian song which Soloti composed and which Mr. Pesetzki plays.

Cincinnati

WHILE the weather in the territory served out of the Cincinnati film exchanges has not been strictly what might be called show weather, it has had no effect on business to any great degree. Salesmen in the field report that buying is very brisk and the exhibitors are willing to pay more for their film than before, providing that they can get the right attractions.

A visitor in town last week was John Oster, Jr., manager of the Spencer theatre, Washington C. H., Ohio. While here he bought several large pictures which he will show as feature attractions at his house in the near future.

J. Petischer, manager of the two picture houses in Aurora, Ind., and a chain of theatres in that section of the state, blew into the Film Building the other day.

Among the visitors at the exchanges last week were Mr. and Miss O'Connor, of the Dream Street theatre, Columbus, Ohio. No, they are not father and daughter, they are brother and sister.

S. E. Wall, manager of the Columbus and Cincinnati Trucking Co., called at film headquarters to take up the matter of more expediency in the transportation of film between the two towns. All of the film between Cincinnati and Columbus is being shipped by truck.

Dave Helbig, city salesman for Metro, was successful in closing several big accounts this week in the city, and also in Norwood.

W. C. Bachmeyer, district manager for Metro in this territory, is out on a business trip and will make Huntington and other towns in West Virginia.

Hillard T. Snowden, formerly publicity director with Goldwyn Pictures Corp. and Libson Enterprises, is going to be an exhibitor at last. He is going to take over the opera house at Greenville, Ohio, and will be glad to meet the film boys in the lobby of his theatre. He said before leaving Cincinnati that he was going to have a sign made to read "I know my theatre is bad—how is your film?" This for the salesmen. The boys all wish him luck on his new venture.

Fred Tyne, owner of the Columbia theatre, Portsmouth, Ohio, was a visitor at the Metro office.

Last week Marcus Loew, well known theatrical and motion picture magnate, arrived in town for a brief visit.

D. J. Chatkin, sales manager for Educational, was in town for a few days this week looking over the business at his office and calling on a few of his friends.

William Kerr, salesman for Metro in Kentucky, just arrived after a two weeks' trip in his territory. He says that most of the exhibitors that he has called on in the past weeks are looking forward for one of the best seasons in history.

Harry Ross, district manager for Paramount, came in to town to talk over the winter's releases with Ike Libson, local exhibitor.

Andy Sankers, manager and owner of the Gem theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, was a visitor at film headquarters.

Boston

GEOFFREY L. WHALEN, sales manager for Eastern Feature Films, is now a professor of medical jurisprudence at the Massachusetts College of Osteopathy. His specialty is forensic medicine. He was one of the pioneers in teaching the value of the motion picture in tuberculosis prevention work and in blood transfusion operations. He toured the country in the cause of the National Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, doing much to dispel the old fear of hereditary transmission, and took part in the making of the first motion picture of arterial blood transfusion. He is also a dramatic speaker of note, and when, back in 1918, he gave a motion picture show to the blind here in Boston, making them see it by the graphic manner of his description, the Boston papers were full of it.

Geoffrey L. Whalen

Every once in a while the wilds of Maine open up. This time two exhibitors from the inside came out and hit Boston. One came from Caribou and the other from Presque Isle. They bought for their year's programs and combined their Boston business trip with a pleasure jaunt to the Brockton Fair. They were W. V. Howe of the Upper House, Presque Isle, and R. A. Flora of Power's theatre, Caribou.

Jefferson D. Levine, with Federated Films, has recently been entertaining his father, Jefferson D., Sr., and his mother, they having come up from New Orleans for a month's visit. Jeff, Sr., says the North is a great country, but he went back before the winter dropped. Jeff, Sr., is a Gulf of Mexico pilot. When our Jeff is home he is in New Orleans, too. In retaliation as it were. Jefferson D., 3rd, will spend the winter with Jeff, the first, in New Orleans.

Leon Gorman, a former salesman in the Boston district, is now at Old Orchard, Me., as manager of a small chain of picture houses that have their headquarters there. He reports a highly successful summer season in the Maine watering places.

The Melrose theatre, one of the most popular of the north suburban houses surrounding Boston, has come under the direction of A. G. Pearson as manager.

William DeWolf and Fred Murphy, within whose hands lie the destinies of the Alhambra and Quincy theatres, both in the Massachusetts city bearing the latter name, did a lot of things during the summer months to make those houses still more attractive and popular. The Alhambra boasts a new pipe organ of late design and great range. The Quincy has gone through the hands of cleaners, painters, decorators and carpenters and looks like new.

Daniel Finn, manager of Gordon's Olympia theatre in Lynn, Bass., has resigned his post there to take over the management of Loew's northern New England houses in Lynn, Lowell and Haverhill and Portland, Me. Scores of friends, regretting that they must lose him from Lynn, gave a banquet in his honor prior to his departure from the Shoe City. The toastmaster was City Councilman Michael J. Carrol, while Mayor Harlan P. McPhetres gave Mr. Finn a diamond tiepin as a token from the many friends present. Rene Bouillarde, a former newspaper man from Scranton, Pa., and more recently manager of a Worcester theatre, has taken Mr. Finn's place as manager of the Lynn Olympia.

Boston is about to lose one of its best liked exchange men. Bob Bertschy, Boston exchange manager for Associated Exhibitors, has handed in his resignation to take effect October 20. During his stay here he has won many friends.

James Partridge, who has been the Pathe manager in New Orleans until lately, has taken over the duties of Pathe New England manager, succeeding Stanley Waite.

Fred Morris has got even Joe Roth jumping these days around the Federated film exchange in Boston, F. B. O. franchise holders for New England, since he took over the exploitation duties there. He is lining up the Grand-Asher stuff and milling away at "Human Wreckage." He was recently the invited guest of 150 Rotarians in New Britain, Conn., and gave the boys a heart-to-heart talk on the work being done by Mrs. Wallace Reid. They officially indorsed the work being done by Mrs. Reid.

Charles Whitely, shipper for Eastern Feature Films, has joined the sales staff of the same organization and is handling the Greater Boston territory. His old job has been filled by John Martin.

After the New England Film Board of Trade held a luncheon meeting the other day, at which Fred Murphy, the president, presided, and where C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for Will Hays, was the honor guest, the group adjourned to the Deaconess Hospital for a visit to George J. Schaefer, Famous Players-Lasky division manager, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis. He is getting along well.

Eugene L. Perry, formerly with Famous Players in Oakland, Cal., is now New England manager for the William P. Grey interests, who have their offices in the Social Union Building in Boston.

John L. Reardon has resigned from the sales staff of American Feature Films. Joe Roth, general manager for Federated Films, has been in New York at a sales convention held there by F. B. O.

The State theatre free school of opera, sponsored by M. Douglas Flattery, managing director of the Loew theatres in Boston, opened Saturday for its first session. The school will be under the direct charge of Madame Doree, president and founder of the Opera Guild of New York. She will be assisted by her daughter, Grace, and by Arthur Wooley. One of the plans of the school is to present every fourth week at the State theatre, Boston's largest and finest picture house, one fo the many light operas available.

Philadelphia

OSCAR NEUFELD of the De Luxe film exchange was unanimously re-elected president of the Philadelphia Film Board of Trade at its regular monthly meeting. Mr. Neufeld accepted the office a year ago under protest because of his numerous other duties, but his administration has been so constructive that he was the unanimous choice again this year. Other officers elected were P. A. Block, Paramount branch manager, vice president; Ben Amsterdam of the Masterpiece exchange, treasurer, and F. B. Willis of Fox, secretary. The committee appointed to represent the organization on the arbitration board consists of Jos. Hebrew, branch manager of Fox, John Bethel, branch manager for Vitagraph, and Wm. Humphries, branch manager for Hodkinson.

The annual dinner of the board will be held Nov. 5th at the Beaux Arts Cafe. The board is now formulating plans to re-zone the city and eliminate a prevailing practice of jockeying of prices.

Jerome Safron, who has been special representative of F. B. O. in Eastern United States, has been appointed branch manager of the Philadelphia office of F. B. O., succeeding Jack Flynn, who resigned to join Sam Frank in the operation of the Eagle and Palace theatres, Hammonton, N. J., which they purchased from C. C. Culshaw. Prior to becoming special representative Mr. Safron was branch manager at Albany, Detroit and New York. In addition to Mr. Flynn, Gus Coates, E. C. Daniels, and Sam Frank of the sales force resigned, together with Vincent Confronti, shipper, who was succeeded by Joe Hall. Herb Givern, who was district manager for Paramount out of its Chicago office is now a member of the sales force of the Quaker City office of F. B. O., together with Otto Horowitz, Sydney Fleisher, John Shaffer, and Carl Schwartz, who will have charge of the city sales. J. R. Kitchen will continue to handle the up-state territory.

W. A. V. Mack has been appointed Philadelphia branch manager of Pathe, succeeding Charles Henschel, who has been made district manager in charge of eight eastern exchanges of Pathe. Mr. Mack came from the Buffalo office, and was at one time in Philadelphia in charge of the Select exchange.

With the re-establishment of the exploitation department of First National, C. C. Pippin has been placed in charge of the work in Philadelphia and vicinity.

Miss Marion Green, who was Miss Philadelphia in the Atlantic City beauty pageant, has signed a contract with Oscar Neufeld and Tony Luchesse of the De Luxe Exchange to appear in one of the C. B. C. productions to be made on the Coast. Although no vehicle has yet been definitely chosen it will in all likelihood be "Pal O' Mine."

John Thornton, who has been office manager for the Philadelphia branch of Hodkinson, has resigned and joined hands with C. M. Goodman of Electric Theatre Supply, distributing Educational pictures.

Twelve Philadelphia exchanges are now using the uniform contract. They are Metro, First National, Vitagraph, Paramount, Goldwyn, Select, Electric Theatre Supply, distributing Educationals, Hodkinson, Fox, F. B. O., Universal and Pathe. The uniform contract has not yet been endorsed by the board because it is not used by the entire membership.

Charles Cherry, who has been managing the Victoria theatre for the Stanley Company since his return from Baltimore, has been appointed resident manager of the Aldine.

Approximately $900 was cleared at the benefit given for Leon J. Behal, short subject sales manager for the De Luxe exchange, who was injured when he was struck by an automobile in front of the exchange several weeks ago. The benefit was in the nature of a midnight performance given through the courtesy of the Stanley Company in the Globe theatre.

Harry Ringler, projection expert, who is now serving as president of the Local 307, I. A. T. S. E., and who was formerly chief projectionist at the Globe theatre, has been added to the sales force of L. Schwaab & Son.

Salt Lake City

THE Orpheum theatre on West Second South street opened for the winter season last week, after being dark since late last spring. The house was taken over from the Orpheum interests by the Ackerman and Harris vaudeville concern. The policy this winter will be to present five acts of vaudeville and a first run feature picture on each program.

W. A. Corby, manager of the local Film Booking Offices exchange, has gone to Montana to devote his interest to the coming season products.

The local Pathe exchange won first place in the recent sales contest held all over the United States for exchanges of this corporation. Notice was received last week from the home offices by Manager W. G. Sieb that he and his force were formed the winning combination. The prizes amount to cash outlays totaling six hundred dollars and there is much jubilation and pride at the local exchange.

A new officer has been added to the local Pathe exchange in the person of R. B. Epperson, who arrived last week to take up his duties in the capacity of assistant to Mr. Sieb, and booker. Epperson is well known throughout the western territory, especially here, as he was formerly associated with the Universal exchange here. At the time of his acceptance of the Pathe position he was identified with the Universal exchange in Pittsburgh.

W. L. Wessling, western division manager of Pathe, arrived in Salt Lake City, returning from Denver, where he has been for two weeks. He will remain here in conference with Manager Sieb for several days, pursuant to the policies of putting over the new features on the 1923-24 program.

B. A. Gurnette, Universal manager, returned last week from a successful trip throughout northern Utah territory, including Logan, Brigham City and Ogden. He made the trip with R. H. Campbell, who at present has gone to Wyoming for several days, and will then return to his regular southern Utah territory.

Joe Solomon, Pathe salesman, returned from a trip to Nevada and is laid up in bed, having taken ill on his trip.

V. P. Whitaker, special representative for the Associated Exhibitors, was in Salt Lake City recently, working on the new pictures controlled by this company. Accompanying Mr. Whitaker was J. S. Woody. While here, they conferred with George Hays, local manager for Associated Exhibitors. Mr. Hays left immediately after their visit for Boise, Idaho, to line up the pictures there.

W. F. Adamson, resident manager for Hodkinson, has made a short trip to Provo, Utah.

A sales conference, which proved to be successful in every way, was held at the local offices of Famous Players last week. Sidney R. Kent, general manager of distribution, was present and talked to the boys on the new policies governing the recently adopted plan of letting the public select their own pictures, and explained the dope on the new titles. Business at this exchange is hopping along in great style, according to H. W. Braly, manager. The salesmen who attended the conference were: Joe English, who covers the Montana territory; Ed Loy and Cy Gulbransen, who cover Idaho conjointly, and Joe Samuels of the Utah section.

L. J. McGinley, salesman with Famous Players-Lasky exchange, has torn himself from his duties and hied himself to the East, where he will spend a three weeks' vacation with his mother in Connecticut.

H. W. Braly, manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, returned recently from Great Falls, Montana, where he went to supervise the transfer of the Japanese earthquake pictures. As soon as these prints were landed at Seattle, Eddie Spimon, aviator, dashed to Great Falls with them in his plane. From there they were rushed to New York City.

J. D. Solomon is back from a three weeks' trip through the Montana territory, where he was kept busy with the pictures that appear on the Goldwyn-Cosmopolitan program.

G. L. Cloward, manager of the Metro exchange, has returned after visiting the key cities of Montana.

The patrons of the American theatre were treated to a thrill when a fire broke out in the ceiling of the American Dansante, the ball room above the theatre proper. A wire broke in the built-in lighting fixtures, and soon the roof was ablaze. The dance patrons quickly, but orderly, made their safe exit. Then the smoke poured down into the theatre. Due to the coolness of the employes, the theatre was soon emptied without a panic or any injury. The damage to the building amounted to about five thousand dollars, which is covered by insurance. The program showed the next day as usual.

Out of town exhibitors who "made" film row last week were: George Lindsay, operating the Crescent theatre at Eureka, and the Star at Payson; I. H. Swenson, proprietor of the Angelus theatre at Spanish Fork; T. M. Chessler, owner of the Princess theatre at Bingham Canyon; Mr. Martin, manager of the newly opened Phoenix Construction Co. theatre at Alexander, Idaho; and Joseph Beenin, owner of the Ward theatre at Taylorsville, Utah.

St. Louis

THE St. Louis Amusement Company is spending some $5,000 in alterations and improvements at the Pershing theatre, Delmar Boulevard, near Hamilton Avenue, and the house will be re-opened shortly. It may be used for a musical stock company. Nat Koplar is doing the work.

Al Bartlett, salesman and former exchange manager, has accepted a position with the Rudolph Wurlitzer Company and will specialize in the sale of organs for motion picture houses and theatres.

Tom McKean, local manager for F. B. O., has returned from the Chicago sales gathering of that organization with a beautiful gold metal awarded to him for ranking among the ten best salesmen of the F. B. O. organization. He is very proud of his prize.

"Buns" Derby is now with the Selznick-Select organization as special representative. James Drake, exhibitor and theatre manager, has been made exploitation chief for the St. Louis exchange of W. W. Hodkinson.

George Gambrill, for a number of years motion picture critic of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and later press agent for the Shubert vaudeville circuit, is now in charge of exploitation and publicity for the St. Louis Paramount exchange. He comes from Oklahoma City, where he held a similar position with the Famous Players-Lasky office.

Fred Young, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, has been added to the sales staff of the local Hodkinson exchange.

C. D. Hill, Hodkinson manager, is back from a trip to Indiana.

Exhibitors seen along Picture Row during the week included Jack Pratt of Fulton, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Poplar Bluff and Cairo; J. Rosenthal, Cutler, Ill.; C. C. Jones, Cambria, Ill.; Luttrell of Jacksonville, Ill.; Tom Young, Dwyersburg, Tenn.; L. W. Finke, Gem theatre, Nashville, Ill., and Jim Reilly, Alton, Ill.

Spyros Skouras, head of Skouras Brothers' Enterprises, has returned from a business trip to Chicago.

William Goldman, of the Kings, who had just got back from a trip to Chicago, departed Monday for the Windy City again.

Andy Wright has resigned as manager of the Delmonte theatre, Delmar Boulevard, near Clara Avenue. He will be business manager for the Ernest Evans Company.

Harry Niemeyer, back from his European trip, has again taken charge of the publicity work for the Delmonte theatre.

H. J. Arnold has bought the Lyric theatre at Vincennes, Ind. The house was formerly owned by the Wilkinson-Lyons Enterprises. The Consolidated Realty & Theatre Company, Chicago, has taken over the Pantheon, the other Wilkinson-Lyons house in Vincennes.

George Jacobs has opened the Grand theatre in Terre Haute, Ind., as a high class photoplay palace. It formerly was devoted to the so-called legitimate stage.

The American theatre, Terre Haute, Ind., has been closed by Fox & Kutzbaugh, who recently took over the Indiana theatre in that city. The Indiana will play feature pictures and Pantages vaudeville.

Charley Sweaton is now in charge of the American theatre, Evansville, Ind., and is devoting it to big pictures. He has changed the policy to one feature picture weekly instead of two changes.

Tom Walsh has sold the Sourwein theatre, Brazil, Ind., to Samuel Grimes. For the time being at least the policy will be unchanged.

N. M. Baskette has joined the sales staff of Metro in St. Louis. He formerly was with Goldwyn and is well known to the exhibitors of the territory.

M. F. Baker, who operates the three houses in Keokuk, Iowa, was a visitor to Pathe.

Jack Underwood of Enterprise spent the greater part of the week in the territory.

Roy Dickson of Selznick Select is back from a profitable trip to Hannibal, Quincy and vicinity.

Dawson Watson, St. Louis painter, has brought back some interesting pictures from a summer spent in Hollywood. The nucleus of his exhibition was painted in the studios of Douglas Fairbanks during the shooting of scenes for "The Thief of Bagdad." The pictures have been put on exhibit at the Healy Galleries, 4512 Olive street. The paintings abound with the color and form of the Orient, the scenes visualizing Bagdad and other Arabian Nights cities.

What takes place inside a gasoline engine when an automobile is traveling in high was shown to the St. Louis Automobile Club of St. Louis at the Western Rowing Club the evening of October 13. A three-reel technical film made by the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Mines, showed the cycles through which the gas travels from the time it enters the engine until it leaves as burned gas.

Production-Distribution Activities

Goldwyn Pictures Win Medals

TWO American-made motion pictures, both from the Goldwyn studios, have won highest awards, the Grand Gold Medal and a gold.. medal at the Chamber of Commerce and Industry of Turin, International Exhibition of Optical and Cinematographical photography, according to word received at the Goldwyn offices.

An interesting fact is that both of the pietures which took the big awards at the exhibition were those made in accordance with the Goldwyn policy of photographing scenes of stores in their natural settings.

Carol Dempster Greeted With Wite Roses

"The White Rose" at the Stanton in Philadelphia had a lively publicity and advertising campaign, and Carol Dempster made a personal appearanee after being entertained at tea at the Bellevue-Stratford hotel by a group of Philadelphia society debutantes. She was presented with a great bunch of white roses by Mayor J. H. Moore on whom she ealled in his executive offiees.

The white rose motif was carried out through all details of Miss Dempster's appearanee. She was met at the Broad Street Station by the young debutantes each of whom wore a white rose. The drivers of three big limousines also wore a white rose, as did all the policemen on the route from the station to the Bellevue-Stratford. There Miss Dempster again saw white roses being worn by bell-boys, hotel attendants, and everybody who had anything to do with the tea that was tendered by her weleomers.

Preferred Pictures Are Popular in Canada

George Jeffreys, speeial representative for Preferred Pictures Corporation, returned to New York this week from Canada where, he reports, the Preferred product is meeting with an enthusiastic reception from exhibitors. The first five productions of the fifteen to be released this season have already been sold in every key city in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, in Nova Seotia and throughout the entire west, he says.

Mr. Jeffreys has arranged for day and date pre-release screenings of "The Virginian" the last week in October in the seven provinces of the Dominion. He finds that Canadian theatre owners are anticipating this production as one of the best bets of the fall.

Praise for "Strangers of Night"

Premiere at Capitol Theatre Brings Commendation from N. Y. Reviewers

"STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT," the Fred Niblo production of Walter Hackett's stage sueeess, "Captain Applejack," opened its New York premiere at the Capitol theatre reeently and was given an enthusiastic reception by the New York press reviewers.

"If one expected Fred Niblo to make an exeellent picture out of 'Captain Applejack'—and here is one who did—one will not be disappointed," wrote Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune. "He has transferred to the sereen all of the delightful little subtleties which made the play such a sueeess."

"'Strangers of the Night,'" wrote the eritic of the New York Telegram, "is one of the most alluring films, with its quaint mingling of present day life on shore and the rollicking life on sea in the days when the Jolly Roger flew from the masthead of pirate eraft."

"Niblo has produeed a piece with amazing and always likable fidelity to the original play," wrote the reviewer of the New York Sun.

"This film version of 'Captain Applejaek' fairly talks and danees in aetion," wrote the critic of the New York Post. "And what a cast—Matt Moore, Enid Bennett, Barbara La Marr and Robert MeKim."

"Under the title of 'Strangers of the Night,' Walter Hackett's stage comedy of adventure and romance, 'Captain Applejack' is now on view at the Capitol—and a rollicking good film it is." Thus wrote the reviewer of the New York Mail.

"'Strangers of the Night' is going to take mighty strong," began "Irene" in the Daily News. "The action is like a true spark of life. It's a long time since we've seen so much in one pieture without getting drowsy."

"What is shown of 'Strangers of the Night' at the Capitol is so good," stated the critic of the New York Times, "that one feels a regret that it terminates as soon as it does."

"A picture that holds interest every minute," wrote Norman Lane in the New York Ameriean.

"As far as we could note the ehange in title from 'Captain Applejaek,' 'Strangers of the Night' is the only one made from the great play to the film now at the Capitol theatre," wrote Don Allen in the Evening World.

"Strangers of the Night" is a Fred Niblo production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces. It was adapted by Bess Meredyth and photographed by Alvin Wyekoff.

Mailmen Greet Producer and Star

Emory Johnson and Ralph Lewis Honored at Annual Picnic of Mail Workers

WITH upwards of 3,500 postal clerks of Los Angeles and their families and friends eheering enthusiastically, Emory Johnson, producer of "The Mail Man," and Ralph Lewis, star of the production, were introduced to the happy throng at Rose Hill Park, Los Angeles, the occasion being the annual pienic and jollification of postal workers.

The features of the event were the screen tests taken by Mr. Lewis and Mr. Johnson of more than twenty pretty young girls, daughters of the Los Angeles mail workers. The winner of the eontest will be awarded a role in Emory Johnson's next photoplay, production of which will begin in the early future in New York City, where the noted young director will go to shoot his early scenes next week.

Banners heralding the coming of "The Mail Man" were placed in many prominent spots in the big park, one huge sign appearing at the entranee to the grounds on Huntington Boulevard.

Screen followers in Los Angeles and other cities on the West Coast, agree that the mail workers of Los Angeles have launched what many eontend is the biggest campaign ever placed behind a motion pieture on the West Coast. Other big events of a similar eharacter will take plaee in the near future, to aid showmen in publieizing the Johnson attraetion.

Hoyt, Haymarket Sign with First National

Subsequent to the recent amalgamation of the Hoyt and Haymarket theatres in Australia, the Associated First National Pictures, Inc., has completed negotiations relative to the exhibition of their product throughout the entire Australian circuit.

Stanley Wright, managing director of the Haymarket theatres, while in America, studying the latest in motion picture presentation, was so impressed with the First National material, that immediately upon joining with the Hoyt enterprises, his first move was to establish business relations with First National's Australian exchange, the result of whieh ended in a contract for the showing of First National pietures, in their territory, eovering a period of one year.

Exchanges Sign for Burr Product

CHARLES R. ROGERS, vice president and general manager of distribution of Mastodon Films, Inc., announces the signing up of leading exchanges for franchises on the entire series of Independent product which the organization will produce during the 1923-24 season. This week, negotiations were completed for the Burr picture franchise for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Davis, Alexander and Libby, of the Columbia Film Service, Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa., and Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Robert Lynch, of Metro Pictures, Inc., Philadelphia.

Exhibitors throughout New England, the states of Ohio, Kentucky, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and the territory of Greater New York are now assured of being able to book the new C. C. Burr pictures, including "Restless Wives," "Youth to Sell," "The Average Woman" and "Lend Me Your Husband."

Pauline Frederick Starts Vitagraph Feature

Pauline Frederick, who has been engaged by Vitagraph for the leading role in "Let No Man Put Asunder," arrived in New York last week to begin work under the direction of J. Stuart Blaekton at the Brooklyn studios. Lou Tellegen also reported to Mr. Blaekton last Monday. These two famous stage and sereen stars head a cast of exceptional name value.

"Let No Man Put Asunder" is a dramatic protest against the evil of divorce and unhappy marriages which is gaining throughout the United States. It is adapted from the novel by Basil King.

"Scaramouche" Praised by Review Board

To the profusion of unrestrained praise whieh has been heaped upon Rex Ingram's spectacular achievement, "Scaramouehe," is added one more distinction: "Scaramouche" is listed pre-eminent among exceptional photoplays in the current number of "Exceptional Photoplays," the monthly issued by The National Board of Review.

This Metro picture which has aroused reviewers and which is now a Broadway attraetion, is given a three-column critieism devoted to praise for Ingram's great genius as it is given expression throughout the whole of the pieture.

Vignola Completes "Yolanda"

ROBERT G. VIGNOLA has completed the actual "shooting" of "Yolanda," the big French costume production, starring Marion Davies, for Cosmopolitan. With the studio work ended the director is now engaged in the gigantic task of reducing thousands of feet of film to nine or ten reels. The process of editing will take, it is estimated, about three weeks, after which Mr. Vignola plans to avail himself of a short rest before announcing the details of his next production.

"Yolanda" is Mr. Vignola's first production since his return from a six months' tour of the world. It has been nearly four months in the making.

Picture Awaits Novel for Production

Adapting a novel to motion pictures needs is a common feat in picturedom, and adapting a motion picture for a novel has been done, but to hold up production on a motion picture until the novel is on the bookstore stands is something new in the picture industry.

This is the situation in the case of "The Pony Express," a novel purchased for picture rights before it was off the publisher's presses. Edward Sedgwick, Hoot Gibson's director, is the author of the book, which will be on the market in a few weeks.

Following completion of his novel, Universal negotiated the rights for the picture, and it has been prepared for the screen. Plans were made to produce the picture at once, but on the author's suggestion the work was delayed to allow the novel to appear first.

As a result, Sedgwick, who is to direct his own story, will complete "Hook and Ladder" and follow it with another Gibson picture before going into production on the big story.

Warners Effect "Country Kid" Song Tieup

Another song tie-up has been affected by the Warner Brothers, in which the Irving Berlin song, "That Old Gang of Mine," will be used as a musical theme for "The Country Kid," the new Warner feature starring Wesley Barry. The tie-up will be a splendid exploitation aid as a special cover showing the freckled star and scenes from the picture has been created. In addition, special verses have been written to fit the picture so that exhibitors can use the number as an appropriate prologue.

Irving Berlin, Inc., the publishers, will lend their co-operation to exhibitors and distributors. Twenty-five hundred dealer tie-ups will be made with outstanding window displays. The song has also been adopted as the official song of the B. P. O. E., it is said.

"Broken Wing" Scores at Premiere

New York Reviewers Declare Screen Version Is Better Than Stage Play

"THE BROKEN WING," Tom Forman's latest production for Preferred Pictures, proved a winner at its premiere in New York where it opened at the Rialto on October 7. The receipts the first day was exceptionally large and excellent patronage was sustained throughout the entire week. The consensus of opinion expressed by the metropolitan press was that the film exceeded in entertainment value the play itself, which was one of the outstanding Broadway successes two seasons ago.

Here is what the critics had to say:

Evening World: "'The Broken Wing' is much more thrilling on the Rialto screen than it was on the speaking stage! And that is saying a great deal for it, for the airplane crash that opened the stage performance was noted far and wide as the outstanding chill producer of the theatrical season when it was running on Broadway. It is well worth the seeing and we are glad we went."

New York Times: "'The Broken Wing' is a splendid show with as much merit as the play."

New York American: "'The Broken Wing' in film version is fuller of incident than in the spoken version."

Evening Telegram: "If you want an exciting journey into Mexico without leaving a comfortable chair, go up to the Rialto and see 'The Broken Wing.'"

Daily News: "'The Broken Wing' is a gripping film, goes over something great. You won't be sorry for seeing it. Good entertainment."

Evening Mail: "An excellent screen adaptation has been made of Paul Dickey's and Charles W. Goddard's play. The airplane scenes are thrilling and the photography is good."

Critics Laud Carewe's "Bad Man"

N. Y. Reviewers Commend Director for Skill in Treatment of Famous Play

THAT Edwin Carewe, producer and director of "The Bad Man," a First National picture, has shown rare skill in his treatment of the famous play is a fact fully attested to by the New York critics, many of whom made Mr. Carewe's work the focal point of their reviews.

Quinn Martin, of the New York World, wrote: "'The Bad Man' in pictures is one of the best examples of sane transference of a stage play to the screen which we have seen, and the picture is distinctly worthy of the large patronage which it apparently is going to enjoy."

Andrew A. Freeman in the Evening Mail said: "Many who saw the play were of the opinion that it would make an excellent movie and they were right. Mr. Carewe realized the possibilities and limits of the story and at no time introduced any scene which detracted from the interest. The result is a simple, straightforward film, excellently photographed and effectively portrayed."

The Evening Telegram said: "Edwin Carewe, the motion picture director and producer, has converted the play—star, lines, et al.—into a photoplay just as absorbing as the play."

Harriette Underhill of the Tribune wrote: "It follows the play so closely, scene for scene, that the most ardent addict could find nothing to resent in the translation. Yes, 'The Bad Man' might be called a screen triumph."

The critic for the Sun and Globe said: "It is a more or less faithful adaptation of the play by Porter Emerson Browne. . . . Thus does this photoplay reverse some of the pet hookums of the movies."

Don Allen in the Evening World said: ". . . And we'll wager that when the film critics of the country make their selection of the ten best pictures of the year, 'The Bad Man' will be in the money."

Both the Evening Journal and the Daily News were warm in their praise of the picture.

Bellevue Ward for "Big Brother"

WITH the co-operation of the New York Police Department and the heads of the medical staff of Bellevue Hospital, the technical department at the Paramount Long Island studio has completed an exact reproduction of the prison ward at Bellevue. This set will be used in "Big Brother," the Rex Beach story which Allan Dwan is making for Paramount.

According to Dr. O'Hanlon, physician in charge at Bellevue Hospital, this is the first time that any information or facilities for research concerning this ward has ever been offered to any motion picture producing company to be used in any production.

"Midnight Alarm" Used in Fire Prevention Week

"The Midnight Alarm," in which there is a strong lesson against carelessness, which causes metropolitan fires, was generally booked for week runs throughout the country during Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 7 to 13, inclusive.

The management of the Rialto theatre in Milwaukee used for general distribution throughout the town a four-page newspaper, full size, "The Midnight Alarm" with an "extra" ear.

C. B. C. Feature Has Trade Showing

IMMEDIATELY upon the arrival of the first print of of "Forgive and Forget" from the West Coast studio, C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation arranged a trade showing in New York at which most of its buyers, both domestic and foreign, were present.

Mr. J. C. Barnstyn, who, with his brother, operates a great many theatres in Holland, said in an interview, that "Forgive and Forget" in his opinion, occupied a unique position in motion pictures.

He gave credit to both Harry Cohn, the producer, and Ed Le Saint ,the director, for producing a picture which, from story and cast standpoint, would appeal as strongly to people in foreign countries, as it would to people in this country.

Statesmen and Educators Endorse "Lullaby"

Many noted men and women, including statesmen, mayors, educators and social workers have combined in an endorsement for Chester Bennett's "Lullaby," in which Jane Novak will be starred through F. B. O. release in late autumn.

Dealing as it does with a phase of prison life which lends itself to widespread speculation and discussion, "Lullaby" already has focussed the deep attention of many leaders in current activities.

Among the most notable statesmen who have endorsed its spirit and requested a special pre-view of the production at Washington is Secretary of Labor Davis.

Many college professors who deal in courses in sociology also have requested special reviews of the picture when it is completed.

Will Write "Forgive and Forget" Song

One of the big music publishers is said to have asked permission to write a special song for "Forgive and Forget" and the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation, the producers of this picture, have granted this permission.

The publisher immediately after seeing the picture was so enthusiastic about it that his song writing staff created a song that will undoubtedly be a hit.

The publisher is now arranging with one of the Broadway musical shows to include this number as one of its feature songs.

Clergy Praises "If Winter Comes"

School Authorities Also Add Commendation to William Fox Production

VOLUNTARY testimonials in praise of the William Fox picturization of A. S. M. Hutchinson's "If Winter Comes" are being received every day at the home office of Fox Film Corporation from noted educators and clergymen throughout the country. These messages of appreciation have praised enthusiastically the manner in which this internationally famous novel has been transferred to the screen.

The Rev. Norman W. Twiddy, Bensonhurst, N. Y., wrote that he had no hesitation in declaring "If Winter Comes" the finest motion picture I have ever witnessed." F. A. MacGillivray, G. P. Putnam's Sons, characterized the production as "one of the best, if not the best moving picture performance I have ever seen. It is the book without variation."

Among the letters of appreciation for "If Winter Comes" were the following: Charles C. Roberts, P. S. 25, Manhattan: "I have advised my teachers that unless they see the picture, half the pleasure of their future years will be taken from them"; Gertrude E. Rolfe, Queens Village Mothers' Club: "This is the style of picture which the clubwomen of this country are working to have presented to the American public"; Kate E. Turner, Bay Ridge High School: "Most interesting I have ever seen. So true to the spirit of the book."

Rev. N. B. Wyllie, Ottawa, Canada: "Greatest the industry has produced. Mark Sabre is as Christ-like a character as could be conceived in modern life"; Rev. Lincoln H. Caswell, New York City. "Mr. Fox ought to be congratulated by all moral and religious forces in this country for the production of such a work as this"; Rev. Thomas E. Potterton, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "So clean, wholesome and inspiring that it is a pleasure to commend the film without reserve."

Burr Increases Production Output

Mastodon President Announces Six Specials Instead of Four for Season

C. C. BURR, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., announces that this organization will make six instead of four special productions for the Independent market, for the season of 1923-24. This increase of product is in line with the expansion of Mastodon following the recent announcement that Charles R. Rogers has become interested in the firm as vice-president and general manager of distribution.

The Burr Big Six will include, "Restless Wives," "Youth to Sell," "The Average Woman," "Lend Me Your Husband" and two well-known stories and Broadway stage successes, negotiations for which are being concluded and will be announced within ten days.

Production plans for "Restless Wives" and "Youth to Sell" are completed. Both of these Burr pictures will be started simultaneously at the Glendale studio within a few days in order to have them ready for early showings.

"Restless Wives" is a virile society melodrama written by Izola Forrester and continuity by Mann Page.

"Youth to Sell" is another of Miss Forrester's stories and was published in Ainslee's under the title of "The Grey Path."

"The Average Woman" is based upon one of Dorothy De Jagers' most successful Saturday Evening Post stories.

"Lend Me Your Husband" is a sensational and original modern-day drama written directly for the screen.

$500,000 to Charity from Jackie Coogan Dolls

Over $500 000 was realized by charitable organizations last year through the sale and auction of the now famous Jackie Coogan doll. These dolls are being constantly presented by Jackie to church bazaars, hospitals, orphanages and other charitable institutions and serve in lieu of Jackie's personal appearance at these functions.

The Jackie Coogan doll was originated as a result of the many requests that continued to pour into the Coogan offices asking for Jackie's personal appearance. During this time Jackie was busy on his first Metro picture, "Long Live the King" and when not actively engaged in work before the camera was busy with his studies. So the Coogan doll was originated.

It has been found such an excellent medium for publicity that Jack Coogan, Senior, is having a companion doll designed. The first shows Jackie in the tattered cap and patched breeches which first made him famous, and the second will be dressed in silk hat and Eton jacket, which is the costume Jackie wears in "Long Live the King."

Warner Trailers Aid Exhibitors

THE Warner Brothers are now issuing a number of free advertising and exploitation accessories which should benefit the exhibitor to no small extent in exploiting the different Warner Classics.

One of the most important of these is the special trailer which is issued on every production and presented to the exhibitor without cost. To this date, trailers have been prepared and supplied on "The Gold Diggers," "Little Johnny Jones," "The Printer's Devil" and "The Country Kid."

Besides this, mats of all sizes are supplied free on every release. Cards are also given to exhibitors for window displays.

Metro Feature Praised by California Women

"Strangers of the Night," Fred Niblo's newest production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces, has received the approbation of the California Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Roger J. Sterrett, chairman of the Motion Picture Division of the Los Angeles District of Women's Clubs, sent the following letter to B. F. Rosenburg, manager of the Metro Los Angeles exchange:

"'Strangers of the Night' was viewed by a committee representing the Daughters of the American Revolution, Parent-Teachers' Association, the schools, the churches, and the Women's Clubs and it was enthusiastically placed on its approved list.

"'Strangers of the Night' is good adventure and good mystery and most surprising, it has good comedy—inherent in the story—not superinduced at intervals.

"This picture will be recommended to the members of the organization represented on these committees."

Paramount Company Off for Southern Utah

With a cast headed by Bebe Daniels, Ernest Torrence, Noah Beery and Lloyd Hughes, the company that is to make "The Heritage of the Desert," the third Zane Grey production for Paramount, under the direction of Irvin Willat, is now on its way from Flagstaff, Arizona, to Lee's Ferry in Southern Utah. In addition to the players the producing organization includes studio technicians, road engineers, packers and a number of Navajo Indians who will take part in the picture.

Burr Productions Rights Sold Abroad

Charles R. Rogers, general manager of distribution of Mastodon Films, Inc., reports that negotiations have been completed whereby Richmount Pictures will distribute the new C. C. Burr productions in foreign territory. Under the terms of the contracts Richmount will handle "Three O'clock in the Morning," a new feature comedy special; "Restless Wives," "Youth to Sell," "The Average Woman," and "Lend Me Your Husband," all of which are being made for the 1923-24 season.

Weber, North Make Big Deal in Canada

An important Independent deal was consummated this week when Harry A. Kaufman purchased the rights for Will Nigh's "Marriage Morals" and B. P. Fineman's "Don't Marry For Money" for the Dominion of Canada from L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North.

Mr. Kaufman not only placed orders for sufficient prints of each subject to cover Canada in its entirety, but also ordered accessories and paper in equal quantity.

Fox to Offer Novelty in "Temple of Venus"

"The Temple of Venus," which will be the next picture William Fox will present on Broadway, is a novelty picture. It is said to combine the spectacular and the dramatic with great skill and has a beauty brigade headed by Phillis Haver and Mary Philbin. One thousand American beauties appear in the picture.

Review Board Commends Warner Features

The National Board of Review has recommended two of the Warner Brothers' latest releases as outstanding current photoplay productions. The pictures are "The Gold Diggers," the screen version of the David Belasco play, featuring Hope Hampton, directed by Harry Beaumont, and "The Printer's Devil," starring Wesley Barry.

"Going Up" Pleasing All Sections

Critics of Many Cities Commend MacLean Feature for Associated Exhibitors

THE newspapers in all sections of the country where Douglas MacLean has been showing in his first Associated Exhibitors' feature comedy, "Going Up," have given the production the most enthusiastic notices. Seldom do critics become as outspoken in praise of a motion picture as they have been in the case of Douglas MacLean's latest laughing success.

Following are some of the reviews that "Going Up" received in the various cities:

Robert E. Sherwood in the New York Herald: "Good farce-comedy is extremely rare on the screen, and the opportunity to see it is not often presented. Therefore one should not miss Douglas MacLean's new picture, 'Going Up.'"

Harriette Underhill in the New York Tribune: "'Going Up' is a better picture than it ever was a play or musical comedy. As a picture it has untold possibilities."

The New York Times: "'Going Up' is really very funny. Lloyd Ingraham directed this film, the action of which is swift and without a tedious instant."

The San Francisco Bulletin: "The manner in which Douglas MacLean seemingly manipulates an airship in his first independent production, 'Going Up,' is not only thrilling but one of the funniest situations ever brought to the screen."

The San Francisco Examiner: "'Going Up' is a delicious comedy featuring Douglas MacLean. . . . MacLean has never done any better work than in 'Going Up.'"

The San Francisco Call and Post: "A gale of laughter sweeps over the audience as Douglas MacLean 'hops off' at the Granada this week in a vehicle which is truly one of the funniest he has yet ridden, 'Going Up.'"

The San Francisco Chronicle: "Douglas MacLean's dry humor gets over well in this picture, he playing the author."

The San Francisco Daily News: "It is doubtful if Douglas MacLean could conceive of a funnier story than this."

The Kansas City Post: "You won't have time to get 'spoony' at the Liberty this week. You'll be too busy holding on to the seats and trying to dispel those funny, dizzy feelings brought out by the aerial maneuvers of Douglas MacLean, erstwhile author and aviator in 'Going Up.'"

N. Y. Pre-view for "Barefoot Boy"

Club Women Leaders Will Be Invited to Showing in Broadway House

MR. SAM ZIERLER of the Commonwealth Film Corporation, and the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation have entered into an arrangement whereby they will give a pre-view of "The Barefoot Boy" at one of the Broadway theatres.

A very active worker in the ranks of the Women's Clubs of America has voluntarily given her services to secure the assistance of all of the representative women's clubs in New York and also the representatives of the various states societies and women's clubs of all the other states. In addition to this, the teachers' associations and the principals have expressed a desire to see this picture, it is said.

At a recent talk given at one of the New York women's clubs "The Barefoot Boy" was brought up as a subject for discussion and the members were most enthusiastic about this picture because of the fact that it was a classic and that it brought to life the thoughts which were immortalized by John Greenleaf Whittier.

C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation officials have in mind a similar pre-view of the picture in every big city of the United States.

Social Lights, "Extras," Aid Japan Fund

Fifty men and women, social leaders of Southern California whose combined wealth is said to approximate $15,000,000, appeared as actors for a day and played atmospheric parts in "Black Oxen," a picturization of Gertrude Atherton's famous story of rejuvenation which is being produced by Frank Lloyd for First National.

The society representatives appeared as diners in a big cafe scene.

The elite were recruited for the screen play by Mrs. Hancock Banning, president of the Assistance League, a Los Angeles charitable organization. She conceived the idea of filling the atmospheric roles by society members willing to turn over their pay checks for the Japanese Relief fund.

Author Is Pleased with "Yesterday's Wife"

Evelyn Campbell, the author of "Yesterday's Wife," is now in New York to confer with C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation officials with regard to several stories that she has written and which she would like the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation to produce.

Miss Campbell was enthusiastic with regard to "Yesterday's Wife." She stated that it was an unusual experience as an author to have a manuscript produced exactly in accordance with the ideas as she has set them forth in her original story.

Critics Declares "Rosita" In "Excellent Class

"In the last two months I have seen exactly twenty-six pictures, of which six can be rated as 'excellent,'" said Robert E. Sherwood, motion picture editor of "Life," in the last issue of that periodical. "I find in this class 'Rosita,' in which Mary Pickford and Ernst Lubitsch have combined to bring great beauty to the screen.

"Looking forward into the new season, the pictures that loom largest are Douglas Fairbanks' 'The Thief of Bagdad' and 'A Woman of Paris,' directed by Charles Spencer Chaplin."

Metro Exchange Manager Uses Teaser Method

B. F. Rosenberg, manager of the Metro exchange in Los Angeles, has adopted the teaser method in acquainting exhibitors in his territory with the new Metro 1923-1924 productions as they appear from time to time. The latest campaign for "Strangers of the Night" proved very effective and Mr. Rosenberg received praise on all sides for his good showmanship.

On "Strangers of the Night," Mr. Rosenberg sent to all exhibitors a regulation size letter with the legend, "Have You Noticed Any Strangers in Town?" written in bold green letters across the top, and beneath this a box with the inscription in heavy green letters,

"STRANGERS OF THE NIGHT"

Further down the following note was added:

"If you do notice any strange looking characters telephone immediately to the police department and ask for Captain Applejack or call B. F. Rosenberg, 820 South Olive street, Los Angeles."

Truart Completes Sale On "Patsy"

Truart Film Corporation has completed negotiations with Supreme Photoplays Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., whereby that concern will handle "Patsy" in the territory comprising western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

"Patsy" is a comedy-drama, now being played with success about the country, featuring Zasu Pitts, Wallace Beery and Marjorie Daw.

Niblo Starts Work on "Thy Name Is Woman"

Fred Niblo has begun "shooting" on his next Metro-Louis B. Mayer production, "Thy Name is Woman," the picturesque, highly popular Spanish play which was imported to this country several seasons ago and which played an historic record-breaking Broadway engagement. Mr. Niblo believes that it will take him four months to complete this picture.

Mystery and Thrills in "Alias Night Wind"

Mystery and thrills abound in the William Fox production "Alias the Night Wind," starring William Russell, according to the offices. The story was written by Varick Vanardy and the scenario by Robert M. Lee. Joseph Franz directed. The story deals with a youth who is unjustly accused of crime. How he secretly helps the police who presume him to be a crook known as the "night wind," goes to make a picturesque story of action and romance.

Truart Reports Foreign Sale of Feature

Truart reports the sale of "The Empty Cradle," the Burton King production featuring Harry T. Morey and Mary Alden, for Brazil to Ferdinand V. Luporini.

War Veterans Honor Colleen Moore

COLLEEN MOORE, First National leading lady, was accorded a signal honor last week when the veterans of California's famous division, the Ninety-first, unanimously selected her as their godmother and feted her in style and with enthusiasm. The occasion was the annual convention of the division which will precede the general mobilization of the American Legion in San Francisco.

Miss Moore arrived in the convention city on Saturday afternoon to find the station crowded with ex-soldiers who came to welcome the little lady they had chosen as their idol. It was necessary for a cordon of police to clear a passage to the car which sped her to Mayor Rolph's office where she was officially welcomed. Her suite in the St. Francis later served as a reception room in which the First National star met the officers of the Ninety-first organization, while a crowd of admirers cheered beneath her windows.

Richard Talmadge Feature Is Titled, Edited

The first Richard Talmadge picture, "Let's Go!" inaugurating the series being made with this star by Carlos Productions for Truart Film release, has been finally titled and edited by Ralph Spence.

Spence is said to have instilled into the picture a full quota of the humor and broad comedy for which he is famous.

It is said "Let's go!" is by a great margin the most thrilling and thoroughly entertaining picture Richard Talmadge has yet made.

Big Advertising Campaign For Palmer Feature

A vast advance advertising campaign is now being carried on by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation in no less than 25 of the most popular national magazines, telling the readers how Mrs. Ethel Styles Middleton, wife of a factory foreman, wrote the prize scenario of their first production, "Judgment of the Storm."

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation, realizing that they had discovered and developed a highly talented scenario writer in Mrs. Middleton, and that the production of her work had resulted in a screen story with a new twist, a new idea, and a new, surging, dramatic pull, decided on a huge national advertising campaign for the reason that they were confident they were both "keeping faith with the public" and ensuring the exhibitor a sure-fire box-office success.

Pioneer Actors in "Big Brother"

INCLUDED in the cast of "Big Brother," the Allan Dwan production now being filmed at the Paramount Long Island studio, are five character players who appeared on the screen in the days when the cinema was in its swaddling clothes. They are Charles Hammond, who has the part of the Judge in the Children's Court; William Black, in the role of the probation officer, and Hardy Tucker, Hugh Wynne and Edward Elkas, priest, minister and rabbi, respectively, attached to the court.

Each of these players has entered the fifties and can lay claim to ten years or more of motion picture work. In the same cast, and affording a strange contrast is little Mickey Bennett, aged seven, who has the role of Midge Murray.

Warners Issue Newspaper Ads for Features

The announcement comes from the Warner Brothers that the special fourteen-inch single-column advertisements have already been issued to the newspapers selected to run them in the different territories in conjunction with the local showings of the different Warner features which the advertisements call attention to.

This first series of eight advertisements covers the first eight Warner features, namely: "The Printer's Devil," starring Wesley Barry; "Little Johnny Jones," starring Johnny Hines; "Where the North Begins," starring Rin-tin-tin, the famous police dog hero; "The Gold Diggers," featuring Hope Hampton, Louise Fazenda, Windham Standing and Alec B. Francis; "George Washington, Jr.," starring Wesley Barry; "Conductor 1492," starring Johnny Hines; "Lucretia Lombard," starring Irene Rich and Monte Blue; and "Tiger Rose," the screen version of the famous Belasco play, starring Lenore Ulric.

Proofs of these eight advertisements have been supplied the different newspaper publishers who are included in the big advertising campaign.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

" Beasts of Paradise "

(Universal Serial—15 Episodes)

THIS is Universal's newest chapterplay co-starring William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick. Three episodes were viewed by the writer. The story concerns the determination of Philip Grant, son of the owner of the Pacific Forwarding Company, to recover five million dollars in gold, the loss of which threatens his father with ruin. Involved in the plot is Helen Frazier, daughter of the firm's ill-fated skipper and confidential secretary to the elder Grant. The girl, whose father is believed lost, is forced to steal valuable papers by Joe Clegg, one of the Grand skippers, on the promise that he would take her to her father. She falls into Clegg's power and finally meets her father on a tropical island. He has lost his mind. Meanwhile Phil Grant, who disbelieved the skipper's story that their craft had been attacked by a submarine, follows Clegg and falls into the hands of the band of crooks, headed by Marie Verne, an adventuress who believes she can locate the gold if she succeeds in keeping the captain in her power.

The story is a typical serial type with plenty of action. This one, however, makes a bid at the logical, in that sequences follow in common sense order and while there is every effort made to inject hair-raising stunts, they are not sacrificed at the expense of a follow-through story. The first chapter deals with the arrival of Grant on the tropical island and his imprisonment, the second with the blowing up of a boat in which he is trying to escape with Helen and her father, and the third with the recovery of the old captain's memory and the attack of wild animals. Interest is always kept at a high pitch with the acting of the principals good, particularly Ruth Royce as Marie Verne. The other players are William Welsh as Grant, the elder; William Gould as Joe Clegg, Clark Comstock as John Frazier, Margaret Morris as Tilah, the mysterious maid, and Joe Bon-omo as the telegraph operator. William Craft ably directed the first three chapters, which promise a first class, fast-moving serial. Val Cleveland wrote the scenario and story, while Harry Newman photographed excellently.—ROGER FERRI.

" Frozen Hearts "

(Pathe—Two Reels)

"FROZEN HEARTS" is a second number of Hal Roach's new comedy series starring Stan Laurel. Pathe is releasing this series of two-reelers. This one made a better impression on the writer than did the first release, "Roughest Africa." Stan Laurel looks like a worth-while article and a little more time under the guidance of Hal Roach should find him doing some tall stepping with exhibitors cashing in on his efforts. He seems to have his heart in his work and goes about it in a way that impresses you; particularly true is this in "Frozen Hearts," which is a burlesque on Vincente Blasco Ibanez's "Enemies of Women." His first release was a burlesque on the African hunt pictures.

However, there is every indication that straight plays furnish the most food for fun-poking by Stan. In "Frozen Hearts," Laurel appears as a simple peasant boy who is forced to masquerade as a member of the hated Russian military autocracy in order to reclaim his sweetheart. He keeps on the move all the time. In this picture the Bolshevik is not made to bear the brunt of the comedy, for most of the fun is poked at the anti-Bolsheviks. But our hero finally comes through and gets what he goes after.—ROGER FERRI.

" Running Wild "

(Educational—Two Reels)

"RUNNING WILD" is one of the Mermaid Comedies, produced by Jack White and featuring Lige Conley. The story unfolds a series of amusing incidets and laughable situations, revolving principally around a polo match. However, some of the funniest sequences take place aboard a train, where a barber inflicts some laugh-provoking hardships on his patrons due to the lurching of the car in which the shop is located. There are thrills, too, in addition to the action and the comedy moments: the heroine, played by Lillian Hackett, spins a heavy touring car on sharp turns in a way that will probably make 'em sit up and gasp; and one sequence showing Conley effecting a transfer from a rapidly moving train to a high-powered car tearing along by the side of the coach is certain to provoke a thrill as well as a laugh, especially when Conley bungles and collides, face on, with a telegraph pole. The polo match, which takes up most of the action in the second reel, also embodies some good laughs. Conley's burlesque characterization of a polo player astride a dray horse is a highly amusing piece of comedy acting. The ludicrous is given full swing in these sequences, with Conley's horse playing an important and effective role in the comedy. "Running Wild" is a comedy which we believe possesses all the factors that make for universal audience appeal. —E. F. SUPPLE.

Pathe Review

THIS is No. 43 of the Pathe Review series and starts off with a group of photographic and picturesque shots of Porto Rico, entitled "Tropical Skies." "The Birth of a Stocking" is a novel piece with an especial appeal to women, showing the manufacture of stockings in an educational and at the same time entertaining way. Sport fans also will find something in this issue that will strike their fancy. This comes in the form of "The Super-Horse," which shows a new farm strain developed from Belgian stock. The Pathecolor number deals with "The Falls of Senegal," introducing interesting sidelights of French West Africa.—ROGER FERRI.

" The Knockout "

(Pathe—One Reel)

HAL ROACH'S latest animal players' release, "The Knockout," is good for many laughs. In fact, these are particularly novel subjects and aid exhibitors in satisfying the child trade. These pictures carry a strong appeal to women and children. They dwell on the pugilistic sports with the dumb actors getting away with some hilarious gags that puts this novelty comedy in the okay class.—ROGER FERRI.

" World's Series "

THE recent World's Series were handled in fine fashion by all the news wecklies, which were well represented at all the games. Pathe, Fox, International and Kinogram weeklies all incorporated shots of the various games in their current issues. Several of them hurried prints to exhibitors in New York and these were viewed by the writer. So far as world's series go, the current pictures are the most interesting, the cameramen taking caution to procure something other than the usual, uninteresting long shots of important plays. Pathe in its No. 83 issue introduces the series, showing the opening scenes, and in its 84th release of the current series gives a fine pictorial resumé of the sixth and final game, showing the victorious Yankees. The International No. 84 photographed the opening contest from various angles, utilizing the Speedograph to emphasize the details of the more intricate plays. All in all, the weeklies reported the recent series in fine form and exhibitors using weeklies have a nice treat in store for their patrons.—ROGER FERRI.

" Screen Snapshots "

(C. B. C.—One Reel)

ISSUE No. 2 of the new series of Screen Snapshots is jammed with interesting sidelights on the out-of-studio life of popular stars of the screen. Mary Pickford is shown donning a Swedish costume in celebration of two little guests from Sweden, friends of Mary Pickford Rupp. Gene Sarazen, the golf champion, who is tutoring stars in Hollywood, also comes in for a snap as does Anna Q. Nilsson, who "for art's sake," has her hair cut close to her head, Director Crisp supervising the shearing. Others who appear in this reel are Hobart Bosworth, June Elvidge, Director W. P. S. Earl, Stuart Holmes, Louise Fazenda, Ralph Lewis, ZaSu Pitts, Rosemary Theby, Marshall Neilan and Wesley Barry. Good "fan" stuff for any audience.—ROGER FERRI.

" The Life of Reilly "

(Hodkinson—One Reel)

THIS one has to do with the attempt of Reilly (Charles Murray) to do away with a dog that his wife loves. And the dog is certainly made to understand that he is an unwelcome guest in the house, for he is subjected to abuses galore and those who have a liking for canine may resent the stunts, through which this fuzzy-haired pup is put. Just how many laughs there is in this comedy, which was made by C. C. Burr, depends entirely on just how Charley Murray stands. He personally strives hard to get laughs and keeps things moving, but the gags are not always the kind that will bring laughs.—ROGER FERRI.

" The Circus "

Selecting Building Materials for Theatres

Proper Choice Reduces Cost and Improves Quality of Construction

By Reilly & Hall
Theatre Architects

IN former articles we have considered "The Selection of a Theatre Site" also "Different Types of Theatres." We now propose to consider, in a general way, the materials entering into the construction of a theatre building.

The highest grade of construction, namely: steel encased in concrete or brickwork, or reinforced concrete, these being the types of construction known as "Absolutely Fireproof" and, therefore, should be used, as far as possible, in all theatre buildings. It has, however, been the general practice in certain localities, in fact all localities except in large cities, to build theatres with wood floors, wood balconies and wood roofs. However, because of the accidents during the past year, a new department has been formed in the State of New York and will, undoubtedly, be formed in other states, to do away with all wood construction in theatre buildings—and rightly so. There are too many human lives at stake to overlook anything concerning the safety of a theatre building. Fireproof materials, of course, increase the cost of construction and many different types of this construction have been used to cut down this heavy cost and it is of these we wish to speak.

The shell of the theatre can be built in three ways—First; Brick wall with brick piers to support the steel roof and balcony trusses. Second: Brick walls with steel columns built in the brickwork in place of piers, this type of construction being known as steel skeleton construction and in large houses is most commonly used. Third; Reinforced concrete throughout. The three methods are all good and have been used over and over again. The costs, one against the other, are the same and vary only according to the particular requirements of the Building, the Locality and the Labor Conditions.

Method Used to Cut Down Cost of Walls

Various methods have been used to cut down the cost of the walls themselves. When skeleton steel construction is used the walls may be built of hollow tile blocks the outside face being finished with stucco. Again—an 8-inch hollow tile block with a 4-inch face of brick work has been used. At the present time we are building a theatre with hollow tile walls, the outside tile having a face brick finish. This has turned out satisfactory and looks very well; the "brick-tile" being the same size and having the same texture as a face brick. All these methods save brickwork and labor, labor being the greater part of the high cost of construction at the present time.

Reducing Costs and Improving Construction

Suggestions on how to reduce the cost of building are extremely welcome to exhibitors today. Suggestions on the procedure for improving construction with a reduction of building cost are more than welcome.

The firm of Reilly & Hall, Theatre Architects, have prepared the accompanying article exclusively for the Technical Department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS with the idea in view of aiding prospective theatre builders reduce expenses and construct better theatres. Information such as this should be given most careful consideration especially when prepared by experts along these lines.

Any additional information pertaining to theatre building or equipping will gladly be supplied if such inquiries are addressed to this department of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Reilly & Hall are to continue their series of articles on theatre construction and equipment which will be presented in future issues.

Designing, Fabricating, and Erecting the Steel

The most careful consideration must be given to the method of designing, fabricating and erecting the steel. A consulting structural engineer should always be retained and he should be experienced in the designing of theatres or buildings of a like nature. The structural steel of a theatre balcony is very complicated and the calculations for the designs are so involved that only a man experienced in this particular type of construction is able to properly check the calculations. The steel should be further inspected by a shop inspector while being fabricated at the mill and a field inspection while the steel is being erected at the building. The cost of this field and shop inspection is small—50c. per ton for each inspection—and should, under no circumstance be omitted. This seems to be an opportune time to warn the smaller theatre owner of the dangerous practice of having their theatres designed by an architect and handing the drawings when completed to a builder to erect. Many accidents have occurred through this practice and we can assure you that more money is thrown away than is ever saved. The theatre owner should understand that an architect is not a "maker of plans" but a "maker of buildings" and that it is as important to have an architect supervise the building construction as it is to have an architect make the plans. In fact the architect's work is not completed until the theatre is complete and opened.

Balcony and Roof Construction Important

The next important question is the balcony and roof construction. We have spent a great deal of time and study trying to cut down the cost of this work. The treads of the balcony stepping must, of course, be reinforced concrete but in many cases we have constructed the riser of tile block faced with cement and in other cases metal lath with a cement face. Both of these methods have proved satisfactory and not only cut down the cost of the balcony finish but the use of these lighter materials also cuts down the cost of the balcony framing; the same applies to the roof construction, two and a half inches of concrete on Hy-rib metal lath or a precast gypsum roof, which is a very light fireproof material, have been used and both of these methods have been found to materially decrease the cost of the roof steel. Pre-cast gypsum we have found particularly economical. Care should be taken, however, to have the roofing company supply the intermediate T iron purlins to support the gypsum slabs. Quite a number of balconies have been constructed entirely of reinforced concrete; they perhaps take longer to construct than a steel balcony but if the work is carefully done, no better construction can be had. The cost compared with a steel framed balcony should be less, but varies very much with the locality and labor conditions. A balcony of this type should have very careful supervision. These various methods of construction are all approved by the New York Building Department.

Considerations for House With Stage

The stage house, dimensions of which should be from 32 x 35 feet deep with a proscenium opening from 35 to 42 feet wide and the off-stage space at the sides, which is particularly important, should be at least half the width of the proscenium on both sides of the opening—is the next part of the building, whose walls and foundations should have careful construction and supervision. We have known of more than one case where the piers at each side of the proscenium opening have been built too light and have had to be rebuilt. These piers are the most important

Auditorium of the new Strand theatre, Elmira, N. Y., showing the beautiful decorations and special loges. This theatre is relatively long compared with its width which feature cuts down the amount of distortion of the picture when viewed from the extreme side seats. This house is owned by Wm. Berinstein of New York and Albany and will be operated by Benjamin Berinstein, Jr.

Strand Theatre, Elmira, N. Y., Has Many Distinctive Features

BEARING the name of The Strand, a particularly beautiful new theatre, owned and operated by William Berinstein, of New York and Albany, has just been opened in Elmira, N. Y. The theatre will be managed by Mr. Berinstein's son, Benjamin, who has the experience gained from association with the Hudson and Colonial theatres, in Albany, the Palace in Troy, and the Majestic, in Elmira. The new theatre is one of a chain of houses, owned by Mr. Berinstein, and over which George Roberts, of Albany, is general manager.

The Strand takes rank as one of the finest motion picture theatres in the entire southern New York. It represents an outlay running into the hundreds of thousands, and gives not only the city the opportunity of witnessing first-run pictures in a beautiful theatre, but also gives Mr. Berinstein command of the field in which the house is located.

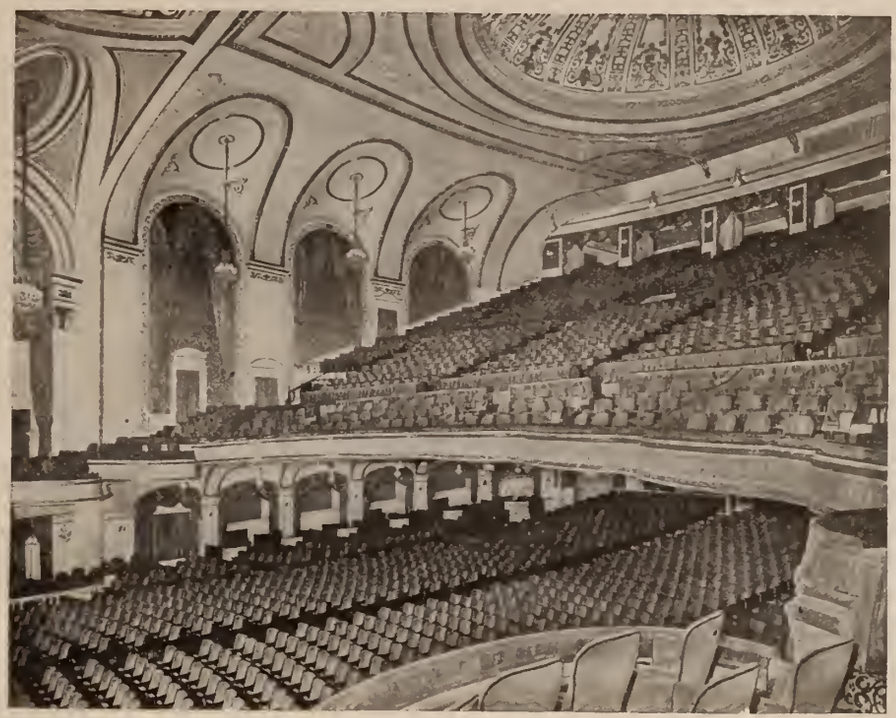
One enters the house through an extremely handsome lobby, the tile work having been done by Fey and Son, of Elmira; the lobby display frames being designed and built by the Libman-Spanjer Company of New York. On either side of the lobby are large French mirrors, while two large crystal chandeliers and eight small ones add to the attractiveness of the entrance.

The ticket booth is said to be the only one of its kind in the United States. There are two selling windows, and a ticket machine handling five kinds of tickets at one time. The booth is equipped with draperies, and is finished in marble and bronze. Heavy oak and glass doors admit to the interior of the house. The foyer of the theatre has a cork and rubber composition floor.

Patrons are to be protected from draughts by a wind breaker which was installed by the Zero Valve and Brass Manufacturing Company.

There is not a single post in the house to obstruct one's view. The main floor consists of three sections. The seats are leather upholstered, while the mezzanine has been furnished with movable reed chairs, supplied by Karpen and Sons, of New York. The decorations in the mezzanine were by Brand and Company, of Chicago.

The lobby of the new Strand theatre, Elmira, N. Y., is complete in every detail. Special attention was paid to the design of the ticket booth which was installed by the Libman-Spanjer Corporation



Smoking and women's rooms have been provided with a general color scheme conforming with the rest of the house. Music is furnished by a nine-piece orchestra, with H. W. Minier, as leader. The house is also equipped with a Wurlitzer organ, presided over by Archie J. Parkhouse, who came to this country from England in 1914. The house was designed by Leon H. Lempert and Sons. The color scheme throughout the house is of rose, old gold and blue, the walls being paneled in tapestry.

The house opened with "3 Wise Fools." There will be a change of program twice a week. The admission will range from 15 cents at the matinees, to 35 cents in the evening, the balcony commanding 20 cents, and the loge 50 cents. All signs at the new theatre were designed and built by Nord and Company, of New York.

Keith's Theatre Cleveland, Ohio

The Keith Theatre is another of our installations consisting of over twenty-five hundred chairs. Its beauty can only be realized by those who have actually viewed its interior.

Comfort and Beauty Both Essential

WHEN theatre patrons enter your theatre, the first impression they get is its beauty. Their eyes wander from one point of interest to another and all unconsciously make comparison with other theatres. But, however beautiful your theatre may be, if the seating is of poor quality the lack of comfort creates a feeling of restlessness so that performance and attractions cannot be fully enjoyed.

Great care is taken by our Theatre Engineering Department to plan chairs that not only harmonize perfectly with the theatre interior but offer the greatest possible comfort as well. Ease in operation, elimination of squeaks, well proportioned backs and seats and correctly placed arm rests are only a few of the points considered for proper comfort.

A broadside is being prepared showing recent theatre chair installations made by us and also chair suggestions for the refurbishing of old or the entire equipping of new theatres.

Theatre Curtains Subjected to Fire Test by Bureau of Standards

A FIRE resistive curtain similar to those used in theatres was recently given a fire test at the Bureau of Standards Laboratories, Washington, D. C. The curtain was placed against the open side of one of the special panel-testing furnaces with which the Bureau is equipped, and the back or stage side was subjected to fire exposure attaining an intensity between 1600 and 1700 degrees Fahrenheit at the end of a 15-minute period.

Thermocouples for measuring the temperatures were connected to various points on the surfaces, the average temperature recorded being 327 degrees Fahrenheit on the outside, or auditorium side. The test was continued to 30 minutes at higher temperature without causing destruction of the curtain or asbestos protection.

This curtain is really a rigid steel structure which is intended to slide up and down in front of the stage. A steel frame supports it and holds it in shape. The side toward the audience is covered with steel plate while the stage side is covered with three-eighths inch vitrified asbestos boards held on with screws and with its joints thoroughly protected.

The conditions to which this curtain was subjected were fully as severe as those likely to be encountered in theatre fires and show that the use of such a curtain gives complete protection to the audience from fires originating behind the stage, in that it keeps fire and smoke from entering the auditorium at least for the time required to empty the theatre. This test is one in a series to be conducted to determine the performance under fire conditions of various types of theatre curtain constructions.—Knappen.

Open Air Show on Hill

Andrew A. Crawford announced recently, that in partnership with Dr. William Burton Spire, he will erect a new $50,000 theatre at Mount Rainier. Built on the side of the hill, this new Maryland suburban town theatre will provide many architectural surprises to its patrons. A foyer running the whole length of the hillside frontage will be a feature while a drug store and refreshment parlor will be located in the edifice. Entering about mid-way of the hill the patron will ascend an easy ramp to the auditorium proper. Seats will extend all the way down to the foot of the hill. This will take the place of the open air film arena operated all summer by Crawford, who is active in Carter-Crawford Productions in Mt. Rainier and Washington.—Knappen.

Theatre for San Joaquin Valley

The acquisition of another theatre in the San Joaquin Valley by San Francisco capitalists has been announced by J. R. Saul, realty broker, who reported the purchase of the Madera Opera House by the National Theatres Syndicate. This syndicate, of which L. R. Crook is president, recently bought two theatres in Modesto. A. C. Chamberlain, well known in theatrical circles and owner of the Madera Opera House for the past ten years, sold the theatre to the San Francisco syndicate.—Gross.

Alternating Current Machinery

Lesson VIII—Part VII

Induction Motors

ONE of the greatest factors in the successful application of alternating current to industrial electrification has been the induction motor. It is used for practically all power work where such current is available. This does not mean that induction motors are always to be preferred to direct current machines since the latter type has much better starting characteristics and is more flexible as regards control of speed.

The ever-growing use of alternating current, however, due to its ease and economy of transmission from place to place, made necessary a form of motor having greater torque and more flexible speed control than the synchronous type. It will be recalled from previous articles that the synchronous motor always revolves at a speed (called the synchronous speed) determined by the number of poles on the motor and the frequency of the alternating current supplied it.

It can never go faster or slower than this synchronous speed and continue to revolve. As load is applied, the rotor merely slips back a trifle and continues to revolve at the same speed.

Single phase synchronous motors are also not self-starting but must be brought up to synchronous speed before the load is applied. This, of course, is undesirable in average practice. The torque, or turning effort, also is quite low compared with other types of motors. On the whole, the synchronous motor has a limited field of application so the need of a machine partaking of the nature of the direct current motor characteristics can readily be seen.

Squirrel-cage Induction Motor

The stator (stationary part) of an induction motor is exactly the same as that of an alternator or synchronous motor. There is no difference whatever. It is wound for either one, two or three phases. The single-phase motor unless specially constructed is not self-starting as will be shown later. Even with this special construction, the single-phase type has a low starting torque and so is built only with small ratings, usually up to ¼ to ½ H. P.

The principal parts of a squirrel-cage induction motor are shown in Fig. 126. This shows the stator, rotor and frame. The stator and frame are exactly similar to those of a synchronous motor, described before. The rotor, however, has a peculiar construction since it consists merely of copper bars or rods, the ends of which are joined together by two brass rings. The entire construction resembles a squirrel-cage from which it takes its name. A simple drawing of such a rotor is shown in Fig. 127.

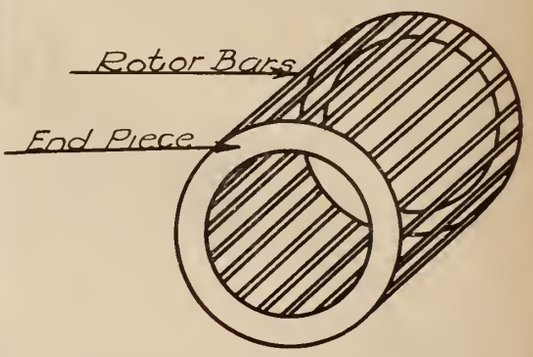

Figure 127

Operation

The induction motor operates on the same principle as that of a transformer. The stator (stationary part) is the primary and the rotor is the secondary. The score consists of the yoke supporting the stator windings.

Briefly the theory of operation can be summed up as follows: Voltage applied to the stator windings (the primary) causes an exciting current to flux, thus setting up a flux which, in turn, induces a voltage in the short-circuited rotor bars. Since these bars are short circuited, they form a closed circuit of low resistance and hence the voltage induced in them causes a current to flow or circulate through them.

The short circuited rotor bars, carrying current and being in the magnetic field of the stator, are acted on by forces which cause the rotor to rotate since it is pivoted.

Now it is essential for the operation of the motor that the magnetic field revolve and this is accomplished as follows: Fig. 128-A shows a simple drawing of the stator and the rotor of an induction motor. The stator is wound for two phases labelled 1 and 2. Now we know from a previous study of polyphase alternating currents that when the voltage in one phase of a two-phase circuit is zero, that in the second phase is a maximum whereas when the voltage in phase 1 is a maximum that in phase 2 is zero. In other words the voltage in the second phase lags that in the first phase by 90 electrical degrees.

Thus, referring to Fig. 128A, if we assume that the voltage is a maximum in phase 1, that in phase 2 will be zero. So also, a magnetic field will encircle the wires of phase 1 while no field will be present around those of phase 2. A quarter of a cycle (90 electrical degrees) later, however, the opposite will be true and the current and magnetic flux will be a maximum around the windings of phase 2 while around phase 2 they will be zero. This is shown in part B and it can be readily seen that the magnetic field is now at right angles to that in part A. It has made a quarter of a revolution.

At the next quarter cycle, the current and field are again a maximum in phase 1 but in the opposite direction while in phase 2 they are zero (Part C). On the last quarter cycle (Part D) the current and field are a maximum, in the opposite direction, in phase 2 and zero in phase 1.

It will thus be seen that even though the stator windings are stationary the magnetic field created by them, due to the changing current, set up a revolving magnetic field.

The same holds true in the case of a three-phase stator winding, only here the windings are placed 120 electrical degrees apart and a smoother revolving field is obtained.

The machine just described is known as a two-pole machine and the frequency of the revolving field is exactly the same as that of the applied voltage. In the case of machines having more than two poles the synchronous speed as this is called, is equal to 120 times the frequency of the applied voltage, divided by the number of poles.

When a squirrel-cage induction motor is running idle (no load) the voltages and currents induced in the rotor bars are very small and the rotor revolves at practically the same speed as the magnetic field set up by the stator windings. At full load, however, the rotor revolves more slowly than the magnetic field in order that large currents can be induced to give the required turning effort or torque.

The difference between the rotor speed and that of the magnetic field is known as the slip and is usually expressed in per cent. of the synchronous speed. Thus an eight pole 60 cycle motor has a synchronous speed of $\frac{120 \times 60}{8} = 900$ RPM. If the rotor speed at full load is 873 RPM the slip will be

$$\text{slip} = \frac{900 - 873}{900} = 3 \text{ per cent.}$$

The Box Office Tells the Story

YOU know that patrons bring their money to the theatre which offers them the most attractive, comfortable furnishings and the best entertainment. These two factors have most to do with the success or failure of any house.

When selecting your furnishings be sure that your chairs are the kind that lend comfort to your patrons. Uncomfortable patrons cannot enjoy entertainment, however good the latter might be. Uncomfortable patrons will not "repeat" at your box office. And "repeaters" are necessary to make any theatre successful.

Heywood-Wakefield chairs possess the maximum in comfort, beauty and structural strength. They are products of master craftsmen who have the 97 years' experience of their company to guide them.

Most of the largest baseball parks and many of the finest theatres are furnished with Heywood-Wakefield chairs.

Cramer-Mims Studios, Inc., Opens

The opening of the Cramer-Mims Studios, Inc., at 148-150 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, attracted no little attention in the industry, inasmuch as its incorporators have marked their advent into the art title branch of the business with ideas that have won the admiration of leading producers. Messrs. Cramer and Mims have established a complete studio with facilities to meet every requirement, and a staff of experts.

Cramer-Mims Studios, Inc., will concentrate every effort on the injection of art into features of the motion pictures.

The Cramer-Mims studios occupy the entire fourth floor of the Jack Mills Building. Some twenty artists, photographers, are directors, editors, titlers, cutters, letter specialists and photographic color experts are employed. The studios are fully equipped with the latest apparatus. The new firm is specializing in art titles, settings and title effects, drawings in color and black and white.

Management Changes

The Crescent and Empress theatres, at Kerney, Nebr., have been recently purchased from Hobart Swan by the Hosetter Amusement Company. They will be operated as motion picture theatres at present.

Albert Hoy has sold his interest in the Electric theatre, Falls City, Nebr., to the Beatrice (Nebr.) Amusement Company. The Beatrice Company purchased the Gehling theatre at Falls City shortly before taking over the Electric.

Frank S. Lusk has sold the controlling interest in the Missoula Opera House Company, Missoula, Mont., owners of the Liberty theatre in that city, to Walter H. Hanson and associates. The Liberty will be completely remodeled by the new owners. Pictures and vaudeville will be the policy.—Trout.

$27,000,000 Dreadnought Simplex Equipped

With the placing in commission of the U. S. S. Colorado at the Camden yards of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, there was added to the United States navy the greatest fighting unit yet developed in marine engineering.

Electrically equipped and propelled, the Colorado surpasses all other capital vessels in striking power, rapidity of action, facility of control and thoroughness of protection. Included in its electrical equipment is the Type "S" Motor Driven Simplex Projector installed just prior to the commission date. This Simplex equipment is the regular commercial type and in the opinion of the engineers who decided upon the Simplex as part of the equipment in this remarkable ship, the commercial Simplex without any specially constructed devices cover all requirements.

It is said that the Colorado, while presumably a battle unit, represents also a milestone in engineering progress, and according to the New York Telegram "she need never fire a shot at an enemy in order to earn her huge cost many times over." She can justly be regarded as a vast experimental marine laboratory in which all electrical marine equipment can be tested and developed and the result of these tests will be given to American shipbuilders. An idea of the Colorado's size can be best digested when one realizes that this huge floating fighter is 624 feet in length, carrying a complement of 1,403 officers and men. Her speed of 21 knots is obtained through oil burners that generate steam in her 18,000-horsepower turbines which in turn supply electric current for four 8,000-horsepower Westinghouse motors, which are attached one to each propeller shaft.

Selecting Building Materials for Theatres

part of the stage house as they support the proscenium truss. They should be built of solid brick and cement and never less than 2′ 0″ x 4′ 0″. If the house be framed longitudinally (which is generally the case when one hundred feet wide or more) in place of from wall to wall, a steel column should be placed at these points. The stage house walls should be built of solid brickwork 2′ 0″ thick with piers 3′ 0″ x 2′ 6″ every twenty feet on the back wall up to a height of 30′ 0″ and hence up to the grid iron, generally 57 feet above the stage level 1′ 8″ thick, one foot walls may then be carried up to the roof of the parapet. Sometime ago we built reinforced piers 2′ 0″ x 2′ 6″ with one or two cross beams across the back of the stage house and were thereby able to build the stage walls from top to bottom 1′ 0″ thick which made a material difference in the cost of the brick work. The dressing room section, which as a rule is placed at one side of the stage, should be divided from the stage proper by 12 inches of brickwork with one opening on to the stage, provided with a self-closing fireproof door on each side of the wall. The same applies to all stage rooms and workshops. They should all be cut off from the stage by 12 inches of brickwork and self-closing doors. The trap room under the stage is as often as not used for storage space; this trap room should be kept clear and any storage spaces, fan rooms, etc., under the stage should be separated from the stage by a twelve-inch concrete floor slab.

The finished outside roof covering has not, as a rule, but should be given more consideration than its cost. There are manufacturers of roofing materials who will not only give a Surety Bond guaranteeing the roof in perfect condition for ten years, but will inspect the roof during the process of installing and will see that the roofing contractor lives up to the specifications of the manufacturer of the material being applied. Of course, this roof is more costly than plastic slate, ruberoid and the many other so-called roofing materials. Does it not seem reasonable, when one considers, that the costly ornamental plaster and interior docorations depend on the roof covering for protection from serious damage—perhaps total loss—that the roof becomes a very important item and should receive the greatest consideration.

It may appear to the theatre owner that it is the interior decoration that attracts his patrons (this, of course, after the picture has been considered) but we should like to say that although gold paint, red carpets "and much tinsel" will attract patrons to a new house, nevertheless, a good general layout, good sight lines, heating, cooling and ventilating—in other words "good construction"—will go a long way to keep the house full long after the paint and carpets have faded. Paint and carpet can be renewed—the construction cannot.

The slip usually varies from 2 to 5 or 6 per cent. for constant speed motors.

Squirrel-cage induction motors are much used for constant speed service where little maintenance and ruggedness are required since there are no parts, such as commutators or slip-rings, which require attention. Cases are on record where such motors have operated for years at a time and have literally been buried in dust and dirt without requiring attention.
